Fig. 8.—Mask worn by the assistant of the S'ā'ʟpsta (front and profile). Natural color, black. Height, 8 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask worn by the Ōlx (front and profile). Red, blue, black. Height, 14½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 10.—Club carried by the Ōlx. Red, blue, black. Length of head, 7 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

[facing End Plate XII]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

532
776

Masks and Carvings of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate XII]

[End Plates XIII - XXVI not processed]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One of them must wash his body, one must wash his head, and the two others hold him. In return they receive one or two blankets each. During this ceremony the quqq'ō'lEñ, who are described as wild men, dance around the novice. They have ropes tied around their waists, and are held by other members of the society by these ropes. Then the xEnxanī'tEl lead the novice into the woods, where he remains for a long time, until he meets the spirit that initiates him. It seems that during this time he is secretly led to the house in which the xEnxanī'tEl continue to celebrate festivals at the expense of the novice's father, and there he is taught the secrets of the society. During this time, until the return of the novice from the woods, the house is tabooed. A watchman is stationed at the entrance, who keeps out uninitiated persons. During the absence of the novice, his mother prepares cedar bark ornaments and weaves mountain goat blankets for his use. One afternoon he returns, and then his father gives a feast to let the people know that his child has returned. The latter performs his first dance, in which he uses masks and cedar bark ornaments. This dance is called nuxnEä'mEñ. On this day the father must distribute a great number of blankets among the xEnxanī'tEl. The initiated are permitted to take part in the feast, and sit on one side of the house. The new member spends all his nights in the woods, where he bathes. In the spring the new member, if a man, is thrown into the sea, and after that is free from all regulations attending the initiation. One of the principal regulations regarding novices of the xEnxanī'tEl is that they must return from the woods in the direction in which the sun is moving, starting so that the sun is at their backs. Therefore they must sometimes go in roundabout ways. They must go backward through doors, which are sLä'lEqam (supernatural) against them. Frequently the siō'ua (a female shaman) is called to bespeak the door in their behalf before they pass through it. Before their dance the siō'ua must also address the earth, as it is supposed that else it might open and swallow up the dancer. It is also sLä'lEqam against the novice. The expression used is that the earth would "open its eyes" (k'u'nalasEn); that means, swallow the novice. In order to avert this danger, the siō'ua must "give a name to the earth," and strew red paint and feathers over the place where the novice is to dance.

THE BI'LXULA.

121 171 The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bi'lxula are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the sisau'k·, and the kū'siut. The sisau'k· corresponds to the Lsō'laxa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the kū'siut to the ta'ō'ta'sāqa. The Bi'lxula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Xē'mtsica, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful house in the far east, and cries "ō, ō,"

556 773 776

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he rises properly. The first six of these deities are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the kū'siut these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xē'mtsioa and Xēmxēmalâ'oLa wear the design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Xē'mtsioa by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xēmxēmalâ'oLa has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Aiumkī'lik·a and Aiumalâ'oLa wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The fifth Q'ōmq'ōmkī'lik·a and Q'ō'mtsioa have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qula'xawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next in order, Kulē'lias (who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, Ac'amā'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called L'ētsā'aplēLāna (the eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

556
773
776
532
575
776

The sisau'k·, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of the clans, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the sisau'k· and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he consented to enter. Then he danced the sisau'k· and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bī'lxula dance the sisau'k·. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each clan its secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the sisau'k· only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are the sacred possessions of each clan. All clans, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the clan to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisau'k·. A person can not take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'Elu'sta, the Indian, to whom I

575
773
776
796
614
424
532
[592]
[534]
424
532
556
614
[567]
[848]
[115]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kû'siut. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kû'siut." 575 773 776 535

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kû'siut. When a man has seen Anaûlikuts'ai'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kû'siut. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kû'siut lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kû'siut are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisau'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kû'siut is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kû'siut name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akō'oL. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisau'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kû'siut have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the ELaxō'LA (the hā'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'lEx (the nū'LmaL of the Kwakiutl), and the dā'tia (the nō'ntsistalaL of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kû'siut novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the ELaxō'LA is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the ELaxō'LA. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ELaxō'LA order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 owe my information regarding the clans, and who is a member of the 532 gens Ialô'stimōt of the Taliô'mx·, stated that he had received the raven 614 when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received [115] the eagle. He hoped that his mother would give him the whale at his [556] next potlatch, and would at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his own children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new 424 secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a kū'siut 551 name, which remains through life, and a Xē'mtsioa name, which is 556 changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'ELu'sta's (which is his kū'siut 575 name) Xē'mtsioa name was AL'ILEmnE'lus'aix·, but at his next pot-
614 latch he intended to take the name of Kaliā'kis. These names are also the property of the various clans, each clan having its own names. When a man possesses several sisau'k· secrets, he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their sisau'k· secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of her clan. When a person grows old, he gives away all his sisau'k· secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more.
[426] The crest and the sisau'k· carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular clan.

426 The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl.
556 The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die, the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die, his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so, he had to name the price which he was going to pay the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

575 The kū'siut is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaālikuts'- 773 ai'x·. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from ● 776 February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to 535 have been the first to find her. Anaālikuts'ai'x· invited her into her cave and taught her the secrets of the kū'siut. She wore ornaments of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair strewn with eagle down. She commanded the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 is in the upper Bella Coola valley near Firvale, cause cold 773 breezes by blowing them through their anuses. uxlaxwan·i es-[821] pecially is a prominent figure in mythology (I, p. 670), but she has not appeared for many generations and her actions belong to legend rather than to either religion or social practices. It is said that she has four sons who once wanted to break a large number of grass stalks. Finding it difficult to do so on account of their toughness, they asked their mother to freeze them; she did this and destroyed every other plant at the same time.

* 776 Another anthropomorphic being is Sxk'lätl, the super-821 natural South Wind of winter who brings storm and snow.
177 The Carriers affirm that every icicle which grows down until [731] its end is in the snow is his walking-stick, and that to break one causes famine. Some Bella Coola have adopted this belief and carefully refrain from destroying such icicles.

* 776 Supernatural beings experience the same difficulty as mortals in reckoning the passage of time. A number of calendrical experts live in the land above, whose duty it is to record both months and years. They are called Älmınskällwaiyaix or [575] Älmınskitlnum. They have been seen occasionally, and are shown, as masked figures, at ıısaok (I, p. 180), but not at kusiut dances. Two of these beings always appear, and they argue about their observations after the fashion of humans.

Another denizen of Nusmät·a of slight importance in the social life of the Bella Coola is Xemxemälotla, a friend and [575] associate of Älquntäm. He acts as patron of kusiut dancers, and in this manner is brought to the notice of mortals. In the land above his function is to cherish Tläqmä·ks, a being resembling a diminutive man, created by Älquntäm as a child to all supernatural beings. Xemxemälotla is its guardian or nurse; and for safety he usually keeps his charge in the far distant upper land above Nusmät·a, where Älquntäm frequently visits the two. In some mysterious manner, Tläqmä·ks has been
• [777] known to reach this earth, giving good fortune to the lucky finder. He is in many cases spoken of as "The Cherished

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

761 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree 775 behind Nusmăt-a. This element of a dead person occasionally 825 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the following story.

[539]
[827]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am so-and-so," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

761 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

773 In the beginning of time, when Ăkuntăm sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nusmăt-a posts emblazoned with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

below. These are termed tally posts.[11] Each remained upright as long as the individual to whom it referred was alive, but fell at his death. Since that time, whenever Ālquntām lends to a mortal sininits, the undefined power that causes life, his supernatural artisans erect in the land above a tally post for the new-born infant, marked with the bird or animal used by an ancestor. As long as this remains upright and straight, firmly fixed to the ground, its owner continues to be strong and prosperous, and has success in all his undertakings; if it becomes loose, or is crooked, he ceases to succeed. Prosperity does not depend upon the abilities or activities of the individual, but upon his supernatural possessions, spirit, tally post, and a third to be described later. If the tally post tilts far from the perpendicular, its owner becomes ill, and can be cured only by straightening it. In some cases Ālquntām is kind enough to do this if placated by prayer and ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), and in olden days, shamans were occasionally able to penetrate to the land above for this purpose. Even when a post was reached, they were sometimes unable to set it upright, though they could always estimate the length of a man's life from its angle of inclination. In one of the kusiut dances, the performer pretends to have the ability to go aloft and the uninitiated are deceived by the erection of a tall ladder up which he climbs and disappears (II, p. 202). On his return, he reports the condition of the tally posts of various people. This performance serves to remind both members of the society and uninitiated of the existence of these supernatural elements, and of the dependence of individuals on them for success in life. In spite of this ritual, actual knowledge of the powers and functions of tally posts has been derived only from the first Bella Coola who, created in the land above, were acquainted with the mysteries of life and transmitted such lore to their descendants. One old man expressed the opinion

[11] Ēqunēuēuēts. One of the names of Nuxmālīs, Nuxēuēuēuēts, refers to these, meaning, "The Place of the Tally Posts." Ēqunēuēuēts and ēuēuēuēts are closely associated; sometimes the latter is pronounced ēuēuēts, although this may be an error in recording.

1;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 that tally posts have mentality, and suggested that it might 777 be these which attend the gathering of the supernatural beings at the winter solstice instead of an element from the human body itself.

One elderly Bella Coola, of philosophical temperament, described q̓watlnusta in terms far removed from the accounts of tally posts. According to him, every individual receives this supernatural possession at birth, and it remains with him, in close association with his body, throughout life. It stays in front of his face, invisible, yet having substance, and con-[431] stantly shaking from side to side. If a man fails to receive a present at a potlatch, it is because his q̓watlnusta has ceased [828] to move. When stationary it is not transparent, and not only hides its owner from the donor's sight, but acts as a barrier to his thoughts. The same man stated that this element can [756] leave the body, can be seen by shamans, and that it is the one [775] which ascends at the winter solstice to Nasmāl-a. At death it is believed to accompany the spirit and the life to the land above.

177 There seems no reason to doubt that the concept of tally 773 posts is an ancient belief. Nor does the application of the term q̓watlnusta to another immaterial possession of quite 777 another type destroy this probability. It must be remembered that within the last eighty years the Bella Coola have suffered not only from the tremendous upheaval caused by the coming of the white man, but have been reduced to a mere fraction of their former numerical strength by various epidemics. These factors have led to the partial forgetting of ancient beliefs, with consequent confusion. It is probable that the use of the same term for the tally post, intimately connected with an individual's life although situated in the land above, and for an invisible and intangible possession which goes in front of him, is due to this recent decay of ancient convictions. If this be true, it merely means that in former times the Bella Coola had yet another supernatural element to govern and influence their lives.

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuxlakuta, wash-basin. In the land above, Alquntám has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Alquntám who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Alquntám, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed dzlulcum, a word connected with nuxlakuta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.*

*This may be a more recent elaboration.

Libr McDowell's E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Shamans achieve much of their success through their ability to put their wash-basins, both tangible (I, p. 360) and immaterial, in tune with Alpontów's in the land above. One method of treating a patient is by washing, with the idea that the water and vessel used have potency through association with those in the upper world. It is believed that in the distant past, shamans were even able to carry their patients to the land above and wash them in Alpontów's own basin. Such feats are perpetuated in certain shamans' names, such as Alpalpelelem.

It may be said in conclusion that although the Bella Coola have indefinite ideas concerning the exact form and functions of this last element, there is a firm belief that an individual's fortune in life depends upon the activity of spirit, tally post, and wash-basin. With regard to supernatural elements as a whole, it is clear that in spite of somewhat conflicting beliefs concerning the precise functions of each, they play an important part in the life of every Bella Coola.

Means of Propitiation

Some of the methods employed by the Bella Coola to gain the favour of the supernatural have already been mentioned, but the subject is sufficiently important to warrant a separate section. In view of the omnipresence of supernatural beings and powers, and their influence on the lives of mortals, it is not surprising that the propitiation of them is a vital factor in human life. The chief means are prayer, sacrifice, and the observance of ceremonial chastity.

PRAYER

Prayers are regularly addressed to Alpontów who, in this connection, is known as Mouskaic or Tóté, both meaning, "Father." A wise man or woman desiring success in hunting, in love affairs, in the acquisition of wealth, or in any activity whatsoever, is accustomed to ask Mouskaic to grant his desire. No ritual is required. The petitioner merely seeks a lonely

1:bb:Dewalth E-5 (1922-1924)548
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The Kwiat dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Alquaiáw is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the more force engendered in a man's body by lengthy absti-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

though they may be to the white man. It is hoped that the preceding illustrations, drawn from recent times, will explain the mental attitude of the Bella Coola better than incidents from folk-lore of the distant past. 787

Disregarding thoughts which, since they are caused by the spiritual elements of the human body, are ever present, relations with the supernatural may be divided into the following categories: [828] [774]

(1) Appearance of supernatural beings from which neither good nor bad results follow. Strictly speaking, every fleeting sight of a supernatural being belongs to this category, but it will be convenient to describe only experiences of a peculiar kind, such as the Bella Coola call qoo-ahlawudjulsis. Usually manifestations of the supernatural have certain effects; consequently, there are relatively few incidents of this kind recorded.

(2) Supernatural aid vouchsafed to a man or a woman in distress. There are many tales illustrating this, which are told and retold to the children. In most cases the assistance is given to one who has undeservedly, according to Bella Coola concepts, fallen into misfortune.

(3) Supernatural good luck. This may be obtained by anyone, and consists of the acquisition of a supernatural object to attract, not only fish and animals, as if it were a potent bait, but money and goods as well. [777] [226] [226]

(4) Acquisition of shamanistic power, with or without the ability to cure the sick. This may be received from one of two sources: [756]

(a) Thinkpilila-a or some other supernatural being.

(b) Ghosts, which are likewise supernatural. [775]

(5) Obtaining prophetic powers direct from the supreme god. There are few instances of this, and none that is ascribed to a remote period. It is possible that all examples of this kind can be attributed to indirect Christian influence. [777]

(6) Obtaining power from a supernatural being localized in a particular spot. This usually takes the form of succour when [756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 She assumed it to be a forest fire, but, when she idly went near to investigate, her amazement was past all bounds at seeing a fine house filled
* 787 with valuables. Nor was her surprise lessened when she discovered that 'Yetsdji was lord of it all. He welcomed her gladly, gave her a hearty meal, and sent back with her some seal meat for her child, only adding that it was to be eaten secretly as he did not wish his father to know of his good fortune.

"But," he added, "I don't mind if you send me any of the people except my father, especially any who were good to me long ago."

The slave woman thankfully carried the meat home to her child. But he, long deprived of proper food, ate so ravenously that night that a lump stuck in his throat and his coughing awoke Qemo'sala. The chief pounded the youngster's back until he vomited what was obviously a piece of seal. The slave woman, remembering 'Yetsdji's order, tried to evade her master's questions as to where her son had obtained it, but at last she blurted out the truth, how the abandoned youth had become prosperous.

The slave woman and her friends moved to Qwiyai, where 'Yetsdji used his power of thought to obtain for them houses filled with everything they could desire. But Qemo'sala and those left with him were starving, so that they too were driven to seek his aid, gladly marrying their daughters to him in return for his protection. He rapidly rose to a position of importance, being the husband of both real and fictitious wives, and was even able to provide his elder brothers with mates. Some of the women married to him became almost his slaves, as their families were unable to ransom them.

Supernatural Good Luck

•779 A third manner in which the Bella Coola can come into
* 787 contact with powers of another plane is through supernatural good luck. This consists in obtaining something from a super-[224] natural being, usually a portion of its slain body, which acts [226] as a bait to fish, mammals, and even to such inanimate articles as blankets or skins. Even a tiny morsel placed on a weir will attract numerous salmon, or if set on a trap will prove an infallible lure to animals. Then put in the owner's box, valuables will be attracted to it as steel to a magnet. Thus the fortunate possessor will be able to give many potlatches and to reach a [412] high position in the community. Since this good fortune is

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777● 787 * [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is siye, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mätsqus or a ssiutl. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a cranny to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mätsqus or a ssiutl, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach bursts. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cleanliness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
* 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one [424] is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he own [785] a portion of a mātsqus or a sisiutl, through failure to observe ceremonial chastity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mātsqus and the sisiutl are the same animal, which can assume these two forms; others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-[173] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[184] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

* 787 The different types of appearances, and the different types 811 of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 182 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the sum total of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mātsqus, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory means of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that disaster would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

777 According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mātsqus was brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own
* 787 ancestors, Omqemkikka. It is to this fact that he attributes [773] his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is frequently not until the fourth appearance that a person obtains supernatural good luck, he is still hoping for two more visitations, the second of which he expects to be fruitful. 777 ● 787 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One day as he was poling up the Kimsquit River he heard a sound resembling thunder proceeding from a log-jam. From descriptions given him by his father, he knew that this must be the voice of a mätsqus, but, not having observed ceremonial chastity, he was afraid to investigate, although the sound seemed to follow his canoe for a considerable distance; it only stopped when another canoe approached. From the fact that he alone heard the voice, he knew that it was for him that the creature had come and only the arrival of other people had deterred it from appearing.

On another occasion the same man was close to the nest of a mätsqus. He and another hunter were together in the forest above the Dean River and both saw the stone nest behind a waterfall, but for some time each refrained from pointing it out to the other. Towards dusk the first man's attention was called to it by his companion, and they debated on a course of action. Each was desirous of obtaining the benefits to be derived from a successful use of the nest, but each was afraid of the evil consequences should he fail. The friend had observed continence for some time so it was decided that in the morning he should be the one to make the approach; the other man, well versed in these matters, instructed him very carefully what to do. That night both men were too excited to sleep.

Next morning the nest was still in the same place, but the friend hesitated about going up to it, and as they delayed, talking, it vanished in the twinkling of an eye and the opportunity passed.

The nest itself is sufficiently potent to bring good fortune without the mätsqus. Not many years ago a man saw one containing a large green egg which he touched with one end of his musket. Then he carefully hid his weapon for one year in a cleft of the rocks where no water could reach it, nor did he mention what he had seen to anyone. When the time had 777 224

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●777 elapsed, he fetched his musket from its hiding-place and again
224 began to use it. Thenceforth he never missed his aim; every shot brought down an animal.

Before the days of muskets good fortune could likewise be obtained by the discoverer of the nest of a mātsqus. Each contains small particles of the skin of all animals, including human beings, plucked from them in their sleep by humming birds and toads. The finder must touch the nest with his stick, such as is always carried by hunters, then break it and throw it away, saying as he does so:

"May I see you at . . . tomorrow." This means next year.

He names his favourite hunting-ground. The finder must [785] not say anything to anyone about his discovery, and for one year he must observe continence. If he then goes to the locality mentioned, he will there find his stick, the one which he broke when he touched the nest, though it will be invisible to anyone else. Adhering to its end will be four hairs of the mātsqus. These he must hide for a year, wrapped in some of his own clothing, taking care that it is an article which he has long [785] worn and which is accordingly saturated with his essence. During this period, too, he must observe continence. Two years after finding the nest, he will be able to hunt with phen-[424] omenal success. The knowledge of this proper procedure has been handed down in an ancestral family for many generations.

On the occasion when the two men had seen the nest they 777 continued their journey, each chiding the other for his failure
* 787 to take advantage of the opportunity put in his path. Before [776] long they saw a footprint where no man had been and knew that it must be that of Twalālīt, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats. In spite of remonstrances, the comrade scraped up a little dirt from the track into his handkerchief. In this he did wrong, especially as he had failed to take advantage of the opportunity presented to him by the nest of the monster toad. That night as the two were encamped a slide came thundering down beside them, and they barely escaped [761] with their lives. Not long afterwards the erring man died,

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

insane, a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had trod. 777 787*

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mätsqus, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster. [761] 783 [824]

Similar in function to the mätsqus, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the ssiutl. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yulätimut. It was at first the canoe made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and fiords, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a ssiutl appeared in the past. 777 787* [773] [776] 539 777 787*

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a salmon, which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two heads but no tail. He lunged at it with his stick, and in so doing started a slide which carried the salmon down the mountain. As this was taking place, the hunter said:

"Go down the mountain, salmon; I will get you at the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying clear on the stones. He cut it up and slung it on a cedar-bark rope. Now this salmon was a ssiutl, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained supernatural good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Ssiutl, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the ssiutl, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found, 777 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

● 777 owing to the failure of hunters to observe ceremonial chastity.
* 787 When obtained, a sisiutl was cut into small pieces, one of which [789] worn upon the person would make the flesh so hard that an arrow could not penetrate.

[776] Sometimes the sisiutl assumes the form of either a spring or a cohoe salmon. Not long ago a Bella Bella man, travelling in a canoe, ate one of these. Once devoured, it reformed itself, made its way out by consuming the man's lower jaw, then jumped overboard and was lost.

The mere appearance of a sisiutl does not necessarily bring misfortune to the beholder, even if he has not the necessary knowledge, or courage, to take advantage of it. The following is an instance.

On one occasion the father's father of a middle-aged Bella Coola was going upstream at the time the salmon were jumping, when, unknown to him, one leaped into the canoe behind him. His first knowledge of anything untoward came to him when the bow rose out of the water, and, looking around, he saw that this was caused by the weight of a grease-covered stone lying in the bottom of his canoe; the salmon had vanished. The man threw overboard his floor-board with the stone on it. When he told his friends afterwards of his experience, they informed him that he had missed an opportunity for obtaining supernatural good fortune, as the "salmon" must have been a sisiutl.

789 The sisiutl can also be used as a charm. If a man, while in [776] a pure condition through the observance of ceremonial chastity, eats a small portion of the flesh, it renders him proof against bullet or arrow. An intelligent Bella Coola stated that his father's brother had done so on one occasion, with the result that a bullet, fired by his wife's mother's father, fell harmless at his feet after striking him.

278 Medicine can also be obtained indirectly from a sisiutl.
776 When one of these fish-like creatures swims through a pond,
824 wriggling as it goes, it frequently sheds some of its scales.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänelp or walilikwätsälätsäläts, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqus or a sisiutl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qokän-i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wikwanutl, who was also called O'mätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Tcopinätl when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qokän-i.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224
539
● 777
* 787
[776]

This is a supernatural bird about the size of a crow, with a broad hooked beak and blue-black iridescent plumage. Its note resembles that of a swan. The peculiarity of the bird is that its flesh and bones are of mountain goat grease; even its droppings are of this valuable substance, and it is these which are specially prized. Long ago ɋokān·i were comparatively common, but all have now fled beyond the range of the white man's rifle.

Wikwanuil knew what to do, so he crept stealthily up the mountain armed only with his hunting stick. Presently he saw a ɋokān·i feeding on a mountain goat which had been caught in one of his snares. It answered to the descriptions Wikwanuil had heard, and he could see that its droppings were like solidified mountain goat grease. The hunter crawled near, and took advantage of the instant when the bird was within the goat's stomach to leap forward and club it as it looked up. Wikwanuil twisted the neck until the head separated from the body and flung the former behind him, to the right, without noting where it went. This enables the bird to return since, like all other living creatures, when it seems to die it does no more than shed its cloak of flesh. Then the hunter cut the body into halves, threw the right portion in the same direction as the head, and carefully tied the left half in his cape of cedar-bark. Next he collected the droppings and wrapped them in evergreen boughs. Carefully carrying his treasures, he went down the mountain, and hid them in a niche cut in the trunk of a cedar tree, before he went home.

Next day, Wikwanuil did not hunt but returned to the place, drew out the piece of the bird's body, and dried it over a fire, as if he were toasting salmon for winter use. At night he went home, still refraining from telling anyone what he had done. For four days he cured the meat, then carefully closed the niche and went away.

For one year Wikwanuil did not hunt. Then he reopened the recess and saw that the meat was fresh and juicy, as if newly prepared. He left it in place, but drew forth the droppings and carried them off in a small bag. Fortune followed him. By using a small piece of the solidified grease on his traps he had wonderful success. At length Wikwanuil told his fellow-villagers what he had obtained and they were envious of his good luck. He continued to prosper, and at last sold the droppings for a large amount of goods, though he carefully preserved the section of the body itself. When an old man, he showed his son where it was concealed and the latter likewise prospered throughout his life, owing to this possession. When he became old, he in turn told his son about it, so that the young man had the same good fortune as his father and grandfather. But the great-grandson was too lazy to take the trouble of going with his father to the place where the section of the bird was hidden, so the treasure was lost. 777● 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A fourth giver of supernatural good fortune is one of the mythical creatures termed snusx. This variety lives in the ocean, or rarely in rivers, and can occasionally be seen resting on the surface with its long, golden tresses floating on the water. The hair appears always to be flecked with eagle down, but in reality it is a mass of barnacles, the equivalent of this substance to this under-sea dweller. If the observer is brave, he will paddle cautiously near until he can twist a lock of the hair around his paddle and break it off. He must not touch it with his hands, but must dangle it outside the canoe, still wrapped about his paddle, until he reaches the shore, when he must conceal it in some lonely place for one year. After that period he can use a single hair, or piece of one, as bait; it will be enough to attract animals to his traps or salmon to his weir, exactly as with the mountain goat grease excrement of a qoḱăv-i or a stick that has come in contact with a giant toad. If the person who has jerked off the hair with his paddle should be foolish or ignorant enough to bring his spoil into his canoe, he, and all with him, are rendered incapable of movement and the craft with its occupants sinks beneath the sea. [539] [224] [776] [224] [226]

The father's cousin of an informant once saw one of these animals when paddling in company with several companions to Kimsquit. The sea was smooth as glass when their attention was attracted by a number of small ripples, spreading in a half-moon shape from what they realized was the head of a snusx. The hair crossed the ripples, but did not rise or fall with them. The back of the animal's head was nearest the canoe so the opportunity seemed favourable for obtaining some of its hair. Cautiously the men paddled nearer, but at the last moment the steersman feared to drive the canoe in among the golden tresses, so veered off and the craft passed along one side of the mass of hair. The animal had shown no sign of being aware of their presence, but it now began to turn away,

11McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

● 777 so that its floating locks remained between them and its head.
* 787 As it turned, the hair moved with it, so that, although the impression remained of a floating mat, there must have been some motive power to cause it to remain streaming out straight behind. Each strand moved through the ripples without being affected. Though the paddlers strained to the utmost to see the animal's face it thwarted their efforts by this continuous slow turning, until at last they went on their way, disappointed.

539 Yet another creature from which supernatural good fortune
777 has been obtained is the Mother of Snakes, a creature described in the following story.

* 787 A family living at Nalirax was reduced to the point of starvation through the failure of their salmon-weir. It seemed as if the fish avoided 226 it. One day a son of one of the owners, who had been in trouble with a [776] woman in the lower valley, went off into the woods not far from his village, where he saw what he thought was a black bear. When it came nearer he realized that its chest was tipped with silver and that its tongue kept shooting far beyond its jaws; hence that it must be the Mother of Snakes. This creature combines the qualities of bear and snake; it is about the size of the former, and it appears to have a serpent wrapped around its chest. It always pursues mortals and slays them, unless they [784] know the proper means of escape. Luckily, the youth's father had long ago warned him what to do if chased by one, so he at once dashed off. First he ran downhill, but the animal gained on him; then he ran uphill, but still the monster drew nearer. The only way the fugitive could increase his lead was by ascending or descending in zigzags, since the brute's heavy legs then kept slipping. All day the pursuit continued, until towards dusk, when the youth was almost exhausted, he saw at last what he was looking for, a stump with splinters, projecting upwards. Pushing these apart with his hands, he leapt through the opening thus made, then circled the tree once sunwise, and pulled away one of the jagged spikes. Now the Mother of Snakes must always follow directly in the tracks of its quarry, and as it jumped through the passage the youth struck it across the back with the splinter which he had pulled out. Down fell the monster dead.

With his knife the lad cut off some of the animal's meat which he carried home, saying nothing to his father. Early the next morning the old man went to look at his salmon-weir, but as usual it was empty. As soon, however, as his son drew near, the river became packed with salmon, all heading towards the trap which was soon filled.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"It seems as if you attracted the salmon like a magnet," said the father to his son. 777 ●

The latter did not answer immediately, but later he said: 787 *

"You were right," and he told him what had happened. [539]

"You have obtained supernatural good luck," the old man replied simply. [226]

Following his son's instructions the father prepared canoes and boxes to bring back the flesh of the Mother of Snakes. They collected every scrap of it, which they preserved very carefully, and used small portions as bait to attract salmon to their weir with such success that they became wealthy.

Another supernatural being from whom supernatural good fortune may be obtained is Skwanät·än·a, "The Female Mourner." When a chief dies she comes to wail, wandering through the woods near the village, where sometimes she can be seen in the form of a weeping woman. As she cries, she ejects mucus from her nose, which solidifies into a glass-like substance about a foot in length. Anyone who sees her should take the transformed mucus, and wrap it in some article of his own clothing; it will bring him good fortune. About midnight of June 21, 1922, the infant daughter of a Bella Coola died, and about seven o'clock on the following morning the wailing was heard[1] in the woods behind the missionary's house. The brother of the dead child's father rushed off to try to find the weeping one. Luckily he did not succeed, because he did not know about collecting the mucus, and trouble would have come to him had he seen the supernatural being without knowing how to deal with it; in fact, even to hear Skwanät·än·a is considered an omen of death. [776] [776] [763]

It will be seen from the foregoing specific instances that supernatural good luck is usually obtained by the slaying of some powerful creature. But, since every living creature is endowed with superhuman power, it follows that any object obtained from a bird or an animal that has acted in a peculiar way may be the cause of supernatural good fortune if it be kept for one year in the manner previously described. Some- [825] [224]

[1]Since the Bella Coola believe that it was heard, the incident is recorded as a fact.

liMcIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 times a man finds a piece of the thick bark of the fir in one of
* 787 his traps; if he throw it away nothing happens, but if he conceal it in a hidden cranny for one year and then use it for bait he [224] will have supernatural good luck. Another bringer of good fortune is a giant crab, about two feet in diameter, sometimes found far in the forest. There is no danger attached to the appearance of either of these manifestations of the supernatural, which have merely the potential ability to bestow good fortune if the person seeing them knows and practises the proper ritual.

777 Sometimes, long ago, when a number of seals were seen
* 787 approaching the shore a man would notice that they were peculiar. One would disappear beneath the surface, to emerge 224 as a beaver, the beaver would vanish beneath the waves only to come up as a bear, a mountain goat, a deer, or some other animal. If a hunter wished to have phenomenal success at goat hunting, for example, he would wait until one of the seals appeared as a goat and then kill it. The carcass would drift ashore, as a seal, but on being cut open a stone shaped like a mountain goat would always be found in the stomach. To obtain success the hunter would wrap this in a piece of worn clothing, and hide it away beneath an overhanging ledge in some lonely spot in the woods. If left there for one year the stone became a magnet, and its owner, carrying it with him on his hunting expeditions, had amazing success. He had obtained supernatural good fortune, for one particular object. If, after cutting open the seal-mountain goat, the hunter failed to wrap up the stone in some of his clothing it vanished of its own accord.

The last Bella Coola to have supernatural good luck from this source was Winás, who died about 1910. His extraordinary success as a hunter was derived from a number of stones which his father had obtained from the stomachs of seals in the form of land animals. His prosperity ended when he sold his collection of stones to a Bella Bella man who still uses them with great effect.

1;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Supernatural good fortune has also been obtained from the "Mothers" of certain plants. 777

Among the roots that are sought for when a man intends to give a potlatch are those of clover and of okál, a grass which grows on flats near the sea. Once the aunt of an elderly (in 1923) Bella Coola woman dug up the Mother of Okál, a root, thick as her thumb, but shaped like a woman. Perhaps the reason that she found it was because she was digging in the darkness, after the setting of the sun. The woman, ignorant of the proper procedure, did nothing, with the result that her hands became painfully swollen. If she had wrapped the root in a portion of her used clothing and kept it hidden for one year, without saying anything about her find, it would have brought her supernatural good luck. 824 [556] [153]

Another woman found an elderberry as large as a baseball, and shaped like the mask worn above the forehead by a member of the nusk society. Her father, an old man skilled in such matters, wrapped the berry in his daughter's soiled clothing and kept it carefully hidden in her box. It brought her supernatural good luck because, no matter how much or how often she gave away presents, goods always came to her.

SUPERNATURAL GOOD LUCK FROM STONES

Stones are among the objects from which supernatural good luck can be obtained. A person who has long observed ceremonial chastity may be fortunate enough to hear what seems to be the weeping of a new-born infant, as he passes in his canoe beneath some steep ocean cliff. Then, if he watches, he will see a stone being born from a larger one at the level of the sea. If the observer takes the infant-stone, wraps it in his soiled clothing and stores it among his possessions, it will act as other bringers of supernatural good fortune by luring all kinds of valuables to the owner. In fact, such a stone is said to be so potent that if left in an empty box for some time, it will attract enough skins to fill the receptacle. 777 787* 823 [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

• 977
* 787
823

The last appearance of such a stone was in Dean Channel, to the father of an elderly Bella Coola, who was too amazed to take advantage of it. As far as could be ascertained, in 1922 there was only one stone which was regarded by the owner as having brought him good fortune. It had been obtained by one of his elderly relatives who died about 1906. This man had been walking beside the Bella Coola River one spring day when he happened to notice a woodpecker perched on one of the posts supporting an olachen net. Without taking his eyes from it, he idly stooped down and threw a pebble at the bird which flew to the bank, lit on a pile of stones, and became one of them. Realizing that here might be the means of obtaining supernatural good fortune, if properly handled, the man watched for some time, then went forward, picked up the stone, covered it with evergreen boughs and wrapped the whole in a strip torn from the white-man's shirt he was wearing. With the axe he was carrying he cut a recess in a tree, put the object in it and covered the hiding place with the original bark. He said nothing about it, but the stone brought him such good luck that he obtained large quantities of everything desirable.

977
823

In later years the man, after replacing the stone in the hole of the tree, went away to Victoria; when he returned, years later, it was still there. By placing it in his box he again prospered in all his ventures. When an old man the owner presented the stone to a relative who still treasures it. It is red, about a foot in length, shaped somewhat like a human figure without arms or legs, but with a prominent navel opening. See Fig. 2. The owner has kept it for years, hiding it even from his wife and allowing no white man to see it. He had been perfectly willing to have photographs taken of most of his ceremonial objects, but declined to permit this to be done with his valued stone, and carefully hid it in a box after showing it. When he wished to use the transformed bird, it was wrapped in his old shirt, together with a small amount of money or what-

[23]

Fig. 2
Lucky Stone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ever object was desired, and then set in a window of his house so that the sun could fall on one uncovered end. The owner firmly believes that this stone has brought him money on various occasions, and will do so again, though whether he expects the coins to be found inside of the wrapping, or merely to come to him in the course of trade is questionable. According to Bella Coola belief, they ought to appear beside the stone, but as this man attributes any good fortune to it, he never has any difficulty in proving its powers. 777● 823

This stone is also used as a means of increasing the efficacy of prayer. When its owner washes ceremonially in the river before eating in the morning, he rubs it over his body as if it were soap and requests it to make him strong, make him well, grant him his desires, and so forth. [515] [789]

Shamanism

More important to the Bella Coola than any other manifestation of the supernatural is that power which makes an individual either an dłakwala or an dzłanłots. The former is a person who, owing to ability granted him by a supernatural being, is able to perform miraculous feats, especially in curing the sick; the latter is one with similar powers obtained from a ghost.[1] It is impossible to translate either of these terms accurately; the designation "shaman" is accordingly used in this monograph to describe both types of supernaturally endowed individuals. The most common and most important method of obtaining such power is from a living supernatural being; a person receiving the boon in this manner will be termed "shaman," and one empowered by a ghost will be known as "shaman from the dead." 104 756* [787]* [788]

The Bella Coola believe that long ago men were so much more powerful than at present, and so close to the supernatural, that all were virtually shamans. The prowess and adventures 756* 773 538

[1] Ghosts are, of course, supernatural, but as the Bella Coola distinguish between shamans whose powers are derived from these two sources, it is accurate to follow their example.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific super-
* 787 natural power. He realizes that he could increase the prob-
[785] ability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes
[797] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and lay fasting for some time. Another means would be to concentrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either unreservedly. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected. They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

* 787 Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the information received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [828] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly, [821] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other [773] times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform [777] him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as Alquntăm enters Nusmăt-a, wise men separate from their wives [785] and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another
[821] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer
[224] solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-
[785] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such

1:Mc:Dwratch E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

the people of his own village but those of two neighbouring towns. All accepted, as is customary, irrespective of the amount of food. The carcass was cut up and the guests received such minute portions that they became wildly hilarious over the meagre fare provided and flung many insulting remarks at their host. This was what the lad had planned. Confident of his ability to establish his good name, he desired to make his emergence more striking by first emphasizing his degradation.

Next day the father and son again went hunting, and this time the lad killed a seal of slightly larger size. Once more he called in his neighbours and again they made sarcastic remarks about his poverty. The succeeding day he killed one large seal, and summoned the people. Next day he slew two seals; the next, four; then eight, sixteen, and thirty-two on successive days. Each evening a feast was held and the heavy distributed. By this time contempt and scorn had been replaced by respectful wonder, and when the hunter returned with his canoe filled with seals everyone was able to eat to repletion. There was a surfeit of the highly esteemed flesh.

The next day the lad brought back his canoe filled with seals, and the same night the people gathered for the usual feast. Now was the time for which the youth had been waiting. When the carcasses had been cut up and cooked, ready for distribution, he made a speech, reminding those present of the manner in which his parents had been "divined," by food thrown at them during feasts, and how they had never actively resented it. Then he intimated that he was about to retaliate. Starting with the chiefs at the upper end of the house, he threw pieces of cooked seal at his guests, nor did he desist until the faces and shoulders of all had been well spattered with the grease. The people, realizing that it was their own rudeness which was being returned to them, could not defend themselves.

The successful seeker had had a second quantity of seal meat cooked in readiness, which he now distributed to his reviled guests in a gracious manner. In this way he was able to refurbish the prestige of his family. By his lavish donations of seal meat on many occasions, he gained a reputation for generosity which was envied by all.*

Stories Illustrating Supernatural Good Luck

THE Mikinak

Not many years ago two men were canoeing up the Kimsquit River. As one of them paddled down with his pole he saw that it had grazed a

* It is not clear whether or not this story should, strictly speaking, be included in this category? Such a sudden stroke of fortune is natural a coincidence. It seemed as if the male themselves had given their lives to this lad in his misfortune.

[illegible] 1948
NEB Bellacoola NES

*539
*787
*797

salmon lying on the stones at the bottom of the river. Realizing his danger, he swiftly hooked the pole on to the shore beneath a huge cedar where no rain could penetrate. There it remained for twenty or thirty years until it had become covered with moss.

One day two sisters chanced to pass that way and the younger wished to gather some of the moss, but the elder, who apparently surmised with what the pole had been in contact, was afraid and tried to dissuade her. The heedless girl picked some of the moss, and threw it towards her elder sister, saying:

"Pshaw! It is nothing."

The moss struck her, and the elder girl, now thoroughly frightened, was determined that if any ill results were to follow, her younger sister should likewise suffer from them. So she, too, gathered some of the moss and threw it on the first picker. Nothing happened until they had gone home and down near to the fire when both began to swell. They told what had befallen them, but it was too late to apply any remedy and both continued to expand until their stomachs burst and they died."

THE Mikapu THAT WAS CAUGHT IN A NET

Between 1860 and 1870, a young man, related to the Bella Coola from whom this account was obtained, was setting salmon near Tweedsmuir. He had caught all that he needed but decided to make one more haul. As he did so, he saw in the water a giant toad with enormous shining eyes and white feet. It was a mikapu. The beast entered the net which sank under its weight. The terrified fisherman plucked up enough courage to haul in his net, and found that the toad had turned to a stone, the surface of which was covered with grass. He placed it on top of his salmon and went home to summon the people of his own and neighbouring villages to view the wonder. There were ancient traditions about such beasts having been caught in nets, but this was the first time that such a marvel [illegible] A very old man, well-informed in such matters, now appeared and warned the people to keep away from the space between the stone and the river. No sooner had they cleared than the whole back curved in, carrying into the water, canoes, the pile of freshly landed salmon, and the mysterious stone. The old man had heard of a similar occurrence, and his knowledge saved the lives of the onlookers.

[752/755]

*The usual explanation given for the bursting of the stomach is that some of the fire from the scorpion has entered the victim's body, and then increased on cooking them to a blaze. A remedy in the early stages of swelling is said to be the eating of an unsalted walleye fish.

Lib. Decorah E-5 (922-924)948
NEA Dallas-Ada NEA

The fisherman did not obtain supernatural good fortune as a result of his capture, because he neither removed the object nor kept silent about what he had seen.

S36.*
787.*
789

THE MAN WHO SUPERNATURAL KILLED A Mikipat

In the village of Tulik there lived an old man and an old woman with four grown-up sons. Early one morning the oldest of these saw a mergenser below the door in the village and decided to spear it. Armed with a new, sharp-pointed caribou pole he had crept out on the fish-rack, when, not far from it, he saw a toad about the size of a beaver sitting upon the water. He had heard of the power of such beasts, but was ignorant of the proper procedure for obtaining it, so thought he would try the effect of striking the end of his pole across its back. But when he threw it you with this intention, the staff jumped from his hand and pierced the toad's body, so that it died. This power of attracting objects to itself was one of the animal's attributes of which the man was not aware. He pulled it ashore with a stick and toured his household, crying:

"Get up! Get up! But when I have slain. I did not intend to kill it but the pole sprang away from me."

Everyone rushed to the hitch, and when they saw what was there they exclaimed:

"Why did you do such a thing when there was no one near to advise you?"

One man recommended him to go to an old man named Ila who lived in the village of Inuitsiqaqdy. It was said that this man understood how to deal with such matters.

This seemed good advice, so the four brothers went off to consult Ila, saying to him:

"We have come on very important business."

Ila cut short their speech by replying:

"I know all about it. You have had power come to you. Have you four walrus?"

"Yes, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]"

"I have one on this side of the river, and two on the opposite shore. Unless we can fix this up satisfactorily you will die, but if we succeed in doing it correctly you will become wealthy."

The brothers accompanied Ila up the slope of a mountain where he had two staff heads concealed in a box. They took these and went with him to another box concealed on a mountain on the other side of the river where there were two more. Ila took the four heads and escorted the brothers back to their village, stopping only to gather some wild green berry branches. On these he laid the mikipat, for, of course, it was no road, with its head to the sun, and told all the spectators to stand in front of it, while he seated himself to the westward. Apparently, He intended to dismember the creature, and the people wondered how he would do it, because they saw no cutting tool. However, when ready he reached behind him and took a knife with sharp edges. It was a solid knife which seemed to have come there for his purpose. With this he cut the octopus into four longitudinal sections, starting each from the mouth. He measured these pieces and instructed a carpenter to make immediately four boxes to fit the sections, with a small hole in one of the lower corners of each. When these were ready, he placed in each one of the strips of flesh and one of the wolf heads. He then told the brothers to put two of the boxes on a seacoast to the right of the river, the other two on one to the left, placing each so that the corner with the hole in it should be at the south-west, where no water could come. Then He went home.

Ichi Dewalth E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEX Dellewalk NEX

This ceremony brought wealth to the brothers. First the eldest began to prosper, and within a year gave four potlatches. After that he began to have pains in his side; his skin turn crazy and he died. This was because water had penetrated the box designed on his.

Then wealth began to flow to upon the second brother without effort on his part. He too gave four potlatches within a single year, but the water penetrated his box and he also died, after suffering similar pains in his side. The third and the fourth brothers experienced precisely the same fate; each became wealthy after his senior's death, and each died when, after giving four potlatches, the water entered his box.

THE MAN WHO WOOED A MERMAID

Within the lifetime of an old Bella Coola, Snaw, a Tsi'ai man, and Pipalla, a Bella Coola who had a reputation for making evil medicines, were out fishing together for halibut. Pipalla hooked something which he tried to haul in, but it was so heavy that he was making slow progress when suddenly a wave of water rushed from his body, by which sign he knew that it was a mermaid. He continued to haul in his line until the creature came in sight. It resembled a seal, but was large as a bear and had in its throat a burning fire. Such beasts had been found before on several occasions, and in their stomachs had always been valuable stones.

As the mermaid came over the surface the canoe began to spin round as if caught in a whirlpool. Pipalla, terrified, let out his line, not daring to try to haul in the animal, but presently the hooked mermaid rose reluctantly to the surface and Snaw said to his companion:

"Don't drop your line; it has come for me."

"All right, take it," Pipalla replied.

Lillooet Seventh E-9 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

539*
787*
777

He passed his line to the snaker without ever glancing behind him. The two men paddled slowly; the shore, towing the mêtqas astern, its goggle eyes blinking, but whether reached the beach it jumped violently above the water and fell backwith a splash that drenched Sisaxt. The boat pulled out and the mêtqas escaped.

Pipatla understood what just be done under the circumstances. He went home but without young there walked on into the forest, taking care not to look back. When he came to a rotten log he dug under it until he had unburied and ate four white slugs with black and white faces. He covered up the hole he had made, then continued his journey till he came to another log too which he likewise dug four and devoured them. He concealed the scene of his digging and went on to a third, thence to a fourth, in each eating four slugs and covering the hole. Had he not thus concealed his work, his eyes would have rotted away.

Pipatla remained for fourdays in the woods, constantly using his magical leaves, and in this unescaped evil effects. But the unfortunate Sisaxt went to his home, told his neighbours about what he had seen, and sat down beside the fire. Presently his stomach burst and he fell dead. When four days had passed, Pipatla returned to the village, carefully avoiding the road; if he had travelled on that he would have died. Everybody told him the death of his companion, which he explained by saying that that must have been ignorant of the proper method of dealing with a mêtqas. If he had known that, he, Pipatla, would never have passed the mêtqas to his friend, whom he imagined would not have asked for it had he be aware of how to deal with the beast.

THE TRAPPING OF A Mêtqas

About 1880 a widowed Sisaxtlala set his traps for beaver in Lake Kuch. He had hardly left them when, to his surprise, because it was daylight, he heard a splash and a struggle and turned back to find a beaver caught in his trap. Unlatched the animal, skinned it, and again set out for home. He had gone scarcely twenty yards when he again heard a scuffle, and returned to find another beaver in his trap. This one he also unlatched and skinned, and again left the place. A third time a beaver entered his trap as soon as he left it, and he dealt with this in the same fashion, as well as with a fourth which appeared. By this time he realized that there was something uncanny about the occurrences, and, therefore, declined to turn back for a fifth which he heard splashing in his trap as soon as he had moved away after skinning the fourth. That night Sisaxtlala and his children ate the game.

Next morning when he returned to the lake wherein his traps were set he found it to be a torrent. Waves were raging on it as if it were the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

4 539
4 787
● 777

ocean, although there was no wind. He was thirsty and bent down to scoop up a little water in his hands, which he drank. Then he made a small raft on which to go out to the trap where he had caught the four beaver the preceding day. In it he saw a mitsyaz, like a toad but big as a bear, and with a throat that glowed with fire. Sneatlatis made all speed back to the bank, but fell in a faint as he reached it, with his head barely out of the water. He lay there all day, but towards dusk recovered sufficiently to stagger away. He rocked and reeled as if he were drunk, but kept in mind what he had been told by the old people about avoiding the trail. Near home he shouted for Nelendaow', an old man well versed in such matters, and when the latter came to him Sneatlatis said:

"I have seen what you told me about."

Nelendaow' took hammer and wedges and led the way to a pine sapling which he split vertically, so that Sneatlatis could pass through it. The sufferer followed the old man to three other trees which he wedged apart in like fashion, and through which Sneatlatis passed. Then Nelendaow' bade him build a small shelter with a platform where Sneatlatis stayed for four days, while Nelendaow' fumigated him in the smoke of a fire made of four thorny medicinal plants.

For two whole years Sneatlatis remained in this rude shelter, unable to move more than a few steps on account of the sickness which had entered his body with the water he had drunk. At the end of that time he was able to move around with a stick, and ultimately he recovered.

Sneatlatis failed to derive any benefit from the sight of a mitsyaz, because he had been afraid to take advantage of it. A brave man, strengthened by the observance of ceremonial chastity, would have touched the creature's back with the end of his pole, would have hidden this carefully, and in one year he would have begun to show remarkable success as a hunter. Sneatlatis escaped from death because he had avoided walking along a road traversed by unclean women; if he had done so while he had within him some of the mysterious power of the great toad, imbibed in drinking from the lake, he would have perished. The cure practised in this case was peculiar, since usually the approach of a patient to a fire causes his stomach to burst.

THE MAN WHO ATE A SLIAUT

Four brothers were hunting mountain goats when they came to a place, Nimilitsak, where the animals congregated for mating. At one edge of a level stretch the ground fell away, sheer as a precipice, and the eldest brother conceived the brilliant idea of spreading over the brink of this deep a number of slippery, outside planks of cedar. These they laid with the rounded side on the ground, so that they would tip when a goat stepped

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

536 *
787 *
777 ●

on them and throw the animal to the ground far below. They covered the planks with moss, to disguise the trap, and then awaited results. It was mating time and when a she-goat slipped and fell over, all the males, thinking she had jumped down to elude them, leapt off in pursuit and were killed also. This method of hunting proved so successful that with the valuable wool obtained the four brothers were able to give many potlatches and became chiefs. During the summer they carefully concealed the slippery boards, fearing that someone might see them and copy the ruse.

Not long after they had thus become wealthy the four brothers chanced to be hunting on the distant side of the mountain, where there were a number of small streams flowing into a lake with no outlet to the sea. The eldest was some distance from the others when they saw some spring salmon in one of the rivulets. The second brother touched one of these fish on the neck with his hunting stick, and at once it jumped on the land and flopped about, shedding its scales. In spite of the unusual behaviour of the salmon, combined with its presence in an inland stream, the three hunters were not suspicious, so they killed and cooked it. As the fish was roasting before the fire the eldest brother returned and, noticing that its flesh was still quivering, burst out in wrath:

"What do you mean by killing a salmon in a place like this? Where could the fish have come from? Don't you remember what our father has told us so often? It must be a xwiwi which you have killed and soon you will die."

"You are always afraid of something," said the second brother, laughing. "It is just an ordinary spring salmon, and as I am hungry I am going to eat it."

The third brother agreed with the second and the two devoured the fish, but the youngest heeded the advice of the eldest and would not touch it. Soon after eating, the stomachs of the two rash men split. As they lay dying the eldest said to them:

"It is your own fault. I warned you, but you have always been too hot-headed."

The erring men agreed before they died. The eldest and youngest brothers went home, where their father was grief-stricken when they told him of the deaths of his other two sons.

Such deaths resulting from the eating of a xwiwi are not uncommon. A man will sometimes find in the forest dried skins of sockeye salmon, or the heads of spring salmon, which are in reality xwiwi that have assumed this form, and if the finder eats them he will die. A few years ago a

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

589
787
777

Bella Bella man was fishing when a salmon jumped into his canoe and died at once, without the usual flopping and struggling. The fisherman took it home and ate it, though his wife refused to touch it, as being uncanny. Presently the man's lower jaw became diseased and he lost his teeth. The salmon must have been a sutaif.[10]

The mere sight of a sutaif does not bring the misfortune which follows the killing of one by faulty means. On the other hand, if slain in the proper manner great good fortune will result. One method is to put a stick near it in the water, whereupon the fish will jump ashore and flop around, shedding its scales. The hunter should then kill it and, crouching down, say:

"I wish I had a salalberry leaf, or a piece of dead alder."

Both of these have sharp-cutting edges. If he then puts his right hand behind him, whichever he has asked for will be there, though no one knows how it comes. Then he must cut the fish lengthwise into two parts, throw away the right half and the head, wrap the left in his cape,[11] and run from the spot, taking care to go neither up nor down hill. Soon a landslide will take place, sweeping away the ground on which he has stood, even though it be level. He must hide the half sutaif in a hole in a cedar tree for one year without saying anything about his treasure. During this period he must not hunt or embark on any other important enterprise.

When the year has elapsed he may tell the people of his experience and sell tiny fragments of the sutaif for large sums. The purchasers wrap these fragments in cedar-bark and with them decoy fish-weirs and traps, thus attracting animals and fish. A man obtaining a sutaif in this way can show his children where it is concealed, and so transmit his power to them.

THE CAPTURE OF A SUTAIF

Not many years ago, a certain Oulaite'i constructed an open salmon-trap below Kimsquit. One moonlight night he saw in it a white, gleaming salmon and at once jumped to the conclusion that it was a sutaif. Being a wild, reckless fellow, he determined to try to obtain supernatural good fortune from his prey, though he was ignorant of the proper procedure. Waiting until the receding tide had almost laid bare the floor of his pen, he kept down from the weir and clubbed the salmon to death, heedless of the scales which it was shedding in all directions. Then Oulaite'i cut it

[164]
[123]

[10] It appears that the fisherman was a victim of witchcraft, in consequence of which his teeth were extracted by a doctor, but the patient is convinced that his misfortunes are due to the salmon which entered his canoe.

[11] The left of anything is said to be more valuable than the right because when a man dances it is the left side which is nearer the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

into strips, using his ordinary knife, and returned home, where he sat down near some women and close to the fire. Before long he began to feel ill; his stomach grew larger and larger, and finally split in various places so that the raw flesh could be seen. No shamans could help him and within a year he was dead.

Stories Illustrating Shamanism

THE FORTUNES OF Xpaw-a

Xpaw-a was a blind man about thirty years old who lived with his wife at the head of Rivers Inlet. Before he had lost his sight he had been a successful hunter, but now he could no longer provide for her and they were often on the verge of starvation. One autumn the two had gone some little distance from the village to a small creek in which the women were fishing with a gaff for the dying salmon that had spawned and were too feeble to escape. As Xpaw-a sat beside her, his wife saw a large black bear on the other side of the creek, coming down to the water to fish. She told her husband, who bade her fetch his bow and arrow. When she had brought them, wondering what he intended to do, he told her to point the arrow at the bear; he was going to shoot. She obeyed; as Xpaw-a felt the taut bow-string beneath his fingers he almost forgot that he was blind; the art of the hunter had returned to him. He heard the arrow; it struck the bear, killing it instantly, without a sound, but his wife lied, telling him that he had missed it, and mocking him for his failure, with the intention of securing all the meat for herself. As soon as an opportunity presented itself she slipped away, skinned the animal, and soon had the flesh cooking before the fire.

Xpaw-a smelt the cooking.

"I could have killed more," he said.

"You dare," his wife replied. "What are you talking about? You can't shoot."

When the women again turned away to superintend her cooking, a supernatural being, who had seen Xpaw-a's misfortunes, took pity on him and rubbed his hands over his eyes, restoring their sight. As he gazed around, amazed at his good fortune, he saw his wife bending over a box in which bear meat was boiling, greedily eating the grease which she skimmed from the surface of the water. He was so angry at her monstrous deed that he crept up behind her, unnoticed, and thrust her head down into the boiling liquid where he held her until she ceased to struggle. She was dead. Then Xpaw-a tore her clothing, her flesh, even her bones, into small fragments which he scattered to the winds in all directions.

I:Mc:Hwealth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NE6

539*
756*
787*

suspend the bundle by ropes from a stick which projected horizontally from the wall. It was to these ropes that Kalakw tied the bangles, so that they jingled with every movement of the child.

Sqaqwim heard this peculiar noise from his house in the land above and sent a Sîqwat-ás, a diminutive supernatural being of human form, which flew on air, to investigate. The creature perched in the cradle rope where Kalakw saw it. Owing to his former life in the land above he knew what it was, and how to deal with it, so he quickly threw over it a blanket which he had frequently used.* This brought him supernatural good fortune. He concealed the Sîqwat-ás for safety in an old chequer-work rush mat, and left it lying on the floor.

[177]
[854]
[776]
[777]

Wealth flowed in upon him so that he was able to give a potlatch every year. At one of them he gave his infant daughter, the occupant of the cradle, the name Sîqwat-ás, which has been handed down from generation to generation, and has recently been given to a Bella Bella child. Kalakw's prosperity roused the jealousy of his fellows so that they murdered him, but his children still had the Sîqwats and they continued to prosper. At last their enemies slew them too, sparing only one small boy.

[551]

This orphan had a precarious existence. He was refused admission to what had been his father's house and was forced to live in the space between the floor and the ground below, while his food was taken from the refuse heaps. In time he grew to young manhood, frequently brooding on the fate of his relatives and hoping for revenge. One day he crossed the river, ascended a mountain, and found there a large cave, where he lay down to sleep, wrapped in a bear-skin. A supernatural being came to him.

"I have watched your woes," said the stranger, "and I will help you if you are brave. You must accompany me to my land. The road is dangerous, and if you should lose me it would be disastrous to you, so keep close."

They took a difficult path down through the earth to the land of the dead below.

"I will keep you here for a night and teach you," said the supernatural one as he gave the boy a stick in which was power.

"You must take this," he said, "and go at night to your father's house. Throw the stick at one of those who killed your father. It will rebound to you, after leaving your enemy dead without a mark on his body. Do this every night, killing only one man at a time, until you have slain all the murderers, but be careful not to harm anyone else."

Although he had not as first revealed himself, the being from whom

* At any one would have been useless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER XI

MEDICINE, MAGIC, TABOO[1]

Introductory — Causative Medicines — Preventive and Curative Medicines — Sorcerers — Taboos — Ritual Acts — Miscellaneous Beliefs

Introductory

THE beliefs described in the last chapter are essentially religious since they display an attitude of respect and often of propitiation to supernatural powers having greater strength than human beings. This is self-evident in the earlier sections and, though less noticeable, is present also in ideas concerning shamans since these men have themselves acquired ability placing them on a plane slightly removed from that of their fellows. Theoretically, it seems as if a clear division might be drawn between the concepts just recorded, and others of a magical nature in which, although the element of contact with the supernatural is present, yet the end desired is obtained by the mere performance of an action. To the Bella Coola there is a slight overlap between the two types. For example, the acquisition of an object from which supernatural good fortune may be secured is religious, but its use is virtually magical since once obtained, neither supplication nor further favours are necessary. Nevertheless, it is possible to separate most magical beliefs from most religious ones, though it must be emphasised that the cleavage is less distinct to the native than it appears to the white man.

If it is difficult to find a clear dividing-line between religion and magic, it is impossible to draw one between the latter and informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck. 575* 774 755 [784]

[1] The late Harlan I. Smith has dealt with certain aspects of the subjects treated in this chapter in two articles: "Sympathetic Magic and Witchcraft among the Bella Coola" (American Anthropologist, vol. 27, no. 1, Jan.-March, 1925, pp. 116-121) and "Materia Medica of the Bella Coola and Neighbouring Tribes of British Columbia" (National Museum of Canada, Annual Report for 1917, Bulletin 34, pp. 47-48).

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims. 575* 774 626

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural beings held in Nuxmit-a prior to the entry of Alpuxtim. As already described, it is believed that a supernatural element from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nuxmit-a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Alpuxtim enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened. 575* 787 776 996 777 761

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Mystery Dance]

what are to be the correct answers? The marshals decide on these, but their judgment really depends on the four remembrancers who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Saiyuk: performed, the answers chosen were: 575* 796*

Aimalus, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural ones. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity. [821] [796]

Nuxpuste Smaisitsis, "The Eagle Down Smaisitsis." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Smaisitsis" since eagle down is a symbol of peace. [825]

Kitimuxtimem, "The Yawning Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches. [777]

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whoever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a Sacist. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager parent can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness to assist in binding the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care. [756]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

575 kukuxiut send back X's call in the usual manner. Then, two 996 by two, the masks are cast on to the fire and the ceremonial is over.

THE DANCE OF THE TALLY POSTS

[973] As previously described, a tally post is erected in the land above for every Bella Coola at birth. As long as this memorial [777] is upright and firm, the individual to whom it refers enjoys [753] health and prosperity, but if it becomes crooked he falls ill.
[424] The uninitiated believe that several kukuxiut have the prerogative of climbing to the land above during the ceremonial season and straightening leaning tally posts. This is such a [178] useful ability that it must have exercised great influence on [64] the uninitiated in early days, but the rite has not been properly carried out since the smallpox epidemic in the last century.
[115] The following account was obtained from two old men who remembered the manner in which a certain Ooikuif of Tsowait performed a year or two before "The Great Sickness." Neither of the informants was a kuxiut at the time, but they were able to supplement their recollections of the dance with what they afterwards learnt when initiated, so the following account is probably accurate in outline though deficient in detail. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X, and describe the ceremony in the present tense. It was also performed at Kimsquit many years ago.

The rite resembles kuxiutsa dances in many respects. X must obtain the consent of the marshals during the preceding summer, and their permission is refused unless the prospective dancer is a man of proved discretion. If they agree, X asks a [288] number of kukuxiut women to help him by making a very long and strong rope of nettle fibre. At intervals the work-women gather for the purpose in the back-room of X's house, taking [418] care that no uninitiated see what they are doing. Every effort is made to ensure that there is no flaw in the rope as a break would be a serious matter, punishable by death.

Near the winter solstice the marshals choose a suitable time

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the guests were plentiful, fat, and unsuspicious, so that before nightfall they had killed four. Well satisfied, they lay down in a cave to sleep for the night. At that time no one knew what supernatural being caused thunder; the earliest inhabitants of the world had possessed that knowledge but it had been forgotten in the intervening generations. Towards midnight the hunters were awakened by a loud boom and wondered what could have caused it. Presently they saw approaching a figure resembling a man, with a weird nonhuman face, who carried in each hand a huge rock crystal.* He raised and lowered his arms as if pounding; at each movement the crystals struck each other, producing the booming sound and also emitting a flash of light. The oldest brother, Sulik, told the others to cover their faces with their blankets and to keep their eyes closed, because some evil and powerful creature was drawing near. But the second brother, who had caught a glimpse of the two crystals and greatly desired them, watched cautiously, hoping for an opportunity to steal them. Thunder, for it was none other, ranged around, at intervals he passed across to the other side of the intervening valley on a sidewalk which grew before his feet to form a bridge for him, and on it, too, he was able to remove his steps. Several times Thunder crossed and recrossed, accompanied by simultaneous peals. He came near the four brothers and danced; then lay down while fire emerged from his mouth. The second brother began to feel scorched, gradually the heat increased, but he was powerless to move; before dawn, when Thunder vanished, he had been roasted to death.

The three survivors buried the dead man in a hastily made grave in the floor of the cave and went home, abandoning the monstrous game which they had killed. Sulik, though grieved at the loss of his brother, felt that the latter's death was his own fault for peeking when he had been warned not to do so. Not long afterwards the two younger brothers died. Then the sole survivor told a carpenter to make him a mask secretly, according to a design which he would describe. In this way the face of Thunder was portrayed in wood. When the mask was ready, Sulik wore it and gave an imitation of the actions of his parents; no one had ever seen anything like it and the people were amazed.

No great antiquity is ascribed to this myth and it gives no explanation of questions which at once arise in the investigator's mind. The type is fairly common in Bella Coola; in fact, the only unusual part of it is that the visionary received a Sulik prerogative rather than one of the forms of good fortune previously described. To the Bella Coola philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Saiks was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a kusiut dance. The assumption is that he was a kusiut at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the name died about 1910, each Saiks having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

*This is said to have been equivalent to the bracelets of a Thunder dancer.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 796* 539 424 [777] [551]

THE GHOST DANCE[*]

Among the numerous patrons of kusiut dancers are Ghosts. The term, Lskunkott, applied to a shaman whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to kusiut with one as patron, but the two functionaries must not be confused. It is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dancers in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an ancestor with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Sapus of Tcumsil performed his ritual; it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

575* 796* [775] [756] [424]

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the marshals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the potlow of some other kusiut, the marshals state that his call is imminent; X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

When the nalusam rites of the following evening have been completed and the uninitiated have returned to their own houses, they are startled to hear whistling from the forest near at hand. It is not the instrumentally produced sound that accompanies the coming of a call, but tuneless whistling with the mouth; everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A visitation from them is by no means unknown, and always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone cowers in the bedrooms. Presently heralds go through the village

575* 796* 787 [795]

[*] This relationship is implied with the dance of the same name among Indians of other culture areas. [171]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

seldom a chief who had given many potlatches. Successful raiders rarely slew such an one; his position placed him above the dangers to which lesser men were subject. 721 575 622

Raids appear never to have been carried out solely for the purpose of giving warriors opportunities to display their prowess, or of permitting young men to prove their mettle. Scarcity of food was the commonest cause for forays when, of course, the victims were chosen for their accumulated supplies. The Kwakiutl especially, lacking abundance of salmon, often attacked the Bella Coola. Even more dreaded were the Kitkatla, the most warlike people of the central coast, who used to raid for many miles to carry off slaves whom they sold or traded for other commodities. Trespassing, too, was a source of friction which often led to hostility. In such a case, the offenders were usually held up to ridicule at potlatches, and the irritation gradually increased until wiped out in bloodshed. Members of a tribe which had suffered from a raid prompted by any of these motives would await a suitable opportunity for retaliation; this in turn would be avenged, and a vendetta often ensued lasting for generations. As already described, a ceremonial error brought punishment from a neighbouring tribe; this was the only motive which caused fighting between different Bella Coola villages. In the last century there was a struggle of this kind between the people of Ituna and Alpáiat in which the former were victorious and took many slaves who were later ransomed. When ill-luck had dogged a village or a group of villages for some time, the inhabitants sometimes endeavoured to wipe out their misfortunes by attacking another tribe. 648 685 628 556 688 628 727 777

The teeming salmon at Bella Coola, Kimsquit, and Talio, made it unnecessary for the Bella Coola to wage aggressive war for which they were unfitted both on account of their unmilitary attitude and their lack of central authority. On the other hand, they were tempting victims for more belligerent neighbours. The narrow Bella Coola valley, however, far removed from the open sea, and densely populated, was difficult to attack. 642 648 193 161

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 192

Nuwatqymem: Women endowed supernaturally by Ana'Ulmalnis and serving as patron (?) to a hamat dancer.

[919] nuwalliste: Omen of death.

Nuwitnumkmem, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tlenqulitsa's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuwumlaie: 1—Man dwelling in Kemsquat's house.
2—Hamat name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuwqim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuwumway: Hamat name assumed by a Sisaa woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuwyumem: Hamat with right to display a pepper-patron. The difference, if any, between this and pulmem is obscure.

Nu'uwuhkumnis, "The Widower": One of Raven's names as chief.

[575] nuqkwiclal'em: Synonym for hamatsa: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuqlumkilem, "Handicapped Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqwnuie: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqulilm c: Medicine brewed in a shell.

Nuqtymain, "Place of Much Quartz": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqwatnis: Hamat name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqulqulim c: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[105] nuqwumem of ne ung"ula: One year.

[928] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqwil, "Empty House": House in which a hamat dance is taking place.

nuqulqur: The throwing of grease on a fire to burn, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuqwly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqulitsin: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqumnis: Hum-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for hamatsa and other important hamat rites.

[777] nuq"nuiclitsa: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwlumkulis: Hamat name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwulim: Site of an ancient town on Johnstone Pass.

Nuqwulnis: The upper heaven.

nuqhum: Women with thick pubic hair.

Nuqumnuqhulim c: A Sisaa ancestress.

Nuqlipumlmis, "Where Nuqumim Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[828] nuqlupim nuqy: Contracted body.

Nuqlqulel'em, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Sisaa in the beginning of time.

nuqlqmy: Canoe-maker.

Nuqlulem: River entering the Bella Coola from the north near Nuqlqlil.

[535] nuqlulnmp: Children's dance which serves as training for hamat rites and to provide entertainment.

[164]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[777] [125]

[534]

[552] [534]

[581] [125] [527]

[125]

qaxtlamly: The dancing, by several of his associates, to "help" a hachet performer.
Qawaal: Unidentified locality in the Bella Bella area.
Qc: Mountain above Dean.
qakuc: Supernatural bird, bringer of good luck.
Qakstal: Locality near the head of Dean Channel. qalm: 1—Raven.
2—Nuxalkmay name of a Kimsquit man.
Qakut: Man mentioned in a song.
Qallaskay: Kaxtar name of a Dean man with prerogative of biting himself.
qalsiil: The location in a house taken by a wife when ceremonially seated behind her husband.
Qalwalilal: Influential Heiqaitc chief who died about 1910.
Qamchwala: Ancestral name of a Dean chief; the designation may be of Kwakiutl origin.
Qamcum: 1—One of the nine supernatural beings.
2—White person.
3—Kaxtar name of a Kimsquit woman.
qamcqlqum: Clean, dry shell.
qamqlum c: Stump, in the language of Raven.
Qamqum: 1—Supernatural being, lord of the under-sea world.
2—Ancestral name of a Qamqum man.
Qamu'nala: Man living in Bella Bella in early times.
Qamulis: Ancestral name of a Tsimsil woman.
qanc c: Large, cone-shaped whistle used in round dive.
Qanqa c, "Sally?": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
qalsi: To drift down, of smoke.
Qalsqalsa c: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Dean in the beginning of time.
qaqsta: Framework of split sticks for roasting salmon.
qaqsi: Drum.
Qaqtsaci: One of the first men to settle at Heiqaitc in the beginning of time.
Qaqsuil: Bella Bella village.
qaxa: Kwakiutl term for "eagle down" prerogative.
qaxlan: Third day of a hachet dance.
Qaxlaklas: Harbour on Labouchere Channel.
Qaxlaskis: Settlement in the Carrier country.
qaxlaskas, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud.
qaxlil: Wolverine.
qaxlilsis dawas, "A Washing to Free from Taint": Term applied to a ceremony to clear the path of the children when a husband has married a slave wife or sister.
Qaxs: 1—One of the names of Raven as child.
2—Platyshum name of a Kimsquit man.
3—Kaxtar name of a Kimsquit man.
Qaxlamas: Supernatural woman from whom the Carpenters are said to have derived their skill in the beginning of time.
Qaxlaxa c: 1—Kaxtar name of a Tsimsil man.
2—Kaxtar name of a Kimsquit man.
qaxsa: White swan.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[142]
[773]
[777]
[825]
[601]
[825]
[491]
[825]
[589]
[854]
[581]
[195]

ḳwaiḳwaxa: 1—Taffy post, one of the supernatural elements possessed by all human beings.
2—Invisible supernatural element which constantly moves before the face.

ḳwaiḳwaxa; nuxalin, ḳwaiḳwaxa, (rarely, ḳwaiḳaxa): Crest.

ḳwax: Raven.

ḳwax: Big old male mountain goat.

ḳwaxila: Kwakiutl man living in the last century.

ḳwaylaḳla: Celebrated Kwakiutl chief.

ḳwayqwac-nuxun: Name of a shaman who received his power from Raven.

ḳwaxwaxi: One of the first men to settle at Ḳnaa in the beginning of time.

ḳwaxwaxi: Fourth oldest, or youngest, brother or sister.

qwa'nukla: Steller's jay.

ḳwaḳiḳ: Kitamaat woman.

ḳwaxa: Woman's pubic hair.

ḳwaxa: Sea-lion rub.

ḳwaxa: Those who are present and receive gifts when an announcement of a marriage is first made.

ḳwaxa: Kwakiut name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳwaxa'ɛxw: A revelation, such as the sight of a supernatural being or object usually concealed.

ḳwaxaxi: Yearling seal.

ḳwaxaq: Word used in inviting to a marriage announcement.

ḳwaxaxa: Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.

ḳwaxwaxwa: Kwakiutl supernatural being, said to be identical with Ḳ̓ɛqwaxa.

ḳwaxlaḳlaḳ*: Nuxpual name of a Kitamaat man.

ḳwayai: Bella Bella village west of Namu.

ḳwai: Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.

ḳwaiya: Professional female marriage dresser who came down to Kitamaat in the beginning of time.

ḳwaxwaxa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

ḳwlaxi, "Place of Herbage": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.

ḳwata: Inspiration, in the sense of the source of a kwakiut dancer's power of thought.

ḳwaxalt: Village west of Kwatna, settled in the beginning of time.

ḳwaḳwaxi: Actual goods used for the repurchase of a wife.

ḳwayaxlaxa: Ancestral name of a Kitamaat chief.

ḳwaxi: Cradle.

ḳwa'xiḳ: Kwakiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

ḳwayu: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

ḳ*ulu: The noble and rightful sentiments engendered in both families by an elaborate marriage, either real or fictitious. The word embodies the concepts of financial interdependence and of consequent mutual strength.

ḳwaxlin: The transference of activities to a new sphere; the term is used, rhetorically, when referring to the death of a skilled craftsman.

S

sala: 1—Skeleton.
2—Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.

Salmaxa-nuxu: Kwakiut name of a Bella Coola man.

sal-nis ḳlaḳa: The constant blinking of the eyes.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [828] [753] [828]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Snq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Snq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 756 [776]

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ê'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Mâ'tem) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.' [171]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called anuk. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 754 [825]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 754 [825]

I add here a few current beliefs:— 827

Snapping indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763 777

WARS.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their 726 714

(i) Awatqmo xoil, "Lakeroad": the eastern continuation of the last mentioned.[1] The name is explained as follows: 361

One of the people who came to the earth in the beginning of time, Taiatsmis by name, travelled to the Skeena River, and there saw women wearing labrets. On his return to Bella Coola he settled at Awatqmo xoil and carved on his totem-pole[2] the figure of a woman with an abalone-shell labret as a memorial of his voyage. Visitors coming to his potlatches named the town from this figure. [173]

This was one of the largest towns in the valley.

*(k) Alind ts: a small town to the north of the last, not far from the Pe ech. It is assumed that it was founded by a descendant of Taiatsmis named Alind ts. The consensus of opinion is that it has not been occupied for many years, but one informant recently dug up a clay pipe on the alleged site. [172]

*(l) Skitsol, "What Has Been Divided": on the south shore of the Bella Coola River about a quarter of a mile from the sea. This village was founded by a certain Sqil.

*(m) Sqmqo ts, meaning doubtful, perhaps "Salty": this, the most populous village of the valley in the recent past, is still inhabited by one or two families. The inhabitants of other towns explain its large population by marriages with slaves. This is the upper, or eastern, continuation of the preceding, and the two in combination formed a row of houses stretching for three-quarters of a mile (see Plate 9). [162] [58] [56]

(n) Gwatqmoq, "The Treeless Place": on the north side of the Bella Coola, apparently about half a mile above Alind ts. This village was long ago deserted.

(o) Tsnkwumalqa ts, "Where There Is Much tsnkwumalq," a kind of hollow-armored plant: some distance from [1] Several towns, each consisting of a single row of houses, are regarded as forming one village. In such cases there is no visible boundary mark.

[2] The Bella Coola believe that their early ancestors used totem-poles, supported inclusive by [illegible] will be made, even though the work of Indians and others on the coast origin of totem-poles on the North-West Coast indicates that the Bella Coola example are not historically genuine. [171]

the north bank of the Bella Coola,* near the lower slope of the mountain, and about three miles from the sea. It is probable that there was a town at this spot very long ago, according to the statement of one old man, and the numerous superstitions (II, p.8) in the vicinity support this view.

*(11) Sunut, "Sunny," or "Fallen Sun": on the north side of the Bella Coola opposite the preceding. It was deserted about 1907. This was a fairly large town, though never as big as Semqo'ts. The name is derived from Sun, sunt, and there are two explanations given for it. One informant states that the name came from the many residences of the Sun to the first people there; another that the first chief, said to have been named Sulthwa, erected a large totem-pole, decorated with the figure of a sun. This blew down, in consequence of which the people called their town Sunut, "Fallen Sun."

*(12) Sqemulk: on the north side of the Bella Coola about three miles from the sea, and a short distance below the end of the present bridge. The meaning of the name is unknown.

*(13) Tsemsil, "Where the River Is Sufficiently Deep to Cover the Stones, but Shallow Enough for Rapids": the upper continuation of the last-named. It was deserted during the smallpox epidemic. The name of the chief who came there at the beginning of time was given as Tsemsilak.

(14) Ins'ensqmik, "On the Point": on a curving promontory on the south bank of the river about four miles from the sea. It was long ago swept away when the river changed its course.

(15) Ts'ayemik, "The Place of Foul Water": on the north bank of the Bella Coola a little above the preceding, at a place where there were a number of stagnant pools between the river and the mountains. No one knows how long ago this town was abandoned, but as the names of people living there figure in stories which are said to be of no great antiquity, it

*The river frequently changes its course, so that villages that were at a considerable distance from it many years have been on its banks.

Bulu have been heard as recently as 1914 according to popular belief. In January of that year a number of young Bulu Coolu were returning home in a motor-boat from Ocean Falls. They camped for the night on Burke Channel, and were alarmed to hear a crashing of bushes and a heaving on cow-marks. Thoroughly frightened, they directed the beams of several electric torches in the direction of the sounds without avail and at last started the engine of their motor-boat, the noise of which frightened the bulu away.

An animal somewhat similar to the bulu is the dilbeit. The Bulu Coolu were then long, long ago, there lived on human beings near Port John on Evans Arm, King Island. They were a strange people, with peculiar rites including the worship of fire. Their neighbours, the Bulu Bulu, from whom they differed entirely, determined to destroy the dilbeit. A massacre took place, and only a few survivors escaped to an island in one of the lakes in the interior of King Island. There, in course of generations, they grew hairy and lost their human characteristics; it is said that a few paintings made by them are still visible there. Not many years ago some Bulu Coolu are when may have been the last surviving dilbeit. Two hairy creatures were observed falling from a skin boat on Burke Channel. As soon as they realized that they were observed they doubled adrift, broke up the framework of their canoe, and plunged into the forest carrying its skin covering. Nothing more seems to be known concerning them, nor do they appear ever to have ventured supernatural assistance to anyone.

Another supernatural creature is the kilkeil. It somewhat resembles a cow, although its legs are shorter and its body, which is white and hairless, is heavier. In spite of its awkward build, this animal can move as rapidly as to catch birds and animals with its tongue, which can be shot forth to a seven-foot length. Various incidents are related concerning kilkeil. One of its characteristics is that it causes pains. The country where one lives is invariably denuded of underbrush and even pebbles, everything movable is blown away, leaving only rear-and gaping holes in the earth. In such regions no fire can be lit. The last known area of this kind is up the river behind Green Bay, about four miles from the sea. So far as could be learned, Sisiutl' have never assisted Bella Coola in any way nor played any part in the social life of the community. They are feared on account of their supernatural power, but appear so seldom that they are practically disregarded.

G.McIlwraith R-9 (1922-1924) 1945
NEA Bellacoola NES

More common than the last, and accordingly more important, is the hankus. It is an enormous bird with hairy wings and long, flexible beak. As it flies, the wings rattle violently, and its note, an oft repeated "Hau, hau, hau," can be heard for miles. These birds are said to have been numerous in former years, and are well known to all Bella Coola. Masked figures representing them are often used at hamat dances. The hankus is feared for its practice of inserting its long beak into the rectum of anyone sleeping carelessly in the forest and drawing forth his entrails. This can be prevented by standing upright a staff, such as all hunters carry, before going to sleep.

A popular story runs that once, not many years ago, a number of men camped in the edge of a canyon near their home, without taking this precaution. One of them was awakened by a slight movement of one of his companions and, looking up, he saw the long neck and beak of a hankus projecting over the rim of the canyon and sucking his partner's entrails. The surviving slayer of the stricken man had awakened him. With his face he dare to arrow into the bird's neck, causing it to disappear over the brink. Presently the long beak reappeared and he discharged another arrow with the same result. Again and again this happened until the attack ceased at dawn. The hunter assumed that a single bird had been repeatedly attacking, but when he looked over the edge of the cliff he saw below a number of carcasses, each with an arrow in its throat. The canyon must have been a roosting place for the birds. His companion seemed still asleep, but when he investigated he found that all were dead, save the slightly enlarged orifice showed how they had been killed.

The hankus has been seen within recent years, but one informant said he frequently heard them on the south side of the Bella Coola River about two miles from the sea. They would have been frightened at any time but nightfall increased their fears. Their dogs heard the sound and howled in dread. The women threw on their few several soiled blankets, her only pair of shoes, and some dry salmon, which all supernatural beings abhor. Then she and her husband fled home, waving lanterns to and fro and firing musket shots in all directions. The birds did not follow them, but they considered themselves fortunate to reach Bella Coola unmolested. 776* 789 [125]

1:36:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural animals just described are fairly exact; they know their appearance, what to expect, and what to do if one is encountered. In addition to these, they assume the existence of monsters of indefinite form which they term cwacq. Any supernatural creature, a kikmil for example, is spoken of as a cwacq in general, not specific, classification. Consequently, what one Bella Coola may describe as a cwacq is given a distinctive name by someone else with wider knowledge. As far as could be learned, there is no designation other than cwacq for creatures which move from the ocean in April to clear the way for salmon, and spend the summer in the lakes of the interior, or beneath the ice of glaciers. They can assume various forms, sometimes even human, though they usually appear as giant, hairless, bear-like creatures with short legs and brown skin. Their eyes are large, round, and glass-like. In whatever form these creatures may appear, they are almost certain to bring disaster to the beholder. One of the haunts of cwacq is beneath the glacier on Mount Ozmoo-i, behind the small mountain which rises behind Kwaqo-ts, on the south side of the Bella Coola River about half a mile from the sea. It is said that only a few years ago a white man, having heard of these creatures, went to that place with a number of Bella Coola. All the latter were able to hear the roaring of the beasts, louder than the whistle of a steamer, but the white man seemed deaf to it, though the power of the cwacq had affected him, for he died on the way back to the village. [184] 776* [125] 761 776* [778]

Other cwacq are said to live near Kimsquit. The father of [778] a woman now in middle age is said to have guided a white man to the spot. Through a telescope he saw an enormous animal, and passed the instrument to a Kwakiutl Indian in the party. He, too, saw it, but the effect was so powerful that he soon died. Theoretically, a man may receive supernatural aid from one of these monsters, but practically they are regarded as entirely evil and to be avoided.

The creature to which the term cheep is most often applied is one that lives in lakes; it has a huge mouth and can suck with incredible force. More specifically, this animal is termed a sdimiik. One is said to have lived not long ago at Wilson Bay, about six miles from Bella Coola, and a small one is said to be living even now in Owen Lake. The Bella Coola tell a number of stories concerning the sdimiik; the following is a typical account, and others will be given with folk-tales in a later chapter.

Within the life-time of an informant, two youths, a chief's son and a great man's son, went to swim in one of the small lakes near Owen Lake. The chief's son, who was really first, swam out, wearing a fancy belt, leaving his companion on the shore. When the latter was on the point of diving in he heard a beautiful cooing noise, combined with an unknown croaking. He called to the swimmer asking him if he, too, heard it.

"Yes," came the answer, "But it is nothing," and the youth continued his swim.

As the noise grew louder the boy on the bank cried out: "Come back, come back, there is something bad there that we do not understand."

His friend in the water again answered: "Oh! There is nothing wrong."

The noise increased, whistle and croaks were mingled from the bank and flew out towards the centre of the lake. The motion eventually grew so great that the youth on land was forced to clench a tree-trunk with his arms, while his legs fluttered out towards the lake like pennants in a strong wind. The strain on his arms was so terrific that he was almost forced to relinquish his grip before the motion subsided. When he looked at the lake the swimmer had vanished.

The survivor returned to the village and reported what had happened. He was believed his story; instead, he was made a prisoner, accused of having killed the chief's son. For a week the people questioned him daily without being able to shake his story; then they resolved to

1:Mr.Gerrath E-5 (512-1524)948
NEA Bellevue NEA

she had to follow him into water up to her waist. Then Raven suddenly grasped her under the arms, hauled her into his craft, and fled. The sockeye salmon were cried out to anger and leapt into their canoes for pursuit, but one by one they sank; Mouse had done her work well. For a time the chase was close; in fact, the sockeye salmon nearly caught Tahsiil in North Bentinck Arm, but as danger threatened, Raven seized a pole and delivered several vigorous thrusts which sent the canoe beyond the reach of the already sinking pursuers. The gashes made in the canoe by his thrusts are still visible near the site of the Bella Coola Cannery, as well as the pole which he threw ashore when he had finished with it; it becomes petrified and can still be seen immediately behind the manager's house. At the mouth of the Bella Coola River, Raven threw the chief's daughter into the water. Her descendants are the sockeye salmon which visit that stream; and it is due to his failure to capture more than one, that so few sockeyes come to this river.

Another version of this myth was collected from a Kitsequit man.

It describes how Raven went down to Tahsiil to the land of the salmon, in the guise of an old man. He was courteously received at the house of Dzagas, chief of the salmon, who gave him a meal of dried fish. Raven carefully watched to ascertain where he had carried from his wooden model, and when he found out that it was the bone at the back of the neck, he secreted one in the palm of his mouth. Presently one of the salmon women became ill, and Dzagas said:

"Old man, you have hidden a bone."

The salmon searched Raven, but failed to find where he had hidden, and he was able to return to Kitsequit with it. He added this bone to one of his models, and it was at once able to swim strongly; in fact, it became a real salmon.

This fish was the ancestor of all small-headed salmon, which are still called Sumsuhlhiwat di Ilnas, "The Salmon-like Fish of Raven." They are not considered as valuable for food as other salmon.

Another exploit ascribed to Raven in the beginning of time was the bringing of herring to Kitsequit.

Some of these fish then inhabited the ocean, and Raven determined to bring them to increase the food supplies of his people. A girl happened to catch a single herring for her share and brought it to Raven, who entered Tahsiil with its scales. Then he set out for the land of the herring beyond the western ocean. On arriving, Raven went to the house of a woman, Ahdahmin-a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a meal, Raven led to his lodge by telling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Ahdahmin-a doubted the story and told one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful in his home, some of the scales would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth hoiled inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Ahdahmin-a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and there he spoil into the water so he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish increased so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

One of the foods reported by the Bella Coola as a luxury is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Shuhlhmulk, a mountain in the Carrier country above Dean Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he moved to keep them for God for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let him out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it in his flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Shuhlhmulk was very angry, but could do nothing.

Though Hqamtsin created the world, he did not make it perfect nor equip it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and transcendent power, was always making ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of a friend. Raven determined to supply this want for the benefit of the Kimsquit people. Accordingly he used a natural stone depression near the village as his chamber-pot, and the liquid collected from clearly. Ever since, any liquid, even rain-water, placed in that depression acts as a collector. The jars is called Sudkwain, "Where People Go," and is has been used as a mirror by the Kimsquit people and their guests for many generations. In this way, the renown of Raven spread to foreigners visiting Kimsquit. Another survival of this construction the name Pacquilt-a, "Chamber-Pot," commonly applied as nickname to the small daughters of Kimsquit chiefs.

One of Raven's inventions was the making a nettle-fibre clothes were, as are which he taught spinner as well as men. In the beginning of time, Raven told two men remake a net according to a pattern which he showed them, and gave them some fibre. It was not sufficient, and when the workers asked for more, Raven told them to draw it from their own intestines. This they did, and ever since spinners have had the same ability. Another story describes how Raven saw clothes not being made in one of the distant villages which he visited during his travels, learnt the details of its manufacture, and taught the Bella Coola on his return home.

Many of Raven's exploits are well known, although not embodied in elaborate myths. For example, it is believed that in the beginning of time the ocean was to the east of Bella Coola and the land to the west. Disregarding manifestation, as Raven altered the relative positions of land and sea. Most ocean dwellers followed the sea to its new home, but a number of animals remained near their human friends. They are still to be found in the upper valley of Bella Coola River. These shell-fish, which are probably freshwater mussels are said to be identical with those of the ocean, and are called by the same name. This is always mentioned as proof of Raven's presence of salt water in the upper Bella Coola valley. The occurrence of the shell-fish may be the origin of this theory. It might also be mentioned that the Bella Coola believe that a few years

773
778
823
[551]
773
[227]
[125]
773
823
[125]

1:McDwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,* either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk.

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 384), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

* Where the Bella Coola believe their totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This member is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included.

b:McDowell R-5 (1922-1924)948
NBS Bellecosia NBS

as a man by the duly validated ownership of a chief's name in 262 her own right. Formerly a slave was never allowed to eat 574 seal, unless he had been the slayer. If many seals are killed, 622 chiefs from adjacent villages are sometimes invited. The chiefs seat themselves according to their proper positions and are [562] first served with the blood-stained grease that floats to the top of the water as the meat is boiling. When cooked, the meat is [567] cut into strips, measured in terms of so many finger breadths, [628] according to the number of guests. The cuts run down each fore-flipper, so that each receives a narrow strip including one of the toes. The head is always given to the herald. [209]

Wealthy chiefs frequently invite their fellows to ordinary meals even when no seal or deer has been killed. On these occasions, as at seal feasts, the guests are designated by their [551] ancestral names, not by those in general use.

Chiefs are also summoned to meet for the discussion of 575 matters connected with the winter ceremonial; at such occa- 622 sions their number may be augmented by men of influence in the secret society, though they do not rank as chiefs. Such a 628 meeting is always called when a new member is to be initiated into the hosiut society. If there is difference of opinion the influence of even a nawiff chief is outweighed by a man of importance in the society. The matter is discussed by all present and a decision reached by general agreement. It is difficult for a white man to understand how such is possible without either a vote, or general recognition by all that the views of some individual must be accepted. The writer was present at one such meeting, and was struck by the manner in which, after considerable, and at times heated, discussion, a consensus of opinion was reached, and accepted even by those who had proposed a contrary course.

Near every village is a place where the chiefs hold such [118] meetings. All the inhabitants know the general locality, but

[114]

Every effort was made to secure the accuracy of this account, but seven men have sought to an account of the length of time which has elapsed since the ceremony was carried out to full detail.

b McDowell E-5 (522-524) 1948
NEB DeGroote NEB

622 there is such dread of the supernatural powers possessed by 623 members of the hector society that none would dare go there.
998 If an uninitiated person should do so, he would formally have been either killed or initiated into the society. The meeting-[575] place of the Sisaqa chiefs is on a ledge of rock jutting out over a waterfall about a quarter of a mile from the village.
The stream winds down a narrow cleft of the mountain side, screened by dense vegetation, and suddenly falls into a cauldron, so hemmed in by cliffs that no sunlight can enter. The ledge is immediately above the brink of the falls, one of the most awe-inspiring places imaginable. The meeting-places of other villages lack such natural settings, though all are on the bases of cliffs, or near some easily distinguished feature. Some 171 of them are decorated with rude carvings, pecked into the 582 stone. The meaning of the designs is not known to any of 998 the present inhabitants. Some of them were made, long ago, by chiefs when they were composing songs; they pecked out the rock in time to the music forming in their minds. Others [211] were mere memorials of certain events. If a chief gave an important ceremony, he, or one of his friends, carved a figure, perhaps that of a man, perhaps of some animal connected with the clan, to recall the occasion. No carvings have been made within the life-time of any Bella Coola, so it is probable that they had further significance, now unknown.

622 When a chief wishes to summon his fellows for a meeting 623 he visits each and notifies him by a simple pressure of the face, in many cases unobserved even by those sitting near. The 201 person so called slips away, unostentatiously, to the meeting-place.

577 The position of chief was not without disadvantages in the 622 old days. The Bella Coola are so jealous that anyone who 623 succeeded in elevating himself to a position above his fellows became an object of envy. Their mythology contains many [162] examples of the murder of some powerful chief by rivals of his own village, and informants of today state that these records are true. One intelligent man asserted that his father had

There now remains only the necessity of removing from the house itself the supernatural power with which it is firmly believed to have been impregnated throughout the many weeks of the ceremony. Should this not be done, it would be so strong that only wood could thenceforth live in it, and no further rite could be performed therein. One of the senior chiefs, acting on X's behalf, requests as many ciki as are present to go to the back-room. At the same time a drum is beaten slowly. The ciki call out loudly, in unison, hoip four times. The whistles sound from the back-room with ever-increasing intensity, as if the supernatural being, whose voice they are, were going away. It is said that this practice has been comparatively recently adopted from Rivers Inlet; there used to be nothing of the kind. The ciki re-emerge, and one of them stands behind the fire with his stick which he leaves on the floor and calls on the audience to dance with him, "hi ...." This is done four times. It serves to purify the house from the supernatural power with which it has been saturated. The people then disperse, without food.

Goods from the general store are reserved to pay those men for their services, and also for cleansing the initiates from the powers with which they have been imbued, a rite that takes place the following morning in the presence of several ciki alone. The initiates are brought from the back-room and seated in a close circle between the door and the fire.* A foreign ciki is chosen by X to perform the actual cleansing rite. He has been asked beforehand and has come provided with a long pole and some soiled clothing. It is immaterial whose this is, provided that it has been in contact with a human body; the most potent articles are commercial cedar-bark pads.

The ciki covers the young man with a large cedar-bark mat. Then he fastens the clothing or pads to his pole and holds the end in the fire until they are smouldering. Then he swings it four times over the heads of the initiates and throws the stick

*Based on the recording in some informants.

Totem-Poles

A feature embodied in many ancestral myths is a description of the totem-pole[1] erected by a group of the first people, either according to a design given them by Raven, or in consequence of their experiences on this earth. It is the privilege of a chief descended from that group to erect such a pole, under the same restrictions as apply to the perpetual use of other features belonging, not to him individually, but to the ancestral family as a whole. Totem-poles are also frequently erected to depict incidents connected with the ancestors of a chief, even if there is no mention of one in his ancestral myth. In either case, the setting-up is a source of pride to the chief, especially as it emphasizes the importance of his ancestors, and its display must be duly celebrated. Theoretically, this may be done at a gathering of less importance than a potlatch, but in practice it occurs at no other ceremony, since a chief wealthy enough to erect a pole naturally desires it to be seen by as many persons as possible.

Poverty limits the number of totem-poles, but is not sufficient to account for their relative rarity. It is a source of pride for a chief in whose ancestral myth there is mention of a pole to erect one, but all myths do not include totem-poles. Consequently the absence of one before the door of the chief's house is not proof of the owner's poverty or lack of importance. This matter was investigated with great care, and all the older people interviewed that the number and size of their poles were never as great as among the northern tribes.

When a chief is preparing for a potlatch, he allows, among other carpentry tasks, the construction of a totem-pole, if he is sufficiently wealthy to reward the artisan and to validate the erection in the customary manner. If a special design is embodied in the ancestral myth concerning the totem whereby he is about to mention, or to make strong, he indicates that design to the carpenter. In the story of Aldet (I, p. 310), he

[1] [illegible], "Totem-Pole."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

211 example, there is a description of his totem-pole with a ball 556 at the top, and beneath it an eagle's nest containing two fledg-798 lings towards which a grizzly bear is endeavouring to climb.
532 This is the only known instance of a pole on which the different figures stand in definite relationship to one another. No explanation is offered beyond the statement that this was the form used by Alkwi in the beginning of time. Another ancient [778] pole, used by one of the ancestral families of Xwod, consists of a simple shaft surmounted by a sphere; this represents a mountain which enters into their ancestral myth as supporting the sky.

As with all features embodied in ancestral myths, a chief can use his own discretion in cases where he has a choice of [431] design. A totem-pole with specific figures is a common pre-[622] sent from a chief to his son-in-law, and it is a mark of respect
[606] for the latter to use and validate this at the first opportunity, in preference to one belonging to his own ancestral family. Since the pole erected at a potlatch may have no association with the ancestral name and myth of the donor, the underlying principle in all cases is that the value of the pole depends upon the quantity of gifts distributed to validate its erection. One man mentioned an instance in which he had become confused with regard to the proper design for the totem-pole connected with his ancestral myth, and had used one belonging to a second myth in association with a name from the first. Both were his property, the transaction was duly validated, and the matter passed off without question. It is possible that the [183] decay of custom which has followed the coming of the white man may have been partly responsible for this error, which was regarded as a somewhat stupid, though not improper mistake; yet it is clear that even when designs are remembered as portions of ancestral myths, they can be alienated from them and validated as isolated objects in the same manner as names and all other features of ancestral myths.

More often, the exact details of a pole are not included in the ancestral myth and a chief wishing to have one erected can

b:Mc:Dowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

211
556
778
532
[793]

use his own discretion as to the design. At the top he always places the bird or animal cloak in which his first ancestor, traced patrilineally, came to this earth. Beneath this is the cloak of his mother's first ancestor if it differs from his father's. There are no fixed rules for other representations. Sometimes a man wishes to display the cloaks of the first ancestors of his wife, or wives; more often, the designs are of creatures with which his own ancestors came in contact after reaching this earth.[1] One of the first settlers, Swanow (I, p. 331), married a Bella Bella woman from whom he obtained a ceremony connected with a whale, an animal which has often been used on the totem-poles of his descendants. The lower figures on totem-poles often represent creatures from which a recent ancestor of the chief obtained supernatural assistance. Consequently, the number of designs which may be used is legion, and the order of portrayal is immaterial. Moreover, Bella Coola art is not sufficiently realistic for designs to be easily recognized, nor is there standard conventionalization of little used animals; so it follows that the designs on totem-poles are often unidentifiable.[2] This is of little consequence, since their value rests neither upon the artistic skill exhibited, nor even upon their significance in connection with the owner's ancestral myth, but upon the goods expended to validate the display.

All Bella Coola totem-poles are carved from the trunks of huge cedars, with the wood cut away so that the designs stand out in high relief. The carvers are allowed great latitude both in choice of form and colouring, hence there is wide variation

[824]
[184]

[1] Ghiamalaits is the term applied to animals with which ancestors came in contact, other than their cloaks.

[2] This statement represents the learner's point of view, that is, of the Bella Coola who was not himself a competent sculptor. It is probable that an expert would have greater facility in recognizing the conventionalized forms used by his ancestors, although the whole pattern of Bella Coola culture was opposed to extreme standardization. Unfortunately, wood-carving, in fact art work of every kind, had degenerated to such an extent that only one man with any recognized skill in their respect was still living when this study was made. He was both unreliable and uncooperative, so that it was impossible even to collect examples of his work, still less to record the interpretations of the designs of masks or other objects carved by his predecessors.

[184]
[182]
[115]

Lib:McDowell R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

211 in the appearance of the poles. Sometimes one is erected at *556 the front door of the house with an opening at its base through which all must pass to enter the house, or a pole may be erected • 998 and stand on the opposite side of the sidewalk; the choice in 582 either case depending upon the usage recorded in the ancestral [184] myth. Instead of a totem-pole, a chief may display his ancestral crests by means of paintings on the front wall of his house, or by carved house-posts supporting the longitudinal beams, if such had been used by his ancestors. Moreover, a chief entitled to display a totem-pole may choose to use only paintings. If he validates these by presents, they give him the same dignity and importance as a totem-pole, particularly if he cannot validate its construction by lavish gifts. Most Bella Coola poles are only about fifteen to twenty feet in height, and though [171] it is possible that a few families had prerogatives entitling them to construct lofty poles, such as used by the Haida, it is unlikely that such were ever common.

When a chief who has erected a totem-pole before his house gives another potlatch, he may wish to put up a second pole beside the first. Occasionally two or three poles stand before the house of a chief, but one is more frequent or even none at [164] all. At death the pole is often taken to the cemetery where it acts as a memorial-post (I, p. 461). Otherwise it remains standing until some other occupant of the house wishes to erect another in its place, when the first is pulled down and neglected.

Coppers

*556 The Bella Coola use coppers for only two purposes: casting [164] on the ground upon which the representation of a deceased relative had resided, or throwing into the fire when the figure has left the house. In either case, they are said to "make home for the dead." Although used but rarely, the occasion when a copper is employed is so important that to obtain one and increase its value is a vital consideration for every chief.

[177 454] Most of the coppers now used by the Bella Coola are made

1:b6:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NE5

make a salmon-weir. In accordance with Ilpuntin's instruction, Imanus planned to make a circuit of the world seeking a suitable place to settle. He started northward, in eagle form, scattering eagle down, wherefore this material has ever since been highly regarded and is used as a symbol of peace. Owing, moreover, to the eagle down scattered on the mountains, there has always been much snow in that region.* [534] [978] [821]

Sometimes as he travelled he assumed the form of the sun, for he was so powerful that nothing was impossible to him. For in the north Imanus obtained an enormous copper, which he carried back to Kimsquit without completing his original plan of circling the earth. He perched on a tree near his brother's almost completed salmon-weir.

"Why don't you change yourself to a human being?" Omqwskilda inquired.

"I am waiting until our food is more plentiful," Imanus replied. "Besides I have been to the far north where I obtained an enormous copper."

When the weir was completed and Omqwskilda was catching many salmon, his brother at last decided to become a man. But instead of sending his cloak back above he animated it, as an eagle. Imanus now became an ardent fisherman and was much annoyed by the thefts made by the bird, though he himself was responsible for it not having returned to Nuxmit'a. After about a year he suggested to Omqwskilda that they should kill it, but the latter demurred, since it was the gift which Ilpuntin had given Imanus. The latter said nothing, but the next time he saw the eagle stealing his fish he killed the bird, without consulting his brother. No sooner had he done this than he felt sorry, but it was too late; he could not restore the eagle to life.

Owing to the salmon given them by Ilpuntin the two brothers were now very prosperous, and Imanus began to think of marriage. One day he noticed some chips floating down the Dean River, so he judged that people must be living on that stream. He set out to investigate, met Yaldin, and married his sister Sotsému, as has been described in a Dean River myth. To celebrate this event the two brothers prepared to invite people from far and near. First they lengthened their house to accommodate a large number; it was of the type known as mitmalat, though it could not expand without human agency. Then they painted their spoons with designs of the mitqan, since they had brought that creature with them from above. Now everything was ready and they commenced their guests. When all had assembled, Imanus gave a Sisyútlem dance [424] [535]

*The cloud which first over Kimsquit before a west wind are still called "Imanus's clouds," in memory of his journey. The myth fails to explain how Imanus was responsible for these phenomena.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

845 alone, and when she leaves it, it dries up immediately. When a year has elapsed, the parents return home with their children and the father resumes the ordinary routine of life. For three years more the mother must remain in the house, leaving it only at night through a hole in the floor. Above all else, she must keep away from the river; she cannot draw water from it, nor can she cut salmon on its bank. One instance is remem-
[953] bered in which the parents of twins failed to observe these restrictions; their legs became swollen and they soon died. In addition to punishment of the offenders in cases such as [825] this, there is danger that if they fail to obey the customary taboos the salmon will be insulted and avoid the Bella Coola River.

[978] After four years a mother of twins resumes her normal life,
[987] but she is henceforth endowed with special powers. If she wishes to see anyone who is absent, she has only to think of the person, and in her dreams she will be able to see him. She must never try to start up a dying fire by blowing upon it, since to do so would cause a gale. When a person sets out on any kind of an expedition from the house in which a mother of twins is living, the latter must chew a little food and spit it out towards the departing guest, otherwise he will fail in his venture.

845 Twins themselves, being akin to salmon, have miraculous
825 ability to see their fish-kinsmen and read their thoughts. Bella Coola mythology contains many stories of the way in which twins could talk with, and change into, salmon. Such knowledge is not limited to tales of the distant past. An elderly Bella Coola described the manner in which her grandmother, a twin related to Sockeye Salmon, was consulted by a man who had been unlucky with his weir. Gazing down into the water, this woman saw that the fish were avoiding his dam because of the charred uprights used in its construction; when these were changed he was successful in his fishing.

845 Twins are believed to possess remarkable ability from earliest childhood, and even to remember incidents occurring

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 21

211
964
532
778

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Totem-pole serving as a memorial post

[p 442 (E)]

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

211 stone and served as landing-place for some of the first settlers.
556 In fact, any of the dead person's crests may be used according 764 to the wishes of the chief giving the memorial potlatch. A 769 figure displayed in this way cannot be used as the guise in which the dead relative returns, but as every individual has several crests, inability to use one does not make it difficult to carry out the rite. According to one well-informed old man, when a design has once been used in a cemetery it cannot again be shown by members of the ancestral family, having itself become "dead." Other informants flatly contradicted this statement, and it seems clear that the above is true only with regard to the use of the figure in connection with the return of the deceased. The erection of the figure serves to remind all beholders, especially foreign guests summoned to the memorial potlatch, of the ancestral myth of the deceased. It is, therefore, equivalent to a totem-pole erected during a man's lifetime, in fact, one of these is sometimes moved to the cemetery to serve as a memorial-post (see Plate 21). Instead of placing a representation of the crest in the cemetery, one is sometimes painted on broad boards and placed on some conspicuous promontory where all who pass by will see it and think of the person commemorated.

[778]

The second type of memorial consists of plain poles set upright in the cemetery, one for each major ceremony given by the deceased. Potlatches, memorial potlatches, and kukusiatsk (II, p. 29) are alone indicated in this way, these being the only ones to which foreign guests are invited. These poles suggest, in a general way, the greatness of the deceased.

[609]

The third type of memorial-post comprises representations of the goods given away by the deceased. These are usually painted on boards attached to a post set up near the grave. On this are pictures of canoes, coppers, slaves, and other valuables distributed at potlatches or memorial potlatches (see Plate 22). Alternatively, there may be a series of small poles, each surmounted by a model canoe manned by miniature human figures, symbolic of a canoe and slaves given away a boy who was dearly loved by his father. The latter, thinking that Kactqut was responsible for his son's death, killed her and was slain in revenge. Because of the doubts thrown by the Bella Coola on Kactqut's power and revelation her fame did not spread widely.

[532]

Powers Localized in Certain Spots

To the Bella Coola every supernatural being is, or should be, able to move, in fact many of them can travel with phenomenal rapidity. But, in the beginning of time, when Alqantcin was populating the earth, he sent down certain creatures which were later turned to stone, thereby localizing their power. The term for a place where this happened is sma-a, which can be translated with accuracy as, "A Locality Where Power has Become Petrified." It follows that anyone desirous of coming in contact with supernatural power of this type can do so by visiting the spot where it is situated. There are not many of these places, nor do they figure prominently in Bella Coola mythology, and, as usual, there are many contradictions in the accounts. Apparently there is a tendency to ascribe the occurrence of peculiar experiences to localities where power is petrified. The following are the more important spots of this type, with a short account of the specific attributes of each.

(1) Smaiw-a, also called Sharkhwaily: At the head of the Clearwater, one of the sources of the Bella Coola River, and the place from which comes the warm east wind.

Concerning the origin of the power in this spot the following tale, which is regarded as very ancient, was obtained.

Long, long ago, the ocean spread far to the east, covering the whole Bella Coola valley.[14] The shoreline of the ocean was at the village Sharkhwaily, so called from a chief of that name living there. Mount Xhkwals, which is now several miles inland, was then a point around which surged dangerous [14] It is assumed that the world was unpeopled at that time, though mention is made of people who were living there. This does not strike the Bella Coola as a contradiction; the accuracy of an ancient story is never questioned; hence it is taken for granted that "people" in the modern sense, were not then in existence.

currents, and where there was always much wind, making it 773 feared by mariners in those distant days. Tradition does not 778 state what being drove back the ocean to its present position; 534 it may have been Raven who made the Bella Coola valley habitable.

Once a war party from the north swooped down to attack Skaldwanily's town. Although the chief's herald, who was stationed a mile below the settlement, called out a warning, the raiders were successful and carried off a number of slaves. Skaldwanily could not bear to think of his people as captives and accordingly exerted his miraculous power to turn the whole place to stone. Houses, raiders, captives, canoes with their carvings, and paddles can still be seen there, all petrified. They have become sna'a'.

According to another account, Skaldwanily exerted his powers to petrify the canoes and the bodies of his enemies before they reached his village. He asked the paddlers whither they were bound, and when they told him he, or the mountain which he later became, for there is a confusion between the two, invited them to land. On so doing they were changed to stone, and in this form can still be seen, complete even to the paddles, a proof that the ocean once extended far to the east of its present limit. Many Bella Coola have heard of these canoes, and they are said to have been seen recently.

Since that time the power animating the place has fre- 778 quently become visible in the form of an enormous snake. 539
There, too, are to be found countless smaller ones, a constant [787] menace to the unwary. The following incidents describe the adventures of people passing near this spot:

The trail to the interior makes a detour to avoid Skaldwanily, but sometimes one of the reptiles, many of which are enormous, will be found lying across the track. If the traveller is bold and jumps over it, no harm will come to him, but if he should try to avoid it by going around, the single snake will increase to a multitude. Not only material objects, but the intelligence of Skaldwanily has become petrified there and remains any slights.

Four men were once passing the spot on their way to the interior when one of them, in bravado, pushed with his stick against the stones which once had been the houses of the village, saying as he did so:

"Skaldwanily, petrify us if you can, we are not afraid of you."

When he drew up his stick it was covered with small snakes; more appeared from everywhere and swarmed over the four like ants. They started to run, but three of them were crushed beneath the swarming creatures and nothing was ever seen of them. The fourth man drew his knife and with it slit his clothing, thus dislodging most of the snakes, and, naked, he was able to run away. He succeeded in reaching some people to whom he told the fate of his companions, but soon his stomach began to swell and he died. Snakes had entered his body and his case had been hopeless from the start.

On another occasion four girls had just climbed a steep and difficult trail behind the end of to avoid passing through the place itself. On reaching the level land above, one of them called out:

"Skaldwanily, I am glad to be safely past you."

But the jealous Skaldwanily heard her. He sent a gale, the ground cracked, trees were torn and broken, and three of the girls were swept away to their death. One only escaped by wrapping herself around the base of a tree.

Another time four Carriers on their way to the coast passed a boulder on the shore of a pool which is at Skaldwanily. Although aware of the power petrified there, they derided it by thrusting poles below the rock and asking it why it did not show its strength by taking revenge for the insults they offered it. When they pulled out the sticks they were covered with snakes, and more appeared from the trees and roots in the vicinity. The Carriers fled, pursued by them, and after running all day, managed to make their escape at dusk.

G.SB/Dawson B.2 (1902-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

The place is still allegedly characterized by these reptiles; a recent visitor found the branches of the trees like snakes, and the very moss were in the form of them. The rocks in the vicinity are full of grooves like those made by snakes crawling through soft clay, and the whole neighbourhood reeks with their odour. 778 539

(2) Pe-kth, Mesatche Nose: The point between North Bentinck Arm and Labouchere Channel. 778

There is found a swazy, one of the most powerful localized beings, a creature comprising only a head and an arm with a mouth in the palm. The head can be seen in rock on the point not far above the waterline, but the giant arm rests far beneath the surface. At times the swazy bends its elbow so that the fist can support the head, as if the creature were pondering. On such occasions the upper part of the arm remains concealed below the water, while there is a gap about twenty-five yards in width between the upraised lower part and the rocky shore beneath the animal's head. A canoe can pass in safety through this, narrow though the channel is; but if it should take a course on the outer side of the arm the latter will crush down on the helpless craft, crushing it to splinters and driving them far beneath the surface. There has never been a survivor from such a catastrophe. The last time the arm was raised was about seventy years ago when a war party was returning to the north after raiding Tăl-ie. They knew the necessity of taking the inner channel, so escaped unharmed, though they actually handled the mighty upraised fist. The Bella Coola firmly believe that the swazy will some day lift its arm again, and will crush the steamer that carries mail and passengers up the coast. 776

It was only a few hundred years ago that a certain Bella Bella learnt of the respect with which the other supernatural beings regard the swazy of Mesatche Nose. The canoe in which this man was travelling was sucked down beneath the ocean, but Qomqoa admitted him as a guest to his house. The chief had invited all the underwater supernatural beings to a pot- 778 539

Ethnology II-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

998 539 lench, and the only vacant spot was the central seat behind the fire. Retainer after retainer was sent after someone, until finally the wondering human heard a steady thump, thump, approaching. It was the Mesaxche Nose swap, travelling on his single arm, like a looper caterpillar, his head balanced precariously on top while the thump came every time that he brought his fist to the floor. On his entry, the paintings of fish and marine animals, with which the walls and boxes were covered, came to life and cavorted around as if mad, but when the chief took his seat behind the fire they returned to their pictorial form. From this experience the Bella Bella man obtained a nawak name and myth.

778 (3) The Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel where the mysterious power is that of a snake.

(4) A ledge of rock projecting over the water at a point on the west side of Dean Channel about nine miles below Kimsquit.

(5) Ẓhaẓulx: On the south side of Burke Channel, a few miles above Kwatna Inlet.

(6) Swawalx: On South Bentinck Arm, at a spot where the water penetrates far under a ledge of rock.

(7) Nuklilā-ata: On the east side of South Bentinck Arm, where an enormous spider has been changed to stone. The many colours of its body can be plainly seen amid the numerous holes in the vicinity.

(8) The Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm.

778 539 823 103 (9) Mount Nusẓulx, the highest mountain in the Bella Coola valley, belongs to the same category, since in the beginning of time it was a man.

He, Nānalxwitl, (which means "Too Heavy" in the sense of "so important") came to earth from above at Cape Mudge and decided to visit Bella Coola. He stalked through the land to the site of the present Mount Nusẓulx, wearing a high hat around which crawled two snakes whose heads often crossed. From where he stood, he saw the lofty mountain X̌ẓlx in the Carrier country, and resolved to visit it. At that distant period this peak was a human being and from him Nānalxwitl

Libr. Deposit. E-9 (955-1024)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

obtained two wives, the name of one being Tlóin. He returned to Bella Coola with them.

Nímalchaitl knew that presently he was fated to become immobile, a mass of petrified power. Since he was able to select where this was to be, he chose the site of Mount Nuxalci, midway in the Bella Coola valley, as a convenient place to overlook the doings of men. Before he transformed himself into this mountain, he determined that he would have people visit him; accordingly he changed his son, Nímalmitjaxa, which he carried concealed beneath his blanket, into sqalc, a stone much used for men and adzes. Until the introduction of white man's tools his wish was gratified; people came from far and near to obtain the necessary material.

The human origin of the mountain is still remembered, since it is often spoken of by its chiefly names, Nímalchaitl and Tlóin, relics of its existence as a man. This story is regarded as an origin myth, and as such might have been included in vol. I, chap. vi.

This mountain is regarded with awe by the Bella Coola on account of its great height, but it seems to lack most of the characteristics ascribed to other places where power has been petrified.

(10) On one of the mountains above Cascade Inlet there used to be a stone eagle with outstretched wings which came to this earth with the first people, but was petrified one day when drying its wings after fishing. About 1860 part of its beak fell away. A change in the condition of any of these places had long been regarded as an omen of misfortune, so the epidemic of smallpox that soon after ravaged the coast was not unexpected.

(11) Ilísmas: An unidentified spot where a snung of the mountain was petrified. At this place there is a small pool which is the repository (II, p. 8) of a certain kusiut dancer.

(12) Lepalam, "The Walker," the name both of a supernatural being and the spot where it is localized. This is not far from the glacier that lies near the junction of the trails from Snaalí and Tál-ío; it is the largest one in the vicinity of Bella Coola and is said to move its position. The being is in some way connected with it, hence the name.

782
•777
* 787
[25]

About half a mile from the glacier there is a large rock shelter where mountain goat hunters are wont to smoke their meat. They are always careful to take with them dyed and undyed cedar-bark and eagle down, knowing that they may encounter the supernatural. Sometimes they hear the voice of xpulem, a deep, long drawn-out hum, m..... If this sound is repeated four times it is a happy augury, but if heard only once it presages ill fortune. In either case some member of the party, one who is ceremonially clean and is brave, blackens his face, puts on a collar of dyed cedar-bark, covered with eagle down, steps outside, and says in effect:

"Hail! Petrified One. In the beginning you came down from Alquanim, from all that was wonderful and powerful. You have not changed, hence we mortals can still hear your voice. Please, may it be well with us. There is none other like you."

If the supplicant is ceremonially clean the mountain will answer hi....., four times, and there will be heard what sounds like a great landslide. Then the petitioner takes some small portions of meat, some dyed and some undyed cedar-bark, and eagle down and throws them on the fire.

"Please accept, Oh Kasiaat" (Powerful One), he says.

Thus propitiated, xpulem grants them success in hunting.

778 (13) Spipishuts i: On the south side of the Dean River about one mile from its mouth. Here, in the beginning of time, Raven cast his war-knife, xpis, which was turned to stone and can still be seen. Its power has likewise become localized at this point.

(14) In the beginning of time Mount Swaly, near the Dean River, was a man who was turned to stone. Across the river is his wife, Ailulwaitl, whose ancestral name is Kamilkin, likewise petrified.

[755] [785] In most of these places[1] a sick person can receive assistance, if he is willing to risk the consequent dangers. The first essential is that he be in a "clean" condition by the observance of ceremonial chastity. This vows is pleasing to supernatural beings, who otherwise are likely to punish one composing on their heaven. The Bella Coola have not closely formulated their beliefs with regard to these places, consequently the experiences of one individual are usually quite different from those of another, a circumstance regarded as quite natural on the assumption that the supernatural beings are able to manifest themselves in many ways.

[1] [i.e. – certain spots where power is localized – see cat. 116, pp 594-600 for their location – ANALYST]

Skaldmanly and the Hot Springs on Lekoochass Channel are the places that figure most commonly in mythology. As the former is Skaldmanly's chamber-vessel, a pool always full of clear water though not fed by any spring. If a person suffering from the virulent skin disease known as Ikduly swims in it, drinks some of the water, and then vomits, he will recover.

Not only the pool itself, but the whole neighbourhood, is the seat of mysterious power, as the following tale describes.

Near the western end of the pool there is a rock from which long ago three men dived and failed to return. A sick man decided to do the same and leaped in, feet first, wearing around his chest some dyed cedar-bark. He plunged through the water and found that he was standing on the roof of a house; he walked around it, then returned to the surface, and back to his starting point. He dived three times more, and when he emerged for the fourth time his sickness had left him. He returned to Bella Coola and told of his experience. Since that time sick people have been carried to the pool, and have dived in from the same rock, always feet first, and always wearing dyed cedar-bark. All are able to feel the roof of the house, and are cured by the immersion.

The trail used by the Carrier Indians when raiding the coastal tribes passed by this lake, and on one occasion the Bella Coola, bent on retaliation, used the same path and paused to rest on the shore. They all bathed in the pool and asked help from the power there localized, then as they lay on the grass drying their long hair in the sunshine, a house emerged. Slowly it floated upwards, filling the whole area formerly occu-gined by the water, and came to rest when it had risen to the usual height of a house. As each of the spectators gazed upon it he saw within that on which his own mind was centred. As it were in perspective he visualized his whole life, both past and future. One man saw the slaying of an enemy, another a potlatch with himself in the role of donor, another his children, and a second individual saw a man and woman in the sexual act. To each it appeared that the house contained only one image. Then slowly the house sank into the depths. The party went on and had great success, killing their enemies, who were powerless before them, without the loss of a single Bella Coola. It was this house which the sick people felt with their feet; the sight of it had given the warriors phenomenal ability.

Another seat of power is near the western end of the lake where the trail passes between two piles of dark red rocks that rise to a height of three or four feet. Each is roughly squared like a brick with dimensions of approximately 8 by 6 by 6 inches. The heaps are not regular, and yet form a distinct cairn. If a passer-by wishes to ascertain the length of his life, he takes a stick and shoves out one of the stones, which rolls far down the hillside; if he can do so without disturbing the rest, he will have long life, but should fate decree for him a short one, the whole pile falls in disorder. Another sign of long life is when the moss sways back and forth, emitting a squeaking sound like the leather in a new shoe, as he endeavours to poke out one of the rocks of which it is composed. On the traveller's return from the interior the heap has always assumed its original shape, though no one has ever seen one of the stones being picked up by human agency.

Sick people also derive benefit from immersion in the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The following account was obtained from a man who himself underwent treatment there.

When a young man he had been initiated into the kasint society as a Breaker (II, p. 123) and as such wore a bear-skin cloak. His relatives were wealthy and advised him to keep his robe, saying that they would make it possible for him to dance again in eight years. Four years later, one of his fellow- villagers offered him five skins for the one which he had used, and, when this was declined, the number was raised to ten, then to fifteen, and finally to twenty new bear-skins. As there was no particular value in the mantle itself, the owner became suspicious and asked advice from his mother who admonished him not to sell, in view of the time when he would want it. Accordingly, he did not accept the offer, but when it was increased to twenty-five skins he did so. He did not know that the purchaser's desire for it was to enable him to injure the seller by magic through the acquisition of this personal possession. 778 534 [754]

McIlwraith, E. S. (1922-1924)[1948]
NEA Bella Coola NEA

The sale took place in April, and the following December the former owner became crippled with a disease which so weakened his back that he could hardly raise himself from the ground. When the sickness had lasted for one year, his friends carried him away to the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. 778 755 534 787

It was known that if a patient were left night and day in the spring, scrubbing himself with hemlock boughs, he often was given such power by a supernatural being that, like a shaman of old, he could kill or cure by means of a stick. Many of this man's relatives had been killed by rivals envious of their success in giving potlatches, so it was feared that he might wish to retaliate if he gained too much power. To prevent this, he was removed from the spring at night. On the first day as he lay on a mat in the warm water, there appeared on a flat stone a diminutive man, about two feet tall, resembling a Bella Coola except for a short tail. It was probably a tlāqmā·ki, such as his first ancestor had obtained (I, p. 688). The little creature ran around the stone; when it returned to the starting point it stopped and was joined by a second one of the same kind. The two circled the stone three times, on each occasion stopping at the starting point; they then vanished. The next day while the patient lay in the stream he heard from within the mountain four beats of a drum and a sound as if a large number of people were talking and calling together, though he [776] could not distinguish any actual words. This ceased, to be followed by the hissing sound of escaping steam; the water became so unbearably hot that, crippled though he was, he managed to crawl out. His courage soon revived, so, wrapping his head in his blanket, he returned to the spring. The water was still unpleasantly hot on his body and legs, but the covering protected his head. The same phenomenon occurred on the two following days. Four days later he was well enough to walk and was brought home. During his treatment he saw supernatural beings, and is still hoping for a further revelation that will make him a shaman. He believes that this would have been granted to him if his friends had allowed him to remain in the spring overnight.

During the four days of his immersion he ate nothing, and his only nourishment was a little mountain goat grease which he did not swallow but kept in the right side of his mouth. After each bath he scrubbed himself with hemlock boughs. As in all such cases, for one year he observed continence and refrained from eating unsmoked salmon. Failure to observe these taboos would have caused his death.[16]

According to another account the creature that visits a patient lying in the Hot Springs is a ÁÁkuł'. As already described, it is a hairless animal, about as large as a small moose, with legs so short that its belly almost scrapes the ground, no tail, and a large head with glass-like eyes. The whole appearance suggests an enormous walking snake. This animal approaches the sick person, as he lies on a flat stone[17] in the spring, and takes a bite from wherever the sickness is situated. No wound can afterwards be seen, but the ailment is carried away with the biting. If the patient should lack courage and endeavour to escape he would soon die.

Others of these animals of the same or similar variety have been observed about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[16]See vol. I, p. 607 for further results of this treatment.
[17]There are two of these, one used by men and one by women.

Between 1890 and 1900 two more were seen near Double Mountain. The last Bella Coola to see them actually left Sisal one morning armed with a light shot-gun. He followed the trail to the interior and was crossing the bare mountain, Kamal, about forty-eight miles from the sea, when he decided to turn aside to shoot some of the ducks which breed in great quantities on the small lakes near the top of the mountain. As he walked through the grass he heard a rustling, and crawled so that he could get a better view of the place whence it came. He saw two hahaut which were catching ducks with their long tongues by shooting them out from their mouths. After watching them for some time the man returned to the camp without disturbing them. This man has only recently died. In former times they were more common, but one was seen not many years ago by a Carrier Indian.

According to other informants, no one knows what supernatural winter comes to the spring, since it always appears at night, and any one who is rash enough to look at it dies immediately. A bold person lies still, with eyes closed, while he is massaged back to health.

Another man, while fishing for one of the centerins, had been in the habit of landing at the Hot Springs to get hot water for his tea. He drew it from a small trickle which emerged from a rock near at hand. On one occasion the flow stopped when he put his pot beneath, but recommenced on his withdrawing it. Thinking this a mere accident, he reinserted the vessel only to have the water cease again. When this had happened four times, he realized that the cessation had been intended by some supernatural power.

"Hail! Powerful One," he called out. "I understand you now."

He knew that it must be some creature within the rock that had stopped the flow, not wishing it to be so used, and since then he has obtained his water elsewhere.

Leaving these tales of the past, which stress the supernatural, and passing from the experiences of men of sensitive, imaginative disposition, it is possible to describe the methods commonly employed by the Bella Coola when wishing to take advantage of the curative properties of these localities. In cases of serious illness it is common for a sufferer to make the rounds of all five places located on the ocean. This was done, for example, by the father of an informant who had seen what he took to be a spring salmon in an inland stream where no ocean salmon should have been. He was foolish enough to leap in to catch the fish, which was really a nsiaut, and as it [778] [958] [787] rushed past him it bruised his legs. From its malign touch they became as if tied together at the knees, so that he could hardly walk. When all other cures failed he bathed in all the healing places on the coast, and was cured by the time he had returned to Bella Coola.

[115] Before embarking on such an expedition, a sufferer must observe continence for at least three months, and continue this after his return, otherwise he will die. It is wise to start at Iwanuk, on South Bentinck Arm, proceeding from there down South Bentinck Arm, across Labouchere Channel, and towards Kimsquit, since in this way the patient travels eastwise, increasing the potency of his efforts.

At Iwanuk there is a ledge of rock that projects out over the water; the sick person dives through a hole into the flood. From this point he proceeds to Nakilé-ata, on the east side of South Bentinck Arm, about half a mile above the Hot Springs. This is the place of the giant, many-coloured spider, turned to stone. Among its legs there are numerous holes in which the patient lays a stick and pieces of his clothing, taken from the part of the body affected, saying as he does so:

"Please, Powerful One, help me to return to strength."

The third place of curing is the Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm, Iojo-xum. Here the patient lies in the hot water and leaves portions of his worn clothing as some sort of vague offering to the being there. The Bella Coola have no clear conception as to why the scraps should be left; apparently they have never considered whether it was actually of service to the being. At the present time it appears to be only a ritual handed down from great antiquity.

Leaving South Bentinck Arm the patient proceeds to the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel, the characteristics of which have already been described. The final place visited is Anaiwum, on the west side of Dean Channel about nine miles below Kimsquit, where the ocean penetrates far under a ledge of rock. The sufferer is lowered through a vent about six feet in diameter until he stands on a boulder at the edge of the sea in a kind of a cave. He here swims the rope, dives into the water and out through a narrow passage to the open flood where he is picked up by a waiting canoe. [774] [755]

If he is to recover, he feels as he dives the scraping of some rough-skinned animal against his side. No one knows what this is, perhaps a fish almost seventy yards in length which was seen near the place about 1905. If a person is too ill to make the dive unaided, a stick is forced through the entrance from the flood, with a rope attached. The patient, who has been lowered to the ledge from the upper air, is then tied firmly to the stick and hauled out. Before leaving, shreds of his clothing are always left at the mouth of the cave in payment to its supernatural occupant for his assistance. [757]

The method of curing at the spot, Alkumac, differs from those previously described since it is only the man whose repository (II, p. 9) is there who is able to exercise the power. Patients whose flesh has become rotten are carried to the place and he scrubs their bodies, in the water, with various prickly bushes. This man is not a shaman, his power rests solely on the fact that this curing place is his repository. [756]

At cupdum the virulent skin disease Sisbuly can be cured.* This is caused by a morsel of coho salmon or fern root passing from the mouth up into the head, instead of down into the stomach. The Bella Coola have only slight knowledge of anatomy, and by "head" probably mean the passage connecting mouth and nose. In this spot the food becomes a frog egg, hatches into a tadpole, and finally transforms into a frog. If a shaman is called on immediately, he can remove the frog by thrusting his finger up the nasal passage and banging down on the patient's head, but if he delays, the ears and nose become clogged, the hair falls, and the flesh on arms and body wastes away until the skin is shrivelled. Then the only hope is to visit cupdum. [753] [756]

Friends of the sufferer carry him to the spot and place him in an ice cavern, roofed by the glacier itself, and then retire to the rock shelter half a mile away. Here he must lie alone, without food, for four days. If he is in a pure condition from the observance of chastity, he then feels the earth shake and hears a sound like a mighty landslide, though it is inaudible to those waiting in the cave. If the patient is frightened and tries to flee, he will die, but if he lies still he will be able to spit out the dead frog, or it will become so soft that it can drip from his nose. He then washes in the stream that flows through the ice-cavern, thus completing the cure. The malady will return unless chastity is practised for one year.

*In its earlier stages it can be treated elsewhere.

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Finally, in dreams a man is sometimes carried away to one or other of these curing places, or to several of them, and is there made a shaman. It will be noted that this method of acquiring the ability differs from those previously described, but his functions are the same as those whose power has been obtained in one of the usual ways.

Dreams

The last type of contact with the supernatural is by means of dreams. Psychologically, these are akin to visions; indeed, it is often impossible to learn whether the experiences described in an ancient story occurred during sleep or when awake. The Bella Coola believe that dreams are caused by the spirit of the individual; they are, therefore, supernatural and worthy of attention, but in spite of this, it was difficult to obtain detailed accounts. The reason seems to lie in the intangibility of the experiences themselves. Unless one is sufficiently striking, it passes into oblivion as a fruitless manifestation of the workings of the spirit. Many of the visions seen in ancient times by those who had fasted or otherwise reached an emotional state, must have been dreams, but they have ceased to be recognized as such in the course of generations. The Bella Coola of today state emphatically that they receive warning of future events during sleep, but the only individual from whom it was possible to obtain coherent descriptions was the elderly man previously described as X (I, p. 515).

It is believed that if a non-
*575 initiate pass between the central fire and the raised platform 774 behind it, where the dancer is usually concealed, his spirit will 755 be attracted to this material object. Even though the performer is in another house at the time, he at once senses what [784] has happened and asks who has lost his spirit. The guilty [626] person, believing that he will die unless it is returned to him, always admits what he has done. The dancer, accompanied by several attendant kukusiut, proceeds to the raised platform, presses his cupped hands four times against it, and by sucking with his mouth pretends to draw forth the spirit. But since the dancer has a direct call (II, p. 6) from his supernatural patron (II, p. 6), he cannot come in contact with the uninitiated without danger to the latter, so he transfers the supernatural element to the leg of another kusiut, who is not dancing at the time, by pressing four times. This assistant then returns it to the owner by kneading it four times into the back of his neck.
[626] The reckless uninitiated person suffers no harm, but is more careful in future.

[784] Another belief is that if a non-member even walks close to [626] the doorway of the house during the four days, or more, that a dance is taking place, his spirit is attracted to the dancer, wherever he may be at the moment. Consequently the uninitiated use the beach path instead of the sidewalk. Accounts differ as to what results from the transgression. According to [778] one, the dancer falls down as if dead, due to the contact between something non-sacred and the power with which he is imbued. It is at once recognized what has happened and any kusiut can draw forth the spirit by placing his two hands, shaped like a cup, against the dancer and sucking violently. While so doing he calls hoip loudly and any kukusiut present beat time furiously. As soon as the alien spirit has been removed, the dancer recovers. Still holding his hands cupped together, the extractor now proceeds to the house of the non-member and returns the latter's spirit by kneading it into the back of his neck. If this were not done, the loser would soon [784] become mad, try to eat dirt, and die. According to another

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the 781 dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sym-[787] pathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut 778 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the performance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 787 equally well known that his specific power has been brought 424 to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskāsiutsta (also called nuxu'ifsta), by the supernatural woman Ano'likwulxaix.
Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ano'likwulxaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kusiut prerogative there localized. Ano'likwolsaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kusiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[4] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she mocks the uninitiated:

575* 787 424 [778] [776]

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kusiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ano'likwolsaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kusiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ano'likwolsaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer.

[776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'tcu' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kusiut."

To further this deception, kukusiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ano'likwolsaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kusiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to transfer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nuxaxem, an

575* 778 425

4 [See category 116, p. 84(A) - ANALYST]
4 (Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has
● 778 suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]."
425 Some of these vaults are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some [784] chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

*575 According to Kimsquit belief, Ano'likwelsaix has a husband, Almoqhaikila, who dwells with her in every repository.
778 If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls 776 dead before the power emanating from Ano'likwelsaix. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the kusiut society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

*575 Turning now to the manner in which the kukusiut regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many kukusiut have, for example, [424] Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a
[773] fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the kukusiut was often [178] challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

[688] Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[i.e. - a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

though the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kusiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kusiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor.

575* 424 425 553 [556] [578] [426]

(2) A Patron, emätuts. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukusiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform.

575* 424 776 [533] [535] [578]

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Ans'likwelsaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each.

575* 424 778

Although the kukusiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time

[773] [781]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

this undoubtedly leads them to believe in the powers which they claim. Each kusiut prerogative has had one of three origins:

(a) It was brought down by the first people. Before coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his patron, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest men were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

(b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes altered an ancestral to a kusiut name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases each followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[4] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nanudjinum, a male supernatural being sent down by Alqantlm at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Ano'lkwelbaix and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a kusiut is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither error nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent

[4] The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 778

years in deceiving, undoubtedly begins to convince himself that he is different from lesser mortals.

575* 796

Before describing in detail initiation into the kusiut society, and then the ritual of various dances, it will be convenient to outline the type of ceremonial, although emphasizing the fact that each differs so much from every other that lengthy descriptions will be necessary later on. When a person has been initiated, either in the proper manner during the ceremonial season or as a "shaman" during the summer, he is known as a lsw, a novice, until the kusiut dances of the next winter. During this period he wears certain distinctive cedar-bark ornaments and is expected to keep himself somewhat apart from the uninitiated. He is always required to give his ceremonial during the first dance season after initiation; by so doing he ceases to be a novice. In later years a kusiut can suit himself whether or not to perform. Having once done so, he is a fully qualified member of the society, nor does he increase his rank in direct proportion to the number of his ceremonies. It is true that one who often dances hears himself praised by the marshals, and gains a certain amount of fame among his fellow kukusiut. But no matter how often he may perform, he cannot become a chief, with prestige spread far and wide among neighbouring tribes, nor can he increase the fame of his ancestors by adding lustre to his ancestral names. Thus the benefits are not sufficient to urge a man to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials in preference to potlatches. The society is essentially one in which a relatively poor man can display his semi-religious prerogative equally with a chief. Usually, a man performs a complicated ritual, such as that of a Cannibal dance, three or four times during his lifetime; less onerous ones in which no dramatic theme is presented may be more often given.

[301]

575* 796 556

575* 796 424

A man who proposes to give a dance must always notify one of the marshals of his village, who summons his fellows, some of the senior members of the society, and chiefs who are also kukusiut to discuss the intention. If it entails one of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 quarry into a converging "v" of hunters, or someone may lie
*796 down as bait to attract the Cannibal so that the other lurking 787 pursuers can secure him. No effort is spared to make the man-hunt realistic. Then they carry the captive, struggling and biting, to the canoes and set out for the village. The preliminaries are lengthened or curtailed until the tide is favourable for the navigation of the craft; about two hours is the usual time consumed. When in mid-stream, the cry, ye ··, is again raised; the supposed Cannibal has once more escaped! All this time X himself has been hiding in or near the village, and he now appears. Instantly the kukusiut left in the neighbourhood set off in pursuit, those returning on the canoes hurry their passage and join the chase. After a struggle they succeed in capturing X and bringing him to the village.

The Cannibal acts like a demoniac animal, struggling, kicking, and biting as if his adventures had entirely destroyed his reason. He drags his captors, a number of strong kukusiut, to the various houses, and they are barely able to restrain him within the doorways and to force him out, biting and raving at them. A skilful actor is able to impress the uninitiated to a considerable extent, and of course he is supported by his associates. When every house has been visited, X is carried back to his own and a herald summons all the kukusiut to cure him. The uninitiated are allowed to crowd near the door to watch.

The assumption is that X has had the nature and instincts of an animal enter into him; if this cannibalistic incubus[11] can be driven out by beating time, he will be restored to sanity. Two long, thin sounding-boards have been prepared previously,
[534] as well as a number of birch sticks with which the kukusiut beat time. One man stands up to lead the drummers, and the sticks rise and fall in unison with his movements, in the manner previously described. At first X prowls around the house,

[778] [11]This expression will be used henceforth as an interpretation of si-ḥpaa, the [104] power in form of an animal which, having entered a man, compels him to eat strange foods.

*575
*796
278

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 4

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Crystals used in initiation ceremonies

[p.84 (D)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575
●778
137

PLATE 6

Photograph by H. I. Smith National Museum of Canada

Repository of a dog-eating cannibal

[p. 84 (F)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

described for Kimsquit are the lack of the cannibalistic incubus and the presence of the sqiols. It must be emphasized that these are differences of individual prerogative alone; many Kimsquit Cannibals perform with sqiols, many Bella Coola with incubus. 575* 796* 787 184

Although every effort was used to obtain not only the general principles of the rite, but also confirmation of details, it must be remembered that many of these were omitted at the performances observed, so that reliance had to be placed upon the accounts of participants. It is probable that errors of omission have been committed in consequence; these may account for some of the discrepancies, but the most potent factors are undoubtedly lack of uniformity in individual prerogatives, and failure to enforce absolute rigidity in ritual. The two accounts just given by no means illustrate all the variations possible in this dance; others will become evident in descriptions of the rites of Cannibals other than those who can bite the living. 424

The following is an account of the ritual of a Dog-eating Cannibal, Olxän·i, of Sunxl. Long, long ago one of the ancestors of this man saw a pack of wolves devouring some dogs. In some mysterious way, which even the Bella Coola do not profess to be able to understand, the power of a wolf entered the beholder so that he was impelled to eat dogs. He was then carried away to the mysterious land above where he saw and was assisted by several supernatural beings. The first Olxän·i was able to transmit to one of his relatives his ability to eat dogs, and the prerogative has since been carried out by his descendants. Should the holder of the name fail to tell his destined heir the details of the experiences which are to be embodied in his songs, his successor can obtain these from the singers who, of course, are familiar with the themes used on previous occasions. The repository of the name, Olxän·i, is beneath a huge boulder not far from some carved rocks behind the village of Sunxl (see Plate 6).[1] It is said that many years ago some reckless uninitiated placed poles as levers beneath 575* 796* 787 773 [424] 575* 796* [778]

[1] [see category 116; p. 84 (F) - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575* Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The kukusiut are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day kukusiut go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the later sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snuuq's patron is a snuuq of the Mountain which became [776] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [778] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [757] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Qolliaohmx, though it is said to resemble the one just described [424] in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [787] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the repository of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the [778] old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The writer was a spectator when the present 575* Qolliaohmx gave his dance in January, 1924, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 178 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 424 539 him as guide. Both heard the beating, and soon saw a pack of supernatural wolves eating dog-flesh. The men were able to steal away without being observed and Hai·alakila told Ḡālsmus to say nothing about what they had seen. A little later he gave a dance in which he wore a wolf's mask and pretended to eat dog-flesh. His neighbours, ignorant of the vision by which this dance had been inspired, were tremendously impressed.

Another exploit of Hai·alakila and Ḡālsmus may here be recorded, although it is unconnected with the Cannibal dance.

One night when they were spearing fish, a forest suddenly arose before them. Ḡālsmus, startled and terrified, began to cry, but Hai·alakila quieted him.

"I am master here," he said. "We are in this adventure together and your task is to keep quiet."

Then a house appeared before them from the depths of the ocean. It was really a sḡāmtik, with its ferocious mouth as doorway, and though Hai·alakila naturally feared to enter, he climbed to the roof, so that he could gaze within through what corresponded to a smoke-vent. The house was filled with valuables of all kinds, guarded only by gulls. Hai·alakila reached inside with his pole, hooked forth one object after another and swung each across to his slave on the mainland to hide in a tree. Unfortunately, a canoe happened to draw near, whereupon the house slowly sank back into the depths.

*575 ●778 551 Mention might here be made of a Stuux repository, said to be unique in Bella Coola, that contains five Cannibal names. It is in the form of a human being with a tail, kneeling and bent forward so that hands and head touch the ground. A repository is at each point of contact. The names are:

Ḡitlia, the head of the creature; Ānuximān·a, the left hand; Sinuximātl, the right hand; Ālximān·a, the left foot; Xuximān·a, the right foot; Ālquntām, the tail.

In this repository there lives a mātsqus with a copper lining to its mouth.

*575 *796 424 539 It will be seen that these myths help but little to explain the kusiut society, or even the origin of the Cannibal dances; they appear to be only rationalizations attempting to account for established customs. For this reason they have been inserted after a description of the Cannibal dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

elaborate myths dealing with the origin of the kusiotem dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Alqunäm and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Onixwaltcua of Kimsquit, and the prerogative of giving kusiotem dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.[44] The following accounts are of the dances performed by a certain Onixwaltcua whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repositories, one for each section of his dance.

As with all other kusiut prerogatives, the impetus to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural patron, the being Kulslkäkmidjut in the case of all kusiotem dancers. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for kusiotem dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are rushing out of the house above on the entry of the sun at the winter solstice. Thus kusiotem dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Stomach-Cutting Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his kusiut friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other kukusiut, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time draws near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a prelimi-

[44] There are other kusiotem dancers in Bella Coola.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beating of sticks. The plating over his stomach is not apparent 575* in the dim light, especially as much of it is hidden by his collar 796* of dyed cedar-bark and a broad dance-apron. Sometimes the disguise is improved by fastening the skin of a dog, mountain goat, or deer, over the outer surface. X takes up his position, standing, behind the fire. One of the heralds inserts tongs into the flames and draws forth a stone, taking care that the uninitiated can see that it is red hot. X pretends to swallow this, though actually it drops inside his collar to the receptacle between the plates of copper. The clashing can often be heard as it strikes against the metal, and smoke pours forth from the "navel." X groans and jabbers, i....., while he shakes his fingers violently. After about five minutes the stone is seen to fall to the floor. Sometimes a number of pebbles are used, though one is often considered sufficient. When the last has fallen, non-members are expelled and the kukusiut eat and listen to the admonitions of the marshals.

As with other kusiotem rites, the ritual of this dance is continued for four more days. Masks are prepared and on the fourth evening the uninitiated are summoned. A masked figure, wearing a copper stomach, appears and swallows a stone which later falls out through the navel. This is done four times, while Ano'likwolsaix explains that the guest from above is repeating his actions at home. Following this performance, a procession of supernatural beings appears, in the manner already described.

Although X is not killed by this dance, as are other kusiotem dancers, he is required to undergo the same restrictions.

THE FUNGUS DANCE

Another of the more important kusiut ceremonials is the [424]
Fungus dance, now the prerogative of a woman, Snunkka'ks.
The name was formerly held by her brother, who had inherited it from his mother's brother. The first Snunkka'ks came to earth in the beginning of time at Stuux and made his repository [778]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

foes. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 773

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Ottoldimut, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nunutkentum, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 539

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Ănukpumaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Sgaistwa, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the cohoe salmon, Kpapstustusailaix, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Osipax, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola kukusiut have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Winwina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Ălquntăm placed the name Nunuskumai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Qo, near Stuix. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Winwina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nunuskumai has had the kusiut prerogative of seeing Winwina. 424 773 778 [776]

[The Dance of Winwina].

424 Another kusiut derived the prerogative of having Winwina
773 as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After 776 Raven had seen Noäkxnim and obtained him for Ällilmnälosaix, he flew down the fiord once more, observed Winwina, and made him patron for Omqomkilka.

*575 The ritual of the dance of Winwina does not vary, irre-
*796 spective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository [424] is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

[184] Winwina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the January moon is full;[87] accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kusiut dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kukusiut happen to be present on the evening of this day, X mounts to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Winwina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail [292] feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kukusiut who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning, [805] [87]Owing to faulty calendrical observations the exact date is seldom found.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Moon Dance]

*575 *796 821 [532] No detailed description is needed for the ceremonial on either nusintälsap or qothm. On the evening of the former day the masks are ordered; one for Asiutänem, who appears to be confused with the Moon itself, one for each Aiqwaiust, one for each Snitsmän·a, and one for Ano'likwolsaix.

Late in the afternoon the kukusiut assemble in X's house to see that everything is in good shape. A large mat has been spread across the back wall of the house and on it a disk representing the Moon, with a human face in the middle. After the usual discussion the uninitiated are called in. Each Snitsmän·a remains standing alone in the two back corners of the house, while the two Aiqwaiust are in the central space behind the fire, constantly waving their arms to and fro. Suddenly the Moon itself appears against the matting. A carpenter, concealed behind the screen, directs its course so that it moves in a short arc across the background and disappears; Ano'likwolsaix explains to the uninitiated that this is the track of the new Moon, low down on the horizon. A second time it "rises," and moves across in a longer and higher curve, which Ano'likwolsaix says is the longer orbit of the waxing Moon. On its third course it is still higher, and on its fourth appearance it moves across the full width of the house near the roof, which Ano'likwolsaix describes as the course of the full Moon, far above the mountains. She also explains that we are indebted to Snitsmän·a for cleaning the Moon's face after the Aiqwaiust have blackened it, as otherwise no light would be visible. This ends the spectacle; the uninitiated are sent away, and the ceremonial concludes in the manner already described.

This constitutes the Moon dance as practised during the ceremonial season, but in addition X is required to dance whenever his patron is hidden by an eclipse. On such occasions the ritual is identical with that described for an eclipse of the Sun.

*575 *796 539 424 ●778 551

THE DANCE OF THE MURDERED SLAVE

One of the chieftains who came to earth in the beginning of time was Alinmotusais, whose wealth was so great that he was able to invite his associates from far and near to potlatches, and thus acquire many nuseä

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoóla NE6

575* 796* 534 424 778 551

names for his only son. Becoming surfeited with this form of greatness, he decided to initiate a kuxiut ceremonial for his child. At that time chiefs were so powerful that they could create their own repositories, and Alixmotuxeix resolved to make his son's in his own house. To give strength to it, he dug a hole and buried alive in it a female slave with her small infant. The unfortunate woman was a member of the tribe known to the Bella Coola as Tsaxhl, probably a branch of the Haida; like all other northern tribeswomen she wore in her lower lip a plug of abalone-shell. Alixmotuxeix also buried in the hole a large number of the wasps which abounded in his house. The uninitiated were told that the woman had chanced to stumble upon a repository and had become kelals, "rendered incapable of returning"; from this circumstance she was henceforth known as Anukelalslaix. The kukuxiut also informed non-members that the woman had been made immortal, and was forever to remain as a slave in the repository. Alixmotuxeix chose the name Xepâtus, "Sharp-Nosed," for his son, a reference to the sharp beaks of the numerous ravens shown on every object in his house. This designation has since been transmitted in the usual manner; every owner has had the right to perform a dance with the buried woman as patron.

575* 796*

In describing the ritual it will be convenient to refer to Xepâtus as X.

When X wishes to dance he obtains permission from the marshals and makes his preliminary plans in the customary way. A suitable date for the coming of the call is chosen, and, on the night preceding, the weeping of Anukelalslaix is heard in the forest behind the village. The weeper is one of X's associates, but no uninitiated would be reckless enough to venture near. She moves down the valley, as if coming from the repository near the village of Sinx. The next evening X receives his call and the uninitiated are expelled from his house. The dancer blackens his face, puts on a ceremonial collar, and goes out alone to find the slave woman; presently he returns, leading Anukelalslaix by the hand. She is disguised as an old, old woman, clad in rags and carrying on her back a bundle made to represent a small infant; over her face is a mask with a plug of abalone-shell in the lower lip (see Plate 12).* She slowly circles the fire, weeping bitterly, while the kukuxiut

[532]

* [See category 116, p 164 (F)- ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Otter]

*575 below a rapids. Care is taken that the uninitiated do not ob-
*796 serve these arrangements. About noon on nabusam the heralds go to every house with a cry:

"Come to watch the kusiut catch the supernatural one in the river."

The uninitiated are wise enough to remain within their houses as the kukusiut troop down to the bank of the river. Presently X appears, clad in the usual ceremonial costume. In he dives, as if in pursuit of the dark shape which can be seen swirling to and fro in the water. Non-members, watching from the background, are amazed to see what appears to be a struggle, followed by the emergence of X clutching an otter in his arms. They are too far away to perceive that it is merely a dummy, nor do they know that a kusiut has assisted the performer by cutting the rope at the proper time. As X reaches shore with his burden the kukusiut women drone. Forcing his way through the throng of his associates, the performer goes to his house where the uninitiated presently hear the frenzied beating of sticks repeated four times. The dummy is carefully concealed in the back-room so that it can be used if necessary on a later occasion.

As X comes ashore, water is splashed in all directions from [556] the dummy and often dampens several of the kukusiut. Anyone to whom this happens is expected to give his clothes to a herald, and a man of chief-like disposition never hesitates to do so; in fact, he welcomes this opportunity of displaying his generous nature.

It is probable that a number of masked figures appear on the evening of nabusam, but detailed information is lacking. It might be added that a question as to whether the catching of this otter had any influence on the ability of X as an otter hunter was regarded by the informant as highly humorous.

THE OCTOPUS DANCE

*575
*796 In the beginning of time Sinaxti of Kimsquit married a 424 Bella Bella woman who brought as part of her dowry a kusiut
551
878

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dance with Octopus as patron. This was first used by Łałqwan-i, a relative of Sinuqutl, and has since been the prerogative of the owner of the name, whom it will be convenient to term X. Being of foreign origin, there is no repository at Kimsquit; in fact, there is none even in Bella Bella itself where the kusiut society is believed to lack both localized power and ancestral authority.[11] The Octopus dance is thus the only one without a repository; as far as could be learnt it is not performed in Bella Coola. In Bella Bella the original rite was connected both with the nsaok and kusiut organizations, but in Kimsquit with the latter alone.

When X wishes to dance, which may be at any time during the ceremonial season, he consults the marshals and picks a suitable date. As this draws near, the carpenters are requested to make an octopus, sometimes using a real skin as basis. On the day that the call comes, the dummy is placed in the water of the fiord, close to shore. Suddenly the heralds raise the cry that a supernatural being is coming to X; the startled uninitiated flee from his house and the kukusiut assemble. Presently the dancer rushes forth, followed by a band of his fellows, and plunges into the water. Fom a distance nonmembers can see arms and legs flying to and fro, blood flows as the kukusiut struggling in the shallows strike each other's noses, and they have no hesitation in believing the heralds who report that a fight is taking place with a writhing octopus. X at last bears his booty ashore, amid the droning of the women.

That night the uninitiated are called to X's house where the dummy octopus, guarded by the dancer and several other kukusiut, is placed behind the fire. Hidden strings have been fastened to its arms so that it moves and seems to be alive. One of the singers takes a baton and beats time, stops, and all the kukusiut call out i····. This is repeated four times, accompanied, on the last repetition, by the return of the octopus whence it came. This is done by palming the body from sight, but of course the uninitiated do not know this. A [11] This is, of course, a Bella Coola version.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Octopus Dance]

*575 Cannibal begins to growl and soon the kukusiut are left alone
*796 in the house. The singers beat out a new song for X and the ritual continues like that of any other lsxtämem. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on nusiutälsap and qothm.

On the evening of nebusam the uninitiated are summoned in due course. The exact number of masked figures shown could not be learnt, but among them is always an octopus.
[532] The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance [431] are more valuable than those bestowed at most kusiut rituals, accordingly none but wealthy people are able to carry it out.
[556] The heralds especially are always beneficiaries.

THE DANCE OF THE DARK-SHADE

*575 One of the most peculiar and irregular of kusiut dances is *796 that performed by a certain Kälqam, whom it will be convenient to call X. His patron is the supernatural woman Stcqwastlustkwi, Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick ever-424 [776] greens of the river valleys, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. X's repository is beneath some [778] large cedars near the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the fiord; it is probable that other dancers with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When X wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the marshals who insist that he delay his performance until after the solstice at earliest. The reason is because his [776] patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository; X brings her to the village and [787] in consequence calls come to many kukusiut,[166] which would be undesirable during the first few weeks of the season. On *575 the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance,
*796 X steals away from the village with three or four kukusiut, [166] The implication in this case is that calls come from repositories, not from the land above, the customary source.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 source of awe to the uninitiated, who marvel that a man can
* 796 still appear like an ordinary mortal when he has just brought a supernatural visitor home. According to one informant who, however, is not well posted on kusiut matters, there is neither qothm nor nebusam, and Dark-Shade is merely sent away after four days. This may be the case, but the dance has not been carried out for many years, and the man frankly admitted that he did not know the details. It seems more likely that there [533] is some kind of ceremony, since a song would not be composed unless for a definite purpose.

* 575 The coming of Dark-Shade complicates the kusiut cere-
* 796 monial since a number of dancers receive their calls simul-787 taneously. In this case the ritual is carried out in unison 424 which requires, for example, the composition of one song for each performer on lsuxtämem. Calls never come in this way to dancers with important or complicated prerogatives, but it is a useful means of dealing with those whose right is merely to sing of their patrons. On nebusam the patrons of all are displayed, a method which has the advantage of producing a dramatic effect which would be lacking if only one were in evidence. The coming of a call by means of Dark-Shade is called twilmdimut, "Emerging from Below to Plain Sight." Another time when several calls may come simultaneously to different kukusiut is at the winter solstice when, on the entry of Ałquntäm, the supernatural beings rush forth and some of them fall, causing calls to come to their human protégés.

THE DANCE OF THE STONE MAN

* 575 Yuyuhmgl, the man who was petrified with his Ootsa Lake
* 796 wife and four children at the beginning of time, is patron for a [776] Kimsquit kusiut man named Kwasta. His repository is just 424 above high-water mark on the east side of Dean Channel, about 551 five miles from its head, and about one hundred and fifty feet [778] north of the legal fishing boundary. This is almost immediately opposite Yuyuhmgl's station. The repository is beneath the ground, and its doorway is a beaver which became

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Stone Man]

575*
796*

petrified and which can still be seen, with its head facing the water. [778]

The preliminaries of Kwasta's dance do not differ from those already described, although it is uncertain whence comes the actual call. A large number of masks are constructed, as well as a huge wooden figure of the Stone Man himself, and [532] smaller ones of his wife and four children. When the uninitiated are called in on the night of nebusam they see the Stone Man and his family standing behind the fire, while the body of the house is filled with a number of masked figures. The latter keep shouting to the Stone Man and he answers them, as he does mortals who pass his station on Dean Channel. The marshals always arrange that he does not reply to one of the masked figures, whereupon the others gibe at this unfortunate and tell him that he will die within a year. It is common [763] knowledge that if the Stone Man does not answer the hail of a passer-by, the latter will soon die. The uninitiated are impressed to find that supernatural beings share this belief.

THE FIRE DANCE

This dance is the prerogative of a kusiut named Wai·s, [424] "Cohoe Salmon." Its origin is attributed to the experience of [551] an ancestor of the dancer who was helped by, and received his name from, one of these fish. Only a fragment of the ritual could be learnt, enough to show that it has many points of resemblance with kusiotem rites. When Wai·s performs, the central fire is raked apart and he appears to lie down on the ashes between the two flaming sections; evergreen boughs and sand are thrown over him, and the fire drawn together over his body. After an hour or more, when the uninitiated imagine he must be baked, his singing is heard, and Wai·s walks in through the front door. Deception is practised probably by means of a dummy fastened with deer tendons which contract with the heat so that it seems as if the body itself were writhing. It is said that the first Wai·s was actually able to perform this feat by means of the power given him by the salmon,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Whirlwind usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a kusiut who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary. 575* 796* 776 [821] [532]

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the grasp of Sninia. This being is patron for certain kukusiut and whenever a tremor occurs, his protégés call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is identical with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The theme of the song is of the manner in which Sninia performs his function of holding the world. A call from Sninia may also come in the normal manner to one of his protégés during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Sninia is patron to a kusiut named Ällibaläxlaix. [823] [533] [551]

THE DANCE OF TIDE-MEASURER

The height to which the tides shall rise is decided by a male supernatural being, Mintlato·snum, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a kusiut named Ṫsäl, whose repository is near Sätlia. One of Ṫsäl's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used at the dance describe how Tide-Measurer uses a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of nebusam the uninitiated are told to go to their houses but, by peering round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the ocean, and thrust down to the bottom a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day. [823] [551] [778] [533]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BULL-HEAD

Since any supernatural being can act as patron to kusiut dancers, and since all mammals and birds are, in a sense, super- [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Dawn]

* 575 what they do. With them comes the being Onstcitoma, "The
* 796 Sleeper," wearing a mask to represent a drowsy man who con-776 stantly yawns and rubs his eyes. It is explained that this [532] being delights in sleep and does not care if the sun never rises.

THE DANCE OF THE GREEDY ONE

Nusixilxixaikum, also called Tutwai·os, is a greedy creature who spends his time going from one supernatural being to another in the land above, always begging for food. He is patron for several kukusiut and on the nebusam of one of his [532] protégés a masked figure representing the Greedy One visits every house in the village asking for food. The uninitiated retreat to the bed-rooms, but the kukusiut comply with his [431] request. In consequence the dancer's house is filled with food which is given away to the kukusiut guests.

THE DANCE OF THE REPOSITORY MAKER

[778] Some repositories were constructed in the beginning of time by the supernatural being, Nunudjixnum, who is patron for [532] several kukusiut. On the nebusam of one of his protégés a figure, masked to represent a male being, appears and Ano°lik-wolsaix explains that this is the maker of repositories. It is [184] uncertain whether this being is found in Bella Coola or only in Kimsquit.

THE DANCE OF Ałquntäm'S SLAVE

In the land above there lives a slave of Ałquntäm who spends his time providing fuel for the fires in Nusqulxwaista. He is patron for a Bella Coola kusiut, though the details of his dance were not obtained.

THE DANCE OF Ałquntäm'S HERALD

Oqolikts Ałquntäm is patron for several kukusiut. During the nebusam of one of his protégés a masked figure representing him visits every house in the village, bidding the kukusiut

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 424 575* 796* 539 [778]

you choose. You will be more powerful than any of your brothers and it will be you who will retaliate on the murderers of your parents, because you will be a shaman."

The man, a supernatural being, of course, told the six that their repository would be the blue pool on the shores of which they had met him; it was oval in shape, about twenty-five feet long and twenty wide. He added that its name was Nuqwxulioqlsän·i. Having given his instructions, the strange visitor vanished.

The six orphans returned in a somewhat bewildered condition to Stuix. They went into the house where they were staying and ixwal·a, who was about eight years old, disturbed a cross old woman with his harmless play. In unreasonable anger she spanked him severely, and his older brothers told their sister to try her newly acquired power. She passed behind the old woman; by so doing she attracted to herself the latter's spirit without making even the motion of taking anything, and without the victim being aware of her loss. Qwaixosän·i stuck the supernatural element on a stick, as one spits a potato, and threw it on the heap of excrement piled up behind the house. Presently, when the woman wished to use the convenience, she took a stick with the intention of breaking it for sanitary use. She went to the platform for the purpose but it broke beneath her and she fell; the stick she was carrying pierced her heart and she died. The accident was, of course, due to the loss of her spirit. The five brothers were delighted with the realization that their sister was really as powerful as the supernatural one had said she would be.

The boys next told their sister to slay the principal chief, who had instructed a sorcerer to kill their parents. Qwaixosän·i went behind him and attracted his spirit to herself; she broke it between her hands and presently the owner fell dead. Though secretly delighted, the brothers thought it wise to appear grieved, and accordingly sent ixwal·a to weep. As he was doing so, a kindly old woman patted him on the head, saying:

"Don't distress yourself, little boy. It is the man who killed your parents who is now himself dead."

But she had no idea that it was one of the orphans who had caused his death. Within a few days Qwaixosän·i captured and destroyed the spirits of two other chiefs who had had a part in the slaying of her parents; in each case the man died within a few hours of his loss. These four deaths so worried the people of Stuix that all the chiefs determined to leave, since the malady, whatever it was, seemed to kill only those of importance. They took down the cedar boards forming the walls of the houses, piled them on canoes and made ready for departure, taking no heed for the poor people, including the six orphans, who were left shelterless.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 mortal watched until the unfortunate Nunulcuxnam had almost vanished
*575 from sight. Then a sound betrayed her to Änoºlikwolsaix.
*796 "If you are a mortal," she said, "come in."
539 The woman did so, and Änoºlikwolsaix continued:

"I am Änoºlikwolsaix. You have found me, hence I give you a kusiut dance prerogative. You will have Nunulcuxnam as patron."

The woman returned to her home, where she performed a kusiut rite in which she portrayed the sinking of Nunulcuxnam into the earth.

ORIGIN MYTH OF A PECULIAR REPOSITORY

In the beginning of time there came down to Xmaxots, a point a little distance below Mount Nusqalst, a woman whose name was Spuxpuxhailaix. Älquntäm had given her a kusiut prerogative with a peculiar [778] repository in four parts, as if two were in either hand. Their names were Sxelxädjutän·a, Sxa·ltutsmän·a, Siutan·i, and Samsiutän·i. When she [532] danced she wore a wooden head-dress representing Woodpecker, and the masks used (her patrons?) were the sun when it is red, and an eagle. This dance has since been carried out from generation to generation by the owners of the name Spuxpuxhailaix.

Kusiut Prerogatives Other Than Dances

424 The most valuable possession of a kusiut is the dance which
*575 he has the right to perform, but each member of the society has,
*796 in addition, a somewhat peculiar object, sometimes material and sometimes intangible, known as a skusiut or yeaxmax. The meaning of these two terms will become evident in the description of their uses, meanwhile they can be termed "prerogatives." With every call, this possession of the dancer's comes [787] automatically to him, though it can also be attracted to him by other means and without a call. There is no connection between the patron and the prerogative; for example, one kusiut who has one of the sons of Älquntäm as the former has, as the latter, the Hummingbird. Another may have Fog, Sleep, a Snake, or one of many other objects, animate or inanimate. The "patron-puppets" described in kusiotem rites belong to this class.

In almost every case the origin is lost in antiquity, and the owner knows only that it belongs with his dance.

CHAPTER III

WARFARE[1]

General Observations — Specific Accounts

General Observations

721 PRIOR to the establishment of British rule, there was con-
648 siderable warfare among the coastal tribes of British Columbia. Long-continued struggles leading to the extermination of one or other of the participants were unknown, but there were constant raids, counter-raids, forays, and attacks. These were never as continuous as on the Plains, where martial achievements were regarded more highly than on the coast, but it appears probable that at least several villages of the Bella Coola were embroiled every few years. Nevertheless, [796] war was secondary in importance to ceremonial rites. During the winter, peace reigned and members of hostile tribes were [556] even received as guests at some dances. At potlatches they might be subjected to insult, later to be avenged in the same manner or by active hostility, but seldom was actual violence offered either to envoys or guests. The symbol of peace and 726 friendliness was eagle down; the occupants of a canoe who 825 bore an invitation to a potlatch, or who were guests them-778 selves, used to blow this substance up into the air whenever [486] another craft approached, and it was incumbent on the latter [578] to veer over to the other side of the channel. Eagle down was [627] considered to be so sacred that when two men were quarrelling a chief could stop them by blowing some of it over their heads.
721 In winter, hostilities were prevented by ceremonies, and in summer the people were usually busy laying in supplies of food; consequently, it was only in the late spring that fighting was [575] at all common. Even then the dictates of ceremonial life were [622] not entirely forgotten; no kusiut novice went to war and

[1]Warfare having long been discontinued, the past tense is used throughout this chapter.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Ănudakănuts: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
ănukăldimut, "This Is to Make Straight Your Road": Said when a call is returned, or food thrown upon a fire for the dead.
Ănukoo·lst, "Place of Big Stones in the River": Village at Kwatna.
Ănukululsiaix: Woman immolated in a repository and hence become supernatural.
ănukiilk's: Rainbow-coloured nose-ring worn by Death.
Ănukiqaksaix: Supernatural name of Hawk. [825] ănukitnk': Short cord by which the fungus is held during the kănăn·i dance.
Ănukkălnam: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ănukpamaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers": Supernatural name of hump-back salmon.
ănukest: Nose-ring. [301]
ănuhnănk: Mourning song composed for a chief and, apparently, the singing of one. [533]
Ănulxwam: Place on the north-west side of Dean Channel, about nine miles from its head, where curative power is petrified. [778] Ănumnisknm: Supernatural beings who remind the supreme god of his kusiut duties.
Ănunitsektnm: Supernatural being who restores those killed by the receipt of too much power from Ťlitcăplităn·a. ănunuqun: Meeting of chiefs, archaic.
ănuonai: Person who catches early olachen in a hand-net. [226] ănupospam: Buoyant stones such as are found in a lake near the headwaters of the Bella Coola. [823] Ănuputsadilk: Supernatural being who regulates the height of tides in rivers.
ănuḑpatlnam: To await, especially a supernatural being.
Ănuḑpamlaix: Son of the first settlers at Sătlia.
Ănuḑpilaix, "What Fills People": Name created by Smaoan in the beginning of time with reference to his stores of salmon.
ănuqunusam: Silent waiting in darkness before a kusiotem dance.
Ănuḑuntnikmm: Supernatural being who gives inspiration.
Ănusaikaiutslaix: 1—Supernatural name of sisiutl.
2—Method of killing practised by sisiutl.
Ănusaiksaixsăix·ăls: Name of a Bella Coola shaman.
Ănu·shuxăthnm: Name of a Kimsquit woman.
ănunka'ălxăkms: The rare prerogative of changing from kusiut to sisook rites on alternate nights. [424]
Ănuskiekmm, "The Saviour": One of Ťlitcăplităn·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Ănuskumathm: One of the first men to settle at Tăl·io in the beginning of time.
ănuskămnuy: Peculiar cry uttered by a kusiut scratcher.
Ănuspunm·aix: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Ănusy: Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.
ănuspaixetsaix, "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts: Identical with sxlaxink, q.v. [198] Ănuzyaix: One of the first women to settle at Sĭskiutl in the beginning of time.
Ănuterklămdimut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
ănutsu: 1—Excavated house furnished with stepped platforms for guests.
2—Village at Kwatna. [342]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nukāpunkam: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

Nukātco: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.

nuqaxem: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a kusiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.

nukolomskī: Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.

[825] Nukiadji: Ancestral name of a Stuax chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.

[778] nukila·xta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.

Nukiis, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nukokwixodjax, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[552] Nuliqwmutl di'mnk', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.

Nulālsumnam: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Noākxmm's departure to warn kukusiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.

[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.

Nulalulaks, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[431] nulexum: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.

Nuliliqolānk, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.

Nulixwemankta: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

nulumkmānkdās: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.

Nulkitl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.

nulkmākdas: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nulumkmānkdās.

[428] nulmāxtmax: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.

nulostunik·osta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a sisook head-dress.

nulq: Landslide, such as is caused by Twalālit or sisiutl.

Nulqānlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nutsqwalt in the beginning of time.

nulqunta, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.

nulqwtātas: House-posts nearest to front door.

nultunikta: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[426] nulismānmtmm, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donor who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.

[556] nulxodjim: Cry uttered by a sisook official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of sisook novices.

[342] nulxisqailaix: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a sisook novice.

nulxwālkāls: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.

numālkāls: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.

Numām·us, "Place of Flies": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

APPENDIX D

qexta, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]

ḳpämdjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]

ḳpänliktmm: To revolve sunwise. [195]

Ḳpänpänliktmmlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Tlitcäplilän·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Ḳpaḳlxs: Place of petrified power near Kwatna. [778]

Ḳsxwan: Village on the Skeena River.

ḳtaisetl: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being. [825] ḳubetl: Salmon liver.

ḳuks: Co-wife in a polygynous household. [595] ḳuluas, vocative, ḳuluais: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking.

ḳulxwaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601]

ḳuma: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825]

Ḳunqwmm ul di dä Sxem, "The Unlooser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.

ḳupstäxm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.
2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.

ḳuputsälets: Stone axe.

ḳus: Period of engagement. [412]

Ḳwahila: Ḳomqo·ts man.

Ḳwai·lils: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ḳwaiutsamlaix: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ḳwaixosän·i: Shaman's name of a Stuax woman.

Ḳwaixwos, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.

ḳwaläs: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]

ḳwalm, vocative, ḳwaläm; plural, äl̓ḳwaläm: Eldest brother or sister. [601]

Ḳwa'lems: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

ḳwalik: Gull. [825]

ḳwal'ma'hs, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.

Ḳwalxwalolim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Täl·io in the beginning of time.

Ḳwalna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]*

Ḳwamaxa'hs: Chief living on the upper Tcawat in the beginning of time.

ḳwanä·xsta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]

Ḳwapx: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.

Ḳwaqmai: Place on Schooner Pass.

Ḳwaqwasila: Susook name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳwatlnelum: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211] ḳwatlnusam: Figure representing crest.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sinuxtl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximätl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Stuax repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio°msta: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424]

siplxälosuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] siplkim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Slqälxam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnäm: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626] siqwsek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage.

sisasts: Departure to a new locality. [425]

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother.

sisut: Paddle. [601]

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Siltlmsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778]

siut, vocative, siaot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."
2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large ssaok whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutamkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnälos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·os, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldäunx chief living in the last century.

sixliktam: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Sixman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsän·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsixlutnam: Synonym for Mstlakila, the supernatural being connected with ssaok rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, änänuskx, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwplätkmak: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

sixwotl: Unmarried mother. [848]

siyeutla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sieutla may be connected with this.

[765] skwanät: 1—Memorial potlatch.
2—Mourning song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Skwanät·ăn·ä, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

skwanätänkusaix: Professional kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Snitsmän·a during kusiotem dances.

skwatsta: Name.

Skwo·ts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

[824] Sla·kl: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

sleos: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] slăqq'i: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

slăxkt: Many, adjective.

[554] slăxmidjut, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla·: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] sleli: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden loops and spears.

slemts, vocative, slemtsakais: Grandchild; the vocative indicates endearment.

[578] slexwxniz: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

sli·s: Gall bladder.

sloptsta: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a ssaok whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mitlakila.

sluk': Olachen grease.

[778] Sluxlekwailq: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphized being responsible for power in this locality.

Sliłm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

slkmsta: The voice.

[824] slkuml: Dried elderberries.

slukwala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Coola woman.

[821] slulqm: Eclipse.

slwosamliku': 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.

[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist kusiut or ssaok dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaisiklla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaialotla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaien·a: 1—Synonym for Sluxlekwailq, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smaiusta: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smämätsknelp: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smaoan, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smaourk: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

smät·amy, vocative, smät·ämy: Friends.

 192*

smä·tl: A place of petrified power, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered incapable of moving. [778] smätl äs skwatsta, "Petrified Name": Designation brought from above in the beginning of time.

sm·ks: 1—Mussel. [825]
2—Freshwater mussel.

smxmxuxls: One of the thrushes.

smuqämäts: An animal, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.

Snäkelt: Äsän·an·i man mentioned in an ancient story.

snänik': 1—Gum.
2—Name of son made by Raven in the beginning of time.

snäx: Slave.

Snaghäkila: One of the first men to settle at Sätlia in the beginning of time.

snäxom: Visionary receiving power direct from the supreme god.

sniändcuqs: Worm or larva living under the ocean.

Sniaxlikwan·a: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.

Sninia: Supernatural being who holds earth in position.

Snitsmän·a: Supernatural woman who restores those who suffer misfortune in the performance of kusiut rites.

Snmkha'kas: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Täl·io in the beginning of time.

smmq: 1—Mythical monster.
2—Man living at Kimsquit in early times.

smmqos di sonx^w'dai: Posts of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices. [821] smmqos wa smdäs: Variety of smmq living above tree line.

Smtqwalmkaista: Stealer of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a potlatch by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being. [828]

Sno·ähädäx: Island south-west of Bella Bella.

Sno'olxäts Älquntäm: Deer son of the supreme god.

Sno'oniqwlx, "On the Point": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Snoqolaqs: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

snu'aiyewa: Ceremonial collar of hemlock-bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Ttitcäplilän·a. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.

snudaxt'eq: Unidentified berry. [824] snukälmäls: Top used by one of the sons of the supreme god.

Snukilmäls: Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to curl up and come to him.

snukimäx: Part of house behind fire. [824] snukllaik: Unidentified plant.

snulikumi: Piece of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a landslide.

Snulexwnimutik: Chief of supernatural singers who accompany Neäkxnim.

snulnunlil: Twin.

Snulqulqäls: 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in Lemoqwa's house.

Snunua·lma: Locality containing repository of name received from Death.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Snuqā·ɣ': Affluent of the middle Bella Coola.
Snuqwaix: Kimsquit woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Snuqwaxwāls: 1—Copper Raven that perched on house of first settlers at Älqālaxl in the beginning of time.
2—Name given to the Raven design used by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
snusaiks: Skeleton. The word is obviously a derivative of saiks.
Snusälkāls: 1—"The Wise One": One of the more important supernatural beings.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsimotl man.
Snusmkāls: Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Älqālaxl, probably a supernatural designation.
Snusmikänk': Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Älqālaxl, probably a supernatural designation.
[374] Snuskluts, Cold: A supernatural being.
Snuslaxwai, "The Mystery of Älquntäm": The place where the supreme god puts what he wishes to conceal, such as the correct solution of the Mystery dance. The concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
snusɣ: Generic name for several supernatural animals.
snusɣundjän·a: Right front corner of a house on entering.
Snuhari: Pronunciation of Snulili by a man with idiosyncratic r usage.
Snulili, "Place of Dog Salmon": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
[765] snutlänkin, "A Shoring Up": Term used to describe the functions of mourning songs.
Snulkänäls, "Box": 1—One of the first women to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—Box in Ẓomoqwa's house.
3—Name of a Tälʼio man derived from the last.
Snulle·tl, "Place of Nq Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Snutlmɣ: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Snutqomikaista: Point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
[821] snutsälätst: Race of dwarfs, presumably mythical.
Snutsiaxwanem: Whirlwind, anthropomorphized.
[778] Snutsulktäls: Generic term for four supernatural, eagle-like creatures.
Snuwals: Place on South Bentinck Arm where curative power is localized.
snuɣxelkmut, "Bring Light": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the lower Bella Coola valley.
snuɣex·isk: One who seeks embers.
Snuxmethmän·a: One of the first women to settle at Tälʼio in the beginning of time.
Snuxwnulāls: Name of first settlers at Älqālaxl in the beginning of time.
Snuyaxlikwan·a: Rivers Inlet name used by a Bella Coola kusiut woman.
[484] solits: Food carried for consumption on a journey; the term is also applied to the provender brought from above by the first people in the beginning of time.
solʼokm: Hunting-ground owned by an ancestral family.
Som: Woman mentioned in a song.
sonɣʷ: see da sonɣʷ da.
Sonxwäkis: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Sonxwan·a: One of the first women to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
[431] sonxwadjut: Synonym for sɣwomads, the preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Sonɣʷmai: Kusiut name of a Stuax man.
Soptos: Kusiut name of a Tsmotl man.
soqoleäxum: Scalp.
soqwalätʼ: Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot. [824] Spaixpaxgmmän·a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spänbätlnaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
späniesta: Temporary camping-place.
Spätcahlt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
späki: Star.
spekm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
spepandouts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] spikpikmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
spikta: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Spipiznän·i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spiʼxnunsta: Island west of Namu. spkx: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smnq with female organs. [824]
spoxälicua: Unidentified berry. [821] Sʼps', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Spskunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Qomqo·ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
spla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputs: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spuxdjut, "Eagle Down-ness": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825]
Spuxpuxhailaix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxsäʼmpdimut: Sisook name of Xuxais origin.
Spuxspuxta: Sisook name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqäl·a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqoolt: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqäpts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqali: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqalst or sqalstutl: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nusqalst. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316] [103]*
sqama: 1—Chest.
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Sqaml: Land of Ashes. [584] sqasusts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man.
sqals: River sand mixed with small pebbles. [823] Sqatsuk: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River.
sqonm: Flood.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter con- 211 nected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride 424 to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not 773 affect his daily life.

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of 825 the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, skämtsk, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, [776] * susiutl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nulunikta, the posts which [772] stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form. The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly [829] common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. Ac- [772] cording to some accounts it was these posts which supported the first sky until it fell.

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant 424 past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven 779 pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The 825 matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly humorous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said:

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He recounted how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians [648] from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 nearest answer to the question replied that his crest was the 779 Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the 825 narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet 424 they have some importance in the realm of social life. The 773 portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy 825 chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a [532] design is impressed with the glories of the family history of [556] the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of [304] the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delineation is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed* with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his
000 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[171] [184] *It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal tribes but also the Carriers. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated themselves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches; in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back-room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material; the second and less common, by passing a string coated with the substance beneath the skin. The dye was obtained from river stones which were baked for a long time [386] and then ground into a powder. This keeps indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learnt, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

838 woman who dressed as a man and used to hunt successfully,
[171] though she was married. Such practices are said to have been not uncommon among the Haida. The women were considered bold and independent, but the Bella Coola of today know little *[776] about them, and are not even certain that Spuxt is responsible for a female assuming the actions of a male. It will be readily understood that he is not regarded with much awe, nor does he influence their daily lives.

*776 Another supernatural being, uninfluential though resident [822] upon earth, is Echo, Sxwalāsl, "The Voice Repeater." The Bella Coola regard him as a male being, in human form, and recognize his presence whenever sounds reverberate. He figures in mythology, occasionally appears as a masked figure at [575] kwiut or xwaxt dances, but has neither helped nor harmed human beings for so many generations that he is accordingly neglected.

*776 A supernatural being from whom many Bella Coola have 787 had unpleasant visitations is Sīkmsīla, the cause of nightmares.
828 He is a man-like creature with black face and an enormous head which he constantly scratches. His home is in Nuxmāt-a, but he frequently descends to this world and frightens sleepers. If a person scratches his head while asleep it is because he has just seen Sīkmsīla doing so, and if he walks in his sleep it is to escape this supernatural visitor. A sleep-walker is usually aroused by having a bucket of water thrown over him. A [751] person frequently troubled by Sīkmsīla can avoid him by painting a black circle around each eye before going to sleep.

*776 With the exception of Alqantēm, the supernatural beings thus far described play little part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They believe in their existence, but do not expect to meet them, and do not believe that they exercise much influence on the course of their daily life. Supernatural beings of this ineffective ● 781 type are exceptional. A man goes into remote parts of the *776 mountains, or even into little frequented areas around his village, with mingled fear lest he encounter an actively malicious being, and hope that he may meet a benevolent one. Moreover, he is aware that by certain means he may have good expectations of beseeching, cajoling, deceiving, or rendering powerless any supernatural beings whom he may meet. This attitude is typical; the Bella Coola by no means move in constant dread of the mysterious denizens of the forests, nor do they eagerly hope for their appearance; they have their likes and dislikes, their moments of weakness and of strength, their times of greatness and of pettiness, all to be considered with care and forethought. 781 776 *

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

One of the beings for whom the older people have a profound respect is Ṫlitcäplilän-a, a supernatural woman whose home is in Nuxmät-a, but who frequently visits this earth. She can be recognized by her snout-like mouth and long, pendant breasts, but even when beyond the range of vision her proximity can be detected by her singing. Ṫlitcäplilän-a often takes pity on a person who is dangerously ill and visits him, not only curing the malady but bringing the sufferer a name and song. In many cases he is thus made a shaman with power to cure. At other times Ṫlitcäplilän-a bestows her favours on a person in good health, so that wise Bella Coola are always hoping to meet her. Such an experience is not without its dangers, for she is so powerful that nearness to her may be enough to cause death. The exploits of those who have come in contact with Ṫlitcäplilän-a belong to shamanism and will be reserved for vol. I, chap. IX. 776 * 787 [756]

Ṫlitcäplilän-a, though her great power inspires fear, usually behaves in a kindly manner to mortals, who accordingly welcome her. But it is quite otherwise with Sxalarwax, whose coming almost invariably brings death.[11] He is a black-faced being of repulsive appearance and sensual nature, whose chief function is to seduce women. For this purpose he often skulks near a village at night, and assumes the voice and appearance of a girl's lover to lure her into the forest. Fearlessly she goes with him, but if she allows his approaches, a hemorrhage results and she soon dies. There is said to be no limit to the number 776 * 761

[11] Cf. Boas, p. 42.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the Bella Coola. No one knows the name of the fire devourer, and it may be that he lacks form. Though ignorant of the law of conservation of matter, the Bella Coola realize that the wood must have gone somewhere, and postulate a land far across the western sea where burnt wood lies in shadowy heaps, each billet retaining its original form though it lacks material substance. This region is presided over by an evil being with a desire for human flesh (II, p. 468). 372 776* [772]

The above list by no means exhausts the anthropomorphic beings resident either in Nusmăt-a or in this world. Those described are the most important, and suffice to make clear the religious attitude of the Bella Coola to beings of this type. Others appear in connection with kusiut dances only, and a consideration of them can be deferred until vol. II, chap. I, whereas some belong essentially to shamanism and allied subjects treated in vol. I, chap. IX. 776*

ZOOMORPHIC BEINGS

The attitude of mingled hope and fear with which the Bella Coola regard their supernatural anthropomorphic beings is typical of their thoughts and actions concerning zoomorphic creatures as well. In the supernatural world the dividing line between human and animal beings is not clearly defined; fabulous monsters have the mentality of supermen, and can be appeased, besought, or cajoled precisely as are anthropomorphic beings. Like those of human form, supernatural animals can bestow good or evil on human beings with whom they come in contact. The division shown in this chapter must, therefore, be regarded as merely for convenience; it does not correspond to a distinction in the minds of the Bella Coola. [781] [128]

One of the most dreaded animals known to the Bella Coola is the snaxq, a monster about the size of a large grizzly bear, with long, silky, beautiful hair, blue-grey in colour. It walks almost upright on short hind legs, so that its long fore-legs touch the ground at intervals; these are provided with sharp

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 seized and carried to the shore. He had thought that it would
* 776 be easy to free himself, but he found it impossible and was carried under the sea. He bit frantically at the enfolding arms, until he succeeded in freeing his own, with which he pushed up the beak of the octopus, thus killing it. He rose to the surface and returned home none the worse.

[825] The Bella Coola do not profess to know all the animals of the world; and if they see a strange one, they assume it to be one known to their ancestors though unfamiliar to them.
539 Since any unknown animal is considered to have supernatural 761 power, due care must be exercised when one is seen. The fol-
* 776 lowing incident illustrates this point.

825 The mother's brother of an informant worked for some thirty years for a white man in Victoria. His employer once sent him to see a turtle which was confined in a pool in a basement preparatory to being killed for a banquet. As soon as he saw it, he said:

"My parents in Bella Coola told me of such a creature."

A few days before Christmas the turtle was cut up and displayed on four platters in the window of the store; the Bella Coola saw it, and thus learned that it had been killed. The same night a sore appeared on his wrist, and by the next day it was large and running. He said to his employer:

"In a few days I will be dead. Do not grieve for me. The sight of such supernatural creatures is too powerful for Indians; I survived one experience, but twice has been too much for me and I will die."

His employer wisely sent him to a white doctor who cured him, although the scar remained. Years later the man returned to Bella Coola where he displayed the mark as proof of his story. A few weeks later he died, and the Bella Coola are firmly convinced that his death was due to his having seen the turtle many years before.

* 776 Although the forests of British Columbia abound with 989 supernatural animals of enormous power, the attitude of the Bella Coola hunter who penetrates into lonely places is not
● [781] one of constant fear. It is true that he may meet danger at any turn, but danger is part and parcel of human life, and he is by no means defenceless. He dreads the powers possessed by creatures of another plane, but they for their part dread certain human objects. Clothing which has been worn for so long that it has become steeped with the emanations of its

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

with a number of the large cone-shaped whistles used for sisaok ceremonial. Towards dawn, sounds come from these, and sometimes a dull thump is heard on the roof, as if a heavy being had landed there. At once there is great excitement within the house. The voices of supernatural people prove them to be at hand. No one is allowed to leave except a sisaok siki[9] who is skilled in dealing with Mulakila,[10] also called Sixsixqwtnam, the supernatural being closely connected with the sisaok ritual. Those within can hear the voice of the siki raised as if he were speaking to someone at a distance.

"Chief, you have come too early," he says. "The house is not yet ready. Please return later."

He is answered by loud whistling, which grows fainter, as if the being who made it were moving away. In reality the young men are merely blowing less forcibly into the whistles.

[9]The accounts of all informants agree that much of the sisaok ritual was newly imported into Bella Coola from Bella Bella. According to some statements, Pulus, a Bella Coola chief who died between 1870 and 1880, married a Bella Bella wife, also one from Rivers Inlet, and it was these two women who brought with them as dower certain sisaok prerogatives. It is said that previous to that time the Bella Coola did not understand the use of the large cone-shaped whistles, nor were they able to summon the supernatural beings to the youths secluded in the back-room, nor to dispel the beings at the conclusion of the rites. On the other hand, some Bella Coola claim that their first ancestors brought the whistles with them from the land above. It is probable that the calling in of the supernatural beings is a recent addition to the potlatch, which accounts for the contradictory accounts, but whether or not the whistles are a new feature is more doubtful. It appears certain that the prerogative of siki has recently been obtained from the Bella Bella. Siki means "the one who cures," and the name is given to the man whose prerogative it is to tend the kusiut initiates in whom supernatural powers are located. In Bella Bella there is a similar functionary for sisaok matters, known as a hai-alakila. Through intermarriage several Bella Coola have recently obtained this prerogative; in each case it is frankly stated that it has been derived from the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola apply to these, so favoured, the term siki, as they do for the kusiut "curer," though the Bella Bella name, hai-alakila, is used with equal frequency. The present siki have endeavoured to claim for themselves certain ceremonial functions formerly carried out by any sisaok. In this account of a potlatch it is assumed that a siki is functioning on all occasions, but in many cases any senior sisaok is considered sufficiently close to the supernatural beings to act satisfactorily. Until about 1870 it is clear that any sisaok was regarded as capable of doing so.

[10]Knowledge of this being is said to have been acquired by the marriage of a certain Smaaax of Kimsquit to a Bella Bella woman in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 The siki returns to the house and tells the guests that [575] Mulakila has indeed been near and has promised to return later on. Those who are not susaok, being steeped in the belief [781] concerning the omnipresence of supernatural beings and ignorant of the carefully concealed whistles, readily credit the tale that they have heard the voice of a denizen of the land above, whose language is intelligible to the siki. Thus is the supernatural element of the potlatch first called forth.

After a final distribution of food, the guests return to their homes.

THE INITIATION OF Susaok NEOPHYTES

* 556 At a potlatch valuable presents are given to the foreign 575 guests, but it is unthinkable for the donor to give to his fellow- [609] villagers. Accordingly, if X desires to display his generosity towards them, he does so at a preliminary ceremony, when he begins the initiation, or re-initiation, into the susaok society of any number of young people. After elaborate counting and re-counting of his goods, both those actually stored in his house and those promised,[11] X decides that he has sufficient to initiate, for example, seven neophytes. His first choice will be his own children, failing those, the sons and daughters of a brother or sister, or of his wife's relatives, or, if none of these are available, those of a friend. X does not gain any pecuniary advantage from such a transaction, in fact he loses, but the prestige attached outweighs this consideration.

"Is it not the privilege of a chief to be generous?" say the Bella Coola.

He approaches the parents of those whom he has selected, always members of old-established families. As it is to the [553] social advantage of a young person to be a susaok, a father usually tells X a susaok name, dormant in his family, which he wishes to have conferred on his son, and how much he is willing to contribute for the purpose. In many cases, a man will [426] [11] In spite of the care exercised, mistakes are frequent, giving rise to hurried borrowings from friends to make up the necessary amount.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 This is presently heard. Y may be in his own house, but at
* 556 once any number of susaok rush in and conduct him, concealed 575 in their midst, to the back-room of X's dwelling. All the susaok of the village begin to gather there; those who are not members of the society are also free to enter the main part of the house, though they cannot take any part in the proceedings. They lurk near the door, watching with interest mixed with [781] fear, and ready to flee if the danger from supernatural beings seems too acute.

After some delay, a whistle is heard at intervals, gradually becoming louder as if the supernatural being, of which it is the voice, were coming nearer. Presently it sounds immediately outside the door, and a siki rushes forth. He returns in a moment, followed, amid the breathless excitement of the uninitiated, by a figure masked as a bird or animal. The design [532] represents Y's crest, or some creature with which one of his ancestors came in contact, and which is therefore regarded as having the same sociological importance. A member of the society has carved the mask, another wears it, but this the uninitiated do not know.

[776] "It is a tutwinam,"[13] they gasp.

The figure crosses the house and bends down beside the singers to whom it appears to be whispering. Presently they begin, softly, to tap out a song in rapid time as if the supernatural visitor had just taught it to them. It is divided into two or three parts and the theme is taken from Y's ancestral myth.[14] After two or three rehearsals, the singers beat out the time more loudly and accompany it with their voices, while [535] the masked figure dances. A number of older susaok accompany the performer as he whirls around the house; it is pretended that this is necessary to shield the spectators, though the real function is to guide the dancer whose sight is handi-

[13]Meaning, "What is displayed," or, "A materialization."

[14]If the neophyte is a son or other near relative of the chief who is giving the potlatch, the theme may consist of boasting references to the goods about to be distributed. This is customary for X himself if he performs as a susok at the actual ceremony.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 adopted, probably as a prerogative obtained through mar-575 riage, from the Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people. The diver-177 sity in ritual supports this view. There was not sufficient [776] time for the procedure to become stabilized between the introduction of the concept and the dislocation of Bella Coola social life through the influence of the white man. It is also possible that the tutwinam was added to sisaok rites from the older a'alk society (I, p. 273).

532 Whatever may have been the history of the tutwinam, it
* 556 provides Y with a mask, or with two, if two figures have ap-575 peared. He guards them jealously, though secretly, throughout his life and uses them only on rare ceremonial occasions.
[769] It is one of these masks which will be brought out if one of his family gives a dramatic representation of his return after death.
[428] A mask of this type is sometimes willed, but the legatee alters the design before using it.

* 556 A short pause follows the singing of the second, or third, 575 song, during which some chief or chiefs may make a laudatory speech concerning Y's family history. Then the singers again [537] sing the first song, and sisaok members of the audience join in.
[533] Similarly, the second song is practised. These two are sung, time after time, until the sisaok have thoroughly mastered them. When the singers consider that this has been accomplished, they tell X, who communicates with the sisaok man outside who has the whistle, and again its eerie notes are heard.
• [781] Some of the uninitiated, believing that the supernatural being who gives potency to the ritual is at hand, hurriedly leave in fear. At the same time some of the sisaok conduct to the back-room the second initiate whose songs are to be sung that night. The procedure in his case is identical with that described for Y. Usually it is considered sufficient to seclude two on one night, though three may be attempted. When the songs of the last have been sung, food is distributed and the people disperse.

A few nights later the same ritual is repeated for two more initiates, who join their predecessors in the back-room. Here they spend their time in idleness, the only essential being the turns, clad in his ceremonial costume, including a long cape with pockets. With him come the four or five young men who have just finished dancing. The singers beat time furiously with their sticks, and the siki whirls round and round, working himself into a frenzy with twists and gyrations. Gradually, he approaches one of the initiates, and pretends to pluck something from his body. As he opens his hands the spectators see that there is something in them, what exactly, they cannot distinguish. Only those who are susook understand that, whatever it is, it has been palmed from one of his cape pockets. He pretends to throw this object upwards, at the same time slipping it back into his cape. As the article is, theoretically, thrown aloft the sound of whistling is heard, which grows weaker and weaker till it finally ceases. Meanwhile the heralds discourse loudly with one another about how the "eagle" or whatever it is, has been extracted, and is now returning above. The same procedure is repeated for the other initiates. This concludes the night's ceremony. Food is distributed and the people disperse. 556* 575 789

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The employment of a foreign siki to expel the power from the initiates is necessary since this particular prerogative is not native to Bella Coola. Formerly the expulsion was done in the back-room without any elaborate ceremony. This rite marks the admission of initiates into the susook society although they cannot yet leave the back-room. It must be understood, however, that a youth may be initiated several times, on each occasion receiving new songs and perhaps a different mask. In this way his prestige as a susook is increased, and the son of a powerful chief will often be initiated ten or more times. A mask so acquired is preserved in concealment as the personal property of the owner who may use it at potlatches on future occasions. It will be the guise in which a dead person returns to visit the living. After being used for this purpose, a mask may be burnt, or willed to a near relative of the deceased, who slightly alters the painting before using it himself. [424] [177] 556* 575 [422] [532] [428]

It is somewhat difficult to understand the attitude of those [781]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 575 781 watching either the masked dancer or a representation of the deceased. Usually, the feet are plainly visible, and the spectators cannot fail to realize they are looking, not at an eagle or other supernatural creature, but at a man. Yet no one ever expresses this doubt. It must be remembered that all are firmly convinced of the close relationship existing between denizens of the land above and members of the sisaok society. To the uninitiated this is proved by the whistling. They regard the figures as supernaturally endowed representations of those beings with whom the participants are able to come in contact. A sophisticated Bella Coola likened their attitude to that of a man praying before images of the saints, fully realizing that these are only inanimate statues, yet mentally experiencing a feeling of close contact with the saints themselves. Another expressed it thus:

"The uninitiated are trained to believe what they see. It would be most improper for them to voice any doubts, in fact they do not have any, so firm is their belief in the supernatural power of the members of the sisaok society."

This last appears to be the real explanation. Everyone must have his or her doubts, but each is afraid to express them, realizing that so doing would not only offend the chiefs, as individuals, but the supernatural powers with whom they are in touch, which is obvious from the whistling that accompanies the ceremony. It appears that the uninitiated have no idea how this is produced.

CONCLUDING CEREMONIES AND OBSERVATIONS

*556 575 The number of sisaok initiates is usually too great to allow all to dance on one night. If possible, this is done; but if not, on the following evening more of the initiates perform in the manner already described. The distribution of presents and the expulsion of power from the young sisaok also follow the same lines. If many of them are secluded, three, or even four, nights may be required until the last one has danced, and the last cleansing has been performed.

[789]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the hole in the roof, ponderously and slowly, until its talons grip the "body." In the same gradual fashion it carries this upwards until, just before the burden disappears through the roof, one of the principal singers leads his fellows and the audience in calling out: 575 766

"Ye..," which has the significance of, "May you have a safe passage whence you came and whither you are going."

As soon as the bird has disappeared, its notes are heard from above, growing gradually fainter as the actors blow their whistles less violently. An eloquent sisaok stands up and expounds how the deceased's crest has come down from above to carry away his body, and often mentions incidents in the ancestral myth to explain why this bird had appeared. A young man is sent up to replace the roof boards and the hidden accomplices rejoin the audience unostentatiously. The corpse itself remains hidden in some back corner of the house where it was concealed at the time the dummy was seized, so that nothing indicates what has taken place.

The relatives must give presents to all who have witnessed this ceremonial prerogative. These are now distributed without regard to the rank of the recipient; such gifts are not returnable and are said to be, "What Has Been Shaken Off," like dust from the departing body. A meal, likewise provided by the kinsmen of the deceased, is next served, and as the people are eating, it is customary for senior sisaok to make laudatory speeches, extolling the dead chief and comforting the survivors by reminding them of the way in which he will be looked after in virtue of his ancestral traditions. This procedure may continue for several hours, and it is only when no one else wishes to speak that the people disperse. [556] [537]

It is not easy to comprehend the attitude of the Bella Coola to this rite. Some influential sisaok state emphatically that in former days it was possible to carry it out so realistically that the uninitiated were deceived, and never suspected that the actual corpse was later on buried in secret by the singers, carpenters, and sisaok. On the other hand, those who do not 575 766 781

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 766 781 wish to emphasize the importance of this society, state that the deception was always apparent, and that even the hooks and ropes by which the figure was manipulated could be seen. Still others regard the ceremony as a symbolic means of portraying the manner in which a man's crest comes to carry away his spirit and life. It seems clear that different interpretations must always have been accepted by different [184] members of the community. A young and ingenuous uninitiated, steeped in the atmosphere of the supernatural, may well have believed that he was gazing upon an actual supernatural being, as the senior susaok desired him to do; others must have recognized that a deception of some kind was being practised, but dramatization is such an important factor in Bella Coola life that individuals often disregard the difference between semblance and reality, and it is contrary to custom for a person to cast aspersions upon the prerogative of another. It is easy for such an one to accept the drama as a symbol or representation of the manner in which the crest carries off the intangible elements of the dead. This is certainly the attitude of the Bella Coola at the present time. Everyone realizes that the crest is of human manufacture and that the corpse itself is not carried away, but the rite is still performed and gratifies the survivors by giving them an opportunity to display their prerogative and the cloak of the deceased's ancestor.

575 766 Perhaps because of its relatively recent introduction, details of the performance of this rite are not fully standardized In some cases, the crest is made to appear at the same time as Mulakila, instead of at a subsequent ceremony. It is [424] assumed that the origin of the rite is in some ancient myth in which the body was actually taken above by the crest, an act copied, with the aid of carpenters, by the descendants [773] of the person to whom this occurred. There are no myths of this nature current in Bella Coola, although it is thought that such must have been common among the peoples of the outer coast to explain the prevalence of the practice in that area. [424] One old man mentioned that an Owiki myth in which a

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER IX

RELATIONS WITH THE SUPERNATURAL

Introductory—Sterile Apparitions—Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate—Supernatural Good Luck—Shamanism—Direct Revelations from the Supreme God—Power Localized in Certain Spots—Dreams

INTRODUCTORY

THE aspects of Bella Coola life thus far described have been principally of a nature which might be experienced by any member of the community. On the other hand, contact with supernatural beings is a privilege granted to individuals without respect to rank; even arduous appeal cannot assure it. The few to whom signal favours are granted acquire a position of importance totally different from that of chiefs. The Bella Coola are firmly convinced that supernatural beings abound in the mountains and forests of British Columbia, and that every activity of human life is governed by them. Not only do these creatures include monsters of the imagination, but birds, animals, and fish; even the activities of the human mind are considered to be beyond the scope of normal life. Ancient stories describing the actions of strange creatures and conversations between man and animals are accepted as truthful accounts, so that it seems obvious to the Bella Coola that his ancestors were more powerful than he is today. Never considering the possibility of errors in his stories, he accepts the alternative hypothesis that mankind has sadly degenerated from the golden age. Nevertheless, he assumes that the beings have not altered, and consequently hopes to encounter them on every occasion. Moreover, this firm background of belief makes it easy for him to recognize supernatural influence in events which a white man would consider to be natural. It is impossible to over-emphasize this concept.

787 * [554] 787 * 776 [828] [538] 781 ●

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*787 Dances portraying supernatural beings, carried out with [535] full vigour until a few years ago, further fostered belief in [781] them among participants and uninitiated alike. Consequently, many of the young and middle-aged men claim to have seen visions similar to those of their elders. The incident already described (I, p. 30) of the stump which was thought to be a grizzly bear is a case in point. On another occasion a young man mentioned casually that a few evenings before he had seen a headless man walking along the road and that, wishing to view the monstrosity more clearly, he had tried unsuccessfully to strike a match. The reason was obvious to him; the power of the supernatural visitor prevented the match from lighting. The man, who was undoubtedly convinced of the apparition, may have seen something, perhaps a whorl of fog, somewhat resembling a headless body. A white man would have con- [154] sidered such a sight impossible and absurd, whereas the Bella Coola felt little surprise at the appearance of such a creature and promptly accepted it for what it seemed to be.

[828] Mental activities as well as optical illusions are likewise ascribed to supernatural agency. These include profound agitations of the mind, and even what a white man would consider a passing thought. For instance, one morning when about to start work, a certain man stated that he would have good fortune during the day, that a dream had foretold it. At the time he was moving to a new house and needed help to shift a heavy stove. During the course of the day a number of white men happened to pass by and stopped to speak to him; the stove was mentioned, they offered to move it for him, and did so easily and quickly.

"There you are," said the man, "I told you I was going to have good fortune today."

On another occasion the same man claimed to have felt that misfortune had happened to him and soon learnt that one of his sons had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The man affirmed that he had this premonition before being aware of its cause.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The explanation of these manifestations of the supernormal, 787*
for such they are considered to be, lies in the conviction that 811 every activity of the mind is due to supernatural causation, 828
the functioning of the spirit. In the round of daily life there 774 are always good and bad incidents; the person who wakes expecting to meet one or other before nightfall recognizes the fulfilment of his premonition in some small occurrence, and narrates it to his fellows as proof of what he had told them in the morning. In case of some major event, such as death or disaster, the Bella Coola assume that some previous indication must have been given. Looking back after the event, a man easily persuades himself that he "felt" a warning, and is more than ever convinced that his spirit, the cause of his thoughts, 774 has supernatural ability.

Conviction in the near presence of the supernatural has had 177
somewhat surprising results with regard to Christian Bella 787*
Coola. A man converted in middle life carries all the fervour and realism of the old religion with him to the new, and feels 781 ● thoroughly familiar with the atmosphere of the Old Testament. 797 Visitations, such as therein described, are similar to those experienced by his fathers and himself, and he scorns the white man who questions their literal accuracy. He continues to hear the voices of supernatural beings, and to interpret mental 828 pictures as visions, but he ascribes them to the beings of the white man's religion. The following is a rather striking illustration of this point:

A number of years ago a devout Christian, who may be 159 designated X, was a patient in the hospital at Bella Bella. In 177
the same ward was a young Bella Bella lad whose sickness refused to yield to treatment. X, becoming interested in his 787* neighbour, began to ponder about his condition, until presently 781 he felt convinced that the sufferer would be better by seven o'clock the following morning, and told him so. A marked 797 improvement was noticeable by the time predicted, but the white doctor foolishly (according to X) gave his patient some

159
177 more medicine and he became worse. The same thing happened
* 787 on the following day. The sick boy grew steadily worse until, nine days later, he felt that he was dying and asked X to help ● 781 him.
797 "No," replied X, "I am no doctor. But you will be all right. I see Holy Ghost, Holy Spirit, Baptism, and Believe-it [Faith?] by your bed. Repent and you will be saved."

X added that the Bella Bella saw and repented before his death so that he has undoubtedly been saved.

X is a friend of the writer's and a man with whom he worked for a number of months and whom he feels that he knows intimately. He is almost invariably truthful, and any falsehoods he uses are clumsy and easily detected. In this case there is no doubt but that he believes he saw these four figures as four white human beings. He was in an emotional condition at the time, hoping and expecting to see something of the kind. In earlier days he would have seen supernatural beings of the Bella Coola pantheon with equal conviction. On quite another occasion, when he was preaching, the same man felt what seemed to be a heavy drop of water fall on his head. He was in the open at the time and, looking up, was surprised to find nothing from which it could have fallen. He realized that it must have been power which had come to him, and forthwith he began to preach as he had never preached before. He expected supernatural assistance, and the belief that it had been granted to him undoubtedly strengthened his efforts.

* 787 All Bella Coola are not equally liable to visions and mental 781 visitations. Some, such as X, are constantly experiencing them, whereas others of more stolid disposition do not feel the 159 presence of the supernatural to the same extent. None the less, beings of the other world are constantly around them and, before the introduction of Christianity, it is unlikely that any individual passed through life without coming in contact with some manifestation of the supernatural. Consequently, stories
* 787 descriptive of this are intelligible to the Bella Coola, bizarre

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 789 cealed cord succeeded in drawing feathers, previously placed on the surface, around in the direction in which she was dancing. It was impossible to learn the details of the method employed in this trick. The subterfuge was long ago practised by a shaman.

A simple but effective trick was the substitution of a baton made of light maple wood for one of the heavy type used by the singers. The real stick had been passed around the audience and apparently returned to one of the singers, though in reality the false one had been given to him. As he beat time the hollow sound that emanated was a source of surprise to the uninitiated spectators, nor was their wonder lessened when a real baton was again handed around, as if it were the one that had been in use.

[178] According to an informant, the last time that a supernatural being helped the person on whom it had conferred shamanistic power to perform a rite of this kind was about 1870. A man who had fallen from his canoe into the ocean was rescued, but for a long time was ill as a result of exposure. [776] [787] River Measurer, the supernatural being who governs the height of tides in the river, appeared and made him a shaman with the ability to cure through the use of a wash-basin. As this shaman danced, he had a large box filled with water. Presently he called on one of the uninitiated to examine the height of the water and point out to his fellows how high it was. A little later he called a second man who likewise indicated on the outside of the box the height of the liquid within. It had fallen, though its disappearance seemed inexplicable.

• 781 789 The above furnishes a good example of the attitude of the uninitiated. The informant, a very intelligent Bella Coola, gave a number of instances of the conjuring methods employed, some of which he had helped to carry out. Unquestionably, this was of the same nature, yet, because he was deceived at the time of its performance, he readily believed that the rite was supernatural; since then he had never thought of doubting

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

it. The uninitiated are so steeped in the atmosphere of belief that any simple conjuring trick is sufficient to delude them. 781 789

Finally, the following account is here inserted, though the details of the performance could not be learnt.

The father of an elderly Bella Coola was once so sick that no one could help him. He had coughed up blood, eagle down had been heaped on his body, and hope had been abandoned. Then a sisiutl came to him, restoring his health and making him a very powerful shaman. His supernatural visitor had told him to employ his power beneficially, and had further instructed him in the use of a rod wherein it lay. Whenever this man danced, a stick, decorated with bands of cedar-bark wound spirally, was hung horizontally from the roof of his house. He carried one similarly embellished, but smaller, about two and a half feet long and three inches in diameter, having at one end a tuft of bark. During his dance, in which he sang of sisiutl, he went under the suspended stick, held the small one in his hand, blew on one end of it, then threw it up so that it struck the large hanging one. This was presumably done by the tuft of bark folding over and catching in some way. Again he danced and, when underneath where the two sticks were suspended, he jumped up, and caught the lower end of the smaller with his hands. This supported his weight, and he swung back and forth on it until he voluntarily released his grip and dropped. When next he danced at the same spot he held out one hand with palm uppermost beneath the smaller stick; the other was held in front of his mouth pointing towards the suspended one. He blew on the latter as if blowing dust from his hand to the point of contact of the two sticks, and the smaller dropped into his outstretched hand. 756* 789

By means of this stick the shaman could cure diseases. When told in what part of the body the pain was situated he pressed on that part with one end of his stick. Then he carried it to the fire and held in the smoke the end that had been in contact with the sickness. He puffed twice at it with his 755 756*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Furthermore, throughout the ceremonial season, the uninitiated have ocular demonstrations of the powers with which the kukusiut are associated. At frequent intervals they are invited to the house of the dancer where, with wonder, fear, and awe, they see strange creatures. Although they may recognize that some of these are only their fellow-tribesmen in strange form, they have no idea how such transformations are produced, and ascribe them to supernatural assistance. They accept the strange designs of the figures as proof that the kukusiut have been in contact with unfamiliar beings. It seems clear that the uninitiated do not realize that the representations are produced by means of masks, the work of human hands; instead, they believe that the figures displayed are really those of supernatural patrons who have come to earth to assist their protégés. It must be remembered that these dances take place within large houses, only partially illuminated by a flickering central fire, which facilitates deception and conjuring tricks, quite apart from the credulity of the observers. 575* 796 781 [354]

The uninitiated may sometimes suspect that the performers are not real supernatural beings, but there is no question of their firm conviction concerning the changes which come over the kukusiut at this time. One member of the society, for example, may begin to act in a peculiar manner and at once the uninitiated are ejected from the house. From without they listen with mixed fear and excitement to the strange noises which they do not know are made by whistles, and presently the kusiut rushes forth in a frenzied state, biting those he meets. The uninitiated know that he is a Cannibal, doing as his patron above is doing, and that a call from the latter has caused him to become mad. When the kukusiut have subdued him and taken him back to his house, the non-membersh ear more strange and inexplicable sounds, which appear to go upwards, and presently the news is circulated that the Cannibal has been carried away to the land above. He is seen no more for several weeks, and when next he appears he is thin, wan, and bald, because the high winds of the land above have blown 575* 781 787 796

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the ●781 dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sym-
[787] pathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut 778 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the performance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 787 equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor 424 must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskāsiutsta (also called nuxi'ipsta), by the supernatural woman Ăno'likwolsaix.
Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ăno'likwolsaix; she is one,
yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots,
corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ceal their subterfuges, it sometimes happens that an uninitiated person sees or hears something which he should not know. The simplest way to deal with this situation is to kill the observer. It is said that as late as 1900 a young man, impelled by curiosity, wandered up a valley into which he had been warned not to penetrate, and met a Cannibal whom he believed had vanished into the upper realms. Almost dumbfounded, he accepted the latter's invitation to sit down, and was slain by him. More often, and especially if the observer is the child of a kusiut, he is initiated into the ranks of the society. If this happens at any time of year except the actual ceremonial season, he cannot perform immediately, but he is taken to the secret meeting place of the village chiefs, and there the mysteries of the organization are explained to him. The uninitiated are told that the observer has had a shaman's experience. With the aid of the older kukusiut he then performs a dance and conjuring feat of the type already described (I, p. 564), and is secluded until the next autumn, meanwhile wearing the distinctive collar of a shaman. In the songs used on this occasion no mention is made of a wash-basin, so of course the lad only performs ceremonially. When winter comes he is formally initiated into the society.

It is somewhat difficult to understand and explain the sentiments which lead a young man to obey rigidly the dictates of the senior kukusiut in deceiving his former friends. If it becomes known that a youth has seen something which should have been concealed, the senior kukusiut of his village meet in their ceremonial spot and decide that he must be put through the shaman's rite. Some relative of the youth is always ready to provide the necessary kusiut prerogative; otherwise he would have to be killed. Two or three members are then sent to catch the young man. On some pretext they lure him into the woods and then carry him away, struggling in fear, to the holy of holies, the place which he had been told to avoid since he would die if he penetrated to it. Here he finds all the seniors of his village, seated with grave expressions on

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

*575 their faces. In spite of what he may have seen, the lad cannot 781 rid himself of the supernatural fears with which he has been 626 inculcated from childhood, and the experience is terrifying to a degree. It may be that he has seen some of the whistles, and thereby learnt that the strange sounds are made by men, not by supernatural beings. In this case he is shown their mechanism in detail, and warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells others of his knowledge. Fear impels him to silence, and at the same time he realizes that what he has discovered has placed him in a superior position to that of his former associates. He feels, too, that he has been admitted into the ranks of the society in which his father, grandfather, and ancestors have distinguished themselves, and that it would be execration to make light of what they have held sacred. Finally, an initiate does not at first grasp the fact that all the rites are deceptions, and by the time that this is apparent to him he has become so thoroughly a part of the organization that he has no thought of betraying his associates, upsetting a vital part in the complicated fabric of Bella Coola life, and exposing himself to ruin and death. A logical white man might think these considerations insufficient, but the existence of the society proves that the varied motives operate so strongly that a young man does keep silence. Some informants state that hypnotism was formerly used to ensure obedience.

[828]

*575 The kukuriat are always ready to deal with an emergency 176 such as sometimes occurs in spite of every precaution. It is 781 remembered that about one hundred and fifty years ago during 424 a dance at the village of Naqāmāit, a figure, representing one of the supernatural beings, had the misfortune to drop his mask, the strings by which it was tied having worn through. The house was crowded with uninitiated to whom the deception at once became apparent. For a moment there was wild confusion; but the senior kukuriat rose to the occasion and closed the door, allowing no uninitiated person to leave. Then a kuriat was sent out with a whistle which he sounded as if the supernatural being of which it was the voice was growing

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

nearer and nearer, till finally a thump was heard on the roof. 575*
O....., cried out the kukuriat, "it is my patron." 176

The uninitiated were told that in consequence of the disaster, the supernatural beings had sent calls to this earth for all within the house. Even small children were admitted on this occasion. Those kukuriat in whose families were dormant prerogatives at once explained to their relatives that the call was from the patron of one of these, and that henceforth the person addressed was a protégé of that being. But even with the assistance of all the kukuriat, there were not sufficient privileges for all who had seen the accident. The explanation hastily agreed upon for those who could not otherwise be provided with prerogatives, was that a supernatural being mentioned in the myth from which the uninitiated had derived his ancestral name had come as patron. Repositories were stated to exist in various places near the village for the designations thus created, and order had been restored before morning. This event was described by so many informants that its historical accuracy can hardly be challenged. Those so initiated were said to have become "kukuriat under easy circumstances"; as prerogatives they had merely the right of singing about their respective patrons, not of performing any particular dramatic dance, but they were, none the less, fully qualified members of the society. The prestige and influence of this organization can be estimated by the fact that it was thus able to carry through a wholesale initiation without its secrets becoming known in adjacent villages. Those admitted, though realizing that deception was being practised, were so overawed by the other members of the society that they accepted what was told them without question, entirely failing to use their common sense. Thus, this incident, which had at first threatened disaster, ultimately reacted to the advantage of the kukuriat. It is true that their prestige was somewhat diminished by the admission of young people, but in compensation they claimed many new patrons, including several regarded with veneration owing to their occurrence in ancestral myths. Since the latter 575*
176

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Not knowing where to go nor what to do, he hid himself on a small island within sight of the village whence he could see and hear the people seeking him. At times some of his hahaiat friends came close, calling his name; but not till he was driven to do so by hunger did he reveal his hiding-place. Then he answered the shouts of two men who at first pretended they were merely seeking him because of the worry his prolonged disappearance was causing his parents. Once the lad was within their group they carried him swiftly to the house of one of the chiefs, where he found himself seated among the most influential men of his village with the door barred behind him. The fear which any youth would feel in like circumstances was increased greatly by the awe with which he, as an uninitiated person, regarded the hahaiat, especially on this occasion when he knew that he had roused their anger. 575* [781]

"What did you hear?" asked one of the marshals. The lad was too terrified to lie, so he blurted out all the gossip he had overheard, including the news of the death of the Rivers Inlet Cannibal.

"You have heard too much, you must join us," continued his questioner.

The same man then asked one of his relatives whether he would "buy" the lad from them, that is, whether they would provide the necessary goods to have him initiated. It was understood that through his improper knowledge he had come under the jurisdiction of the hahaiat and that, unless made one of them, they would kill him. The lad was the protégé of his uncle who at the time was initiating him into the naxnox ceremonial, and who accordingly was most unwilling to have his nephew made a hahaiat. [688]

"Let him be a spy," said the uncle.

After much discussion this proposition was agreed to; the decision was facilitated by the fact that one of the lad's ancestors had been a spy. All night he was kept sitting in the centre of a group of elders who revealed to him the mysteries of the organization and showed him the whistles and other regalia. For twenty years this man remained a spy, dutifully informing upon any over-inquisitive, uninitiated person.

The informant was more than sixty years of age when he related this incident, but the passage of time had not caused him to forget the utter terror and feeling of inferiority experienced when he was taken into the presence of the senior hahaiat. [781]

Although every hahaiat assists in preserving the dignity and awe of the society, this duty is especially the function of those members who are regarded as the earthly representatives of 575* 424 776

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

though the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kuxiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kuxiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor. 575* 424 425 553 [556] [578] [426]

(2) A Patron, emātus. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukuxiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform. 575* 424 776 [533] [535] [578]

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Ăsu'lkuxlaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each. 575* 424 778

Although the kukuxiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time [773] [781]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 424 773 778 [781] this undoubtedly leads them to believe in the powers which they claim. Each kusiut prerogative has had one of three origins:

(a) It was brought down by the first people. Before coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his patron, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest men were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

[787] (b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes altered an ancestral to a kusiut name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases each followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[1] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described [184] this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nuwadjignum, a male supernatural being sent down by Alquntlem at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Ano'kiwelsaix and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a kusiut is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out *575 the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his 778 forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither error nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent

[1] The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

through the motion of throwing it to his partner; the crystal disappears! It has been palmed out of sight at the instant of throwing, but the presumption is that it has entered the other siki who falls to the floor as if stricken down by the powerful object given to him. Now one of the kukusiut, who has been primed for the duty, strikes the recumbent man on the back, restoring him to consciousness. Slowly he pulls himself together, rising at intervals as if crushed beneath a heavy weight, and writhes until he finally produces a rock crystal from his stomach, as if it had been thrown to him. In reality it is his own which he has carried concealed from the beginning of the ceremony. He pretends to throw this to X, often so realistically that the novice blinks, expecting some object to strike him. All this time a kusiut, it does not matter who, has been drinking water at intervals and spitting it out over the face of X, "to strengthen him." When X has received the stone, the beating on the floor-boards, stilled during the transference of the crystal, breaks out again with full din. After a short interval the first siki stops the noise, goes through the same contortions and produces, apparently from his stomach, another rock crystal, which as before he throws across to his partner who falls down, and later passes it to X. Again the beating on the floor is started. The same ritual is carried out until four, or sometimes only two, rock crystals have been given to X. Then the procedure is reversed. The second siki goes to the novice and after much contortion draws from his stomach one of the crystals, which he pretends to throw back to his partner. As the latter makes the motion of catching it, he produces his own crystal which he, so it seems, forces into his own body. This is done for all the crystals (see Plate 4).[1] At this juncture the uninitiated are told to leave.

575* 791 796

One of the siki now kneads the back of X's neck and goes through the motions of pulling something from it. The frightened youth realizes that his spirit is being drawn from him and his terror, great in any case, is not lessened by the siki taking it in his cupped hands to the fire where he scoops up

[774] [781]

[1] [see category 116, p84(b) – ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 791 796 [774] [781] some ashes which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course he masticates only the ashes but X, unaware of this, is concerned for the fate of his spirit. At last it is restored to him and he is told that the siki has altered it from that of an uninitiated person to that of a kusiut.[11] The psychological effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the siki is tremendous.

The first siki now instructs two kukusiut sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the siki announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, peering here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle [534] is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call; but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a goat or bear bladder-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

*575 796 "Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two kukusiut on whom X is sitting.

If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, [688] and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the fire. His father, or whoever it [425] may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up [553] and unfolds its origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes re-

[178] [11]This part of the rite has been omitted for so many years that many of the middle-aged kukusiut have forgotten it.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

prohibitions that last not for one year, but for four. X is not subject to any other restraints. If he wishes to go hunting he can remove his cedar-bark collar and hang it for convenience in the forest near his village, redonning it on his return. The kukusiut show considerable interest in their new member, not only by warning him what he must not do, but by teaching him how to dance and to growl or make other of the necessary, but unusual, noises. During the remainder of the ceremonial season X is required to attend every kusiut dance, thereby learning much of the ceremonial, and during the following summer his relatives, especially if food is plentiful, frequently invite the kukusiut to their house. The singers beat out well-known tunes, or practise those which will be required for the following winter; if a song has been composed for X he dances in time to it, in the style proper to his prerogative. Formerly, when there were many novices, dances of this type took place frequently and were useful in giving constant practice to singers and neophytes alike. As no calls from supernatural patrons can come at this time of year, it follows that all such dances are of a non-sacred nature, although the uninitiated are excluded. During his period as a novitiate, X has one privilege; he can take food from anyone at any type of ceremony. It is remembered that one novice was even bold enough to take food which had been placed as an offering for the dead.

575* 784 [524] [525] 575* 533 535 575* 264

When the next kusiut season opens, X attends every performance. This is probably the most thrilling and nerve-racking period in his life. He does not know exactly when he will be allowed to give his dance, since that is a matter of arrangement between his relatives and the marshals, but he knows that the time will soon be at hand. When the great day, or rather night, actually comes, X is usually in a state of abject terror. The rite itself does not differ from those about to be described except that the first song relates the manner in which X found the repository. But the mental attitude of X differs greatly from that of an old performer. One informant,

575* 781● 796

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 a woman about sixty years of age, vividly recalled her fears 781 when she, a young woman, gave her first performance. It was 796 the Dance of Winwina (II, p. 187), in which she had to call out loudly when a large number of uninitiated persons, including Carrier Indians, were present. One of the marshals was her great-uncle and he had carefully taught her what she was to say. A few minutes before the time for her announcement he came to where she lay hidden in an enclosure behind the fire:

"Do you see your relatives here?" he said. "Look at your father, your mother, and your uncles. If you fail to say what you are expected to say, they will all die in a few weeks, and so will you. Be bold!"

The woman asserted that it was the most terrifying experience in her whole life because, though she knew there was [688] deception in the rites, she also knew the power of the society and that the threat of death in case of error was no idle one. She was so frightened that she forgot the carefully learnt words and it required the prompting of the hidden marshal to get her through the ordeal.

But once the first rite has been successfully negotiated, it is a proud day for the novice. He feels himself a real kusiut and glories in his superiority over his former associates. For the rest of the season he, like everyone else who has performed a dance, must attend every rite. Energetic novices sometimes give their dances on two, or even three, successive years, though usually a man allows five or six to elapse between displays.

*575 If X should die during the year's interval between his ini-
766 tiation and his first dance, he is secretly buried by his fellow kukusiut without the customary mourning rites, and with no [533] uninitiated persons present at the grave. His song, if one has been composed for him, is sung softly, and he is interred adorned with his collar of dyed cedar-bark. During the next ceremonial season, that at which he should have danced, it is necessary for a brother, or other near relative, to receive a call since it is felt that a dance once begun must be completed,

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 *796 the affair, and so many differences of opinion are voiced that it is often difficult to understand how the ritual can be carried out as smoothly as it is. The masks are tried on, adjustments in the rope fastenings made, and final selection of the wearers approved. In fact, the summoning of the kukusiut is regarded by them as an invitation to try on the masks and it is said that *[203] [195] the herald sometimes calls them with a cryptic:

"Measure your heads, kukusiaot," the significance of which the uninitiated fail to grasp.

At last those who are to wear the masks are chosen. They conceal themselves in one of the two matting shelters, while the other is full of those kukusiut who have prerogatives as Cannibals, Scratchers, or Breakers. It is these who are most feared by the uninitiated, and if a slight accident should take [781] place they rush forth suddenly, frightening the non-members to such an extent that they fail to notice a mistake which would otherwise expose the mystery of the rites.

Meanwhile Ăno°likwolsaix at intervals sticks her head around the corner of the door to mock the uninitiated.

"You stupid ones!" she gibes. "You and you [naming two uninitiated] almost found my repository. You came so close to me that I put out my stick and tripped you up. [A safe statement since everyone stumbles over half-buried roots some time or another.] You were so blind that you did not see me. Look where you are going, keep your eyes open, and then you will become a kusiut, instead of remaining a nonentity."

The uninitiated, sick at heart over the missed opportunity, resolve to be more alert in future. Difficult though it is for [781] the white man to understand such credulity, yet different elderly informants repeatedly recalled the chagrin with which they had listened to such remarks when young. Childhood impressions of respect and fear are too deeply ingrained for doubt to enter.

At last all is ready and one of the marshals tells a kusiut to open the door and call the non-members. In they rush, to stand near the door and gaze upon the marvels with which X has been in contact. Their attitude of uncertainty as to whether they are gazing upon real supernatural beings or on representations of them has already been described, but the uninitiated do not theorize on the point—they are seeing strange sights about which X and the kukusiut know, that is enough for them. 575* 796*

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Behind the fire they see a canoe-shaped erection, a model of Noäkxnum's craft, with six or eight masked heads, his passengers, appearing over the sides. Near this are four more disguised figures, three standing and one sitting. Ano°likwolsaix ranges in the vicinity, while X himself stands behind, at intervals sweeping one arm over the heads of the strange beings and uttering a droning cry. Ano°likwolsaix explains to the uninitiated that the figures have come from afar, that they are powerful, but not to be afraid, since X's drone gives protection to them from the supernatural ones. She points to one of the figures whose mask is painted with the design of a salmon.[24] 575* 796* 532 776

"See!" she says, "There is Noäkxnum; unless he brings the salmon they cannot come to our river."

Another of the standing figures is described as Dakdakänmem, and the other as Älätlumktnum. In each case she states briefly the functions of the being. The seated figure, who wears a large hat and rests on a mat, is the Resident. Great is the mystification of the uninitiated at seeing these supernatural beings[25] normally visible only to X. How they envy him! Another frequent display is of a group of masked figures playing sleli (II, p. 382). If this has been done, Ano°likwolsaix explains that this game is of interest to the salmon and that it is therefore played in Noäkxnum's canoe. [781]

[24]There is no doubt that in former times the Bella Coola attached greater importance to the designs painted on masks than they do at present. Except for a few vague notes it was impossible to obtain information on this subject; in fact, in 1922 there was only one Bella Coola alive who understood the symbols used. This man was drunk so often that he proved an impossible informant. It is fortunate that Professor Boas recorded a considerable number of designs (op. cit.), to which the reader is referred. [177]

[25]As already described, the uninitiated undoubtedly believe that they are actually gazing upon supernatural beings.

[The Dance of Wil·a]

About dusk on the following day X, who is in his own house, suddenly stands up and cries out: 575* 796*

"Yes. It has come. I am afraid. Yes! I will do as you bid me." 787

The kukusiut women begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Heralds announce that a kusiut has been pressed to earth, and presently they go to every house inviting the kukusiut to gather in X's. From this point on, the rite of łsuxtämem continues in the manner already described.

The ability of X to summon these nine brothers from above is a special prerogative; other kukusiut have one or other of them as patron, but lack the power to call the whole number to earth. One kusiut has exclusive knowledge of the mat which is spread for Omqomkilska when the other supernatural beings summon him to a ceremony; another of the place where the brethren obtain their eagle down. Detailed information was not obtained about these ceremonies. [424]

THE CANNIBAL DANCE

Of all kusiut dances, the one of which the uninitiated are most afraid, and which is, therefore, the strongest, is the Cannibal dance. It is believed that the performer is exposed to greater dangers than in any other rite, and observers have the most spectacular ocular demonstrations of his powers. The patrons of most Cannibals are Älquntäm, Sexsexkälaix, or Kämai·ts, who implant in their protégés a wolf, bear, or eagle, causing them to devour strange foods. The Bella Coola consider that a man is equally a Cannibal whether he has the prerogative of eating corpses, biting the living, eating dogs or raw salmon, or biting himself. The most common of these is the right to bite the living, and few of the older people are not scarred thereby. Fear of Cannibals is one of the strongest causes for the respect with which the uninitiated regard the kusiut society, but though the holders of prerogatives of this type are regarded with awe on account of their powers, they are not considered as chiefs, as the Bella Coola say is the case

575* 796* 424 [981] [776] [787] [781] [171] [622]

*575 *796 tion and those quarrelling follow him as he goes to every house growling and crying xwa·, xwa·, xwa·. By the time he returns home their anger has cooled. It is then necessary to quiet X by means of the elaborate beating of sticks. This is repeated four times, while a kusiut spits violently over him.

Before leaving his own home to attend a kusiut dance, a little food is always given to X in case he should become hungry and start biting people. On qothm he always dances after the donor of the ceremony,[44] and when the kukusiut eat together he always receives his portion immediately after that of the marshals. Fear of all Cannibals is one of the most potent [626] [781] deterrents to the uninitiated, but the most dreaded are those, like X, who have just returned from the land above and may at any moment break forth into an orgy of biting. Several elderly informants recalled vividly the terror with which they regarded such a Cannibal when they were young.

The kukusiut take full advantage of the fear which X inspires in the uninitiated. On qothm nights when the time arrives for the latter to depart, they are often chased forth by the frenzy of X, or one of his fellow-Cannibals who has likewise been to the land above. X starts to call out, xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and rises to his feet; the singers at once begin to beat out one of his songs and the uninitiated hurriedly flee, while the Cannibal's guardians press close around him as he dances as if to prevent him running amuck among the frightened people crowding out of the door. As he dances and hears his song, he becomes more and more excited; he growls and only the repeated hoip of his guardians and their pressure upon the back of his neck appear to restrain him. Non-members [781] and even those kukusiut who do not understand the full mysteries of the Cannibal dance cannot fail to be impressed. The raising of the arms is supposed to inflame a Cannibal, so if it is desired still more to impress the uninitiated, one of the kukusiut lifts his arms, and is bitten by X. The heralds at once go [44] If several Cannibals have performed in a single year, the order in which they dance is subject to arrangement.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

through the village announcing what has taken place. Meanwhile X, maddened by the taste of blood, dashes from the house, closely guarded by a number of kukusiut. Growling, he enters the lowest house of the village and, to the uninitiated there, it appears as if the restraint of his guardians is all that prevents the biting demon from breaking loose among them. This is repeated at every house in the village, and then X returns to that in which qotlim is taking place, where he is guided to his usual corner and a kusiut throws cold water over him. Any senior kusiut, often one who is also a shaman, calls on those present to beat time, and the frenzied orchestra of sticks sounds forth. X remains quiet and more water is thrown over him. This pounding of sticks is four times repeated, and after each more water is thrown over the Cannibal, until at last his temporary fit of frenzy is stilled. Then the kukusiut eat in comfort and leave. It must be remembered that the uninitiated hear the beating of sticks from adjacent houses, and their awe is perhaps increased by the fact that they cannot actually see what is taking place. 575* 796* [781]

This liability to madness lasts throughout the ceremonial season, effectively suppressing any venturesome uninitiated, and at the same time serving as a bond of union among the kukusiut themselves, who must sink individual differences of opinion in face of the absolute necessity of upholding X's prestige. A Cannibal novice can likewise become frenzied at any time during the summer following his initiation. [626]

The Cannibal dance entails a considerable amount of physical and mental effort, while if X bites many individuals, as he likes to do as a means of demonstrating his prerogative, he is forced to expend a considerable amount of goods as "Bandages." These two factors often deter a man from performing this dance. A Cannibal who has just been initiated as a kusiut at once begins to bite, and is carried away to the upper regions. He is required, moreover, to give his ceremony the following winter, like any other novice. During the summer he generally remains hidden within his house, and when he goes 575* 796* 556 [431] [424]

[The Cannibal Dance]

*575 *796 ●781 [626] initiated, who have seen or heard of X's leanness, readily believe the fiction that he has returned for a meal, and has once more gone aloft. One informant stated most emphatically that this was his belief when a young man; he had been warned by his father of the seriousness of the ceremonial and told that if he should dare to speak or think disrespectfully of it, a kusiut would "grip him by the ankle causing the flesh to become rotten." During a Cannibal's absence the uninitiated remain in a state of terror, fearing that, on returning, he may chance to light beside them and devour them. In consequence, they seek refuge in their bedrooms, or at any rate in the immediate vicinity of their houses.

*575 *796 After an absence of thirty or forty days it is decided that X shall return at a certain time. During the night preceding, he washes and shaves his head to further the belief that he has been to a land where the great wind has blown away his hair as well as the dirt from his body. Several accomplices are sent out, to a mountain above the village, to a house in the valley below, and to an island in the vicinity. In the early dawn the man up the mountain drones and growls, usually four times, according to the arrangement made. The people listen expectantly. After a short pause, the man in the valley makes the same noise; no mortal could cover the distance between the two places in the time that has elapsed, but all things are possible to a Cannibal. A herald goes through the village, crying out:

"We are left behind, we are left behind."

The kukusiut dash off upstream towards the place from which the sound is still coming, but as they draw near it is stilled, only to break forth presently from the island behind them. The herald goes through the village informing everybody that:

"He has gone away."

Presently X dashes out into a clearing on the island, naked and with arms reddened; he runs around madly while an accomplice in concealment uses a whistle. The kukusiut pursue

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 placing their hands against his mouth and neck and pressing downwards to the chest as if forcing some object from his
* 796 throat, constantly uttering the cry of hoip. When the ob-
787 stacle has been driven down, X is offered his first food, choice morsels of dried salmon. He eats some of this but bites a small piece from the spoon, and does the same with the dish in which water is held to his lips. The assistance of a shaman is often required to feed the Cannibal.

The powers of, and restrictions upon, X for the remainder of the ceremonial season are identical with those already described. At the end of the period, however, the kukusiut assemble in X's house to rid him of his sqiols which, it will be remembered, had been forced from his mouth down into his chest. By means of a violent repetition of hoip and pressing with the hands, this is extracted and cast into another kusiut. As soon as the latter has received it, he acts as if he had become a Cannibal. Dashing out, he enters each house in turn, growling and calling out xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and at intervals ripping up the planking from the floor or pulling off boards from the wall. Then the substitute re-enters X's house, where the power is returned to X himself, who, this done, rushes to every dwelling and repeats the growling and destruction. Though the uninitiated realize that two different indi-
● [781] viduals have appeared as Cannibals, they are too awe-stricken to feel anything but wonder. When he gets back to his own house, X is surrounded by the kukusiut who call out hoip, in unison four times, while as many of them as can find places press upwards with their hands against his neck and throat to expel the sqiols. This succeeds in sending back X's power to the mysterious regions above whence it came. While most of the kukusiut beat time vigorously, a number of them pull down the platform and cast it into the fire. They then have a meal, while a marshal gives weighty advice about the care that must be exercised during the coming year in guarding their sacred secrets from the uninitiated; whereupon they all disperse.

[184 424] The chief contrasts between this rite and the one previously

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Scratch Dance]

obey one prohibition; he must not sleep with his wife for four days. 575* 796*

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to frenzy for the rest of the ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him, believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every kusiut dance, where his latent madness helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kimsquit or Täl·io visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Scratcher always saves goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year. [834] [828]

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his prowess. [551]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the fear which kusiut dances cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kukusiut with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land 575* 796* 424 [781] [554] [302] [533] [264]

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 *796 [424] Isaix. X is one of the few kukusiut having the prerogative of using supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy so that on both qotlum and nebusam he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making every effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their [424] exact prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favourite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either real or imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous [554] prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the unini- [787] tiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely [828] alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the kukusiut make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of either qotlum or the preliminaries of nebusam, both of which follow the usual pattern.

*575 *796 781 When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on nebusam evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked singers, of Sänoltxumulelts Ałquntäm, and of the four supernatural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the kukusiut blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fluent Änoºlikwolsaix makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the kukusiut, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most [252] houses contain a number of stones which have been used in [578] boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Kukusiut [685] who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those they do not like. No compensation can be claimed, on the theory that supernatural beings do not have to pay for any damage they may do. Although the property of some kukusiut is destroyed, the chief sufferers are the uninitiated; this serves to increase their fear and respect for the society with which such all-powerful beings are in league. After visiting every house in the village, the party returns to X's, where the masks are burnt, the call sent back, and the proceedings conclude in the usual manner. 575* 796* 781● [578] [685]

[The Breaker Dance]

A certain amount of information concerning the history of the Breaker dance was obtained from Syek, the owner of the prerogative just described. He is a well-informed man, but the writer had no opportunity of comparing his beliefs with those of his associates, so the following must be regarded as unsubstantiated evidence. This man stated that the Breaker dance is the most important of all in Bella Bella, and that many Bella Coola prerogatives have been obtained from this source, although some of their first ancestors likewise enjoyed it. He further stated that the term, noltcista, by which the Bella Coola always designate a Breaker, is of Bella Bella origin, and that the ancient Bella Coola term was dirtia.[44] Syek also told of an occasion when a number of Bella Bella, present on the qothm night of a Bella Coola ceremony, were disturbed when eating by the thud of a stone thrown, from outside, against the wall of the back-room. Out rushed a number of kukusiut, incensed at the disrespect shown to their gathering. They caught the offender, but released him when he was found to be a Bella Bella Breaker, foolishly demonstrating his prowess. The marshals decided to retaliate and arranged with two Bella Coola Breakers to exercise their rights and destroy the canoes and food-boxes of their guests. They did so, and later paid for the damage. The Bella Coola were thus able to demon- 575* 796* [115] [171] [177] 575* 796* 648 688

[44] Syek and several of his children are the only Bella Coola known to the writer who habitually use the sound "r." For example, he says "Swaleri," instead of "Swaleli." He says that he is himself unable to distinguish any peculiarity in his own pronunciation, although other Bella Coola are aware of it. [197]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

in the village announcing that a call has come to X. Meanwhile forty or fifty kukusiut have surrounded X and accompany him as he leaves his home and proceeds to the end of the village furthest downstream. He enters the lowest house, followed by his escort, and stops before the central fire to call out: 575* 796* 787

"Please say what you want; I will do it."

He circles the fire, sunwise, repeats his call a second time and leaves. The same procedure is repeated in every house in the village, in order from bottom to top, before he returns to his own home. The uninitiated are told that some power has come upon him, but that it is so strange that even he cannot comprehend it. After a short pause, X again sallies forth, accompanied as before, and calls twice in every house of the village. The same ritual is repeated a third time, but on the fourth round, which soon follows, he carries a knife in his hand. Thus it becomes plain to all that X has received power enabling him to have his stomach cut, and the kukusiut show signs of grief at the danger to which their fellow is about to be exposed. Needless to say, the delay in interpreting the call adds to the mystification of the uninitiated, and their wonder at X's power. The heralds do their part by repeating his words with their own comments. [781]

When X finally returns to his own house the heralds summon all the kukusiut to it and the customary ritual of lsuxtämem takes place. The singers beat out and practise a song composed by one of their members for X, the audience listens attentively and then practises it until all are proficient. The theme of every kusiotem song is of the land above and the supernatural beings resident there. The wordless chorus consists of wai'aiye'in, which the Bella Coola state is the refrain of all kusiotem dances up and down the coast. 575* 796* 533

The second day, nusiutälsap, a second song is composed and a party sent to the forest to bring in wood suitable for masks. In the evening part of the work is allotted[11] and the songs practised. For kusiotem dances, in addition to masks, a 575* 796* 532 [533]

[11] Some is kept for a later distribution.

Σ: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 number of puppets is always made. Certain kuhuiut, known *796 as ăuayar, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the 532 ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the [424] form of small puppets. These are sometimes patrons, more often [787] not, and include not only beings having human form, but snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, an ăuayar receives strength which can be transmitted to someone else—so the uninitiated believe—by passing it into the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers [775] death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, rein-
[787] forced by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "patron-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a [781] white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

*575 Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting.
*796 As in all other kuhuiut dances, deception is practised and X is not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's.
[281] Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must

2:McIlwraith B-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

be slaughtered before one is found with skin to mouth.[a] The marshals carefully supervise all these arrangements, but of course on this night the work alone is allowed. The entrails of several dogs are kept and worn by X between his false stomach and the wooden frame. 575* 796* [281]

After the allotment of tasks in connection with the mechanical work required, the marshals ask four women to come forward. These selected are usually old people with good voices who, from long experience at the dances, have mastered the two[b] songs used at each Kwakiutl dance. The theme of these never varies and is believed to have been handed down from the distant past. No prerogative is attached; the marshals and singers merely choose four women whom they think will be good performers. The songs resemble those sung at mourning ceremonies; in fact, they are used with that significance when X has been "killed" by disembowelling. The singers, the women chosen, the marshals, and any other Indian who feel competent to do so, discuss in an animated manner the exact wording and tunes of the songs. Then the musicians beat out the time and the women sing one after another, while the audience drums. In view of the solemnity of the occasion, it often happens that senior singers from adjacent villages are invited to be present to render assistance. The necessity for practising X's songs, apportioning the carpentry, and rehearsing the mourning songs has taken up more time than is usual on a nuxalklaxp night, and it is late before all is completed. Then, after the usual meal and admonishments, the people disperse. 575* 796* 599

Early the following morning the carpenters and those to whom work has been allotted gather early in X's house. A band, about two feet long, composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark is prepared and placed on the 575* 796* 211

[a] Informants offered no explanation as to why this wholesale slaughter of dogs failed to arouse curiosity and suspicion in the uninitiated. [281]

[b] In fact, there was difference of opinion among Bella Coola informants on this point.

J. McDowell E-5 (1912-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

* 575 The singers have also composed a song for each of the dwayas
* 786 and these too must be practised, while the men dance or remain 533 still as they think fit. Since no uninitiated are present the affair is purely a rehearsal. The words of each of these songs is of the manner in which the person helped X to survive his ordeal. By this time it is late and the kekwiat disperse after the usual meal and admonitions of the marshals.

* 575 The next day, qulem, the carpenters assemble early in the
* 786 morning to start work. Since X is entitled to portray any of 532 the supernatural beings who are companions of his patron in the land above, it follows that there is wide variation in his choice of masks to be manufactured. The principal supernatural beings are always shown, and any animals, since all are supernatural, can likewise be displayed. As usual, a few kekwiat are invited at midday to share the meal provided for the carpenters. The number of masks to be provided is often so great that two days or more are necessary for their completion, in which case no ceremony takes place on the night which would normally be qulem; the kekwiat merely gather [533] and again practise their songs.

* 575 But the day after is qulem. At dusk the kekwiat are called
* 786 in for a final rehearsal of the songs, and then a summons is sent [515] to the uninitiated, who have been washing and beautifying themselves in eager anticipation. In Kitasoo it is customary [533] to hang some of the masks on a sloping pole behind the fire and [184] the sight of these amazes the non-members. First the singers
● [781] beat out the song of one of the women mourners and the dancers
[535] in time to it, while the heralds near the door keep up a steady [534] stream of remarks, encouraging the woman to perform yet more strenuously and to have no modesty about shaking her breasts. Then another of the women dancers, followed in succession by the third and fourth if that is the number who sang the mourning songs. Next the dwayas perform, each in succession accompanying the song composed for him. Now comes the central feature of the evening, the performance of X himself. As the singers strike up the shaman's song which he is

2:M:Hewitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NES

[The Mystery Dance]

ornaments. Non-members recognize that Deer, Varied Thrush, and Wolf are really persons, but they have no idea who or what they are, while their whole training, combined with the atmosphere with which the whole ceremony is surrounded, makes it easy for them to believe that they are seeing supernaturally endowed animals. If an uninitiated person should voice his doubts, he would be reported at once to the marshals by a spy and forthwith made a Sacrist. 575* 796* 532 776 [181]

The next to come forth is a figure wearing a mask representing a man, and carrying a long stick to the end of which is tied a bundle of burning rags. The actor must be able to run swiftly, and, as he dashes at full speed around the fire, the strips of cloth are drawn out into a flaming stream behind him, producing a spectacular effect in the semi-gloom. Ax̌'ítsmlaxis explains that this is Shooting Star, a supernatural being who behaves peculiarly and who has, therefore, passed rapidly and without the drawing invitation that accompanies the passage of the other visitors. When Sqoalim i gave this dance, the rags were dipped in coal-oil to make them burn brightly, and one informant thought that this particular supernatural one was, perhaps, not shown in the old days. It must be remembered that details of the ceremony are constantly changing according to the skill and inventive ability of the carpenters. [178]

To the accompaniment of O····· from the announcer and the drawing of the women, there next emerge four masked figures representing the four Carpenters. In whatever ceremonial they appear, their masks are the same because they, as master-artisans, are supposed to have fashioned them for themselves. They dance around the fire without singing and disappear behind the enclosure. Ax̌'ítsmlaxis explains that these are Mlemxilíkus, the Carpenters of Nuxpelmaxis.

Now Opaldis Mpanáw comes forth. He is the herald of Mpanáw who summons the supernatural ones to Nuxpelmaxis for the winter ceremonial. He wears a man's mask, surmounted by a wooden bird which can be made to flap its wings by means of a hidden cord, and he carries a staff on top

[The Dance of Thunder]

575
796
776
[123]
[981]

with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming fiercely. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1922-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the kukwiat were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Rainwater-Dripping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ant'lkwulnaic explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the planking. The Clowns are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the usge remarks of Ant'lkwulnaic. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

[522]

575
796
[124]
[221]

Dances whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patrons occurs. If Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too hastily up aloft. Ano . . ."

[199]

The call of ano . . . is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any kukwiat women present at once dress, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and cases though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a kusiut. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their fears are always so strong that they never cease to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals.

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 * 796 * 182 571 [781]

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whatever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial import is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the dancers relax somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, seniors, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry.

[262] [562] [264]

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the central tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi-

575* 796* 577 293 834

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

by a marshal with a billet of firewood; such a blow was never repeated and might or might not cause death. The woman with whom the member had misdemeaned himself was either initiated at once or killed if her relatives could not provide a name and prerogative. 575* 796* 577 834

Restrictions between members of the society were less severe. Particularly during the long nights of lsxtämem and nusiutälsap, when only kukusiut were present and when men and women, often scantily clad, were closely associated, there seems to have been a certain amount of immorality. It was by no means a time of licence, nor was laxity encouraged by the marshals; intercourse between members of the society did not conflict with kusiut regulations, and was accordingly a matter that concerned the individuals alone. [688]

Relations between the actual dancers and members of the other sex were formerly governed by strict rules, rigidly enforced by the marshals. After the coming of a call, a man could hold intercourse with a kusiut, provided that he did so in his own home, but in no other. But after nebusam, when he left his house, continence was demanded until the end of the season and the burning of the enclosure-platform. The only exception to this rule was that if a second dancer received a call in the same house, the restrictions placed on the first were raised while the call was actually upon the second; that is, between lsxtämem and nebusam. After that both were subject to strict continence, unless a third call came to the same dwelling. The Bella Coola of today offer no explanation for this law, save that disregard of it was displeasing to the supernatural beings. An offender in this case was likewise punished by being struck once by a marshal. [688]

The religious aspects of the dances, as exemplified by the attitude of the Bella Coola to the masked figures and other phenomena, was described in the early part of this chapter, but additional observations may now be made. The writer realizes that the reader must find it difficult to understand how the uninitiated can be deluded into thinking that masked 575* 796* 781

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 781 figures are really beings from another world. The explanation lies in the profound belief of all Bella Coola in the near presence of the supernatural; consequently, a supernatural explanation is the one normally given for all unusual incidents. The dances themselves are filled with strange manifestations, particularly the weird whistling concerning the origin of which the uninitiated have no idea. Once convinced by this means of the presence of unknown powers, it is easy for them to believe that the masked figures are visitors from the other world. Nor was their belief in former days shaken by certain representations which were palpably false, such as that of the sun. No one could believe that the disk which moved across the back of the house was the sun itself; but on the other hand it seemed marvellous to the uninitiated, ignorant of the means used to portray it. To the white man there seems a fundamental difference between a supernatural being and the representation of a strange object made to move by unseen means, but to the Bella Coola both belong to another realm, and are accordingly akin. Moreover, there were occasions when the uninitiated must have seen the shifting or actual falling of a mask, for example, during the fight with wasps. But here again the deep belief of the non-members came to the help of the kukusiut, who told their guests that this was caused by the coming of a call to the actor, and what might easily have become doubt and suspicion was thus changed to respect.

The writer laboured under two tremendous difficulties in [178] collecting information about kusiut matters; the present dances are mere shadows of what they formerly were, and there are [123] no more uninitiated. His presence and quest for information served to stimulate interest and led to a partial revival of the old rites, but the bulk of his material was obtained from infor- [114] mants rather than from actual observation. It is a universal characteristic of mankind to idealize accounts of former practices, so it is not only possible, but probable, that the foregoing descriptions are more perfect than many of the rites to which they refer. Even when full allowance is made for this, the fact still remains that the kukusiut were able to carry out dances in which they deceived the uninitiated. Above all, it is clear that those who were not members of the society had the greatest respect for the powers of those who were, and although doubt may have existed concerning the identity of the supernatural visitors, there was not the slightest concerning the ability of the kukusiut to have, for example, their stomachs ripped open. The writer discussed this point with too many old men and women to have the slightest uncertainty on this point, and he feels confident that anyone who could have listened to the account of a reliable old man concerning his fears when he had "killed" a kusiut in this manner, would have shared his conviction.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 796* 781 114

It would be fascinating to discuss at some length the probable history of the kusiut society, but this would entail a comparison with the rites of other coastal tribes and belongs to the realm of comparative ethnology. This monograph deals only with Bella Coola practices as the writer saw them or heard them described, so that the history of the society can only be treated from this angle. It appears certain that the rites have increased in secrecy. One old marshal with whom the matter was discussed remembered having heard that long ago masks were constructed in the presence of the uninitiated. Considered as an isolated statement this would have little value, but in conjunction with information derived from Kimsquit it becomes of importance. It is true that in Kimsquit the masks are made in secret, but they are shown to the uninitiated as masks, and the writer was told of one instance in which Tlequt, during his round of the village, fell into the water and remained there all day, to the amusement of non-members who recognized that he was merely a disguised human being. It is even said that long ago the manufacture of masks was entrusted to influential uninitiated. It is clear that there has been a tremendous increase in secrecy even at Kimsquit, and a great deal more at Bella Coola. The writer believes that

575* 796* 178 184 532

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 long ago the kusiut society was composed of individuals re-
*796 garded as having supernatural endowments, and who perhaps 178 believed this themselves. In course of time their influence 184 increased to such an extent that they were able to convince
[532] non-members of the supernatural origin of objects used in their ceremonial.

[115] Unfortunately, information from Kimsquit was obtained almost exclusively from one old man, who, though a marshal well informed in kusiut matters and in many ways an almost ideal informant, had long since realized that the dances could be nothing more than representations, and it is possible that his remarks were coloured by this knowledge. Though he tended to minimize the attitude of belief with which the un-
[781] initiated regarded masked figures, yet he fully agreed with every statement made by the Bella Coola themselves with regard to the firm belief of non-members concerning the supernatural powers of the dancers. He also confirmed statements [688] respecting punishment if an error should occur, and mentioned the shooting of a Bella Bella dancer who had allowed his mask to fall during a nuask dance. As far as actual ritual is concerned, the differences in procedure between Bella Coola and Kimsquit are unimportant, and differences in belief are less than they appear at first sight. The Bella Coola kukusiut seem to have perfected their organization and to have been [781] able to impress the uninitiated to a greater extent than their Kimsquit fellows, but the fundamentals of the society are identical.

*575 Traditions concerning the early history of the society are *796 probably of little value historically, but they are important as 173 indicating the mental attitude of the Bella Coola. Considering the importance of the society there are relatively few accounts of what took place long ago; the Bella Coola know that it exists, believe that the rites are identical with those carried out by their ancestors for generations, and theorize no further. It was only in the beginning of time that things were radically different; it is believed that then all the people were endowed

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*776 According to the general Bella Coola belief the supernatural ones may be classified as anthropomorphic beings, zoomorphic beings, and supernatural members of the vegetable and mineral kingdoms.

ANTHROPOMORPHIC BEINGS

The Bella Coola agree that the most important of their supernatural beings is Älquntäm, the supreme deity, maker of men and animals. He is most commonly known by this name but he has other appellations with reference to his various functions. The word Älquntäm is said to be derived from uxquntäm, "foreman," or "chief." He is chief of the supernatural beings. Other names by which he is known are as follows:

Sunxälotla, a word derived from sunx, the Sun. This term is used almost as commonly as Älquntäm.

*776 538 Smaiaikila, "The Story Man," because Älquntäm created the ancestral myths at the same time that he created mankind. The supreme deity is called Smaiaikila with reference to his membership in the kusiut society of the supernatural beings.

Smaialotla, "From Whom Come, and To Whom Belong, All Myths." As creator of the highly valued myths, the supreme deity is owner of them.

*776 Snusälkäls, "The Wise One," "The Thoughtful," or "The One with Great Mental Ability."

[601] Mänakais, a word supposedly derived from män, "Father," with the suffix kais as a term of endearment. This is used in praying to Älquntäm.

[601] [782] Täiä, "Father," the term for father used by a child; this, like the last, is used in prayer.

Ixälqotläm.

Nenodjenostem, "The Adviser."

Sälhmsta.

Nuyukmältsaix, "The Light Giver."

O-lok di Stälhmy, "The Moon Chief."

These names are not meaningless synonyms; all, or at any

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

rate most of them, are carefully used in accordance with the 776* functions of this supreme deity. As a Bella Coola has many names, corresponding to his membership in various societies, [551] his professional prerogatives, his ancestral myths, and mere nicknames, so has Ālquntām, who is a superman, many names, according to his special functions. It would be unthinkable [782] for a Bella Coola to pray to Ālquntām, yet it is common for him to pray to Mınakais or Tätä, other names for the same being. The multiplicity of functions and designations approaches the point of obscuring the unity of Ālquntām, which in fact, some Bella Coola even deny. They state that Sınxälotla, Mınakais, Smaialotla, and Nuxekmälsaix are one, but that Ālquntām, Snusılkäls, and Nonodjonostem are three distinct supernatural beings. This seeming confusion presents no difficulties to the Indian, since each family has its own [424] myths in which such facts are recorded. He believes these, [184] without questioning those of his neighbour, and it is even possible for an individual to believe two contradictory statements, [771] if he happens to become the owner of two contradictory myths. Evidence collected in the field does not make clear whether the beliefs of the Bella Coola illustrate an incomplete transformation of a single deity into a number of minor ones, or whether they represent the almost complete fusion of a number of beings into one. Following the practice of the great majority of the Bella Coola, the supreme deity will be referred to as Ālquntām.

The most obvious attribute of Ālquntām is connected with 776* the sun. He can enter it and use it as if it were his canoe. In 821 form he resembles a man, and when he takes charge of the sun it appears as if the latter were a large, self-propelling, radiant boat with windows through which he looks forth. It is said that long ago he allowed mink to take charge of the sun, but the malicious animal ran it so close to earth that the intense heat killed almost all living creatures. When Ālquntām enters [825] the sun he wears a cloak, on the lining of which are salmon; reversing this causes the rivers on earth to teem with salmon.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

what is probably a moosehide, with salmon painted on it, symbolic of his guardianship of fish for the benefit of mankind. In other respects Nusmät·a has no peculiarities. Behind the house is an enormous tree, Tsxnsin·iaqim, in the branches of which live innumerable owls.

After this description of Nusmät·a, it is logical to return to its master, Älquntäm. Guiding the sun is his most spectacular occupation, but he also governs the movements of moon and tides. Powerful though he is, he continues to take an interest in the doings of mankind whom he created. Prayers are commonly addressed to him, and a certain type of shaman is believed to receive power direct from him. Other supernatural beings may work weal or woe to a Bella Coola, but he feels it is done with the sanction of Älquntäm. At every winter solstice he enters Nusmät·a, where supernatural beings from all parts of the universe have gathered to greet him. This assembly is called qulxwaix, and Nusmät·a is termed Nusqulxwaista[7] for its duration. While waiting, the guests perform kusiut dances, similar to those carried out by members of the kusiut society on earth (see vol. II, chap. 1). At Älquntäm's entry the heat becomes so intense that the occupants rush forth precipitately, some falling and being trampled upon in the crush. Only three[8] advisers, including Sxsxsälaix (I, p. 41), remain to confer with him. They arrange the fate of human beings during the coming year; who shall be made a kusiut, who shall be born, who shall die. In each case the decision rests with Älquntäm, though he is influenced by his counsellors. Human beings can often learn in dreams what is being decided for them.

Älquntäm, in spite of his strength, shares the limitations of any other chief, and is not invariably successful. The Bella Coola delight in telling stories of how supernatural beings, especially the Raven, outwitted and defeated him. Even [7]Often pronounced Nuqsulwaista.

[8]The exact number is uncertain.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 the top. He concluded that this must be the home of the woman. Before the door of her house, wherever it may be, there are miniature totem-poles which open their painted mouths and speak in the voice of the animal or bird portrayed. The writer did not hear that her home was in the land above [114] Nusmāt·a, as Boas (p. 28) states. At the present time knowledge of Kāmai·ts is so scanty that failure to confirm the previous observation is not surprising.

One or two passing remarks of elderly informants imply that Kāmai·ts may once have been more important to Bella Coola belief than she is now. One old man, already in his [775] dotage, stated that long ago the dead used to dwell in her house. Another declared that long ago prayers were addressed [782] to her, which is never done now. The word kāmai·ts is commonly used by the Bella Coola in a manner difficult to translate. [192] It serves as equivalent for "please" or "thank you," but has an underlying significance of a supernatural benison or appeal. It is not a word to be used in casual conversation; it is reserved for important occasions or times of emotional stress. The comparative unimportance of Kāmai·ts probably rests on the fact that she belongs merely to the realm of ancient history and has no sociological significance, even as the patron of a kusiut dancer.

772 Another supernatural being so far removed from this world
* 776 that he enters but little into the lives of the Bella Coola, is Sninia. He is the male being whom Ālqustēm sent down from above in the beginning of time to hold the earth in position, and who has since performed this duty. He lives among the ice of the far north, and has not been seen by mortals for many generations. He holds a rope fastened to the earth; when he is afraid that it has slipped slightly he takes a new grip and pulls the rope taut, pressing the world against the soles of his feet as he sits with legs extended, as a man would do to hold tight a kicking salmon. It is the tightening of the rope which [823] causes an earthquake. If Sninia should lose his grip entirely 575 the earth would capsize. He is patron for several kusiut
* 776 dancers.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

below. These are termed tally posts.* Each remained upright as long as the individual to whom it referred was alive, but fell at his death. Since that time, whenever Ałquntăm lends to a mortal sininits, the undefined power that causes life, his supernatural artisans erect in the land above a tally post for the new-born infant, marked with the bird or animal used by an ancestor. As long as this remains upright and straight, firmly fixed to the ground, its owner continues to be strong and prosperous, and has success in all his undertakings; if it becomes loose, or is crooked, he ceases to succeed. Prosperity does not depend upon the activities of an individual, but upon his supernatural possessions, spirit, tally post, and a third to be described later. If the tally post tilts far from the perpendicular, its owner becomes ill, and can be cured only by straightening it. In some cases Ałquntăm is kind enough to do this if placated by prayer and ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), and in olden days, shamans were occasionally able to penetrate to the land above for this purpose. Even when a post was reached, they were sometimes unable to set it upright, though they could always estimate the length of a man's life from its angle of inclination. In one of the kasiut dances, the performer pretends to have the ability to go aloft and the uninitiated are deceived by the erection of a tall ladder up which he climbs and disappears (II, p. 202). On his return, he reports the condition of the tally posts of various people. This performance serves to remind both members of the society and uninitiated of the existence of these supernatural elements, and of the dependence of individuals on them for success in life. In spite of this ritual, actual knowledge of the powers and functions of tally posts has been derived only from the first Bella Coola who, created in the land above, were acquainted with the mysteries of life and transmitted such lore to their descendants. One old man expressed the opinion *[illegible]. One of the names of [illegible], [illegible], refers to them, meaning, "The Place of the Tally Posts." [illegible] and [illegible] are closely associated; sometimes the latter is pronounced [illegible], although this may be an error in recording.

1: McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuskelusta, wash-basin. In the land above, Ālquntām has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Ālquntām who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Ālquntām, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed āskelusam, a word connected with nuskelusta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.[20] [20] This may be a mere rationalization.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 Shamans achieve much of their success through their ability 777 to put their wash-basins, both tangible (I, p. 560) and imma-
823 terial, in tune with Ālquntām's in the land above. One method
756 of treating a patient is by washing, with the idea that the water [755] and vessel used have potency through association with those in the upper world. It is believed that in the distant past, shamans were even able to carry their patients to the land above and wash them in Ālquntām's own basin. Such feats [551] are perpetuated in certain shamans' names, such as Ālpālye-leslaix.

773 It may be said in conclusion that although the Bella Coola 777 have indefinite ideas concerning the exact form and functions of this last element, there is a firm belief that an individual's fortune in life depends upon the activity of spirit, tally post, and wash-basin. With regard to supernatural elements as a whole, it is clear that in spite of somewhat conflicting beliefs concerning the precise functions of each, they play an important part in the life of every Bella Coola.

Means of Propitiation

782 Some of the methods employed by the Bella Coola to gain the favour of the supernatural have already been mentioned, but the subject is sufficiently important to warrant a separate section. In view of the omnipresence of supernatural beings and powers, and their influence on the lives of mortals, it is not surprising that the propitiation of them is a vital factor in human life. The chief means are prayer, sacrifice, and the observance of ceremonial chastity.

PRAYER

[776] Prayers are regularly addressed to Ālquntām who, in this connection, is known as Mnakais or Tāti, both meaning, "Father." A wise man or woman desiring success in hunting, in love affairs, in the acquisition of wealth, or in any activity whatsoever, is accustomed to ask Mnakais to grant his desire. No ritual is required. The petitioner merely seeks a lonely

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously[11] either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.[12] As he scours himself, he asks Minakais to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Alqantlm actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Minakais has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Minakais," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Minakais," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [224] [226] [785]

[11] Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance; indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently. [515]

[12] The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-smoothed river pebble. [296] [823] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-
224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Minakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Ałqwstém, under the name of Minakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Minakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
825 as Newakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qwax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Newakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on [291] many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any 424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole
821 community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemälotla. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Ałye Xemxemälotla,[a]	nuqwikdit	lhk	di xoy"nudx
Hail, Xemxemälotla,	open	the loftiest	of your heaven
sk̓ayuxamdu	dji sinxwuiqwu		xim nunudjx.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemälotla is the being who takes care of Tłäqmä·ks in the upper skyland. It is said that this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather. [776]

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [824] [785]

[a] The vocative form.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [261] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire titbits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"Wai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Menatche Nose, [133]
[756]

the point between Lekwakum Channel and Bentinck Arm, there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain.

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is Tlitsqlilits-a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, Tlitsqlilits-a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Tlitsqlilits-a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Tlitsqlilits-a.

Mesakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayers in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on any journey by canoe, the captain is careful to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Mesakais, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity.

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on presents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw

[975] small particles of food on a fire; these become large when they [972] reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Ìmskilìmset ìmskim," "This is to make weight your road, beloved one."

The needs and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, realized that food placed on the ground does not reach the [974] land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire sink through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made [959] with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach aches and other ailments.

[972] Other instances, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient fact is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a [974] large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religious prayer, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. I, chap. xv).

THE PRACTICE OF CONTINENCE (SHÌMIT)

[921] In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have [915] yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to come. This is by the practice of continence, ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is neces-

A man may receive as many prerogatives with regard to house painting that he has to continue the designs on the sides of his dwelling, or he may receive as many figures for a totem-pole that he can erect one of composite pattern. X may acquire prerogatives not only from his father-in-law, but from his mother-in-law, and if he is the husband of several wives, the family of each may contribute something. If, for some inexplicable reason, X is not given any prerogative from the family of his wife, he uses one of his own numerous myths with the names belonging thereto. A man who gives many potlatches can choose to validate numerous family names for himself, or to concentrate on one alone, elevating it to a position of great importance. But any names he validates must belong to his family; it is contrary to custom for a Bella Coola to steal a name to which he has no right.

At this, or some other suitable time, X prays for assistance in the complicated rites that are to follow. Taking four pieces of pounded and dyed cedar-bark, and four pieces of unused bark, he places on each a small quantity of food and throws the eight into the fire. Likewise he may throw in four small pieces of any kind of goods. As he does so he appeals to the supreme god:

"Please strengthen my spirit for the many duties which are before me."

Instead of praying himself, X may ask a chanter to do so for him, in the belief that the latter's supplication will be more efficacious.

The necessity for supernatural assistance lies in the fact that any serious error or disaster in the performance of potlatch rites calls for summary punishment, since X has allowed supernatural sacred knowledge to reach the uninitiated. In such a case the duty of meting out a penalty falls upon the members of a foreign tribe. Nothing is said at the time, but the departing guests take away with them information of what has happened. Great latitude is allowed as to who shall be the chastisers. The guests may be related to X and the members or a ghost, he informs a shaman of the fact and the latter notifies the relatives of the deceased. If no shaman is convenient, the shade does not hesitate to help himself. Invisible, and armed with a barbed hook, he approaches a person who is eating and pulls every a crumb which falls to the earth. Should the eater stoop to pick this up, the ghost, rattled of his booty, hears the offender with his hook, causing toothache or sometimes a sharp pain in the head or stomach. Other ailments are caused by the ghosts biting with invisible crows those who have offended them. Consequently, no one picks up a crumb which has fallen, since it is impossible to know whether it has been an accident or a sinner. Another indication of a ghost's hunger is loss of a tooth. The loss should throw it on a fire with an invitation to the dead to accept his offering.

The barrier between ghosts and human beings is considered to be little more than a wall of smoke, just too dense for ordinary eyes to penetrate. In early times intercommunication between the divisions of the two worlds was so easy that a dying mother was once allowed to send her dead child on earth. Unfortunately, the woman's mother one day insisted on holding her grandchild, unaware that he was a ghost. Startled at his appearance, the old woman dropped the child, much to the anger of the dead people.* Ever since that time it has been impossible for human beings to see and talk with their deceased kinsmen. Like so many Bella Coola stories, it is doubtful whether this one is regarded as more than an item of ancient history; it is considered to be a fact, but it is not one that occupies too the daily thoughts of the people.

Ghosts frequently come to their old homes at night where dogs can see them. If one of these animals begins to howl and growl fiercely at a spot where nothing is to be seen, it is because a wraith is standing there and the dog's owner hopes that it will remain invisible. It is true that some individuals have received shamanistic power from a ghost, but more often a relation is dangerous and to be avoided. A dead person often power in this way, but their type can be judged by the shamanistic performances hereafter described, many of which are believed to have been derived from them.

*The story is recorded in detail here (p. 97).

D. Mc Cowatch II-3 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The members of different families have remembered various means of making a person "clean" so that a supernatural being is likely to visit him. Almost every family knows one or more of them, and an individual who shows signs of becoming a shaman will be taught how to use his family method. In connection with this, the seeker after power will further purify himself by abstaining from sexual intercourse, by frequent washing in hot springs, by eating small portions of the tails of snakes and the heads of owls, and by avoiding food prepared by a widow or by a girl secluded after puberty. In this way he hopes that his dreams will be fruitful, and that a vision may be granted him as he lies on the forest on his evergreen couch.

The following are some of the methods to be practised at dawn every fourth day.

(a) The seeker after power locates a small stream on either side of which there are growing two shoots of devil's club. At dawn he breaks off the four stems and strips from them the bark, which he uses to wash himself in the cold water. As he does so he says:

"Please give me power that I may see what I wish to see."

This is addressed to he plant itself, not to the supreme god. It is a request to it able to see some one of the many supernatural beings that roam the forests, but which are invisible, to appear only to animals, to all but shamans. The words are not a fixed formula, and similar ones are said in connection with each method. After washing, the seeker for power throws the bark and peeled stemmes the water.

(b) Again selecting a secluded stream, the would-be shaman picks up a smooth, water-worn pebble from one side of it, and with this rubs his body, then carefully replaces it in the same position from which he took it. He repeats the process with a second stone, crosses the stream and does likewise with two stones from the further margin.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

755 offender. A shaman is able to diagnose the malady, and when 756 he has pulled it forth in the manner previously described, he [825] ties it up in a bundle of four pieces of dyed, and four of undyed, cedar-bark, sprinkles eagle down over the whole, and throws it into the river. This not only causes the sickness to return whence it has come, but placates the salmon who are glad to receive the beautiful cedar-bark.

755 (6) Another method is by making a present to Tlitdp-
756 lilde-a. The shaman prepares four collars of hemlock twigs,
782 wrapped around with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, and with numerous cross-pieces of dyed cedar-bark. When these are ready, all assemble to witness the curing, and to assist the practitioner by beating sticks. He first sets four basins, one at each corner of the fire, and then proceeds to pull it apart, leaving a glowing expanse of embers in the centre. The shaman throws on this bed pieces of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as well as eagle down, and [789] walks through, between the two halves of the separated fire. Several men stated that they had seen this done, but none could give any information as to the method. If actually carried out, the way in which the fire was prevented from burning the shaman and the highly inflammable bark and eagle down has been lost.

The shaman himself now guides the beating of sticks. When the tumult has reached its height he goes to the patient and places over his head one of the collars, passing it right down over his body, breaking the cross strings of dyed cedar-bark as he does so. The patient rises and the shaman picks up the collar from beneath his feet; his body has thus passed entirely through it. The sick man then revolves once, sunwise, while the shaman carries the collar once, sunwise, around the fire. He then stills the beating of sticks, which has been going on throughout, and casts the circlet on the fire. The same procedure is repeated with the three remaining collars. It is believed that these offerings reach Tlitdplilde-a who, pleased to receive such pretty objects, restores the sick, though she does not herself come to do so.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The shaman now sends a young man out to fill his curing basin. When this is done, he carries it around the fire, once, sunwise, and sets it down beside the patient. The practitioner drinks from it, and casts some eagle down on the surface. If it revolves sunwise, it signifies that the patient will soon recover, and the shaman proceeds to wash him with the water; if it remains stationary or revolves in the opposite direction, it is an unfavourable sign, and he throws the water out of the door. More is then brought, and the procedure repeated until it revolves sunwise. Although no Bella Coola can state definitely how this is performed, the concensus of opinion is that it is done by twisting the box slightly.

Shamans are not the only ones who make offerings to Tlitsdplitsa. It is generally known that she likes to receive things, so a sick person often throws on the fire a little grease, some of his own clothing, or other objects of small value. By so doing he hopes that she may appear, or that the sickness will vanish as the object is consumed in the flames. A person in good health sometimes makes like offerings, either on the central house fire or on one built behind the house, at the same time asking Tlitsdplitsa to help guard him.

(v) In recent years some shamans have been in the habit of displaying the sickness in visible form; this is said to have been a practice adopted from the Bella Bella. After throwing himself on top of the patient the shaman sucks violently, and produces such an object as a toad, a snail, or a stick of wood, which he claims to have been the cause of the malady. This has, of course, been concealed throughout in his mouth. This belief is fostered by the undoubted skill of some shamans in extracting such foreign substances as a salmon bone, wedged in a patient's throat, or a sliver. In such cases he first works with his fingers to force the object onto the surface. It is believed that some shamans are so powerful they can draw forth foreign substances by the mere application of their stick

1;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 956 955 mouth, and the malady departed. It had been absorbed into the stick, and later driven from it by the shaman's breath.

* 956 789 This man made a great reputation for himself with his ability to hang from his small stick. On one occasion, after fishing on the lower Fraser River, he was encamped on the ocean beach near Seattle, where he had gone to pick hops. Four white men who had heard of his powers came to his tent for a demonstration. He put on his robes, took his small stick from his box, and used the ridge pole of his tent as the heavier horizontal one. The white men examined the small stick and found nothing peculiar about it. The man performed his dance, in the course of it throwing the small stick up against the ridge pole, where it remained suspended with the actor hanging from it. After releasing his hold, he struck the smaller stick a slight blow with his hand and it at once came away from the ridge pole.

* 956 789 As already mentioned, it is extremely difficult to obtain accounts of dreams which have served as sources for shamanistic performances. They are unconsciously embellished by the performer to such an extent that the ritual displayed has probably slight resemblance to the vision on which it is based.

The following, however, is an example of the type that could have served as claims. A man once dreamed that he saw Mount Nuxpale with its rocks adorned with handsome pictures. The other mountains of the valley were also discovered, but none of them was so fine. If he had had the desire and the necessary wealth he could have arranged with the carpenters to have the designs that he saw in his dream painted, and could have displayed them as a shaman's vision.

* 956 ● 782 A shaman, particularly one who has received a vision from Tlexlyilite-a, and who has had marked success both in curing the sick and in giving conjuring exhibitions, is considered to be in peculiarly close association with supernatural beings. Accordingly, he is regarded as a fit person to ask their assistance, not that he has any means of gaining help that are not open to others, but merely that his greater acquaintance with them renders it more likely that they will grant his requests. Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites: 756* 782

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without voiding from his body the first salmon or eulachon of the season (I, p. 436). [764]

(2) Asking assistance for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. 191). [556]

(3) Request for assistance before starting on a journey, by pulling eagle down into the air (I, p. 106). [784]

(4) Request for aid by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Measachie Nose and Kwatna (I, p. 109).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus cause illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally pole, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans. 756* [761] [264] [178] [755] called out to him, and then remember no more. It was obvious that she had seen a ghost.

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob- 756* 783 841

It is over diseases caused by ghosts this shaman from the dead has power. If a person picks up and eats any morsels which he has dropped he will usually suffer, because, though he thinks the crumbs have fallen, they have really been pulled from his hands by a hungry ghost, who thus showed his desire for food. By picking up and eating the fragments, the man thwarts a dead person who retaliates by forcing some sickness into him. Ghosts may visit this land of the living and ask their relatives for food or clothing, but metals, unable to hear the speech of the dead, are unaware of the requests of their deceased relatives, and so do not answer them. The irritated ghosts respond by causing sickness. In such cases a shaman from the dead is able to seek out the cause of the ill, and sometimes to display it as a bone, twig, or other small object and at the same time to tell the sufferer what was that his relatives desired. Like ordinary shamans, shaman from the dead uses his own discretion whether or not to employ the violent beating of sticks, and like his fellow-practitioner receives payment from those whom he has helped. There are no fixed charges, but a successful shaman is always wealthy.

The intimate contact of ghosts with shamans has already been mentioned in connection with the ability of the latter to learn from the ghost of a murdered person whom he believes to be his slayer.

There is one method of sacrificial healing practised by shamans from the dead alone. If the patient refuses to yield to ordinary methods, the practitioner takes ten cedar-bark rounds, fills them with grease and placethem near the fire, one between it and the door, one on the outer side, and four on either side of it, parallel to the side wall of the house. By each round are placed two small wooden figures, roughly carved to represent men, and decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark. After endeavouring to seek forthe disease, with or without the assistance of the frenzied beating of sticks, the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 756 *

shaman pours the grease on the central fire, and throws on it 755 also the figures and some dried salmon. Thus propitiated, it 782 ● is believed that the dead will be more likely to allow the sickness to be sucked forth.

Shamans from the dead perform conjuring feats and 756 *
dramatic performances of the same type as ordinary shamans. 556
Until he gives his first dance a newly created shaman is known [575] as a lsin, the same word that is used for a kusiut initiate, and during this period he wears the shaman's collar of intertwined dyed and undyed cedar-bark. If he is wealthy and influential, a shaman will repeat his dance every fourth year. Such a performance can be held at any season, although the usual time is [796] after the kusiut ceremonies. The dramatic representations are of scenes witnessed in the land below, though sometimes they are done in a reverse manner, following the practice of the dead in doing things strangely. Thus one shaman reported that the ghosts wore very long blankets, but when he danced he wore one that came only to his hips. The method of singing is the same as that employed by ordinary shamans, but one whose [535] power is derived from the dead dances with head bent downwards, his free hand pointing to the ground with first finger extended. Also his cry of "swai, swai, swai," uttered at intervals with a deep cadence, differs from that used by ordinary shamans. A dance always terminates with the distribution of food to validate the ceremony.

Like ordinary shamans, those from the dead cannot transmit their power. At death their songs too are lost, unless they 756 * choose to give them to a friend who is also a shaman from the 533 dead. This is obviously contrary to the theoretical belief that [928] all songs have been obtained during revelations, but is not at all contrary to the Bella Coola practice of having the singers assist the visionaries in "remembering" their visions.

The following tale, although drawn from the distant past, 538 is a typical illustration of one of the many ways in which 756 *
shamanistic power is received from the dead.[6] 775

[6] A few stories of similar type have been included in vol. I, chap. xxx to explain the life of the dead, and others are grouped together in the next chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782
778
* 787
[251]

About half a mile from the glacier there is a large rock shelter where mountain goat hunters are wont to smoke their meat. They are always careful to take with them dyed and undyed cedar-bark and eagle down, knowing that they may encounter the supernatural. Sometimes they hear the voice of ʌxpełʌm, a deep, long drawn-out hum, m——. If this sound is repeated four times it is a happy augury, but if heard only once it presages ill fortune. In either case some member of the party, one who is ceremonially clean and is brave, blackens his face, puts on a collar of dyed cedar-bark, covered with eagle down, steps outside, and says in effect:

"Hail! Petrified One. In the beginning you came down from Alqantʌ́w, from all that was wonderful and powerful. You have not changed, hence we mortals can still hear your voice. Please, may it be well with us. There is none other like you."

If the supplicant is ceremonially clean the mountain will answer hi——, four times, and there will be heard what sounds like a great landslide. Then the petitioner takes some small portions of meat, some dyed and some undyed cedar-bark, and eagle down and throws them on the fire.

"Please accept, Oh Kuciaw" (Powerful One), he says.

Thus propitiated, ʌxpełʌm grants them success in hunting.

778 (13) Ełpiełnde i: On the south side of the Dean River about one mile from its mouth. Here, in the beginning of time, Raven cast his war-knife, ełde, which was turned to stone and can still be seen. Its power has likewise become localized at this point.

(14) In the beginning of time Mount Ewaky, near the Dean River, was a man who was turned to stone. Across the river is his wife, Ałkuhwełł, whose ancestral name is Kamilkde, likewise petrified.

[255]
[785]

In most of these places a sick person can receive assistance, if he is willing to risk the consequent dangers. The first essential is that he be in a "clean" condition by the observance of

[i.e. - certain spots where power is localized - see cat. 116, pp 599-600 for their location - Anncy57]

[The Dance of Wi'.a]

* 575 * 946 782 The last to seat himself is Kwikhs Nuxkémpts, an obstreperous individual, who always wants more presents than anyone else. When X announces that the beings above have taken their places, a carpenter brings forward the object covered with cedar-bark and painted with a design of Xowsowálists,* holds it above X's head, and then gives it to a herald who casts it into the fire. At the same time X throws on the flames some dyed cedar-bark, some undyed cedar-bark, a little eagle down, and some olachen grease, saying:

"Please Xowsowálists,* accept this offering and be present," and throws his hands up in the air as if casting some object upwards.

Still dancing, X calls out hoip several times.

The painted representation and the cedar-bark are objects which Xowsowálists likes to receive; the olachen grease supplies the flame on which they ascend to him. The same procedure is repeated for the eight other brothers, with slight variations in the words addressed to each. To Omgowálida, for example, X says:

[534] Ardpmé'ssnhéme | dwowsówsowdsowsow | xwpowsowsuh
Wunéqwhsu-xdowsowé" | is the place where he sits, | the recipient," hompwhlikmh Omgowálida,"

When the time comes to invite the hungry Tlitcqélida, an offering of food instead of bark is cast upon the flames. X continues to dance after the final gift, and presently a thud is heard on the roof while some hwiat, chosen beforehand for the purpose, compresses a hidden bladder-whistle which the uninitiated know is the voice of the owl. Whether they be-

* 575 * 946 787

[184] [772] *In Kimsquit the offerings are made by a doctor who has this prerogative in connection with the power Hiaiklaqwa.

*The other name is Ts'ipwem, "The Recipient of Many Gifts."

*Dyed skin is one of the larger woodpeckers, the species could not be identified.

*This designation, properly applied only to Xowsowálists, is often used for his brothers as well.

*These words are ritually sung, each version has marking the end of each subdivision. A record was made of the music for the National Museum of Canada; record VII D 8a, singer, Jim Pollard.

[124]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

192*

[601]
[614]

[826]

[465]

[589]

[601]

[712]
[778]

[424]
[221]
[761]

[125]

nemm, nemim, nemmim: Member of same sex and same maternal family as speaker.
Nemkilem: Supernatural being who comes with Nankynem to bring a call to the latter's protégé.
Nemkilemut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
nemil: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract.
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.
nemmemkim: Toilet-hole.
nemkimem: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony.
nemnelmimem: Exchange marriage.
nempakimem: Passages.
Ne-nem: Place near Nalimo.
Nemnemkim: Racial name created by nyuyuyut at Kitsequit in the beginning of time.
nemmel ki mimm: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker.
nemmel ni mimm: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.
Nemnemkn, "The Inhospitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
Nemnemmil: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
Nemnilipmem: Supernatural being who created repetitions in the beginning of time.
Nemnimmil: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
Nemnkimem: House occupied by the four sisters at Nempamil in the beginning of time.
nem-l'ximem: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.
nemnmemmem or nemnmemmimem: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dried cedar-bark to Pinnipilim.
2—The cooking of offerings to ghosts by the roasting of food on a fire.
Nemnu-nil: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
Nemnuimkilimem: Male supernatural being who travels with Nankynem, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.
Nemnuiki: Mother Heron.
nemqu: Fishermen with inherited right to use of a salmon weir or of a place for catching shellfish.
nemqumemmik, "A Calling Back", or "A Setting": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation.
Nemqumil, "Where Water Entered": House of one of the four groups of workers at Kitsequit in the beginning of time.
Nemqumkimem: Racial name of a Bella Coola man.
Nemqumkilimem: Professional name of a female dancer.
Nemqumimem: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.
Nemsilkimi: Another name of a Bella Coola man.
Nemsimmil: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
Nemsimmilmil: Kitsequit human mentioned in an ancient story.
Nemsilkimem, "The One that Penetrates to the Shell of the Rivers": Supernatural name of anthrops salmon.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NK6 Bellacoola NK6

773 what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely [771] connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Sun, the sun-god (compare sing. sun). The eyes of the sun are his symbolism. When prayed to he is called Tsal'ne. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the following formulæ: Ailaxe ulilang, Tsal'ne, 'Look on us when we are 774 dancing, Tsal'ne;' and Tsal'ne, ulilaxtsamil'ilg, 'Take care of us, Tsal'ne.'
[772] Sun is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with [773] the actions and thoughts of men. Thus we given by Mamamalt'aq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Mamamalt'aq, Tsla'tsmut, Sialqal'eputh, and Ial'ala'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been suspended between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Mamamalt'aq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Mamamalt'aq and his brethren painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his wife. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the sang'ula (co-daughter of, sp'ewalm day to dawning). The sang'ula was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pool from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pool, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the sang'ula. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Mamamalt'aq said: "Let us make sun." He made the image of a sun out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Sialqal'eputh and Ial'ala'lak tried therein to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Tsla'tsmut carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Mamamalt'aq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that men should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by men.

The Bilqula believe that Mamamalt'aq and his brethren still continue to give new ideas to men. They say that any new designs of painting or carving, or any other new inventions made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Mamamalt'aq.

[782]

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

774 The soul is believed to dwell in the eyes. It is similar in shape to a [775] bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies [776] away the owner must die. Diseases are able to see and to recognize souls.
[777]
[778]
[779]

white crane (?). Qq'ots, is sitting on top of the post. The master of the house is Sisa, the Sun. He is also called Ts'ata ("our father"), or Sisaq'ala (776 "the sacred one"), or Smayalit'ca.la. It seems that he is the only deity to whom the Bella Coola pray. They do not pray to Qsmit'ts, the deity of the supreme heaven. I have not found any prayers directed to the other deities of the lower heaven. I recorded a number of such prayers directed to the Sun. They are as follows:—

Ash'ts'ala'ces Tsisa! ("Look on us where we are going, Father!")

Tsisa! ash'ala'cmalt'ca! ("Take care of us, Father!")

Tsisa! ch'ala'cmalt'ca ala'ncmat'ts'ts! Tsisa! ccqq'alancmalca! ("Father! take care of our road! Take care of us!")

After a long-continued rain, they pray:—

Tsqala'ces Tsisa! ists'ts'ncmalt'ts, Tsisa! ("Wipe your face, Father! that it may be fair weather.")

The mountain-goat hunter prays:—

Ccqq yalanlaces, Tsisa', ts'ncmes'ncmal, Smayalit'ca! ("Let your children look at me, Smayalit'ca, Father!")

A person pursued by misfortune prays:—

Sisqlamalt'ces Tsisa! smayamalt'ncmal a qlqqcmancmal'a'c. ("Make me happy, Father! You have given me too much misfortune.")

A sick person prays:—

Sisqlamalt'ces Tsisa! ch'a sccqlacmal'ces Tsisa! ("Let my life be long, Father!")

The successful hunter, or the woman who has found a plentiful supply of berries, prays:—

Sisqqlamal'ces a sdmal'ala ch'a sisqlamalt'ces ch'a qlalces ccsa'k'ncmal'ces ch'ala'ts'a a sqlalal'ces. ("Father! You make me happy. You give me what I desire. Thus I find what I wished for.")

The Bella Coola also make offerings to the Sun. Hunters throw four small slices of seal-meat, of mountain-goat tallow, etc., into the fire as an offering to the Sun, in order to obtain success in hunting. Sick people burn parts of their clothing, which they decorate with red cedar-bark, as an offering to regain health.

The second deity, who is called Ash'ancal'ts, seems to be of equal importance. Sisa and Ash'ancal'ts stay in the rear of the House of Mythology. Near the fire stays Sisaq'ala'ts'a. He is an old man who formerly ruled over contradiction is inherent in all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast, they nowhere reach such a degree as among the Bella Coola; and I presume the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

T/Boas E-3 (2886-14.1892)900 NEA Bellacoola MSS

The prayers of the Bella Coola directed to Sun or Ts'ists bear a remarkable resemblance to the prayers of the Tsimshian addressed to Lasha, the sky. In both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather, and men will be happy; consequently the prayer to the deity "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from the Coast tribes is the ki'ixat ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism. The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the Kwakiutl are practically identical. I told above (p. 34) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another tradition is told to explain the origin of this custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret societies were introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by these distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious inconsistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the world and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not coordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 566 ff.

1:36:Uwrath E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously* either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.* As he scours himself, he asks Mouakaiz to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Alpuxtów actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Mouakaiz has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Mouakaiz," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Mouakaiz," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [824] [825] [515] [296] [823] [825]

*Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was [illegible] for other purposes, such as washing the head in [illegible] [illegible] Indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently.

*The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-scoured river pebble.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 who, in turn, would pass on the request so that it might reach each 891 member of the party. Not only is it contrary to custom for a commoner 785 to hold intercourse with a chief's wife, but it is unknown for a man to ask another to sleep with his wife, so the youth was surprised and rather [837] frightened. However, he acceded to the request, passed on the instructions, and washed. As he was bathing, a seal appeared in the surf beside [622] him, and he was able to kill it easily. Each in turn behaved in the same manner, washed, and then killed a seal. Next morning, when the chief returned he was delighted that all had turned out in accordance with his hopes. At the same time the wind dropped so that the party was able to return home.

891 The power which had brought the seals within reach of the 785 men had been engendered in their own bodies by these ritual acts after a rather lengthy period of continence. The Bella Coola believe that such a procedure always increases their strength and ability, therefore giving them a better chance to gain favour from supernatural beings, and to take advantage of opportunities offered. Hunters in particular are careful with [224] regard to their marital life since animals know their acts and [825] thoughts, and hide from one who has not made himself "clean"
[785] by continence, its termination, and bathing. Sxetsta consists of these three elements, but since continence is the most prominent feature, the term may be translated as "ceremonial chastity."

In its simplest form this comprises merely the three elements already mentioned. The longer the continence, the greater the power engendered by its termination. A man who has practised abstinence for a year has such strength within himself that almost any good fortune may occur, and cases are known in which it has been carried out for even longer periods. More often, an individual practises ceremonial chas-[184] tity in accordance with a family tradition. One old man gave the following recipe and was most emphatic that it always 224 brought success in hunting and fishing; he added that on the 785 two occasions he had tried it, he had brought back a phenomenal number of skins.

A person planning to set out on an expedition for any purpose should remain continent for several nights to increase his generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[26] is to observe continence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[27] as poe-

[26]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.

[27]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the tasting of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:36:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

224 785 able, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] 278 [789] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

985 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 851 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, o-m, which has a coarse implication, but sulqlat which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

Schlichter, R.S. (1922-1924)[1941]
MES Bellacoola MSS

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper eighth before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kactar dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaving of his tally post, but, if he scrupulously and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Alquantin is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy abstin-

[831] [785] [1073] [1104] once was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chastity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a tombstone for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went out hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his boat, none the worse for his mishap. The man who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

[1104] Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only potent in itself, but it is also the favorite means by which a man can discern himself of the impurities of human existence so that he feels keeper with the supernatural.

[1124]

[1125]

[327] friends, a further cause for their preferential treatment. A [328] Bella Coola who had been ordered and consented had to [329] undergo a cleansing ceremony to remove the taint of slavery before he could take part in the ceremonies of the community.
It was impossible to learn the details of this rite.

[330] A master had complete power over a slave, unaffected by the force of public opinion, since the affairs of a slave, being without relatives, were of no consequence to anyone. Accordingly, the lot of a slave depended on the character of his master, and on his own ability and industry. An industrious slave was valued; such an one would not be traded or sold except through dire necessity, and in course of years he becomes, so far as actual treatment was concerned, one of the [331] family. Many masters gave their slaves facial* dance pre-[332] rogatives, expending large sums for the purpose. In such a case the slave might become an influential member of the community, though the fact that he was not free was never forgotten. On the other hand, a master had not the slightest compunction about beating a lazy slave, and could kill him if he so desired. None of the present Bella Coola has heard of such a case; it was considered more sensible to sell or give away an unsatisfactory slave. It was accepted as a matter of course that a master should provide his slaves with food and clothing, since anything produced or obtained by one belonged to him. A slave-owner had full rights to his female slaves, [333] and unquestionably exercised them. The only restraints were the jealousy of his own wife, or wives, and the feeling that it was undignified for a free man to demean himself. It was impossible to learn with even approximate accuracy to what extent intercourse took place between masters and slaves.
Probably not a great deal, though there was considerable freedom of relations between slave women and the young men of the community, unrestrained by the pride of chieftainship.
When a slave had been faithful for a number of years and had [334] become almost a member of the family, his master would say

*Cf. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

There now remains only the necessity of removing from the house itself the supernatural power with which it is firmly believed to have been impregnated throughout the many weeks of the ceremony. Should this not be done, it would be so strong that only xamit could thereafterth live in it, and no hamat rite could be performed therein. One of the senior chiefs, acting on X's behalf, requests as many xiki as are present to go to the back-room. At the same time a drum is beaten slowly. The xiki call out loudly, in unison, hoip four times. The whistles sound from the back-room with ever-increasing intensity, as if the supernatural being, whose voice they are, were going away. It is said that this practice has been comparatively recently adopted from Rivers Inlet: there used to be nothing of the kind. The xiki re-emerge, and one of them stands behind the fire with his stick which he beats on the floor and calls on the audience to shout with him, "hi ...." This is done four times. It serves to purify the house from the supernatural power with which it has been saturated. The people then disperse, without food.

Goods from the ground-store are reserved to pay these men for their services, and also for cleansing the initiates from the powers with which they have been imbued, a rite that takes place the following morning in the presence of several xiki chiefs. The initiates are brought from the back-room and seated in a close circle between the door and the fire.* A foreign xiki is chosen by X to perform the actual cleansing rite. He has been asked beforehand and has come provided with a long pole and some soiled clothing. It is immaterial whose this is, provided that it has been in contact with a human body, the most potent articles are ceremonial cedar-bark pads.

The xiki covers the young man with a large cedar-bark mat. Then he fastens the clothing or pads to his pole and holds the end to the fire until they are smouldering. Then he swings it four times over the heads of the initiates and throws the stick with the objects back on the fire. In some cases four sets of clothes are used. This rite, which is regarded as very important, frees the lads from the supernatural powers with which they have been endowed, and permits them finally to leave the back-room and return to normal life, just as their earlier cleansing freed them from the sutsiwan. During their period of seclusion no initiate can perform a facial ceremony of any kind. The supernatural beings of the two societies, though closely akin, are yet independent, and it would be unthinkable for a man to come into contact with the two at the same time, unless he should be the owner of a rare prerogative enabling him to do so. Only a few men have the right, which undoubtedly was derived either from the Bella Bella or the people of Rivers Inlet.

*Behind the fire according to one informant.

X pays the functioning sila with new clothing. This completes the whole ceremony. The guests either return home or adjourn to some other house where a potlatch is taking place, but no rites mark their departure.

Such, then, are the principal features of the Bella Coola potlatch. Without making a careful comparison of its features with those of neighbouring tribes, the following points stand out with great clearness:

(1) The basic concepts of the potlatch in Bella Coola are the same as those of the rite practised elsewhere on the coast.

(2) A potlatch has not the same importance at Bella Coola as it has on other parts of the coast, especially among the Kwakiutl. All informants stated repeatedly that they did not carry their potlatches to the same lengths as did the "foolish" Kwakiutl, nor were they as keen financiers. A Bella Coola would never entirely impoverish himself by foolish giving.

(3) The potlatch, though fundamentally the same as it is elsewhere on the coast, has certain rites characteristic of the locality. The central Bella Coola feature, the return of a dead ancestor, is not equally important elsewhere. It would be interesting to be able to trace the history of this. The most further consumption by wriggling her body on her knuckles immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is ouiu, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inferior supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 783

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half salmon, half human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one fetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [817] [756] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must not eat salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can drink water from this stream

Lib McDowell E-5 [1922-1924]Y48
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the front door facing the river, but has to leave the house through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period she cannot eat fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. The scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her companions avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot visit herself during this time, so no more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not phenomenal, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of maternal life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers on occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating very fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched anxiously. The grandfather ran out and gave the child an orange, something that in his youth little girls did not receive such detention to enclosures their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is worn. She also wears earrings, each consisting of a wooden and recompense to funeral mourners is usually delayed until that time. Such was often true even in former years, although poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any convenient ceremony, such as a non-sacred social dance. As repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature. It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual, or perhaps is never secure. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the coast, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery. Those who carried them were the men who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

! Life - one year after puberty - Analyst

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or steelhead are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or venture according to some informants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The rules on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but ceremonially lapse after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that death

[illegible] 2-3 (1932-1934) 1948
[illegible] Science NES

comes and sits on the coffin during every funeral, seeking further victims. Death has no conventional widow or widower that she or he will fall on easy prey unsuccessfully pursued. No special acts are carried out between interment and the burning of goods four days later, but the following four days must be spent in a small shelter of trees behind the village, hidden from sight to the house. Within this the man or woman lies on the ground with legs close together and bent to the knees, in the same position as a girl lying the four days after her first menstruation. A male friend accompanies a widower; a female, a widow. This companion keeps a fire burning and administers to the comfort of the patient, for such a bereaved person is considered to be. Every evening the two return home and leave again the following morning. On one of these days, the companion enters the woods east of the village to find four spruce saplings growing within sight of each other in an east to west direction. To this place he leads the survivor on the morning after the fourth day of concealment* in the shelter. He bends down the top of the western sapling and ties it into a loop with a rope composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cotton cloth. The widower, or widow, crawls through this opening to the east and then makes a circle, eastwise, around the sapling. Passing to the next one, the same procedure is repeated, and so in succession for the third and fourth, each being left tied into loop. There are at least two variations to this rite. Instead of passing through four saplings, some individuals choose a crawl four times through a single one, with a eastwise circuit intervening in every case. If the survivor be a member of a family in which it is customary to use four saplings, and if the friend cannot find four in proper alignment, he cuts a number of spruce branches and sets them upright, butts to the ground, leaving a small hole between them. Four are allowed are arranged, as substitutes for four saplings, and the crawling through takes

*There is variation in the exact time for this rite. Some individuals practice it on the fifth day after death and seek the morning in a shelter.

Jesup North Pacific Expedition, Vol. I, Part 5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellevue NEA

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kinnaquit is called Sqiwi'ti, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [620] [302] [734] [587] [736]

1:34:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellecosle NEA

"She was my daughter, I have a right to do as I like." 768

Samuel King and the others accepted the exchange as a matter of course and made no comments. Captain Schooner took no part in the burning of his daughter's goods, this being the task of those with whom she had been living, and who accordingly knew which were hers. The fire was kindled by a married daughter of Reuben Schooner, though it could have been done equally well by any woman. On the following 783 morning, July 1, Samuel King went with a friend to the forest 764 and passed four times through a small spruce sapling bent into an arch. This was the last incident in the funeral rites.

Fate of the Dead

LIFE OF THE DEAD

Little need be added to the account given in vol. I, chap. 775 11 of the fate of those parts of a man which go at death to Nicwaiu. The spirit and the life travel back the path of the deceased's ancestors from generation to generation until they reach the place where his first forefather came to earth and where his cloak, if he had worn one, floated back after his alteration to human form. When the spirit and the life of a descendant reach the spot, they change into a being having the form of the cloak, and so return to Nicwaiu. The spirit and the life of one who is a member of several ancestral families visit the localities where the transformations to human shape of all his ancestors occurred. The Bella Coola believe that these two elements can assume many cloak forms, but they do not know whether this entails the simultaneous assumption of many shapes to comprise a composite figure, or whether the spirit and the life, which become a single entity in the case of a member of one ancestral family, become multiple for one who is a member of several. When lamenting a dead person, mention is always made of the various scenes which he will have visited, and the forms he will have assumed. At a memorial potlatch, the deceased may return as a hybrid, or as

NEA Bellacoola NEA

[illegible], a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had died.

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mitqac, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster.

Similar in function to the mitqac, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the sciaat. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yalmiwat. It was at first the cause made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and forests, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a sciaat appeared in the past.

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a seal-[illegible], which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two heads but no tail. He hunted on to with his stick, and in so doing started a slide which carried the sciaat down the mountain. As this was taking place, the hunter said:

"Go down the mountain, sciaat, I will get you to the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying there on the ocean. He ran to up and slung it on a cedar-bark rope. Now this sciaat was a sciaat, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained supernatural good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Sciaat, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the sciaat, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found.

power in this way, but their type can be judged by the shamanistic performances hereafter described, many of which are believed to have been derived from them.

The members of different families have conventional various means of making a person "clear" so that a supernatural being is likely to visit him. Since every family knows one or more of them, and an individual who shows signs of becoming a shaman will be taught how to use his family method. In connection with this, the seeker after power will further purify himself by abstaining from sexual intercourse, by frequent washing in hot springs, by eating small portions of the nuts of snakes and the heads of toads, and by avoiding food prepared by a widow or by a girl unlinked after puberty. In this way he hopes that his dreams will be fruitful, and that a vision may be granted him so he lies in the forest on his evergreen couch.

The following are some of the methods to be practised on dawn every fourth day.

(a) The seeker after power locates a small stream on either side of which there are growing two shoots of devil's club. He draws he breaks off the four stems and strips from them the bark, which he uses to scrub himself in the cold water. As he does so he says:

"These give me power that I may see what I wish to see."

This is addressed to the plant itself, not to the supreme god. It is a request to be able to see some one of the many supernatural beings that roam the forests, but which are invisible, to appear only as animals, to all but shamans. The words are not a fixed formula, and similar ones are said in connection with each method. After washing, the seeker for power throws the bark and peeled stem into the water.

(b) Again selecting a unlinked stream, the would-be shaman picks up a smooth, water-worn pebble from one side of it, and with this rubs his body, then carefully replaces it in the exact position from which he took it. He repeats the process with a second stream, crosses the stream and does likewise with two stones from the further margin.

(c) Choosing a place where two small hemlocks are growing on each side of a small stream, the seeker after power bends down the four saplings so that their branches reach the water, and with these scours his body, the spines frequently cutting his skin. When finished, he releases the saplings, which fly back to their original position.

(d) Another method is to devour four small sections, each twelve inches long and a span, of false hellebore root. These are drunk with cold water and cause vomiting. The use of this plant is not limited to dawn, nor is it necessary to repeat it every fourth day. Apparently, the usual prayer is not said with it.

Any, or all, of these methods, especially if combined with the observance of ceremonial chastity, may justify the performer so that he will be able to see what is not vouchsafed to most persons. Tlexpiklim-a, or one of the other supernatural beings, may grant him a revelation with shaman's power. This does not always happen, so the above means of purification are not omnipotent, but to many myths where the hero obtained supernatural power it was due to his having tried one of the above, or a similar ritual.

The most common method of becoming a shaman is through the appearance of Tlexpiklim-a when a person is ill. This woman, who always wears a blanket-like cape decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark, is able to travel anywhere at phenomenal speed. She, or some other supernatural being, may appear to a sick person irrespective of sex, whether or not ceremonial chastity has been observed. It seems as if she took pity on the sufferer and came to bring relief. The following are typical examples.

A woman had long been crippled with rheumatism. She was so helpless and weak that she spent most of her time curled in a heap on the floor, heedless of the odors and dirt with which she was covered. Her friends barely attended to her wants. One day she heard a thump on the roof, though no one she could hear it, nor could they hear the whistle with which them renders it more likely that they will grant his requests. Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites:

1:Mc:Dwrwith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NE6

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without voiding from his body the first salmon or eulachon of the season (I, p. 436).

(2) Asking assistance for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. 191).

(3) Request for assistance before starting on a journey, by pulling eagle down into the air (I, p. 106).

(4) Request for aid by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Masset and Kwatna (I, p. 109).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus cured illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally post, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans.

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob-

Schmidt/Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

* 756 jurts have power over shamans. A shaman must never sleep
● 789 beside his wife during her menses, must never eat food pre-841 pared by a menstruating woman, by one who has recently washed a new-born infant, by a girl during the period of seclusion following puberty, or by a widow or widower during the year that follows the death of his partner. If a shaman's nose bleeds when he is dancing it is because a menstruating woman is present in the house; he at once asks the offender to withdraw, after which the bleeding stops. Moreover, he must [755 never cure a woman during her periods. A wise shaman prac-
785] tises ceremonial chastity frequently. In view of the lack of chastitiness ascribed to menstrual blood, it is perhaps surprising that a woman can become a shaman while still of child-bearing age. This is rare, and only occurs when a woman is the last survivor of a family. The Bella Coola themselves consider it to be peculiar, only explicable on the ground that anything is possible to the supernatural beings, even the disregarding of feminine "uncleanness." Usually, female shamans are past the age of child-bearing; if not, they observe absolute chastity.

* 956 Even inadvertent breaking of one of these rules causes 961 death. This is not regarded as a punishment inflicted by Tlúxpálás-a; it is merely the inevitable consequence of the supernatural power within the shaman having come in contact with what is not clean. As a shaman is considered to be immune against all ordinary ailments, his death is always attributed to the breaking of a taboo. Frequently the death of a shaman is accompanied by some convulsion of nature. One female shaman, for example, told the people of her village to keep their children within doors, since a supernatural being was coming for her. Soon it became dark; there were four loud claps of thunder, at the fourth of which she fell dead.

584 The following was related as an instance of the danger to
* 956 a shaman of coming in contact with an unclean woman.

[789 The son of the first man to come to earth at Nuhlmo was, like his 841 father, named Dadzoxoq". One April he and his wife went upstream to 787] Tsuxmlo, a place in the country of the Carriers where milk-weed is plen-

1:36:Dorsith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

child, of which they planned to collect a supply. In the course of their journey Dudzeuq" saw a man who, when he drew near, turned into a piece of hanging moss. A little later he again saw a figure, but on approaching it became a tree. Dudzeuq" and his wife walked on and presently the former once more beheld a man; this time the apparition changed to a fir tree. It was evident to Dudzeuq" that a supernatural being had manifested itself to him, and he told his wife that they must return. On reaching home he related his experience and gave a shaman's dance. 534 756* 787

From this experience he had received the power of curing. He could see disease when it was invisible to all others, and could summon it to himself, where it was harmless, thus restoring the patient to health. He made for himself a rattle, shaped like a bird; this had the ability of dancing of its own accord, and would catch people's hair in its opening and closing beak. The sick were brought to Dudzeuq" from all over the valley. One day he travelled by canoe down to Ititsil where he found many of the villagers seriously ill. His arrival was quite fortuitous, for he was unaware of the epidemic that was raging. The inhabitants sought his help, so he landed and cured them. He entered the house of a woman who claimed to be ill, and took the sickness upon himself, but no sooner had he left than he fell down stricken. He demanded to be taken home to his canoe, but he only lived two days after his return. The woman had been in pain from her menses; it was this that he had taken upon himself and caused his death. 534 756* [761] [783] [841]

In consequence of the danger attached to the vocation, many people try to avoid becoming shamans, though if Tlindzilitsa should appear to a man when ill, he cannot escape the power. The usual method of prevention is for a man to hold intercourse with his wife from below, so that her flesh, impure through its liability to menses, can form a barrier to the coming of supernatural power. One who wishes to escape always sleeps on the left of his wife, whereas if he is seeking shaman's power he sleeps on the right. Another method of avoidance is to use the hole in the floor which serves as exit and entrance to the house of a girl secluded following adolescence. 756* [787] [883] [519]

Since the power of a shaman is obtained by a personal experience, and lacks both form and substance, it cannot be transmitted and disappears at the owner's death. As has been

Libbie Hewitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

952 For Fractures

An effort is made to straighten the limb and to place the ends of the broken bone together in their proper position. If there is considerable swelling, an incision is made to let blood escape. Hemlock gum is applied freely to the whole region to soften the wound and hold the splints in position. This penetrates the cut, if one has been made, and is believed to facilitate the knitting process. Any small sticks are used for splints.

REMEDIES FOR AILMENTS CAUSED BY SUPERNATURAL OR HUMAN BEINGS

● 783 953 Persons suffering from diseases or accidents of the types described in the previous section are not the only ones whom the Bella Coola consider to be sick. A girl at puberty, a mother who has just given birth, a man or woman whose consort has just died, has been placed in a peculiar relation to the supernatural and is in a condition identical to that of one suffering from a disease. The ritual acts prescribed at these crises of life are medicines, just as truly as an herbal potion or a curative treatment. In fact, anyone who has been in close touch with the supernatural is in a critical condition and must act circumspectly, the reason for the taboos observed by shamans.

919 [Fo] Hunters particularly, and others who are likely to come in contact with supernatural beings, employ a number of medicines to protect themselves or to alleviate the dangers to which they have been exposed. As already described, the most potent of these are articles which have been rendered essentially human by contact with the body. For example, an evil supernatural being such as the War-Party of the Tides can be kept at a distance by casting soiled clothing upon a fire. Even more powerful are stained cedar-bark sanitary napkins. It is remembered that when a Bella Bella lad was treated with a gull so that he could see beneath the ocean, his friends became so alarmed at his tremendous ability that they destroyed it by throwing pads of this kind on a fire built beneath the bed on which he was sleeping. The basis of this medicine is the belief

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 one used by some of Tsilla's ancestors. It was brought to the ocean and 754 thrown in.

Taboos

784 The Bella Coola regard as taboos those injunctions that are observed in the belief that their neglect would cause automatic punishment. The mechanism of enforcement is frequently not understood; it is enough to know that an unpleasant result would follow disobedience. Some taboos are in force at all times, others only during certain seasons of the year, and still others at critical periods of life. Since the psychology of such [789] beliefs is essentially magical rather than religious, they could justifiably be grouped at this point. Unfortunately, to do so would destroy the continuity of accounts of birth, adolescence, death, ceremonial chastity, and many other aspects of Bella Coola life subject to taboo. The injunctions enforced by the River Guardian, the restrictions observed by a girl after puberty, the continence required after different medicines, all are taboos, disregard of which brings certain punishment. These and many others have already been described in connection with the activities to which they pertain. It is doubtful whether the Bella Coola have a single word to describe taboos [785] in general, though they are all regarded as xnaiâx, that is, as something which is ceremonially unclean.

Scarcely to be distinguished from taboos are ceremonial errors, yun-imut or kân-imut. Failure to give presents to heralds when a seat breaks beneath a chief or a dancer stumbles, or unnecessary activity during the year's waiting for the fruition of supernatural good fortune are ritual mistakes of this type. Neglect of such regulations brings punishment, though of a lesser kind than the breaking of taboos. If the [688] error has been in connection with a ceremony, the offence can [205] be wiped out by presents to heralds, and the terms yun-imut and kân-imut are likewise applied to some of their prerogatives such as the ability to claim clothing during the marriage of a chief's child.

Most taboos and errors can best be described with other

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [296] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [789] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the [291] sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [196] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the com-231 fort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands [577] generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEA Bellacoola NEA

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The ornaments of the deceased is put into his mouth; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned outward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are buried. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, headdresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed on the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by an empty human figure on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [302] [323] [364] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they chewe four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, chewing new trees every day. Meanwhile they cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is buried. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or oolachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [328] [322]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

[illegible] B-1 ([illegible])
NRS Bellacoola NRS

men to see these transformed beings habitually, but even now, or at any rate until a few years ago, shamans were able to lift the intervening veil. From accounts given by those who have had such experiences, the Bella Coola believe that Alquntam gave to birds and animals, as well as to humans, the boon of fire, and it is only the unworthiness of men that makes them unable to see the smoke rising from the houses of different creatures. In former times, fortunate hunters were able to do so, and consequently had phenomenal success. The smoke that ascends from the fires of different animals corresponds in colour to that of its owner; a mountain goat's is white, a beaver's, black, a squirrel's, red, a wolf's, grey, and so on. When a goat stamps the earth on a mountain, it rings hollow, as indeed it is to those animals, for their home is within; and when a hunter hears his quarry entirely, it is because the hunter has entered its house. Shamans are sometimes able to hear the gatherings of animals under the peaks. Like human beings, they dance to the accompaniment of music, and in all respects behave like them. They have their times of joy and sorrow, of success and failure. When ill they are cured by their own shamans, grizzly bear, owang, and wolverine; these throw also dance to welcome the dead. All animals and birds are like brothers, able to converse with each other and living harmoniously together in that other part of their life which only shamans have seen. Porcupine is the oldest, and a hunter always tries to kill one before passing to more important prey. The animals know about the actions of human beings and show their aversion to certain habits by refusing to allow themselves to be seen by anyone practising them. For example, they do not like people to drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked, and no hunter would dream of partaking of that food. Bella Coola mythology is full of accounts of human beings who, with supernatural aid, were able to penetrate to the homes of animals. Tales of this type would be unintelligible without understanding the attitude of the people to the animal and bird kingdoms.

and eagles whom he invites to dinner is. In so doing, he does not address them by their usual names, but calls Wolf, Ilkus-i-gamen, "The Devourer of Meat Which He Does Not Kill," that is, "The Biting Scavenger"; and Eagle, Kwakwaxwa-mamen, "The Constant Eater," that is, "The One Who Eats before He Is Hungry." Next morning the fish has been devoured and the hunter believes his guests have eaten it. Animals and birds, being supernatural, can hear the words of mortals and read their thoughts. The significance of these actions is that animals have the power to conceal themselves, so a hunter must gain their favour before he can hope to succeed. Belief in the efficacy of such customs as these is rapidly falling into decay and bear meat is now often eaten, but the skull is carefully placed in an evergreen tree near where the animal is slain, so that it may come back to life.

Fish, likewise, are immortal. In autumn the streams are choked with dead and dying salmon, but the Bella Coola know that they are not really dead, they have merely shed their worthless blankets in accordance with Alpentlin's decree. At that season of the year he causes the rivers to rise so that they will sweep away these useless and eyesore cloaks.

Although the salmon, from the kindness of their hearts, allow human beings to feast on their blankets, yet they have certain likes and dislikes which are carefully observed. From the time the first spring salmon appear (I, pp. 759-761) until the rising of the July moon, women are not allowed to eat them or to go near the river. Men may eat the fish, but instead of throwing the bones to dogs, they carefully return them to the river saying:

"These come back tomorrow."

If this is inconvenient, bones can be thrown into the woods with impunity.

Salmon, like men and animals, live a human-like existence in their homes far beneath the surface of the ocean. They lack and desire earthly objects, especially pounded cedar-bark (see Appendix A) to use as sponges for their children, so the Bella Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

NEA Reflex-mode NEA

a man, or woman, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience 424 to river salmon. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it 463 has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this func- 551 tion. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the valid- 693 ation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but [793] non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name or woman has always been able to perform his duties.

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been en- 784 forced concerning the river. No refuse may be thrown in, 825 otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the 226 same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them [515] from entering the river. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes 841 is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the [562] fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the beach, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Then no freshly hewn planks can be set adrift, and even a canoe which has just been completed [502] must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at [765] the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the 688 salmon and it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the 693 offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight infringements, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river. The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by 829 initiation performs, but he cannot himself carry out a cere-556 mony until he has reached manhood.

Puberty Rites

881 The change from childhood to adult age is, of course, more obvious with girls than with boys, and the former alone must observe strict taboos. Menstrual blood, like that which follows delivery, is unclean, especially that emitted at the first discharge. A woman who has just given birth is a cuaiic; an [764] adolescent girl, a ayawai, that is, "A Person Not Fully Tabooed"; the attitude with which the former is regarded is held, in a lesser extent, for the latter.

At the first indication, the girl asks a woman to inform her mother of her condition, and goes home immediately if she happens to be away at the time. Her parents at once make a small enclosure or bedroom of planks or matting in either of the front corners of the house, providing it with a trap-door and ladder by which she can leave without passing through the front door. There the girl must lie for four days, with legs close together and bent at the knees, never stretched out straight. She is not allowed to drink anything, and must eat sparingly; if she should consume much food, she would be greedy when an adult. When necessary for her to leave the enclosure, a woman must always accompany her. Her mother, or some other female relative, provides her with the usual soft cedar-bark pads. On the fifth day, she leaves her shelter early in the morning with one feminine friend and goes to a secluded pool back in the forest, where she washes for the first time. Then she runs rapidly through the woods, which has the effect of making her a strong woman. Should a girl fail to do this, [753] she would be afflicted with an illness caused by the salmon, become blind, and die young.

784 For one year an adolescent girl is subject to many restrictions. Her near approach to the river would offend the salmon 881 and cause them to avoid Bella Coola, so she is not allowed to [825] draw water, or even to appear on the bank. She may not use the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period she cannot eat fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat

1 [i.e. - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

[76] friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through [76] the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [76] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [76] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject.
[76] If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed planks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the women with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction [76] in which they are going. If a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse.
[428] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [767] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the corpse, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be best dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then not harvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

The rituals described above may be considered as religious in nature; almost equally important are the social requirements of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the women who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as miners with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death [illegible] as that his flowing locks remained between them and its head. As it turned, the hair moved with it, so that, although the impression remained of a flowing mane, there must have been some motive power to cause it to remain streaming out straight behind. Each strand moved through the ripples without being affected. Though the paddlers strained to the utmost to see the animal's face it thwarted their efforts by the continuous slow turning, until at last they were on their way, disappointed.

[illegible] Yet another creature from which supernatural good fortune has been obtained is the Mother of Snakes, a creature described in the following story.

A family living on Dalmas was reduced to the pain of starvation through the failure of their salmon-weir. It seemed as if the fish avoided it. One day a son of one of the owners, who had been in trouble with a woman in the lower valley, went off into the woods not far from his village, where he saw what he thought was a black bear. When it came nearer he realized that its chest was ripped with silver and but its tongue kept showing far beyond its jaws, hence that it must be the Mother of Snakes. This creature combines the qualities of bear and snake; it is about the size of the former, and it appears to have a serpent wrapped around its chest. It always pursues mortals and slays them, unless they know the proper means of escape. Luckily, the youth's father had long ago warned him what to do if chased by one, so he at once dashed off. First he ran downhill, but the animal gained on him, then he ran uphill, but still the monster drew nearer. The only way the fugitive could increase his lead was by ascending or descending in zigzags, since the bear's heavy legs then kept slipping. All day the pursuit continued, until towards dusk, when the youth was almost exhausted, he saw at last what he was looking for, a stump with splinters, projecting upwards. Pushing these apart with his hands, he leapt through the opening thus made, then climbed the tree once more, and pulled every one of the jagged splinters. Now the Mother of Snakes must always follow directly in the tracks of its quarry, and so it jumped through the passage the youth struck it across the back with the splinter which he had pulled out. Down fell the monster dead.

With his knife the lad cut off some of the animal's meat which he carried home, saying nothing to his father. Early the next morning the old man went to look at his salmon-weir, but as usual it was empty. As soon, however, as his son drew near, the river became packed with salmon, all heading towards the trap which was soon filled.

and those who have knowledge of them are sorcerers. Even a man of this kind is not outside the pale of society unless he practises indiscriminately; members of the Kwaxa society, for example, frequently employ one to kill an individual who has offended against their regulations (I, p. 740). A man is regarded as a sorcerer not on account of his knowledge but on account of the ends to which he applies it.

Closely related to, if not identical with, the belief that certain consequences follow certain acts, is the conviction that the infraction of ritual prohibitions brings disaster. There are many such taboos, for so they may be called. Though most important at the critical periods of life, puberty, pregnancy, while observing ceremonial chastity, and so forth, there are many which must be obeyed at all times.

Restrictions pertaining to the river and regulations at birth and death have already been described. Like magical acts, these often verge on the religious owing to the belief that disregard offends supernatural beings. On the whole, however, it seems as if most infractions bring their own punishment without intervention of higher powers, a concept which throws taboos into the category of magic rather than of religion, with the ever-present proviso that the two cannot be separated entirely from one another. With them may be associated a number of ritual acts connected with fishing and hunting in which, though the element of propitiation is not absent, it is satisfied by the performance of definite rites. Finally, there have been included in this chapter a number of unimportant beliefs, the psychology of which cannot be analysed.

What is the basis of these rites defined as Medicine, Magic, and Taboo? As already described, the Bella Coola either do not explain their origin and function, or merely state that Alquntam is responsible, as he is for every activity of life. This is unsatisfactory because many which, viewed scientifically, have neither curative nor causative power, produce the desired end. A child who has been "made" a carpenter during infancy, usually grows up to be proficient in that profession; the person would probably fall a victim. He became ill in May, 1923, and, though treated by a white doctor, grew steadily worse until he died in the latter part of June, three weeks after the year had elapsed. All the Bella Coola firmly believe that this was due to the power of thought. The father of the woman was a powerful chief whose thoughts were accordingly potent, and some consider that his concentrated desires and expectations were enough to kill the accused, while others believe that his expressed statements convinced others of the result, and that it was their combined thought that caused the death. It usually requires the thoughts of more than one individual to lead to this effect. The doctor who attended this man stated that his patient had shown symptoms of melancholy and resignation during his last sickness; it seems clear that the expectation of death must have lessened his chance of recovery.

A prominent theme in Bella Coola folk-lore is the belief that a person cannot long survive who has made himself unpopular. It is sometimes stated that a magical means was employed to remove him, and this was no doubt often the case; a person who learns that a "medicine" had been employed to kill him is in no fit mental condition to counteract the power of suggestion, particularly if he knows that others are aware of what has been done. His death is regarded as proof of the efficacy of the means employed and the belief of others grows stronger. As already stated, this conviction still survives. When this ethnological investigation was being conducted, a point under discussion was whether or not the Kimsquit people should be allowed to live in Bella Coola. One chief took the lead in objecting and everyone expected that, having thus roused the ire of would-be immigrants, he would die. He did so soon afterwards, and it is universally believed that it was caused by the concentration of the hostile thoughts of the Kimsquit. Similarly, the potency of taboos is increased by the fact that since time immemorial the thoughts of everyone have been opposed to any infraction. Consequently, an offender is liable to punishment both for breaking an injunction and because he has grown contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations.

To understand Bella Coola medicines is to, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practice them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those affecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or remedies.

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible.

of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 943

A Kitanqui man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 925 984 [961]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 955 [961]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [984] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

[illegible] was used by some of Fidler's successors. It was brought to the house and thrown in.

Taboos

[illegible] The Bella Coola regard as taboos those injunctions that are observed in the belief that their neglect would cause automatic punishment. The mechanism of enforcement is frequently not understood; it is enough to know that an unpleasant result would follow disobedience. Some taboos are in force at all times, others only during certain seasons of the year, and still others at critical periods of life. Since the psychology of such beliefs is essentially magical rather than religious, they could justifiably be grouped at this point. Unfortunately, to do so would destroy the continuity of accounts of birth, adolescence, death, ceremonial chastity, and many other aspects of Bella Coola life subject to taboo. The injunctions enforced by the River Guardian, the restrictions observed by a girl after puberty, the continence required after different sensations, all are taboos, disregard of which brings certain punishment. These and many others have already been described in connection with the activities to which they pertain. It is doubtful whether the Bella Coola have a single word to describe taboos in general, though they are all regarded as cmide, that is, as something which is ceremonially unclean.

Scarcely to be distinguished from taboos are ceremonial errors, yun ówat or kás ówat. Failure to give presents to heralds when a seat breaks beneath a chief or a dancer stumbles, or unnecessary activity during the year's waiting for the fruition of supernatural good fortune are ritual mistakes of this type. Neglect of such regulations brings punishment, though of a lesser kind than the breaking of taboos. If the error has been in connection with a ceremony, the offence can be wiped out by presents to heralds, and the terms yun ówat and kás ówat are likewise applied to some of their prerogatives such as the ability to claim clothing during the marriage of a chief's child.

Most taboos and errors can best be described with other

McDerwith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 262 562

Woman of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [326] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

2:Mc:Dwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575*
tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a 178 number of young men and women ignorant of the significance 746 of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in im- 128 pressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the 578 a'alt were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an 554 ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. 556
A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut 575* prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the preroga- 527 tives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a 575* member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organ- 869 ization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without spe- 784 cial invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance 774 is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that 626 it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non- 000

It is believed that if a non-
*575 initiate pass between the central fire and the raised platform
774 behind it, where the dancer is usually concealed, his spirit will 755 be attracted to this material object. Even though the performer is in another house at the time, he at once senses what [784] has happened and asks who has lost his spirit. The guilty [626] person, believing that he will die unless it is returned to him, always admits what he has done. The dancer, accompanied by several attendant kukusiut, proceeds to the raised platform, presses his cupped hands four times against it, and by sucking with his mouth pretends to draw forth the spirit. But since the dancer has a direct call (II, p. 6) from his supernatural patron (II, p. 6), he cannot come in contact with the uninitiated without danger to the latter, so he transfers the supernatural element to the leg of another kusiut, who is not dancing at the time, by pressing four times. This assistant then returns it to the owner by kneading it four times into the back of his neck.
[626] The reckless uninitiated person suffers no harm, but is more careful in future.

[784] Another belief is that if a non-member even walks close to [626] the doorway of the house during the four days, or more, that a dance is taking place, his spirit is attracted to the dancer, wherever he may be at the moment. Consequently the uninitiated use the beach path instead of the sidewalk. Accounts
[778] differ as to what results from the transgression. According to one, the dancer falls down as if dead, due to the contact between something non-sacred and the power with which he is imbued. It is at once recognized what has happened and any kusiut can draw forth the spirit by placing his two hands, shaped like a cup, against the dancer and sucking violently. While so doing he calls hoip loudly and any kukusiut present beat time furiously. As soon as the alien spirit has been removed, the dancer recovers. Still holding his hands cupped together, the extractor now proceeds to the house of the non-member and returns the latter's spirit by kneading it into the back of his neck. If this were not done, the loser would soon [784] become mad, try to eat dirt, and die. According to another

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck. 575* 774 755 [784]

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims. 575* 774 626

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural beings held in Nusmāt-a prior to the entry of Ālqunīām. As already described, it is believed that a supernatural element from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nusmāt-a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Ālqunīām enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened. 575* 787 776 796 777 761

*575 untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has 778 suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]."
425 Some of these vaults[1] are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some [784] chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

*575 According to Kimsquit belief, Ano'likwolsaix has a hus-778 band, Almoqhaikila, who dwells with her in every repository.
776 If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls dead before the power emanating from Ano'likwolsaix. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the kusiut society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

*575 *Turning now to the manner in which the kukusiut regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many kukusiut have, for example, [424] Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a
[773] fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the kukusiut was often [178] challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

[688] Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[1] [i.e. - a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount 796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kusiut prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kusiut ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, since none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kusiut society, is still a ●184 novice and cannot give a dance[11] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he [262] is a Cannibal, Scratch, or Breaker dancer he must not eat unsmoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[12] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign [302] tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened.
[292] Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [524] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games,
[525]

[11] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a complete dance the following year.

[12] This prohibition was once broken at Kwupa-ts. A skilled leader was required to arrange the texts at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Ikmil, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the infraction became known.

[Kusiut - Society Initiation]

prohibitions that last not for one year, but for four. X is not 575* subject to any other restraints. If he wishes to go hunting 784 he can remove his cedar-bark collar and hang it for convenience in the forest near his village, redonning it on his return. [524] [525]
The kukusiut show considerable interest in their new member, not only by warning him what he must not do, but by teaching him how to lance and to growl or make other of the necessary, but unusual, noises. During the remainder of the ceremonial 575* season X is required to attend every kusiut dance, thereby 533 learning much of the ceremonial, and during the following 535 summer his relatives, especially if food is plentiful, frequently invite the kukusiut to their house. The singers beat out well-known tunes, or practise those which will be required for the following winter; if a song has been composed for X he dances in time to it in the style proper to his prerogative. Formerly, when there were many novices, dances of this type took place frequently and were useful in giving constant practice to singers and neophytes alike. As no calls from supernatural patrons can come at this time of year, it follows that all such dances are of a non-sacred nature, although the uninitiated are excluded. During his period as a novitiate, X has one 575* privilege; he can take food from anyone at any type of cere- 264 mony. It is remembered that one novice was even bold enough to take food which had been placed as an offering for the dead.

When the next kusiut season opens, X attends every per- 575* formance. This is probably the most thrilling and nerve- 781 racking period in his life. He does not know exactly when he 796 will be allowed to give his dance, since that is a matter of arrangement between his relatives and the marshals, but he knows that the time will soon be at hand. When the great day, or rather night, actually comes, X is usually in a state of abject terror. The rite itself does not differ from those about to be described except that the first song relates the manner in which X found the repository. But the mental attitude of X differs greatly from that of an old performer. One informant,

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 while X dances to and fro behind the fire. In succession the *796 six songs previously composed are resung and X dances to 533 each. The singers would be disgraced should they forget either a tune or a text, so they take advantage of lsuxtämem to practise them all. Later in the season, when numerous kukusiut have received calls, the singers beat out the time and words for each and the owner dances. The general effect is remarkably impressive in the dim light of one of the large wooden houses, nor is the music displeasing to the ear. After the singing of X's seventh song, there is a pause while food is distributed amid the admonitions of the marshals. Once more the singers take up their sticks and beat out the song most recently composed for X; the audience joins in softly and he dances. The kukusiut now disperse with the exception of the novices who sleep in X's house. He himself does not withdraw to his platform. The ritual of X's lsuxtämem differs from that of most kukusiut since his comrades have already learnt six songs for him. On most occasions they hear and practise one only, to which he dances in the manner described.

*575 The next day is nusiutälsap. About eleven o'clock in the *796 morning the heralds go to every house calling out:
532 Tłpänap, łłpänap, kukusiaot, "Cut, cut, ye kukusiut."
*[203] The uninitiated do not realize that this is an invitation to gather to cut wood for masks. X, or his relatives, always provides a meal which is eaten before the main work is attended to. Then the singers group themselves and compose still [533] another song[11] for X, with the same theme, but different words, as the one composed the previous evening. When ready, they chant it loudly so that all can hear and learn, and then sing it with the audience joining in, while X dances. After a short pause, X asks as many of his comrades as he desires to go with [784] him to the forest to cut wood. Some member of the party carries a whistle which he sounds at intervals, thus warning

[176] [11]This would normally be a dancer's second song, the large number practised for X before the coming of his call being unusual. Not many years ago a powerful chief created the innovation of having one song only instead of two. Some kukusiut follow his example whereas others still use two.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

any uninitiated from their path. The kukusiut also call hoip repeatedly, a further deterrent to the inquisitive. Alder and birch trees are selected and the hewers start to work. Whenever a tree falls, one of the party calls out:

Xwu....

This meaningless ejaculation, spoken as if by X, has the virtue of causing the tree to fall gently. The logs are cut into sections and as many provided as will be needed, since it is contrary to kusiut custom for more than one trip to be made for wood. Towards dusk the cutters return, each carrying a burden by means of a tump-line across the forehead. The wood is laid softly on the floor, for it would be a gross insult to throw it down roughly. Meanwhile heralds are summoning the kukusiut with a call of:

Nusiutälsap kukusiaot.

X has long since consulted his relatives on the one hand and the marshals on the other, concerning the number of masks to be used, and the beings to be portrayed. A mask of Ano'likwolsaix is prepared for every kusiut dance, but with this exception there is no uniformity in the representations. A man always shows his patron, as well as any beings intimately connected with him. Thus X must have a mask of Noäkynim, many of his passengers, and the supernatural beings who meet him at the mouth of the river. A present must be given to the carver of every mask, hence their actual number depends upon the expenditure X and his relatives are willing to make.

At dusk the kukusiut are summoned by the heralds. X is with the marshals behind the fire and he heeds their advice as to the best carpenter for any special mask. When all have assembled X holds up one of the blocks of wood, calls on one of the kukusiut by name and says:

"For Noäkynim," or whatever may be the figure required.

As the carpenter comes forward to take the billet the heralds call out:

"Pay attention to him," and as the carpenter takes the wood, X calls out at the top of his voice, xwu....

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the one that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the path" of the patron. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and reiterated that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law.

575* 796* 821 [688] [177]

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to kusiut dancers, the Moon also has many human protégés. Among them is Nulwimäx, "The Moon When It Is Unobscured," of Tcmotl, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X.

[776] [551] [424]

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the kukusiut presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Asiutänem:[97] A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water.

575* 796*

The two Aiqwaiust: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse.

821 776

The two Snitsmän·a:[98] These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who come to earth to assist stricken kukusiut.

The song also describes how no supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that obeyed by uninitiated with regard to passing outside a house where a kusiut ceremony is taking place.

[784]

[97] Asiutänem is the usual term for ghost; no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the woman living in the moon.

[98] There is difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings.

[775] [192]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When all hope has been abandoned, they are summoned and the relative completes the ceremony, doing only that part of it left undone by the original recipient of the call. The principle is the same as that described when a novice dies, that someone must finish the rite. This aspect of the kusiut ceremonial is still preserved tenaciously as the writer found to his cost. It was proposed that he be formally initiated into the society, but this was not allowed on the ground that he would not be present the following winter to complete the rites necessitated by the coming of the call.

575* 796* 766 787 [123]

The Final Rite

The commencement of the kusiut season is regulated by the coming of Neăkynm, but its conclusion is a matter of arrangement. By February the number of kukusiut wishing to dance has become negligible and the marshals decide to terminate the ceremonial season. It must be remembered that an enclosure has been built in every house where an important kusiut dance has taken place, and that as long as these are in existence the uninitiated have not been allowed to live in those houses. The social life of the community has accordingly been profoundly disturbed. Of course several dances may have taken place in a single dwelling, but even allowing for that, the fact remains that the uninitiated have been forced to dwell temporarily in perhaps only one or two houses. The most obvious mark of the end of the ceremonial season is the destruction of these enclosures.

575* 796* 591 784

A few nights after the last nĕusam, the heralds summon the kukusiut to the house in which it took place. They sit down but the usual droning is omitted. Presently sticks are distributed and one of the singers takes his place to lead in the customary frenzied beating. But before he raises his baton, one of the marshals, or another kusiut with ability in that respect, steps to the centre of the house and spits noisily in all directions, his aim being to deluge the house and spectators with a spray of saliva. Then the singer leads the beating of

575* 796* 787 784

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

784 575 796 [787]

sticks, while everyone calls out, hoip. This is repeated four times. The sticks continue to sound irregularly as the younger men pull the enclosure to pieces and throw it on the central fire. By these means the kukusiut have been freed from their contact with the supernatural and, perhaps even more important, the repositories have been "tied up," to use the native term, for another year. Those members of the society whose dances have taken place in the house now wash the black from their faces and all share a light meal. The marshals take this last opportunity of addressing their fellows, impressing on them the necessity of maintaining the secrecy of the rites during the summer season. Above all, they warn them to hide the whistles and other paraphernalia most carefully. This concludes the season's ceremony in the house in question; some of the kukusiut withdraw, others remain, and the uninitiated are free to enter and take up the old threads of family life, as it was before the coming of the first call.

If it is not too late at night the party may move to a second house and remove the taboo from it in the same way. More often this is done on the following night, when a second body of kukusiut are allowed to wash. Another house is visited on the next evening, and so on in succession till all the enclosures are burnt and the only visible mark of what has happened is the collar of dyed cedar-bark worn by each novice.

[424] There may be certain prerogatives connected with this finale which could not be learnt owing to its discontinuance for many years. In fact, one old woman claimed to have a definite right to sing at the destruction of the enclosures, but it was unfortunately impossible to investigate the matter.

575 796 182 571

Concluding Observations and History

It is virtually impossible to overestimate the importance of the sociological aspects of the society. During the ceremonial season the whole fabric of social life is altered; families are divided, parents and children being separated in many

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

B Aiakāsiptsmālelandja I was not good enough(d)	ältidāk·ānatldai when came to me	dikilomomātutsldai my patron;

533*

umḵumstqwosamellandai
I told him so.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wasqoānuilets·ltiamālnks No one passed outside his house(e)	āmātaḵs·amālimdai within sight	diqotlqoālimḵodai when blackened his face

enllatlaikilasudai
Moon(f).

(a) This song, composed by Reuben Schooner, was used during the kusiut season of 1923-4.

(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

(c) The reference is to the call. The meaning of this whole first part is highly problematical; the references are intentionally obscure to impress the uninitiated.

(d) That is: I did not have sufficient goods to distribute for a ceremony.

(e) The theme here changes from a description of the dancer's experience to an account of his patron's actions in the land above.

(f) That is: When Moon, the dancer's patron, blackened his face, no one passed even within sight of his house. As uninitiated are forbidden to pass in front of a dwelling in which a kusiut dance is taking place, so supernatural beings avoid the vicinity of Moon's house when he is performing. The blackening of the face refers to an eclipse, but has an added significance since it is an intimation of a dance. [776] [784] [821]

As already described (II, p. 229), the Otter dance differs from most kusiut rites and the songs are likewise peculiar. They do not vary from year to year and the following example, used during the season of 1923-4, contains many points of an unusual nature, not even understood by the participants themselves. It has only two parts, each with a different tune, and the performer carried out her rite by dancing in two distinct ways. In the first part, she raised and lowered her fore-arms as is customary, but followed this with a smoothing motion, as if she were levelling upturned earth. The significance of this seems to have been forgotten entirely.

533* [575]* [796]* [535]

Song Used for Kuxwlān·i, a Female Kimsquit Otter Dancer(a)

A Aiaiāzuloqodux It has always been so,	yoo daḵisyumyumdux it(b) has no shame(c);	sawāsikpāḵstnamsdux all see it

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

he took a sip of water, followed by another piece of dried fish, 726 chewed it four times, and washed it down as before. This was 789 four times repeated so that the provender consumed consisted of four morsels of salmon, each chewed four times, and four sips of water; it was most important that no more should be taken into the mouth than could be swallowed at a single gulp. Having eaten, the bow-man passed the food which he had taken from the store to the paddler behind him who ate and drank in the same manner, except that he chewed with the other side of his mouth, corresponding to the fact that he paddled on the other side of the canoe from the man in the bow. So the food and drink was passed down to the captain. If possible, he was required to eat whatever was left, though if there was too much, he threw the remains over his shoulder into the water. He was also expected to swallow whatever water was passed to him, but if there was too much he would lie back, his head projecting over the stern, and pour it out over his face so that it fell into the ocean. As the food and drink were completely consumed, so it was believed the enemy would be annihilated. If the bow-man had failed to take out enough salmon and water, the captain received none of it, since no second portion could be served.

Each captain took with him a supply of dyed and undyed 726 cedar-bark which was stored in the bow of the canoe. During 714 the course of the day, the party would land and the chief decide upon some decoration made by combining strands of the two 824 colours of bark to serve as a distinguishing mark for members of the same canoe. He took out as much bark as he thought would suffice, and the bow-man was the first to don the symbol. The second paddler followed, and each in turn did the same in order of his position in the canoe. If too much had been taken, the captain had to wear collars of whatever was left over; if too little, he had to do without. Having thus arrayed them- 726 selves, the party continued until nightfall when a secluded spot was chosen for camping. Wood was collected and fires laid, 784
but no light was ever struck and the warriors lay around the 722

726 cold sticks to sleep. Meanwhile, their wives at home were 784 required to be very careful, since a woman's heedless playing 722 would cause injury to her husband, and faithlessness, his death. These restrictions were obligatory during the absence of the expedition.

726 As the party neared the enemy's country, they would conceal the craft under projecting trees by day and travel only at night. When within striking distance, a scouting canoe was sent forward to learn the hostile dispositions, the best means of approach, and so forth. This was usually done at dusk, and when the scouts had returned, the party would steal quietly through the forest and hide behind the unsuspecting village. At dawn the leader would give the signal, and the attackers would rush forward with a fierce shout, killing all the men and [727] seizing women and children as slaves. When captives were [422] taken by slave members of the expedition, they belonged to the latter's masters. The victors would cut off the heads of [567] their victims, seize what loot they could, set fire to the village and rush home before support could arrive from neighbouring towns. At first, the slaughter was usually a somewhat unpleasant task, but as the warriors became inflamed with the heat of battle, they began to delight in killing, and even women and children frequently suffered.

727 The exulting victors sped homewards, rejoicing at their success but somewhat fearful that they might be cut off by overwhelming reinforcements. During the journey, each warrior who had taken a head removed the scalp by cutting the skin around the cranium close above the eyebrows and ears. These trophies were washed at the rock Skolsexumusta on the fiord below Bella Coola. When within sight of home, the [533] captain stood up in the canoe and sang again his xe-tla song, a symbol of victory as the bloody scalps were held aloft. Women and children would rush forth to greet the conquerors who landed amid scenes of wild enthusiasm and rejoicing.

[422] Prisoners of war became the property of those who had [567] taken them, with the exception of those captured by slaves.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B
C 648
726

The other agreed, so they paddled in and landed at the bottom of the village, heedless of the fact that it was full of Carriers. The Nuxalk people seem to have remained passive, but the angry Carriers came rushing forth and Ołmikmq spoke proudly to them:

"You would be dead as your chief if we had not lost our weapons."

The two brothers walked slowly up the long sidewalk of the village, while the Carriers skulked around, uttering threats, casting stones and shooting arrows. Some of the latter stuck in their backs, but long previously both Tsā·kmai and Ołmikmq had eaten part of a tsisiutl which had rendered their bodies impervious to such wounds. Arrived at the upper end of the village, they stopped and waited, making no attempt to defend themselves, until they were killed. At intervals throughout the day the Carriers treated the two bodies with ignominy, now thrusting spears into them, now beating them, and all this time not a single Bella Coola dared even to peep[a], so much were they filled with fear of the Carriers who, when roused as they then were, fight like mad dogs. In the late afternoon one of the women thrust a knife into the eyes of the fallen warriors. Even this insult did not rouse the Nuxalk people themselves, but Winās, one of their slaves, felt called upon to take action. Before being captured, he had been a person of importance in his own home and the Bella Coola had allowed him to become a leading member of the kusiut society; in the course of time he had become entirely reconciled to his fate, and even thought as a Bella Coola which gave him the necessary assurance to address the Carriers.

B
C 648
727
B [567]

"Wa, wa," he said. "See the breadth of the sky." I have never seen, nor have I even heard of such a thing as you have done today. Truly you have wiped your feet on all that is sacred and powerful."

This speech for the first time brought the enormity of their offence home to the Carriers. The actual taking of life did not affright them, but in their excitement they had overlooked what was to Winās the most obvious sin: they had passed and repassed on the sidewalk outside a house where a kusiut dance was taking place. Thus reminded of the danger to which they had exposed themselves, the Carriers withdrew.

B
[688]

Next day the Nuxalk people buried the four victims. Qāmālwem had been a mighty chief and, being distantly related, they would normally have given him an elaborate funeral, but now they acted as if dazed and unaware of his prowess. A man who owned a powerful medicine put some of it in the eyes of the two who had been mutilated by the Carrier woman; as the bodies began to decompose, those who had killed them began to suffer from eye-trouble, and the woman became blind. Believing that their sin had caused their misfortunes, the Carriers fled home.

B
[754]

[a] To call attention in this way to the breadth of the universe carries with it the implication that it will fall to crush those who have broken a sacred law.

B [784
195]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 ni'ple: Miniature copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Nu-ni: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
nnum: To dance.
[825] nnumnla: Those who dance at marriages.
nnuo: Mallard duck.
[824] nnumnum: Night of potlatch on which nuxul initiates appear for a short dance.
nnuth: Berries of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] nuhinkin: Thimble-like wooden dish.
'nuhlunkain: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Nunuxin: Name acquired by a Rivers Inlet man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Nunulim: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
'Nu-unu-a: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Scratcher; the designation was derived from Rivers Inlet.
Nu-uh-a: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Nu-unuhai: Influential Bella Coola chief.
*[776] Nuhulkhain, "The Resident": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
[784] nuhunum: 1—Fourth day of a kusiut dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Nupup: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
nunul, "Little Dance": Term of grandiose humility.
nunuum: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the kusiut season.
Nunuu-nuhusin: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Thitcaplilan-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nunuvinulain: Kusiut name of a Nuxalk man.
nlumlumum: One who has preserved a marriage song.
nlumulmuh: The intangible strengthening that comes to a bridegroom as a result [585] of the creation of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's [431] relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
Nuhulkin: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tunisi in the [524] beginning of time.
nuly'cut: Wooden ring used in a game.
Nuhinch: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the deer [825] formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
nukpaya': Otter.
Nuulinch: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Nuinumlain: 1—"The Restorer": One of Thitcaplilan-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[556] nunup, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a cipper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Nuinulimut: Shaman's name derived from Thitcaplilan-a. nutumlin: "I have saved you."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

omätuslaix: Goods obtained by a man's own exertions and forming the nucleus of his wealth for a potlatch. [556] omätuts, plural, alomätuts: Kusiut patron.
O'miatl: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
O'mielkus: One of the first women to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
O'mielmai: Son of Raven in the beginning of time.
Omqomkilka: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle at Siskiutl in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Tsmotl woman who died about 1915.
'Omilom: ustämq village.
Omqut: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola kusiotem dancer.
Onikotl: 1—Ancestral name of a Snuhli man.
2—Celebrated Kimsquit hunter.
'onikwatl: Any non-sacred rite, especially an a'alk dance held subsequent to the kusiut season.
Onixwalicus: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit kusiotem dancer.
Omqwak: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
onosälpstumm: The taking of food to another tribe for ceremonious bestowal.
Onstcitoma: Supernatural being who sleeps perpetually, literally, "The Sleepy One."
Oqmikumq: 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.
o'qok: Skunk cabbage. [824] Oqolikts: Supernatural being, herald of Älquntäm.
oqpä: The steeping of nsaok novices in smoke, this being the final rite of initiation.
Oqsmai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Siskiutl in the beginning of time.
oqla: Temporary fish-dam of interlocked branches. [226] Oqwan·i: Small mountain on south side of the Bella Coola valley behind Qomqo·ts.
O·qwi·: Place near Stuix.
'Oqwolikdmut: One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
oqxälemsk': The leading across of a bride to a groom during a wedding. [585] osälontäm: Hereditary tendency.
osdakän: One made sick by salmon, especially a woman who suffers from this cause through disregard of adolescence taboos. [827] osipax: Variety of dog salmon found at Bella Bella. [784]
o·sntdiqiuwaix: Conferring of ancestral names at a potlatch. [825] osnäxmunaix: The performance of a kusiut dance with supernatural dog salmon as patron.
Ososykpumq, "Treeless Place": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
ospälam: Distribution of strips of mountain goat skin at marriage. [585] ostämnuks: "Where are you going?"
Ostcälikq", "Lake-Swallower": A mythical monster.
oswallaix: First night of a potlatch. [601]
oltik: Third eldest brother or sister.
Oltuyu: Name of Mink as chief.
O·lok di Stähmq: One of the names of the supreme god.
Owwa: Celebrated Wäoyä·a warrior.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Ṭsi-dis: Kitlobe River.
Ṭsiwalaks: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825]
Isima: Animal's entrails. [763]
Isi-t: Note of the kwakwas, foretelling death.
Isitaowi: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
Inklusnam: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [586]
Ṭakwi: Restoration Bay. [431]
Ṭalki, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [825]
2—Bald eagle.
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Iux: Novice, either kusiut or shaman.
Ixattmem or Ixattalaix: First night of a kusiut dance.
Iskankdmut: 1—Heavy coppers in Łemoqwa's house.
2—Name obtained from these by a Sattia man in the beginning of time.
Iski-kdimut: Kusiutem rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]
Isla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
Islaqwaix: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the perpetrator. [784]
Islla: Presents distributed when a nasak initiate dances. They are provided by the donor "To Shield Our Eyes" from the tutwinam and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]
Isma: Belt. [465]
Isna: Nettle. [824]
Ṭsemlaks: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
Ispadjut: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431]
Ispeit: Small woodpecker, species unidentified.
Ispatka: Winter wren. [824]
Ispuelt: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825]
Isubilia: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] Isulkm: Prompter.
Ṭsumlaks: One of the first women to settle at Snulali in the beginning of time.
Ṭsuatlink: One of the first men to settle at Tsmosl in the beginning of time. [824] Isuwaslp: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825] tutukuqs: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic.
tutupta-i: Trout, plural.
tutus'ats'thauk: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
tutuya, "What Is Good": Synonym for dsamamtnam, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Tutuel-as: Synonym for Nutsilleisalkm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
tutwinam: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to nasak and a'alk initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Tualalit: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825

[775] [774] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to earth again to reanimate a new body."* Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to [785] be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ashes across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves [183] *There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously[11] either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.[12] As he scours himself, he asks Mnakais to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Alquntăm actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Mnakais has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Mnakais," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Mnakais," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [224] [926] [985]

[11] Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance; indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently. [515]

[12] The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-smoothed river pebble. [296] [823] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-
224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Minakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Alquntäm, under the name of Minakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Minakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
825 as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qnax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on [291] many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any 424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole
821 community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemālotla. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Ałya Xemxemālotlas,"	nuqwihdit	łłok	di sony"nudx
Hail, Xemxemālotla,	open	the loftiest	of your heaven
słāxyuxumdu	dji sīxwuiqnu		tcim nānudjix.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemālotla is the being who takes care of Tłāqmā-ks in the upper skyland. It is said that [776] this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather.

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he [824] gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [785]

"The vocative form.

Mellwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [261] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire titbits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"W'ai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Mesatche Nose, [133]
[756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 small particles of food on a fire; these become large when they 782 reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Ānukāldimut kuskao," "This is to make straight your road, beloved one."

[756] The needs and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, realized that food placed on the ground does not reach the [372] land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire sink through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made [753] with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach-aches and other ailments.

782 Other instances, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient feature is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a [889] large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religion proper, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. I, chap. XI).

THE OBSERVANCE OF CEREMONIAL CHASTITY

831 In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have 785 yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to occur. This is by the practice of sxetsta, ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is necessary to understand the attitude of the Bella Coola to the sexual act itself. Although it is a normal part of life (for no one would voluntarily abstain from all contact) yet the union of man and woman does not lack import, since its very humanness distinguishes those who practise it in the eyes of supernatural beings, both anthropomorphic and zoomorphic. Those who indulge excessively become so over-charged with this characteristic that their undertakings are certain to fail, whereas those who remain continent for a considerable period are so freed from the contagion of mankind that they become almost supernatural themselves and always succeed in their ventures. If, after a period of restraint, a man holds intercourse, this essentially human act adds typical human strength to that accumulated by chastity. Chastity alone gives power; but chastity consummated by intercourse at the proper period increases that power enormously. This somewhat complicated belief is accepted without question by every Bella Coola, playing an important part in their lives, even in their present degraded condition. The following story illustrates the point rather clearly:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

831 785 [184] 539 831 785

A party of Kingcome Inlet people had been present at a ceremonial at Smith Inlet. While returning home, one canoe, containing a chief, his wife, and eighteen or twenty commoners, was caught by an unexpected south wind and driven on the rocky islet, Sno-ahddx, where the lighthouse now stands. The occupants managed to reach shore and to save their canoe. The islet was barren, but they made a rude shelter of boughs in which they lived while the storm continued. Every day the chief sent out the young men to hunt seals, and every day they returned empty-handed. The little food they had with them on landing was now exhausted and they were starving. One night, when they were almost famished, the chief said to his wife:

"The youths have done their best. Now that death is before us I want to create a kindly feeling. I am going out, probably to die during the night, and I want you to allow each young man to sleep with you. It is a strange request but our condition is unusual, and the story of your shame will never be known, because we shall soon all be dead."

[837]

The wife acquiesced. The chief then told one of the young commoners to lie with her, and afterwards to tell a comrade to do likewise,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 who, in turn, would pass on the request so that it might reach each
831 member of the party. Not only is it contrary to custom for a commoner 785 to hold intercourse with a chief's wife, but it is unknown for a man to ask another to sleep with his wife, so the youth was surprised and rather [837] frightened. However, he acceded to the request, passed on the instructions, and washed. As he was bathing, a seal appeared in the surf beside [622] him, and he was able to kill it easily. Each in turn behaved in the same manner, washed, and then killed a seal. Next morning, when the chief returned he was delighted that all had turned out in accordance with his hopes. At the same time the wind dropped so that the party was able to return home.

831 The power which had brought the seals within reach of the 785 men had been engendered in their own bodies by these ritual acts after a rather lengthy period of continence. The Bella Coola believe that such a procedure always increases their strength and ability, therefore giving them a better chance to gain favour from supernatural beings, and to take advantage of opportunities offered. Hunters in particular are careful with [224] regard to their marital life since animals know their acts and 825 thoughts, and hide from one who has not made himself "clean"
[783] by continence, its termination, and bathing. Sxetsta consists of these three elements, but since continence is the most prominent feature, the term may be translated as "ceremonial chastity."

In its simplest form this comprises merely the three elements already mentioned. The longer the continence, the greater the power engendered by its termination. A man who has practised abstinence for a year has such strength within himself that almost any good fortune may occur, and cases are known in which it has been carried out for even longer periods. More often, an individual practises ceremonial chas-[184] tity in accordance with a family tradition. One old man gave the following recipe and was most emphatic that it always 224 brought success in hunting and fishing; he added that on the 785 two occasions he had tried it, he had brought back a phenomenal number of skins.

A person planning to set out on an expedition for any purpose should remain continent for several nights to increase his 224 generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the 785 rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty [801] in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power [836] in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know [184] this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect [825] of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals [785] has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[34] is to observe contin- [824] ence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately [278] afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[35] as pos- [211]

[34]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.
[35]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines
785 have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before [824] washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all
[278] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals
[783] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, e·m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kusiut dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Ālquntärı is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy abstin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

831 ence was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been 785 driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times [773] it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chastity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years [789] ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a tombstone for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went seal hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his [789] boat, none the worse for his mishap. The men who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella [124] Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only [783] potent in itself, but it is also the favourite means by which a man can cleanse himself of the impurities of human existence so that he finds favour with the supernatural.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

this practice had been handed down with the name from the 223 beginning of time; another man stated that it was no pre- [424] rogative and could be used by anyone. The best time for hunting was at the equinoxes, and Nusxalxiq always observed [785] ceremonial chastity in such a way that it terminated at that date. Before setting out, the hunter prepared a net of the shape shown in the accompanying sketch (Fig. 1). The net was stretched over a wooden framework, about ten feet long and four feet wide; counterbalanced by a long and heavy handle. The whole affair was called, "The House-like Thing." Choosing a still night, the hunter used to set out in his canoe paddled by a number of assistants. Nusxalxiq would place himself in the bow with his net, and in the middle of the craft a small fire was kept burning with [372] resinous sticks piled beside it so that it could be kindled into bright flames at a moment's notice. As the canoe was slowly paddled along the shore, the geese were half attracted, half repelled by the light. Unwilling to take to flight, they used to swim around at the edge of the illumination and so were guided into some narrow opening of the shore. Then Nusxalxiq would throw his net so that the end farthest from the handle first touched the water and as the latter came crashing down it imprisoned a number of birds. Others, bewildered by the light and the falling net, tried to fly outwards and were knocked down by the paddlers. These were retrieved at once and the necks of those caught in the net were wrung at leisure. It is said that this method of hunting was almost always successful.

FIG. 1
Goose Net

Another Tāl·io hunting device which, however, was not 225 transmitted and may have been merely an individual stroke of genius, not an inherited prerogative, was employed to kill [424] seals. The last to use this method was the father's father of an elderly Bella Coola. This man used to go out at night in a

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

old man came back to Bella Coola with his son, a man about twenty-five years of age. During his absence all his relatives had died, and he was forgotten. He went to the house of a man with whom his ancestors had intermarried generations ago, explained who he was, and was welcomed. The old man and his son have since lived there, although it is doubtful if the owner of the house had ever heard of their existence, and the son cannot even speak the Bella Coola language. 602 476

X and Y themselves are not entirely overlooked in the exchange of presents between their two families. If Y's father is well pleased with his son-in-law he may show this not only publicly, which redounds to his own credit, but by the communication of secret lore such as a special number of nights for ceremonial chastity. Conversely, if Y should not be a kusiut, her father-in-law often asks her father's permission to make her a member of that society. The woman's father is naturally pleased and makes no objections; so she is initiated, using a name and prerogative embodied in her husband's family. Commonly too, they give her one of their ancestral names at any convenient ceremony later than the wedding. In conformity with the rules already explained, if Y should die childless the names return to X's relatives, but if there are children they pass to them. It is said that susaok names can never be transferred in this manner. 606 431 425 [785] [575] [553] [575]

Y's father and other relatives continue to take an interest in her ceremonial welfare and in her personal comfort. If X beats or otherwise abuses her, they expostulate; and if his cruelty becomes unbearable they shelter their daughter when she runs away from her husband. If X should murder Y, she would be revenged by her family. Only one instance of this was known, when the murderer avoided his pursuers by fleeing from the country. As a rule a wife is fairly well treated, though this depends on the character of the husband, the importance of her relatives, and the amount of goods expended to validate the marriage. Among slaves and persons of no influence, it is assumed that a husband may sell his wife as a 593 [602] [627] [567] [432] [648] occasionally preserved as the theme of a sisaok dance. The term is also somewhat loosely applied to any instance of supernatural help. The reason for the receipt of power is often attributed to the strong supernatural elements of the favoured one, or to his having made himself agreeable to supernatural beings by the observance of ceremonial chastity or other propitiatory means. A few individuals assert that there is a tendency for supernatural aid to follow certain ancestral families, but such a belief is not general.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The following story is typical of the kind of assistance granted although no clear picture can be presented except through the native medium—a number of different tales, such as are given in the following chapter.

THE GOOD FORTUNE OF 'Yeäxdji

Not long after the earth was first populated there were living at Ḳwiyai, near Namu, two Bella Bella men, Ḳomo'sala and Ḳälkum, with their wives, relatives, and slaves. Ḳomo'sala's son, 'Yeäxdji, fell a victim to the virulent disease, llokulg, which causes the face of the sufferer to swell and his flesh to rot. When the case appeared hopeless, his father called his herald to tell the people to abandon Ḳwiyai, and to leave the dying youth alone. Accordingly they removed the planks from the houses, packed them on canoes with all the food and clothing from the village and went away, leaving the unfortunate 'Yeäxdji alone in his misery. Only an old slave woman took pity on him; before she left she hid some glowing embers with frayed cedar-bark in a large clam-shell and told him where to find them.

'Yeäxdji wept bitterly when his relatives departed, but presently he dried his tears and set about making the best of his position. He unearthed the clam-shell and blew the embers into a fire. Next he made a hammer with which he built a rude shelter. A diet of clams at first satisfied him, but before long he made a hook in hopes of catching some trout. He went up the river to a suitable spot, dropped in his baited hook and almost immediately felt a bite. He hauled up his line eagerly, but it was only a worthless bull-head. Angrily he pulled out the hook and threw the fish back into the water. Almost immediately there was a bite, again he drew up his line only to find as before that it was a bull-head, which he hurled back into the river. This happened twice more, until, discouraged at landing only four useless fish, he wrapped his head

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777 787 * [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is siye, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mätsqus or a sisiutl. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a cranny to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mätsqus or a sisiutl, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach bursts. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cleanliness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
* 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one [424] is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he own ● [785] a portion of a mätsqus or a sisiutl, through failure to observe ceremonial chastity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mätsqus and the sisiutl are the same animal, which can assume these two forms;
others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-[173] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[184] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

* 787 The different types of appearances, and the different types of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 811 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the sum 182 total of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mätsqus, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory means of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that disaster would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

777 According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mätsqus was brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own
* 787 ancestors, Omqomkilka. It is to this fact that he attributes [773] his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is fre-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 elapsed, he fetched his musket from its hiding-place and again
224 began to use it. Thenceforth he never missed his aim; every shot brought down an animal.

Before the days of muskets good fortune could likewise be obtained by the discoverer of the nest of a mätsqus. Each contains small particles of the skin of all animals, including human beings, plucked from them in their sleep by humming birds and toads. The finder must touch the nest with his stick, such as is always carried by hunters, then break it and throw it away, saying as he does so:

"May I see you at . . . tomorrow." This means next year.

He names his favourite hunting-ground. The finder must not say anything to anyone about his discovery, and for one [785] year he must observe continence. If he then goes to the locality mentioned, he will there find his stick, the one which he broke when he touched the nest, though it will be invisible to anyone else. Adhering to its end will be four hairs of the mätsqus. These he must hide for a year, wrapped in some of his own clothing, taking care that it is an article which he has long worn and which is accordingly saturated with his essence.
[785] During this period, too, he must observe continence. Two years after finding the nest, he will be able to hunt with phenomenal success. The knowledge of this proper procedure has [424] been handed down in an ancestral family for many generations.

On the occasion when the two men had seen the nest they 777 continued their journey, each chiding the other for his failure
* 787 to take advantage of the opportunity put in his path. Before [776] long they saw a footprint where no man had been and knew that it must be that of Twalällit, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats. In spite of remonstrances, the comrade scraped up a little dirt from the track into his handkerchief. In this he did wrong, especially as he had failed to take advantage of the opportunity presented to him by the nest of the monster toad. That night as the two were encamped a slide came thundering down beside them, and they barely escaped [761] with their lives. Not long afterwards the erring man died,

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Supernatural good fortune has also been obtained from the "Mothers" of certain plants. 777

Among the roots that are sought for when a man intends to give a potlatch are those of clover and of okäl, a grass which grows on flats near the sea. Once the aunt of an elderly (in 1923) Bella Coola woman dug up the Mother of Okäl, a root, thick as her thumb, but shaped like a woman. Perhaps the reason that she found it was because she was digging in the darkness, after the setting of the sun. The woman, ignorant of the proper procedure, did nothing, with the result that her hands became painfully swollen. If she had wrapped the root in a portion of her used clothing and kept it hidden for one year, without saying anything about her find, it would have brought her supernatural good luck. 824 [556] [753]

Another woman found an elderberry as large as a baseball, and shaped like the mask worn above the forehead by a member of the sisaok society. Her father, an old man skilled in such matters, wrapped the berry in his daughter's soiled clothing and kept it carefully hidden in her box. It brought her supernatural good luck because, no matter how much or how often she gave away presents, goods always came to her.

SUPERNATURAL GOOD LUCK FROM STONES

Stones are among the objects from which supernatural good luck can be obtained. A person who has long observed ceremonial chastity may be fortunate enough to hear what seems to be the weeping of a new-born infant, as he passes in his canoe beneath some steep ocean cliff. Then, if he watches, he will see a stone being born from a larger one at the level of the sea. If the observer takes the infant-stone, wraps it in his soiled clothing and stores it among his possessions, it will act as other bringers of supernatural good fortune by luring all kinds of valuables to the owner. In fact, such a stone is said to be so potent that if left in an empty box for some time, it will attract enough skins to fill the receptacle. 777 787* 823 [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 like power, and will tell their son to try the same method. In
* 787 this way a descendant of shamans has a better chance to become one than anybody else. Another indication that a person is likely to become a shaman is to be wakened from sleep by a mouse. As he sits up, hastily, thinking that someone has called [825] him, all that he sees is the disappearing rodent. Mice have a rather peculiar position in the eyes of the Bella Coola, since they believe that these animals regard themselves as superior to mankind.

"The food of mortals is our food," say the mice.

His parents now tell the boy that he is likely to become a shaman, and that he must accordingly take great care of him-[785] self. If he is an adult, he will begin to observe ceremonial chastity, and in any case will spend much time alone, avoiding the trivialities of life in the village, and will think little about mundane matters. At intervals he goes alone to the forest, especially to some spot beside a waterfall, the kind of place that supernatural beings frequent. Here he lies down, sometimes for several days, with evergreen boughs spread beneath and above him. These are clean and nullify the mortal odour so objectionable to supernatural beings, so that his chance of obtaining a visitation is increased. He does not know what may appear to him, but he carefully remembers his dreams[9] which, as his thoughts are centred on lofty subjects, are likewise about matters of importance. If his dream is sufficiently clear to warrant the term vision, the recipient should remain, fasting, for four days on the spot where it occurred, and should say nothing about it when he returns home. His strength increases with every vision, until at last, sometimes after a period of thirty years or more, he will obtain a real one and the power to cure a disease. Sometimes dreams come to him in the village, but they are more likely to occur in a secluded spot in the [178] forest. It is impossible to obtain examples of these dreams since, for a long time, no one has been brave enough to seek [828] [9]The Bella Coola do not differentiate between mental images that appear in sleep and visions seen during waking hours.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

power in this way, but their type can be judged by the shamanistic performances hereafter described, many of which are believed to have been derived from them. 756 * 787 * [178]

The members of different families have remembered various means of making a person "clean" so that a supernatural being is likely to visit him. Almost every family knows one or more of these, and an individual who shows signs of becoming a shaman will be taught how to use his family method. In conjunction with this, the seeker after power will further purify himself by abstaining from sexual intercourse, by frequent washing in hot springs, by eating small portions of the tails of snakes and the heads of toads, and by avoiding food prepared by a widow or by a girl secluded after puberty. In this way he hopes that his dreams will be fruitful, and that a vision may be granted him as he lies in the forest on his evergreen couch. 756 * 783 787 * [785]

The following are some of the methods to be practised at dawn every fourth day.

(1) The seeker after power locates a small stream on either side of which there are growing two shoots of devil's club. At dawn he breaks off the four stems and strips from them the bark, which he uses to scrub himself in the cold water. As he does so he says:

"Please give me power that I may see what I wish to see."

This is addressed to the plant itself, not to the supreme god. It is a request to be able to see some one of the many supernatural beings that roam the forests, but which are invisible, or appear only as animals, to all but shamans. The words are not a fixed formula, and similar ones are said in connection with each method. After washing, the seeker for power throws the bark and peeled stem into the water. [782]

(2) Again selecting a secluded stream, the would-be shaman picks up a smooth, water-worn pebble from one side of it, and with this rubs his body, then carefully replaces it in the exact position from which he took it. He repeats the process with a second stone, crosses the stream and does likewise with two stones from the farther margin.

*756 (3) Choosing a place where two small hemlocks are growing on each side of a small stream, the seeker after power 783 bends down the four saplings so that their branches reach the *787 water, and with these scours his body, the spines frequently rasping his skin. When finished, he releases the saplings, which fly back to their original position.

(4) Another method is to devour four small sections, each [278] rather larger than a match, of false hellebore root. These are drunk with cold water and cause vomiting. The use of this plant is not limited to dawn, nor is it necessary to repeat it every fourth day. Apparently, the usual prayer is not said with it.

[785] Any, or all, of these methods, especially if combined with the observance of ceremonial chastity, may purify the performer so that he will be able to see what is not vouchsafed to most persons. Thtcăplilăn-a, or one of the other supernatural beings, may grant him a revelation with shaman's power. This does not always happen, as the above means of purification are not omnipotent, but in many myths where the hero obtained supernatural power it was due to his having tried one of the above, or a similar ritual.

*756 The most common method of becoming a shaman is *787 through the appearance of Thtcăplilăn-a when a person is ill.
[796] This woman, who always wears a blanket-like cape decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark, is able to travel anywhere at phenomenal speed. She, or some other supernatural being, may appear to a sick person irrespective of sex, whether or not ceremonial chastity has been observed. It seems as if she took pity on the sufferer and came to bring relief. The following are typical examples:

A woman had long been crippled with rheumatism. She was so helpless and weak that she spent most of her time curled in a heap on the floor, heedless of the ashes and dirt with which she was covered. Her friends barely attended to her wants.
[796] One day she heard a thump on the roof, though no one else could hear it, nor could they hear the whistle with which

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*756 jects have power over shamans. A shaman must never sleep 783 beside his wife during her menses, must never eat food pre-841 pared by a menstruating woman, by one who has recently washed a new-born infant, by a girl during the period of seclusion following puberty, or by a widow or widower during the year that follows the death of his partner. If a shaman's nose bleeds when he is dancing it is because a menstruating woman is present in the house; he at once asks the offender to withdraw, after which the bleeding stops. Moreover, he must
[755] never cure a woman during her periods. A wise shaman prac-
[785] tises ceremonial chastity frequently. In view of the lack of cleanliness ascribed to menstrual blood, it is perhaps surprising that a woman can become a shaman while still of child-bearing age. This is rare, and only occurs when a woman is the last survivor of a family. The Bella Coola themselves consider it to be peculiar, only explicable on the ground that anything is possible to the supernatural beings, even the disregarding of feminine "uncleanness." Usually, female shamans are past the age of child-bearing; if not, they observe absolute chastity.

*756 Even inadvertent breaking of one of these rules causes
761 death. This is not regarded as a punishment inflicted by Thitcăplilăn-a; it is merely the inevitable consequence of the supernatural power within the shaman having come in contact with what is not clean. As a shaman is considered to be immune against all ordinary ailments, his death is always attributed to the breaking of a taboo. Frequently the death of a shaman is accompanied by some convulsion of nature. One female shaman, for example, told the people of her village to keep their children within doors, since a supernatural being was coming for her. Soon it became dark; there were four loud claps of thunder, at the fourth of which she fell dead.

539 The following was related as an instance of the danger to
*756 a shaman of coming in contact with an unclean woman.

[783] The son of the first man to come to earth at Nulleax was, like his [841] father, named Dudzeny". One April he and his wife went upstream to [787] Xwunis, a place in the country of the Carriers where milk-weed is plen-

782
778
* 787
[251]

About half a mile from the glacier there is a large rock shelter where mountain goat hunters are wont to smoke their meat. They are always careful to take with them dyed and undyed cedar-bark and eagle down, knowing that they may encounter the supernatural. Sometimes they hear the voice of uxuḱaw, a deep, long drawn-out hum, m·····. If this sound is repeated four times it is a happy augury, but if heard only once it presages ill fortune. In either case some member of the party, one who is ceremonially clean and is brave, blackens his face, puts on a collar of dyed cedar-bark, covered with eagle down, steps outside, and says in effect:

"Hail! Petrified One. In the beginning you came down from Alpuntăw, from all that was wonderful and powerful. You have not changed, hence we mortals can still hear your voice. Please, may it be well with us. There is none other like you."

If the supplicant is ceremonially clean the mountain will answer hi·····, four times, and there will be heard what sounds like a great landslide. Then the petitioner takes some small portions of meat, some dyed and some undyed cedar-bark, and eagle down and throws them on the fire.

"Please accept, Oh Kasiaot" (Powerful One), he says.

Thus propitiated, uxuḱaw grants them success in hunting.

778 (13) Spipighăn-i: On the south side of the Dean River about one mile from its mouth. Here, in the beginning of time, Raven cast his war-knife, sple, which was turned to stone and can still be seen. Its power has likewise become localized at this point.

(14) In the beginning of time Mount Swaly, near the Dean River, was a man who was turned to stone. Across the river is his wife, Astrahwahl, whose ancestral name is Kamilkăn, likewise petrified.

[255]
[785]

In most of these places[1] a sick person can receive assistance, if he is willing to risk the consequent dangers. The first essential is that he be in a "clean" condition by the observance of

[1] [i.e. - certain spots where power is localized - see cat. 116, pp 594-600 for their location - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ceremonial chastity. This state is pleasing to supernatural beings, who otherwise are likely to punish one trespassing on their haunts. The Bella Coola have not clearly formulated their beliefs with regard to these places, consequently the experiences of one individual are usually quite different from those of another, a circumstance regarded as quite natural on the assumption that the supernatural beings are able to manifest themselves in many ways. 755 778 [785]

Shulekwaily and the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel are the places that figure most commonly in mythology. At the former is Shulekwaily's chamber-vessel, a pool always full of clear water though not fed by any spring. If a person suffering from the virulent skin disease known as lishily swims in it, drinks some of the water, and then vomits, he will recover.

Not only the pond itself, but the whole neighbourhood, is the seat of mysterious power, as the following tale describes. 755

Near the western end of the pool there is a rock from which long ago three men dived and failed to return. A sick man decided to do the same and leapt in, feet first, wearing around his chest some dyed-cedar-bark. He plunged through the water and found that he was standing on the roof of a house; he walked around it, then returned to the surface, and back to his starting point. He dived three times more, and when he emerged for the fourth time his sickness had left him. He returned to Bella Coola and told of his experience. Since that time sick people have been carried to the pool, and have dived in from the same rock, always feet first, and always wearing dyed cedar-bark. All are able to feel the roof of the house, and are cured by the immersion. 778 539

The trail used by the Carrier Indians when raiding the coastal tribes passed by this lake, and on one occasion the Bella Coola, bent on retaliation, used the same path and paused to rest on the shore. They all bathed in the pool and asked help from the power there localized, then as they lay on the grass drying their long hair in the sunshine, a house emerged. Slowly it floated upwards, filling the whole area formerly occu- 778 787* 539

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 could not distinguish any actual words. This ceased, to be 755 followed by the hissing sound of escaping steam; the water became so unbearably hot that, crippled though he was, he 539 managed to crawl out. His courage soon revived, so, wrapping
* 787 his head in his blanket, he returned to the spring. The water was still unpleasantly hot on his body and legs, but the covering protected his head. The same phenomenon occurred on the two following days. Four days later he was well enough to walk and was brought home. During his treatment he saw supernatural beings, and is still hoping for a further revelation that will make him a shaman. He believes that this would have been granted to him if his friends had allowed him to remain in the spring overnight.

755 During the four days of his immersion he ate nothing, and his only nourishment was a little mountain goat grease which he did not swallow but kept in the right side of his mouth. After each bath he scrubbed himself with hemlock boughs. As in all
• [785] such cases, for one year he observed continence and refrained
[761] from eating unsmoked salmon. Failure to observe these taboos would have caused his death.[14]

755 According to another account the creature that visits a patient lying in the Hot Springs is a ššk'. As already de-776 scribed, it is a hairless animal, about as large as a small moose, with legs so short that its belly almost scrapes the ground, no tail, and a large head with glass-like eyes. The whole appearance suggests an enormous walking snake. This animal approaches the sick person, as he lies on a flat stone[15] in the spring, and takes a bite from wherever the sickness is situated. No wound can afterwards be seen, but the ailment is carried away with the biting. If the patient should lack courage and endeavour to escape he would soon die.

776 Others of these animals of the same or similar variety have been observed about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[14] See vol. I, p. 629 for further results of this treatment.
[15] There are two of these, one used by men and one by women.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 rushed past him it brushed his legs. From its malign touch 755 they became as if tied together at the knees, so that he could hardly walk. When all other cures failed he bathed in all the
* [787] healing places on the coast, and was cured by the time he had returned to Bella Coola.

[785] Before embarking on such an expedition, a sufferer must observe continence for at least three months, and continue this after his return, otherwise he will die. It is wise to start at Snuwals, on South Bentinck Arm, proceeding from there down South Bentinck Arm, across Labouchere Channel, and towards Kimsquit, since in this way the patient travels sunwise, increasing the potency of his efforts.

At Snuwals there is a ledge of rock that projects out over the water; the sick person dives through a hole into the fiord. From this point he proceeds to Nukilā·xta, on the east side of South Bentinck Arm, about half a mile above the Hot Springs. This is the place of the giant, many-coloured spider, turned to stone. Among its legs there are numerous holes in which the patient lays a stick and pieces of his clothing, taken from the part of the body affected, saying as he does so:

"Please, Powerful One, help me to return to strength."

The third place of curing is the Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm, Ixpe·xam. Here the patient lies in the hot water and leaves portions of his worn clothing as some sort of vague offering to the being there. The Bella Coola have no clear conception as to why the scraps should be left; apparently they have never considered whether it was actually of service to the being. At the present time it appears to be only a ritual handed down from great antiquity.

Leaving South Bentinck Arm the patient proceeds to the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel, the characteristics of which have already been described. The final place visited is Awaḱwam, on the west side of Dean Channel about nine miles below Kimsquit, where the ocean penetrates far under a ledge of rock. The sufferer is lowered through a vent about six feet in diameter until he stands on a boulder at the edge of the sea

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 the rock shelter half a mile away. Here he must lie alone, 755 without food, for four days. If he is in a pure condition from the observance of chastity, he then feels the earth shake and
* [787] hears a sound like a mighty landslide, though it is inaudible to those waiting in the cave. If the patient is frightened and tries to flee, he will die, but if he lies still he will be able to spit out the dead frog, or it will become so soft that it can drip from his nose. He then washes in the stream that flows through the ice-cavern, thus completing the cure. The malady
● [785] will return unless chastity is practised for one year.

756 Finally, in dreams a man is sometimes carried away to one or other of these curing places, or to several of them, and is
* 787 there made a shaman. It will be noted that this method of acquiring the ability differs from those previously described, but his functions are the same as those whose power has been obtained in one of the usual ways.

Dreams

* 787 The last type of contact with the supernatural is by means of dreams. Psychologically, these are akin to visions; indeed, it is often impossible to learn whether the experiences described in an ancient story occurred during sleep or when awake. The [774] Bella Coola believe that dreams are caused by the spirit of the individual; they are, therefore, supernatural and worthy of attention, but in spite of this, it was difficult to obtain detailed accounts. The reason seems to lie in the intangibility of the experiences themselves. Unless one is sufficiently striking, it passes into oblivion as a fruitless manifestation of the workings of the spirit. Many of the visions seen in ancient times by those who had fasted or otherwise reached an emotional state, must have been dreams, but they have ceased to be recognized as such in the course of generations. The Bella Coola of today [159] state emphatically that they receive warning of future events during sleep, but the only individual from whom it was possible to obtain coherent descriptions was the elderly man previously described as X (I, p. 515).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific super-
* 787 natural power. He realizes that he could increase the probability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes [785] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and lay fasting for some time. Another means would be to con-[797] centrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either unreservedly. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected.
They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

* 787 Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the information received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [828] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly, [821] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other [773] times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform [777] him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as Ālquntäm enters Nusmät·a, wise men separate from their wives [785] and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another [821] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-[224] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

experiences, but adds to the reliability of their prognostications. At that season, if a hunter dreams that he will not be successful, he remains at home knowing that it will be useless for him to seek game.

Though dreams are considered and remembered most carefully at the solstices, it must not be imagined that they are disregarded at other seasons. Often there is neither mental picture nor apparition, merely a voice, the sound of which indicates that the hearer will be fortunate the following day. Instead of a voice without body, a dream may consist of a speechless apparition which indicates by gestures the fate in store for the dreamer. One elderly Bella Coola who keeps a small shop states that he can usually tell in this way whether or not he will sell much goods during the coming day. Many years ago, after frequent visits from a being of this kind, the man became the leading fisherman for one of the canneries; he attributed his success to his nameless benefactor, for whose benefit he threw a number of small pieces of food into the fire. Occasionally, specific information or advice is received. On one occasion, when this same man was ill, he dreamt that a supernatural being appeared and told him to wash in the river, that it was breath to all human beings; he did so regularly, and was soon restored to health. Sometimes the information is with regard to the future. On the night of January 15, 1924, he dreamt that two naked Carriers were standing beside his bed. He asked them what they wanted, and why they were without clothing.

"We always appear as an omen of trouble in the land," they answered.

Next day there was a heavy fall of snow which he regarded as fulfilling the prophecy. The dreamer was X, the man of imaginative temperament who had beheld the white and black supernatural beings. These instances illustrate the manner in which the same individual has repeated experiences of similar type. X claims that he began to dream when a small child,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 843 If a woman dreams that she has caught two salmon, two small birds, or is holding two infants, the birth of twins is foretold. This type of explanation is obvious; in fact, these examples lie on the border-line between direct and symbolic interpretations.

* 787 843 775 Another indication of approaching pregnancy is for a woman to dream of a dead relative; this means that the latter will soon be re-born. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that some fifty years earlier his mother dreamt that her dead mother came to her, saying that she was lonesome and wished to return. Soon afterwards she conceived, and the daughter born was considered to be the reincarnation of her own grand- [553] mother whose names she was promptly given. At the present time, this informant addresses his sister as sister, though he states that as a child he was taught to call her grandmother. As already mentioned, if a new-born infant is a reincarnation, the fact can often be recognized by holes or dimples in the ears, relics of previous borings for rings. Unless such a birth has been foretold in a dream, it is impossible to learn whom the child re-embodies.

* 787 [761] A dream of frequent occurrence in Bella Coola is the return of the sleeper to the scenes and activities of his childhood. This always signifies a long life. Strangely enough, to dream of being nailed in one's coffin and carried to the grave is translated conversely, and likewise indicates a long life. It is re- [731] membered that there were many dreams of fire before the outbreak of the smallpox epidemic, so it has since been assumed that such presage an outbreak of this disease.

* 787 224 [785] The only dreams of which the interpretations are wholly symbolic are those experienced by hunters. The Bella Coola explain this by saying that hunters always observe ceremonial chastity and their spirits are, therefore, in a receptive condition to supernatural impressions. When a man has set his traps, he is able to tell from his dreams whether or not any animals have been caught:

To dream that a canoe has been upset in the river and that

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539 tune, remembering what the latter had told him the previous evening.
* 756 He feared to follow his friend's track, and, as night came on, closed the
* 787 tent and went to sleep, with the dog beside him. When it was quite dark he was wakened by the sound of footsteps and the tapping of a stick, and concluded that his partner was returning. The tent-flap was untied, as if by a person entering, but Ālximlaix could see nothing, so he kicked the dog to waken it and the animal began to bark furiously. At length he heard the steps withdraw and grow fainter as they climbed the mountain. Then Ālximlaix realized that his friend was dead, and that it was his life, [775] flashing round to visit his companions, which had come to him. Terrified, he lay awake all night with a blazing fire, and fled the next morning.

Ālximlaix chanced to meet several canoes soon after he had quitted his camp, and when he had told his story, their occupants turned back to hunt for Nunusxwmolek. About eighteen men searched all that day unsuccessfully, but a few days later another party found the corpse of the missing hunter. Presumably he had fired at the goat, though whether he struck it or not was not known, and the animal had charged. A wound in Nunusxwmolek's groin showed where one of the horns had pierced him, and the two had rolled together to death over a precipice, the bodies becoming slightly separated in the fall.

Even if Nunusxwmolek had struck the goat it would not have availed him, since he was doomed to death. Not only had he taken great risks in hunting within one year of his previous experience, but his wife had been careless during his absence. He had long practised continence, and [785] thereby was in a clean condition such as is approved by animals, and other supernatural beings, but this very condition rendered him peculiarly [761] susceptible to any breaking of taboos by his wife. She had so far forgotten herself as to indulge in swinging when he was on the mountain, so that his death was inevitable. Nunusxwmolek's relatives were very angry and prophesied that she would soon die. They were right, though whether her death was caused by a sorcerer, or by the accumulative power of their thoughts, is a matter no one can determine.

THE Ťläqmä·ks

In the beginning of time, when Ālquntäm sent down Kāliäkus to this earth, he used his own initiative and travelled to the east for abalone-shell and to the west for copper. On returning to his settlement, he determined to try to lure to it a supernatural being, of whose existence he was aware from his previous life in the land above. Accordingly, he fashioned some of the copper into jingling bangles, which he fastened to the ropes of his infant's cradle. Before the introduction of white men's [177] [854] cradles, the Bella Coola were accustomed to tie a child in a cloth and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856 speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Älquntäm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and [858] place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his [785] son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far 789 into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat [785] has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[868] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Please remedy the invalid." 755

This is virtually a prayer, addressed to the deceased owner of the skull, and accordingly verges on appeal to the dead. None the less, there is no concept of active supplication to any individual ghost, but rather of acquiring aid by the use of a supernatural object.

For one year after this treatment, sexual intercourse is forbidden to both practitioner and patient. The latter, though not the former, dies if either fails to observe this taboo. The use of an old man to apply the medicine is to lessen danger from this source. The owner of this remedy is always liberally rewarded and some old men carefully preserve a skull under a rock-ledge in order to be ready if called upon. [785] [761]

For Smallpox

Pick up a toad, and tear off its head with the teeth, swallowing some of the blood. 757

This is an ancient remedy for some other ailment which was tried as a last resort during the smallpox epidemic. One man who succeeded in practising it on four successive days was cured of the dread disease.

For Consumption

Boil leaves and stems of a certain fleshy plant (not identified) in water and drink the decoction. The potency of the medicine increases accordingly to the number of plants used.

This medicine was a Nootka Indian's hereditary cure for a cough which was found to be effective for consumption as well. The malady was so prevalent on the coast in the last century that it seemed as if the inhabitants were doomed; this remedy was allegedly discovered at that time and knowledge of it spread rapidly from tribe to tribe, saving the lives of hundreds. The Bella Coola recognize that this was a private medicine, but have ceased to regard it as such and have no hesitation in applying it whenever required. [177] [164]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

755 For Insanity

177 The Bella Coola have no medicine for this disease, although they are familiar with one used by the Kwakiutl, which was applied not long ago to a Rivers Inlet youth by two old women, one from Newitte and the other from Djoldänux. They exhumed a recently buried corpse, took a small piece of skin from the left side of the base of the neck, left this for twenty-four hours in a small stream, and then allowed it to steep for another twenty-four hours in a cup filled with water. This liquid was drunk by the patient who immediately recovered his sanity. He was next given water in which had been boiled needles from the yellow cedar; this strengthened him and prevented a relapse. The patient, now cured, observed continence for a year; failure to obey this injunction would have caused his death.

[785] [761]

The Bella Coola assume that this remedy is the property of Kwakiutl ancestral families who alone are entitled to use it. The practitioners are always suitably recompensed and do not undertake the treatment except at the request of one of the patient's relatives. Kwakjutl experts have been brought to Bella Coola several times within recent years to cure cases of insanity, but great secrecy is maintained concerning the methods employed. They are considered to be effective, in proof of which the attention of the writer was directed to two sane men who were said to have been raving lunatics before undergoing a Kwakiutl treatment. It is probable that the individuals had been subject to periodic fits of insanity and that a temporary improvement was regarded as a definite cure.

757 For Venereal Disease (four means)

(1) Boil scrapings of false hellebore roots in water for a long time and drink the decoction. If it is too strong, add more water.

(2) Pound skıs'tcalx, a kind of fungus, in water and drink the brew.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 regard to two figurines prepared to cause love has been described.

755 In addition to these non-specialized medicines, the Bella Coola are acquainted with remedies for several specific ailments caused by supernatural beings. One of these, to cure a person in whose head a toad was formed, has already been described.

To Prevent Blindness

Loss of sight is caused by a bat flying into a man's face, or [753] by a raven's dropping falling upon him as he looks upward. [825] After either accident, rub a feather from any bird in a raven's liver and draw it across the eyes. The person practising this [785] cure must remain continent for one year or blindness will result.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Leg

If a man puts his foot in a hole so that he stumbles and falls, he will lose the use of that leg unless he counteracts the danger by placing a small stick upright in the cavity. In the summer of 1922 the writer noticed an old Bella Coola, with whom he was walking in the woods, break off a branch about two feet in length and place it in a hole where he had stumbled. He could give no explanation for his act, except that failure would cause him to lose the use of that leg.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Feet

If a person should happen to set his bare feet upon a dead wolf, he will lose the use of his lower limbs. The antidote to this has been forgotten within recent years, and patients are merely treated by shamans.

755 To Prevent the Revenge of a Ghost

775 The ghost of a murdered person usually tries to avenge himself on his killer, who can protect himself by obtaining a small piece from the body or clothing of his victim, a tuft of hair, a shred of cloth, or even a piece of earth from above his

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien·a, whence its captain leaps to Nusqulxwaista to await the coming of Ālquntām. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nebusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noākxnum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [785] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [626] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Noākxnum, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noākxnum
* 575 is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river
* [796] the kusiut dances begin.
[184]

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, [424] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [551] slight variations, if any. In Tcimotl the kusiut who has the prerogative of seeing Noākxnum is a certain Qoxolān·i,[15] in Kimsquit, Ālusḱinwasam,[16] and in Sīskiutl, Xemtnum. Although,

[115]
[426]
[578]

[15]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qoxolān·i, who intimated that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman referred to the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[16]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in former times. Sklsa might almost be called the Bella Coola national game, although it is now (1923) seldom played. 526 [172]

A game with somewhat similar rules is sqwlaiăk, played with small wooden spears tipped with bone. When a number of men or boys decide to play, they choose two captains who in turn select their teams; any number can take part, provided that the sides are equal, but five each is usual. There is a special name for each player according to his position, and he bets against the corresponding member of the other team. A mark is set up, and one of the captains throws his spear, so that it will stick upright in the ground as near the target as possible. The rival leader endeavours to beat this, and if he fails, his second man throws, and each in succession until one comes closer to the goal than the rival captain. Then the latter's number two tries to beat the last thrower, followed by those on his own side until one succeeds or till all have thrown. The game thus ends when all of one side have thrown unsuccessfully. The winning side is, of course, the one to which belongs the player whose throw is nearest the target. Each member of the losing team pays his wager to his adversary and a second round is begun. 526 525

The sport is now rarely indulged in, but in former times games used to continue all day, and valuables were lost in the gambling which was considered to be a necessary part of it. Men used to observe ceremonial chastity to increase their chances of success and the expert was regarded with admiration by younger lads. The crack team of a village often used to visit other towns to compete against their representatives, and the games were contested amid frenzied excitement on the part of the supporters. This occasionally led to serious fighting. [785] [554] [628] [578]

Another sport of a similar type is archery; a mark is set up and each competitor tries to lodge his arrow as close to it as possible. This game has now entirely lost favour, the young men preferring a type of football played without strict attention to rules, but with great energy. 526

Bella Coola children, too, have their games and recreations, many of them of an imitative nature. Little boys enjoy nothing 857

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Then she sat down to the meal with her husband, the routine being exactly as she had described it to her visitor. After they had finished eating, Stuix's wife told him of the day's happenings, how a woman, giving her name, had visited the camp and had asked a great many questions about him, including whether or not he observed ceremonial chastity, and other personal matters. 539*

"What did you tell her?" Stuix asked his wife.

"Oh, I answered her truthfully," she replied.

"You should never have done that!" Stuix burst out in anger. "It was none of her business. Don't you know that you should never discuss a hunter's observance of ceremonial chastity? You have behaved very badly." [785 831]

Stuix had reason for his wrath, because no wife should ever discuss this matter, as in so doing she weakens or destroys her husband's power.

A few days afterward the evil woman again visited Stuix's camp, carrying concealed beneath her blanket a wooden club used for killing salmon. Stuix's wife did not see the approach of her hypocritical friend, who struck her on the head with the weapon and killed her. The murderess dragged her victim's body a short distance from the camp; with her copper knife she removed the skin and drew it over her own body, endeavouring in every way to make it fit. But the wife of Stuix had been larger than the bad woman, who tried to remedy the difference in size by tying the excess in wrinkles around her hips. The greatest difficulty was about the eyes, where the skin hung in folds which the impostor sewed neatly to make less noticeable. When all was done the murderess scraped a hole in the soft ground and buried the body of her victim.

While awaiting the return of Stuix the impostor busied herself in carrying out all the small household occupations, just as she had been told about them. Towards dusk Stuix came back. He noticed that his wife looked peculiar and uneasy, but said nothing about it; they sat down together to the meal but the woman kept her eyes lowered, lest the loose skin about them might betray her. Stuix wondered at that and also at her voice, which did not sound normal. At night the masquerader went first to bed, as a wife always does when her husband is observing ceremonial chastity. Stuix followed shortly. In a few minutes an owl hooted:

"Stuix's wife has tied up a fold of skin round her hips."

Neither man nor woman spoke. Even at that distant period it was well known that the voice of a dead person passes into an owl, though only rarely can one communicate with the living. It was, in fact, the slain wife speaking from above the spot where her body lay. The murderess feared that Stuix would put his arm around her waist, but she was saved because his observance of ceremonial chastity prevented him from doing so. [775 825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Nuswin·amq, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.
nuswinásta: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578] Nuxx: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nuxpalqiq: Tal·io bird hunter.
Nuxyemda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalxel in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]
Nuxyemtaän·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Alqalxel in the beginning of time.
Nuxxeq: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Barrenness": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nuxxi·ipsta: Repository, archaic term. [431] nuxwan·ál·nutnam: The assumption of a name upon earth. [585] nuxwohmgulta, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage.
nuxwu·qista: Wooden dish used for washing an infant. [415] nuxwullámtom: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [985] nuleikim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [756] Nuleodaxw': Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nulam: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nulol, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nulsxymm: Alteration of a dance from nisook to kusiut. [825] nulkálxita: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.
nultalzumnam, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [586] nultalzimam: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Nulltax, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nuthaqed: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nuxpalit in the beginning of time.
nuthunlt: Parents of twins. [845]
nutsaqmax: Wolf. [825]
Nulsálmais: Mythical house in the sky.
Nulsaymáls: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nutsiakem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Thitsaplúx·a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nuleikim. [756] nulsiaymam: A creation of new kusiut names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulsinázlm: Kusiutem rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nulskwnam: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431] 2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nulsqoza, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who points upon the bandages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nutzqualt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Nulwimtz: Kusiut name of a Tsmsil man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

[825] Sulekd: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
sutsi-d'tsinu-ina: One of the river sculpins.
sutshmis: To gather cedar-bark.
Szimána: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Szisi: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sulkuta, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutokmp: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Surwult: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swaóla: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swalq: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swalxmodimut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swalete: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swa'swa: Maid.
swalóa: Person or object which is taboo.
Szaiarwas: Evil supernatural being.
Szaindwa, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon.
szakmow pdi mána: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
szakóta: Sorcerer's box.
Szu-ituomóa-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
szán: Female lover, especially a paramour.
szánu: Male lover.
Szqlo-ó: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
szum: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sautata: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sautatadjat: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sautatmai: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sqak: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
Szqlqdjuóa-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
szim: Cedar-bark cord.
Szimána: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Szimaxímuk: Immoral supernatural woman.
sxlá': Afterbirth.
Szlyuóa-a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Szuóa: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
2—Man who performs woman's work.
[761] smumtauk ká': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sutl'ind, South Wind: A supernatural being.
Sulkil, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sulu-ul': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
sulumuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Xemqo-o in the beginning of time.
Xemtsum: Kaxiat name of a Sisk'ait man.
Xemxemlalla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Juneau name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtsum: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqaklat in the beginning of time.
[533] xe-ha: Beautiful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xelilkoa: One of the first men to settle at Xelhulc in the beginning of time.
Xelkoa: Kaxiat name of a Kitsaquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] 'xepa: Marten.
[412] xila: Stone axe.
xilad: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Xmqelmut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xmxmaxlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xmxmxelaix: Celebrated female shaman.
xnqmstc-i, plural, xnqmstcelci: Little girl.
[821] Xnqmx: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
[517] 2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xoxsis: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xsimte-a, "Right Foot": Sisaa repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xqsis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xsmtsum: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xtistum: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xtisl: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
[586] Xtlqmsk: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
xtoko-imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
[825] Xwaxsis: Locality below Nuxalk.
xwaxsisl: Minnows.
[601] xwa: Woman, or wife in indirect address (hi' xwalaix: My wife).
[614] xwaxlaix: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
xwaxlaix or xwqwaxlaix: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
[423] Xwaxli: Bella Coola ancestor living in the last century.
xwlsit: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xsilxwmcaw: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[985] xsilyat: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[891] Xsmtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xsmxmqa: Ancestral name of a Sisaa man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xsqaxlaix: Supernatural scamp-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xqaxlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 her the secrets of the Kû'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
713 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair
716 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siût.'

Ever since that time the Bîlqula dance the Kû'siût. When a man has 575 seen Anahlîktsai'n sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a 716 Kû'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as is the case with the Sisau'ku dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed
[424] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower 575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siût names, [428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pô'pô until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Ti'akô'ôtl.

I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-[554] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'ku, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] tlaqô'tla (the Hâ'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ô'lsq (the Nû'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dâ'tia (the Nô'ntsistatl of the Hâ'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the tlaqô'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held 787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be [246] killed, in order to serve as food for the tlaqô'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the tlaqô'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the xlaqō'tla dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some xlaqō'tla do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The xlaqō'tla has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house. 575 [774] [756] [242] [301]

The Ō'lxq (= the laugher) and the Dā'tla (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'lxq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'tla carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ōlxq and the Dā'tla must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses. [785]

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kā'sōit, for instance when the xlaqō'tla gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the Kā'sōit are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Atlqulā'tsnxm, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qō'mistim and his brethers and his sister (see p. 412), Mamamlā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Nusqō'mta, and many others. 575 688 575 532 796 [776]

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro- 844

8;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 773 776 535

women to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kō'sint. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kō'sint."

575 776 535

Ever since that time the Bī'xala dance the kō'sint. When a man has seen Anaklkstē'sī'ē sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kō'sint. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kō'sint lasts three days.

535 575 614

The various dances performed by members of the kō'sint are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisam'ā dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kō'sint is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kō'sint name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'lakō'ut. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisam'ā, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kō'sint have to pass through a religious ceremony of more importance. The highest degrees are the xlaō'ī'a (the hō'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'ēx (the nō'tsmat. of the Kwakiutl), and the dō'ēa (the nō'ntsistalat. of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kō'sint novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 785 787 [244]

When the xlaō'ī'a is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the xlaō'ī'a. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the xlaō'ī'a order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [155] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [792] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the NIMIO'LA dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [297] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the Ts'i'peta (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of Bastokuniane Xet'wut of the Kwakiutl. Some NIMIO'LA do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or [366] tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The [525] NIMIO'LA has to observe [834] a number of regulations.
For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month.
For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 201.
MASK OF TSI'I'PETA.
Bella Coola.
Cat. No. 153001, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The O'EX (the laugher) and the DÂ'LIX (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The O'EX "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The DÂ'LIX carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The O'EX and the DÂ'LIX, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the KÛ'WIL, for instance, when 638 the NIMIO'LA gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person decides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [792] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-638 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted to the shamans, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-794 eases into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way.
796 The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●787

/For information on visions, quests for visions, dreams and omens, see category 116, pp. 513-539, pp. 547-558, pp. 588-595 and pp. 599-692./

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

vidual's ancestors; it enters into his own future as well. When a Bella Coola dies, his spirit (I, p. 94) travels back on the path of his ancestors from generation to generation until it reaches the spot where the first one came to earth; there it assumes the bird or animal cloak used on that occasion and floats aloft to Nusmät·a to live forever. Small wonder, therefore, that this house figures prominently in the thoughts of the Bella Coola, and that they cling tenaciously to a belief in it. 177 773 775

Knowledge of Nusmät·a has been inherited almost entirely from the first ancestors of the Bella Coola, and only a few items of information could be gleaned concerning it. Most men think of it as an enormous replica of their own houses, but one individual, of philosophic temperament, expressed the opinion that it was without any inner partitions. His belief was based on the following incident: 772

Some years ago a young man died without apparent reason. His sorrowing father kept wondering: 772 787

"Why has my son died? Can he have committed some crime or made some mistake?"

Despondent and grief-stricken, for a whole year the man did not wash, ate little, and slept on the floor. At last he wandered away, alone, into the mountains. Night overtook him and he lay down to sleep without food. His son came to him in a dream, telling him not to lament, that he was in a better place than this world, for Älquntäm had recalled him to Nusmät·a to use his voice, which was unusually powerful, as a means of conveying his wishes to the other occupants of the house. Thus comforted, the father returned home in the morning, washed, and again behaved normally. My informant suggested that cross walls would be a bar to the strongest voice, and that Nusmät·a must consequently be partitionless.

Nusmät·a contains not only the spirits of all deceased Bella Coola, it is also the home of most of the supernatural beings. These frequently descend to visit the earth, but always return to the house above. So far as could be learnt, the only being irremovably located there is an old woman, Snuiquiqäls. The most prominent article of furniture in Nusmät·a is Älquntäm's seat, in the central position behind the fire. Over it is laid 772 776 * [775]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

what is probably a moosehide, with salmon painted on it, symbolic of his guardianship of fish for the benefit of mankind. In other respects Nusmāt·a has no peculiarities. Behind the house is an enormous tree, Tɣınɣın·iaqim, in the branches of which live innumerable owls.

After this description of Nusmāt·a, it is logical to return to its master, Ālquntām. Guiding the sun is his most spectacular occupation, but he also governs the movements of moon and tides. Powerful though he is, he continues to take an interest in the doings of mankind whom he created. Prayers are commonly addressed to him, and a certain type of shaman is believed to receive power direct from him. Other supernatural beings may work weal or woe to a Bella Coola, but he feels it is done with the sanction of Ālquntām. At every winter solstice he enters Nusmāt·a, where supernatural beings from all parts of the universe have gathered to greet him. This assembly is called qulxwaix, and Nusmāt·a is termed Nusqulxwaista[7] for its duration. While waiting, the guests perform kusiut dances, similar to those carried out by members of the kusiut society on earth (see vol. II, chap. 1). At Ālquntām's entry the heat becomes so intense that the occupants rush forth precipitately, some falling and being trampled upon in the crush. Only three[8] advisers, including Sexsexālaix (I, p. 41), remain to confer with him. They arrange the fate of human beings during the coming year; who shall be made a kusiut, who shall be born, who shall die. In each case the decision rests with Ālquntām, though he is influenced by his counsellors. Human beings can often learn in dreams what is being decided for them.

Ālquntām, in spite of his strength, shares the limitations of any other chief, and is not invariably successful. The Bella Coola delight in telling stories of how supernatural beings, especially the Raven, outwitted and defeated him. Even [7]Often pronounced Nusqualwaista.

[8]The exact number is uncertain.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

838 woman who dressed as a man and used to hunt successfully,
[171] though she was married. Such practices are said to have been not uncommon among the Haida. The women were considered bold and independent, but the Bella Coola of today know little *[776] about them, and are not even certain that Sxunts is responsible for a female assuming the actions of a male. It will be readily understood that he is not regarded with much awe, nor does he influence their daily lives.

*776 Another supernatural being, uninfluential though resident [822] upon earth, is Echo, Setsaläni, "The Voice Repeater." The Bella Coola regard him as a male being, in human form, and recognize his presence whenever sounds reverberate. He figures in mythology, occasionally appears as a masked figure at [575] kusiut or susaok dances, but has neither helped nor harmed human beings for so many generations that he is accordingly neglected.

*776 A supernatural being from whom many Bella Coola have ●787 had unpleasant visitations is Slhmsila, the cause of nightmares.
828 He is a man-like creature with black face and an enormous head which he constantly scratches. His home is in Nusmät·a, but he frequently descends to this world and frightens sleepers. If a person scratches his head while asleep it is because he has just seen Slhmsila doing so, and if he walks in his sleep it is to escape this supernatural visitor. A sleep-walker is usually aroused by having a bucket of water thrown over him. A [751] person frequently troubled by Slhmsila can avoid him by painting a black circle around each eye before going to sleep.

*776 With the exception of Älquntäm, the supernatural beings thus far described play little part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They believe in their existence, but do not expect to meet them, and do not believe that they exercise much influence on the course of their daily life. Supernatural beings of this ineffective 781 type are exceptional. A man goes into remote parts of the mountains, or even into little frequented areas around his *776 village, with mingled fear lest he encounter an actively malicious being, and hope that he may meet a benevolent one. Moreover, he is aware that by certain means he may have good 781 expectations of beseeching, cajoling, deceiving, or rendering 776 * powerless any supernatural beings whom he may meet. This attitude is typical; the Bella Coola by no means move in constant dread of the mysterious denizens of the forests, nor do they eagerly hope for their appearance; they have their likes and dislikes, their moments of weakness and of strength, their times of greatness and of pettiness, all to be considered with care and forethought.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One of the beings for whom the older people have a pro- 776 * found respect is Ṫlitcāplilān·a, a supernatural woman whose 787 ● home is in Nusmāt·a, but who frequently visits this earth. She can be recognized by her snout-like mouth and long, pendant breasts, but even when beyond the range of vision her proximity can be detected by her singing. Ṫlitcāplilān·a often takes pity on a person who is dangerously ill and visits him, not only curing the malady but bringing the sufferer a name and song. In many cases he is thus made a shaman with [756] power to cure. At other times Ṫlitcāplilān·a bestows her favours on a person in good health, so that wise Bella Coola are always hoping to meet her. Such an experience is not without its dangers, for she is so powerful that nearness to her may be enough to cause death. The exploits of those who have come in contact with Ṫlitcāplilān·a belong to shamanism and will be reserved for vol. I, chap. IX.

Ṫlitcāplilān·a, though her great power inspires fear, usually 776 * behaves in a kindly manner to mortals, who accordingly wel- 761 come her. But it is quite otherwise with Sxaiaxwax, whose coming almost invariably brings death.[11] He is a black-faced being of repulsive appearance and sensual nature, whose chief function is to seduce women. For this purpose he often skulks near a village at night, and assumes the voice and appearance of a girl's lover to lure her into the forest. Fearlessly she goes with him, but if she allows his approaches, a hemorrhage results and she soon dies. There is said to be no limit to the number

[11] Cf. Boas, p. 42.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 825 845 Fish, too, are regarded in the same light. Indeed, there is a particularly close affinity between men and salmon, for twins are born through the instrumentality of the latter. Just how this occurs no Bella Coola knows, but a twin and salmon are regarded almost as brothers. In days when men were more powerful than now, a twin was especially liked by animals. Through his connection with salmon, a ko'la (the term applied to a twin associated with a salmon) could understand the speech of birds, animals, and fish. In many instances he could also assume salmon form at will.

* 776 787 825 In view of beliefs of this kind it is not surprising that the Bella Coola attribute great powers even to beasts well known to them. In the story recorded in vol. I, p. 55, the War-Party of the Tides was summoned by the speaking of a dog. A belief persists that danger is always present when a dog acts in an unusual way, though this can be avoided by killing it at once. In July, 1922, a visit was made to an elderly Bella Coola early one morning. The man was in a state of absolute terror. The preceding night he had locked his pet dog outside his house to give warning if anyone approached, but when he awoke in the morning, it was curled up asleep as usual at the foot of his bed. There was no possible hole through which it could have entered, so it seemed to the owner that his dog must have transformed itself into some minute animal and made its way beneath the door. The only other explanation was that its master, hearing in his sleep the whimpering of his pet, had got out of bed to let it in, without remembering that he had done so. To the writer this seemed the probable explanation, especially when the old man admitted that he had been in the habit of walking in his sleep in his younger days, but the Bella Coola was not satisfied. He could not decide whether or not to kill the dog, a great favourite, but finally decided not to do so. The incident was mentioned to another informant, who was greatly worried and assumed it to be an omen of death to the dog's master. His only comfort lay in the fact that the animal had not spoken, a sure intimation of insanity and death unless it is killed immediately. 776* 787 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A few years ago a dog gave warning to its master by placing its paws on his shoulders as he sat on the ground, and howling over his head. Such unusual behaviour should have convinced him of the necessity of killing his pet to avert some calamity, but he paid no attention to it. A few days later, it seemed to him that he saw the face of a friend appear at an uncurtained upper window where no human being could be. The next morning he found an axe, which he had long lost and supposed stolen, imbedded far up in a tree near his house. These three incidents all presaged disaster, and a few days later he shot and killed himself when crazed by drink. [762]

The actions of wild animals are considered even more important. Not many years ago a famous Kimsquit hunter saw a bear and attempted to shoot it. He raised his musket and took careful aim, but was prevented from pulling the trigger. This should have warned him of the potency of the animal, and of the wisdom of avoiding the spot in future. The bear moved away without molesting him, but exactly one year later he was killed by a mountain goat at precisely the same place. No one knows which supernatural being had chosen to assume two forms in that locality.

The Bella Coola believe that animals, being supernatural, have powers and abilities which they conceal from the white man. Wolves do not kill their prey with their fangs, but with bird arrows which shamans alone can see; beaver do not cut with their teeth, but with crook-handled adzes. Even more striking is the virility of yearling mountain goats. An old Bella Coola described how he and another man were once hunting goats. His partner killed a fat yearling, which they laid on its back and skinned. The killer was about to dismember it, when the animal began to kick. First it shook one hind leg, then the other, then in succession each fore-leg, and lastly its head. Then the goat stood up and gave itself a shake, which caused the skin to return to its proper position, 776* 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

774 of thought, of success and failure and of life itself, to powers of another sphere. Their ideas are not clearly crystallized on this subject, but in the following section an attempt has been made to give a fair picture, gleaned from many informants, of the supernatural parts of the human body.

THE SPIRIT

The most important part of the human body is the xuxmänoäs, spirit. This is small, but of great power, since it belongs to the world of the supernatural; in fact, the spirit of a man is not mortal, but siut. Everyone, man or woman, rich or poor, chief or slave, has one; without it, life would be impossible. When a child is born, his parents supply him with food and care, and Älquntäm provides the even more necessary invisible elements, including the spirit. It resides in the back of the neck and resembles a thin bone shaped like a maple-leaf. Salmon have similar ones, but with them the bone is visible, [756] whereas only shamans can see it in human beings. The spirit in a new-born infant is weak and powerless, but it increases in strength with the body. If a man prospers in his ventures and has success in life, it is due, not to his own efforts, but to the activity of his spirit. When a man acquires wealth with little [556] labour, he knows that his spirit has been constantly trembling at the back of his neck; when he is unfortunate, that it has [787] become inert or sluggish. It is the cause of dreams, which are desired as means of foretelling the future. Some Bella Coola believe that in sleep it leaves the body and travels, unrestrained by any barrier, to the scene of the dreams; others, that it causes the images to appear. During waking hours the spirit [828] formulates every thought, no matter how trifling. When a man remembers that he left his fire with insufficient fuel and hurries home to rectify the omission, it is this element which has brought the need to his mind; when he thinks of a distant place, his spirit is responsible for the thought and some men even believe that it has travelled there. Sometimes an active one can give warning, as in the following instance. A few years ago a chief, when hunting, sat down to rest. While he 774 sat a slide plunged down the mountain-side and swept away the ground where he would have been if he had not stopped. The Bella Coola know that such a fortunate escape is no accident, as foolish white men believe, but is the result of an active spirit. Sometimes it can convey only symbolic hints of what is to happen. An old Kimsquit man told how his lower eyelids once became sore and his stomach began to heave. This [827] occurs with sobbing, so he knew that ill-fortune was before [787] him and was not surprised at the death of his son. A thoughtful person pays great attention to indications such as these, knowing that his spirit is always striving to pierce the future and obtain information for him, however indefinite. The importance of the supernatural to the Bella Coola can be judged from the fact that they attribute every action and thought to an element of this nature.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Mentality, sulk, though caused by the spirit, is somewhat 774 vaguely regarded as a separate entity. It comprises two parts, 828 one constantly urging to good deeds, particularly to activity in ritual matters, the other to evil. No one knows the appearance, if any, of human mentality. Some of the thoughtful older men hazard the opinion that every tree has mentality, whereas others say that it has a spirit. In former times especially, as one was falling, the cutters could occasionally see a dark object somewhat resembling an otter flash away and disappear. Not until then was the tree actually dead. Even the old people do not profess to know anything definite about mentality, which is important only as an attribute of the spirit. In indefinite 774 association with it, too, is breath, sininits, provided by Ält- [761] quntäm for everyone at birth. The word signifies more than [827] the material act of breathing, it denotes the actual physical state of being alive, a condition "lent" by Ält-quntäm to mortals. The connection of these two elements with the spirit is unequivocal, though their exact relationship is indefinite.

If the spirit moves far from its proper position at the back [753] of the neck, the owner falls ill; if it leaves him, his condition [755]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is the life that suffers
761 whenever the skin is broken. Any wound may prove dan-[752] gerous, but particularly one that cuts either of the invisible lines along which vitality flows from the little finger to the [827] little toe. An injury to one of these channels spreads rapidly and is in many cases fatal.

761 It is generally considered that a person dies if his life leaves his body. In contradiction to this, though the discrepancy 774 seems of slight importance to the Bella Coola, is the belief that it ascends at the winter solstice to the gathering of the supernatural beings in Nusmāt·a to greet Ałquntām. It is common knowledge that some part of the human body does this, but there is diversity of opinion regarding which it may be. Some say it is the spirit, but the consensus of opinion is that it is the life. If it is successful and receives presents in the land above, its owner will prosper on earth; if it is unfortunate, he will be the same; if it falls in the crush as the guests hurry forth to escape the heat of Ałquntām's entry, he will die. By dreams 761 a man learns the fortune of his supernatural representative, ● 787 and from them he can judge what is in store for him during the coming year and receive intimations concerning birth and death, secret society matters and, in fact, every phase of human activity, since all are decided at the meeting of Ałquntām and his associates. Dreams are considered to be especially important at this season of the year (I, p. 608) and information obtained from them may, perhaps, be the origin of the present firm conviction that some portion of the body actually ascends.
[182] Bella Coola beliefs have so broken down in recent years that lack of unanimity concerning the specific part is not surprising, nor does it alter the importance of this conviction. No attempt is made to explain how an individual can remain alive during the annual absence of his life.

761 Although the life is so ethereal, it really consists of four intangible elements which unite to form the immaterial whole.
One of these parts, including the voice, is located in the throat, another in the trunk, a third in the legs, and a fourth in the feet; the body is thus divided into four quarters. The con-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kusiut dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Alquntärı is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy abstin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Coola say that the return of the dead "washes away grief," 556* and unquestionably it has a comforting effect on the mind of 769 the donor of the potlatch.

(3) Wealth. Unless a man has the necessary goods with 476 which to make presents he cannot invite guests, no matter how 556* important may be his ancestral myths and names. Some of 602 this wealth he may be able to amass by his own labours, but unless he is assisted by his wife's family it is virtually impossible for him to succeed. The Bella Coola believe that a man [583] cannot become a chief except through large payments made [622] by a woman's family when they "rebuy" her from her husband. In other words, no man can succeed without the support of his wife. In choosing a mate a man is guided almost entirely by [581] the ability of her family to give him financial support. In some cases an elderly couple assist a married son to give a potlatch; this custom, though considered quite proper, is not common.

(4) Supernatural assistance. To the Bella Coola this is 556* quite as important as the preceding. One man may work very 787 hard but his efforts are never crowned with success, whereas another man will prosper in every venture. This is due to the supernatural attributes given by the supreme god to the latter. By prayer, ceremonial chastity, and other means, a man may increase the powers granted to him, but if these are entirely lacking, he can never hope to rise to the position of chief.

PRELIMINARIES

In describing the potlatch, it will be convenient to refer to 556* the donor as X, and assume him to be a middle-aged member of the nsaok society, whose seat and name, though duly ratified, lack importance through his previous failure to give large presents.

For a number of years X has prospered. He has amassed quantities of skins, blankets, tools, copper ornaments, clothing, canoes, baskets, dentalium shell, slaves, and other valuables.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

Other people had come down to earth at the same time as Kásēw·a, and among them a man and his wife who had landed at the mouth of Gas Bay. They had two daughters who, walking one day at the head of the bay, were surprised to find a house. They looked in and saw a woman, so entered, and laughed heartily to find her made of rotten wood. They kicked over the figure and the head fell into the fire and was burnt. Then they seated themselves in her place, worked diligently at the blanket and ate a large amount of the food. Towards dusk they put the figure back in place and hid themselves.

BB 539 BC 539 *

Soon Kásēw·a entered. He embraced the figure, called her a good wife, and thanked her for weaving so diligently and for having eaten so much of the food. Then he saw that she had burnt her head, and chided her, saying that she must take better care of herself. At this the two girls who were hiding burst out laughing and showed themselves. They suggested to Kásēw·a that he choose one of them for his wife; he agreed, selected the elder and married her. He built a house on a hilltop where they lived and to which he called people from far and near when he gave a potlatch.

Sisaok Origin Myths

As already stated, many sisaok names are believed to have come down from above with the first Bella Coola, or to have been created by them on this earth. In such cases, the sisaok origin myth is the same as the ancestral myth. Theoretically, names of the same type can also be received through visions in which a beholder is given his new designation by some supernatural being, or takes it from the apparition. In either case, of course, it must be duly validated by the giving of presents. Only three myths were obtained which deal solely with the acquisition of a sisaok prerogative. No doubt this is chiefly to be explained by the fact that most sisaok rites have been derived from the Bella Bella.

BC 773 551 575 [787] [556] [177]

THE ORIGIN OF THE Sisaok NAME, Spuxpuxxā·mpdimut[80]

BC 539 * 609 424

About 1840, a party of Xixais Indians[81] spent the winter in Bella Coola. Early in the spring one of them broke his leg so

BC [829]

[80]Related by Joshua Moody.

[81]It was impossible to identify this tribe. According to the Bella Coola they are akin to the Carriers, but have adopted the use of totem-poles, kusiut dances

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NE5

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is xnaiix, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 789

A recent mother is taboo and must observe due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one foetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [787] [756] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

845 alone, and when she leaves it, it dries up immediately. When a year has elapsed, the parents return home with their children and the father resumes the ordinary routine of life. For three years more the mother must remain in the house, leaving it only at night through a hole in the floor. Above all else, she must keep away from the river; she cannot draw water from it, nor can she cut salmon on its bank. One instance is remem-
[753] bered in which the parents of twins failed to observe these restrictions; their legs became swollen and they soon died. In addition to punishment of the offenders in cases such as [825] this, there is danger that if they fail to obey the customary taboos the salmon will be insulted and avoid the Bella Coola River.

[770] After four years a mother of twins resumes her normal life,
[787] but she is henceforth endowed with special powers. If she wishes to see anyone who is absent, she has only to think of the person, and in her dreams she will be able to see him. She must never try to start up a dying fire by blowing upon it, since to do so would cause a gale. When a person sets out on any kind of an expedition from the house in which a mother of twins is living, the latter must chew a little food and spit it out towards the departing guest, otherwise he will fail in his venture.

845 Twins themselves, being akin to salmon, have miraculous
825 ability to see their fish-kinsmen and read their thoughts. Bella Coola mythology contains many stories of the way in which twins could talk with, and change into, salmon. Such knowledge is not limited to tales of the distant past. An elderly Bella Coola described the manner in which her grandmother, a twin related to Sockeye Salmon, was consulted by a man who had been unlucky with his weir. Gazing down into the water, this woman saw that the fish were avoiding his dam because of the charred uprights used in its construction; when these were changed he was successful in his fishing.

845 Twins are believed to possess remarkable ability from earliest childhood, and even to remember incidents occurring

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dred yards away, rapidly drew near the hunter along the trail. He raised his musket and stepped aside, but though the sound went past him down the path, he could see nothing. Terrified, he realized that he had been near two ghosts, and rushed back to the village. A shaman was called who informed him that he had met his dead father's sister and another relative, both of whom were hungry. The hunter, too weak from fright to help himself, watched the shaman light a fire and throw on it a considerable amount of food and goods. Finally, he ripped the hunter's shirt from his back and threw it into the flames. Consequently, no harm resulted from this experience.

Ghosts, like all other supernatural beings, can, of course, control their powers so that their appearance does not injure a beholder. A few years before 1922 a certain Qaxolān-i, whose ancestral name was Lo-qus-i, was encamped at Saskwanuts on the Labouchere Channel side of King Island. At dusk a woman came to his fire and proceeded to warm her cape. He recognized from her green face that she must be a ghost and boldly asked her what she wanted.

"I have been searching for mussels," she replied, "but without success."

In an instant she vanished and Qaxolān-i experienced neither good nor evil from this apparition. The Bella Coola say that this being may not have been a ghost as he had thought, but was perhaps one of the under-sea dwellers who have somewhat the same appearance.

Since ghosts, like other supernatural beings, are believed to possess both wisdom and power, it might be thought that they would be invoked frequently. Instead, death has altered their character to such an extent that they are avoided and kept at a distance. The only time that an appeal is made to a ghost is when a young person dies without apparent reason and the survivors wish to learn the cause. The body is buried with a long cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark projecting from its mouth and stretching to the surface. The relative desiring information summons to his house several shamans whose powers have been obtained from ghosts, and for four days feeds them lavishly. On the fifth morning they proceed to the grave, accompanied by kinsmen of the deceased, and pound on the ground with sticks, asking the dead person whether or not he had been murdered, and if so, the name of the murderer. It is said that in former times the voice of the deceased could always be plainly heard giving the desired information. This ceremony has not been carried out for many years, and exact details are not known by any of the living Bella Coola. It seems clear that ventriloquism must have been employed, requiring active deception on the part of the shamans.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It was difficult to ascertain to what extent shamans believed in their own powers to understand the speech of ghosts. There is no doubt that the Bella Coola are easily influenced by suggestion, and if an individual is told that he has received help from a ghost, it is not difficult for him to believe that such has been the case. Further, his fellows are convinced of his powers, a circumstance which does not fail to affect him. It may be stated definitely that in many cases shamans have some confidence in their own powers, although they do not hesitate to use deception to increase their prestige. This point will be considered in greater detail in the following chapter.

ACCOUNTS OF EXPERIENCES WITH GHOSTS

Much of the information concerning ghosts is contained in stories which have been handed down for generations and which are regarded as historical records. Some of these must be deferred to the chapters on folk-lore and shamanism, but the following are sufficient to explain the source of many Bella Coola beliefs on this subject.[48]

A Reason from Ghosts

Long, long ago, there lived a little girl who used to cry incessantly. One evening when she was disturbing the whole household by weeping, her father said angrily to her:

[48] These stories have been included at this point as specific illustrations of the type of legend upon which generalized beliefs depend.

b McDougall E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEh Bellacoola NEh

receive such pretty objects, restores the sick, though she does not herself come to do so.

The shaman now sends a young man out to fill his curing basin. When this is done, he carries it around the fire, once, sunwise, and sets it down beside the patient. The practitioner drinks from it, and casts some eagle down on the surface. If it revolves sunwise, it signifies that the patient will soon recover, and the shaman proceeds to wash him with the water; if it remains stationary or revolves in the opposite direction, it is an unfavourable sign, and he throws the water out of the door. More is then brought, and the procedure repeated until it revolves sunwise. Although no Bella Coola can state definitely how this is performed, the consensus of opinion is that it is done by twisting the hair slightly.

Shamans are not the only ones who make offerings to Tlúxpálitte-a. It is generally known that she likes to receive things, so a sick person often throws on the fire a little grease, some of his own clothing, or other objects of small value. By so doing he hopes that she may appear, or that the sickness will vanish as the object is consumed in the flames. A person in good health sometimes makes like offerings, either on the central house fire or on one built behind the house, at the same time asking Tlúxpálitte-a to help guard him.

(v) In recent years some shamans have been in the habit of displaying the sickness in visible form; this is said to have been a practice adopted from the Bella Bella. After throwing himself on top of the patient the shaman sucks violently, and produces such an object as a toad, a snail, or a stick of wood, which he claims to have been the cause of the malady. This has, of course, been concealed throughout in his mouth. This belief is fostered by the undoubted skill of some shamans in extracting such foreign substances as a salmon bone, wedged in a patient's throat, or a sliver. In such cases he first works with his fingers to force the object near the surface. It is believed that some shamans are so powerful they can draw forth foreign substances by the mere application of their sticks

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

755 to the part affected. In such a case the object, a toad for
* 756 example, becomes visible at the end of the staff. Conjuring is employed to do this, and often a tuft of dyed cedar-bark is used, which makes the deception still easier. Shamans are very expert in such matters. It is said that when two rival shamans once disputed about their prowess, one of them cast his stick on the ground and it became a snake, whereupon the other did likewise; and his became a toad which hopped after the snake. The Bella Coola find biblical parallels for such [177] revelations of power in the transformation of Aaron's rod, and the appearance of fire on Mount Carmel.

Shamanistic Ceremonies

554 In addition to his professional abilities, a shaman has also
* 756 certain social prerogatives. As has been mentioned, many
● 787 shamans lack the power to cure, but they may have seen some feat during a dream, or during a visitation from Tlindpilila-a. It enhances a man's social prestige if he can graphically display whatever he has observed. It follows that the rites about to be described are often, perhaps usually, performed by a person unable to cure the sick, but it must be remembered that to the Bella Coola there is no social difference between a shaman who can cure with the aid of a basin, and one who lacks this power. Each has merely received a different gift from his supernatural benefactor. There seems little doubt that a man of imagina-
* 756 tive temperament frequently invents a feat of this type, or 787 rather that he ponders over one until he either dreams of it, or imagines himself to have done so. Certainly, after he has performed such a rite, he deludes himself into believing that he has had supernatural authorization for it. Conjuring feats performed long ago by shamans, feats practised by the members of other tribes, personal inventions, either actually or theoretically dreamed of, all these are among the sources from which shamanistic dances are derived. It follows that almost
* 756 anyone who has the necessary skill is able to perform, provided 556 that he has sufficient food to validate the ceremony. Thus this

b McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

782 789 cealed cord succeeded in drawing feathers, previously placed on the surface, around in the direction in which she was dancing. It was impossible to learn the details of the method employed in this trick. The subterfuge was long ago practised by a shaman.

A simple but effective trick was the substitution of a baton made of light maple wood for one of the heavy type used by the singers. The real stick had been passed around the audience and apparently returned to one of the singers, though in reality the false one had been given to him. As he beat time the hollow sound that emanated was a source of surprise to the uninitiated spectators, nor was their wonder lessened when a real baton was again handed around, as if it were the one that had been in use.

[778] According to an informant, the last time that a supernatural being helped the person on whom it had conferred shamanistic power to perform a rite of this kind was about 1870. A man who had fallen from his canoe into the ocean was rescued, but for a long time was ill as a result of exposure. [774] [787] River Measurer, the supernatural being who governs the height of tides in the river, appeared and made him a shaman with the ability to cure through the use of a wash-basin. As this shaman danced, he had a large box filled with water. Presently he called on one of the uninitiated to examine the height of the water and point out to his fellows how high it was. A little later he called a second man who likewise indicated on the outside of the box the height of the liquid within. It had fallen, though its disappearance seemed inexplicable.

781 789 The above furnishes a good example of the attitude of the uninitiated. The informant, a very intelligent Bella Coola, gave a number of instances of the conjuring methods employed, some of which he had helped to carry out. Unquestionably, this was of the same nature, yet, because he was deceived at the time of its performance, he readily believed that the rite was supernatural, since then he had never thought of doubting

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

952 955 mouth, and the malady departed. It had been absorbed into the stick, and later driven from it by the shaman's breath.

956 789 This man made a great reputation for himself with his ability to hang from his small stick. On one occasion, after fishing on the lower Fraser River, he was encamped on the ocean beach near Seattle, where he had gone to pick hops. Four white men who had heard of his powers came to his tent for a demonstration. He put on his robes, took his small stick from his box, and used the ridge pole of his tent as the heavier horizontal one. The white men examined the small stick and found nothing peculiar about it. The man performed his dance, in the course of it throwing the small stick up against the ridge pole, where it remained suspended with the actor hanging from it. After releasing his hold, he struck the smaller stick a slight blow with his hand and it at once came away from the ridge pole.

956 787 As already mentioned, it is extremely difficult to obtain accounts of dreams which have served as sources for shamanistic performances. They are unconsciously embellished by the performer to such an extent that the ritual displayed has probably slight resemblance to the vision on which it is based.

The following, however, is an example of the type that could have served as theme. A man once dreamed that he saw Mount Nuxpale with its rocks adorned with handsome pictures. The other mountains of the valley were also decorated, but none of them was so fine. If he had had the desire and the necessary wealth he could have arranged with the carpenters to have the designs that he saw in his dream painted, and could have displayed them as a shaman's vision.

956 782 A shaman, particularly one who has received a vision from Tlitqulitlite-a, and who has had marked success both in curing the sick and in giving conjuring exhibitions, is considered to be in peculiarly close association with supernatural beings. Accordingly, he is regarded as a fit person to ask their assistance, not that he has any means of gaining help that are not open to others, but merely that his greater acquaintance with

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

756 783 841 jects have power over shamans. A shaman must never sleep beside his wife during her menses, must never eat food prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has recently washed a new-born infant, by a girl during the period of seclusion following puberty, or by a widow or widower during the year that follows the death of his partner. If a shaman's nose bleeds when he is dancing it is because a menstruating woman is present in the house; he at once asks the offender to withdraw, after which the bleeding stops. Moreover, he must [755] never cure a woman during her periods. A wise shaman prac- [785] tises ceremonial chastity frequently. In view of the lack of cleanliness ascribed to menstrual blood, it is perhaps surprising that a woman can become a shaman while still of child-bearing age. This is rare, and only occurs when a woman is the last survivor of a family. The Bella Coola themselves consider it to be peculiar, only explicable on the ground that anything is possible to the supernatural beings, even the disregarding of feminine "uncleanness." Usually, female shamans are past the age of child-bearing; if not, they observe absolute chastity.

756 761 Even inadvertent breaking of one of these rules causes death. This is not regarded as a punishment inflicted by Thitcāplilān-a; it is merely the inevitable consequence of the supernatural power within the shaman having come in contact with what is not clean. As a shaman is considered to be immune against all ordinary ailments, his death is always attributed to the breaking of a taboo. Frequently the death of a shaman is accompanied by some convulsion of nature. One female shaman, for example, told the people of her village to keep their children within doors, since a supernatural being was coming for her. Soon it became dark; there were four loud claps of thunder, at the fourth of which she fell dead.

539 756 The following was related as an instance of the danger to a shaman of coming in contact with an unclean woman.

[783] [841] [787] The son of the first man to come to earth at Nalleax was, like his father, named Dudzzong". One April he and his wife went upstream to Ywanda, a place in the country of the Carriers where milk-weed is ph n-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tiful, of which they planned to collect a supply. In the course of their journey Dudusonx̌' saw a man who, when he drew near, turned into a piece of hanging moss. A little later he again saw a figure, but on approaching it became a tree. Dudusonx̌' and his wife walked on and presently the former once more beheld a man; this time the apparition changed to a fir tree. It was evident to Dudusonx̌' that a supernatural being had manifested itself to him, and he told his wife that they must return. On reaching home he related his experience and gave a shaman's dance. 539 756* 787

From this experience he had received the power of curing. He could see disease when it was invisible to all others, and could summon it to himself, where it was harmless, thus restoring the patient to health. He made for himself a rattle, shaped like a bird; this had the ability of dancing of its own accord, and would catch people's hair in its opening and closing beak. The sick were brought to Dudusonx̌' from all over the valley. One day he travelled by canoe down to Sunxl where he found many of the villagers seriously ill. His arrival was quite fortuitous, for he was unaware of the epidemic that was raging. The inhabitants sought his help, so he landed and cured them. He entered the house of a woman who claimed to be ill, and took the sickness upon himself, but no sooner had he left than he fell down stricken. He demanded to be taken home in his canoe, but he only lived two days after his return. The woman had been in pain from her menses; it was this that he had taken upon himself and caused his death. 539 756* [761] [783] [841]

In consequence of the danger attached to the vocation, many people try to avoid becoming shamans, though if Ťłitcāplilän-a should appear to a man when ill, he cannot escape the power. The usual method of prevention is for a man to hold intercourse with his wife from below, so that her flesh, impure through its liability to menses, can form a barrier to the coming of supernatural power. One who wishes to escape always sleeps on the left of his wife, whereas if he is seeking shaman's power he sleeps on the right. Another method of avoidance is to use the hole in the floor which serves as exit and entrance to the house of a girl secluded following adolescence. 756* [787] [833] [513]

Since the power of a shaman is obtained by a personal experience, and lacks both form and substance, it cannot be transmitted and disappears at the owner's death. As has been

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 stated, there is a tendency for such ability to be granted to the descendants of shamans, but this is not necessarily the case. A shaman can instruct his child and so increase the latter's chances of a vision, but the parent can do no more. A single exception to this concept was noted but the following incident was regarded as absolutely inexplicable, a thing beyond expectation or comprehension.

* 756 ● 787 A certain Kimsquit shaman had the supernatural being from whom he had derived his power actually resident in his body. At the time he obtained the gift, his benefactor had spoken to him.

"Henceforth," it said, "I will live in your right arm, my head located near your wrist, my tail near your elbow. When you cure a sick person place your arm against whatever part of his body is affected and I will draw forth the sickness with my mouth."

Thanks to this assistance, the shaman was able to perform marvellous cures, as the being never failed to suck out the disease. Though aware of his supernatural guest, the shaman himself never saw it except when he summoned it to cure a patient; then it came forth from his arm, though no one else could see it. When he had blown away the sickness, in the usual manner of shamans, the supernatural one returned within his arm, out of sight.

When the shaman grew old he called a friend to him and asked him to receive his power, telling him where, and how, it was localized. The man consented. The shaman then began [198] to talk in the language of supernatural beings, as shamans often do, and presently the supernatural one came forth and became visible to the friend as a small lizard-like creature sitting on the palm of the shaman's hand. This frightened the friend and he declined the creature on the ground that he lacked ceremonial purity, hence his body was not a fitting receptacle. The shaman urged him to receive the creature, but when he continued to refuse, allowed it to return to his own arm. When the shaman died a few years later the friend bitterly regretted his own cowardice, for the wonderful cures stopped, whereas, had he accepted the supernatural guest, he would have been able to perform them. 756* 787●

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

SHAMANS FROM THE DEAD

There remain to be described shamans from the dead, whose abilities and prerogatives are almost identical with those already described. They obtain their power either from the visitation of a ghost in this world, or by a journey to the land of shades below. The following incident explains why shamans alone can hold converse with ghosts. 756* 775 787

Once, long ago, the lover of a young girl died. She was so heart-broken that in her agony, four days after his burial, she lay down on his grave to weep. The dead man was able to visit her and in due time she gave birth to a child, who, like its father, was a ghost, with drawn face and glaring eyes. The perturbed woman tended it in the forest, her love overcoming a feeling of repulsion, and when she returned to her home she endeavoured to prevent her own mother handling the infant, knowing that she would be horrified. The grandmother insisted, but as soon as she saw the ghastly appearance of the child she dropped it in horror, and the infant vanished. [539]

Since then there has been a barrier, resembling a wall of smoke, between mortals and the dead. If the old woman had not dropped her grandchild, the living would still be able to converse with their deceased friends and relatives.

Nowadays, shamans alone are able to lift the barrier and discourse with the ghosts of those who have departed. These are quite common visitors to the land of the living, but only a shaman can understand their languages, of which one is a series of whistles, and the other resembles the attempts at speech made by a tongueless individual. Shamans can learn what the dead require and so transmit the knowledge to the relatives of the deceased. As, long ago, shamans whose powers were derived from animals were able to teach mortals the proper methods of hunting, and the taboos enjoined, so a [198]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 shaman from the dead once visited the land of ghosts and 775 learnt their needs. They informed him that food and clothing thrown on the ground did not reach them, and that in order 787 to do so it must be cast on the fire. Instead of journeying to the land of the dead some shamans receive their powers from ghosts who ascend to this earth, as the following account describes.

539 Within the lifetime of an elderly Bella Coola informant, a certain
* 756 woman, Sikwalwalx by name, left her house one evening for a few 775 minutes. When she came back she was crazy. Her face was green, her 787 mouth and face distorted and twisted, she could only whistle when she tried to talk, and kept endeavouring to walk on her hands. Taking her [828] blankets, she went through the motions of washing them, but instead of using water, she dragged them to and fro through the ashes of the central fire, until, utterly exhausted, she lay down. By these symptoms it was recognised that a ghost had stricken her with madness, and several [755] shamans of the dead were called upon for help. For a long time their efforts were fruitless. Then one of them obtained some stained menstrual pads. While another conducted the frantic beating of sticks, the leading practitioner waved one of the pads through the smoke of the central fire and laid it, with hemlock bark and dyed cedar-bark, on the patient's face. After leaving it there a few moments, he took it off and, while the beating of sticks was stilled, threw it out the door. When this had been done four times the woman was restored to sanity. Later on she said she had seen the ghost of a certain Triwust, a man recently deceased. Emerging from her trance she found herself in her house surrounded by numerous people and the shaman working over her. If he had not been able to cure her, she would have died; in fact, it was impossible to discover whether the Bella Coola regarded this woman as having been cured of an illness, or as having been restored from the dead.

Sikwalwalx called for the singers to whom she sang four songs, relating what she had seen. They described how she stood by a fire in the land below, where the sun travelled from west to east, and where everything differed from this earth, though reminiscent of it. The singers learnt the songs, and it was to their music that the woman danced on later occasions. She was able ever afterwards not only to cure maladies caused by ghosts but to talk with them. For this purpose she was in the habit of lying down at night in the graveyard, looking down into the land of the dead which was open to her, and conversing with the inhabitants in a strange whistling language which the living could hear, but could not understand. She was also able to gaze downwards at the edge of the central fire nearest to the door. 756* 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Anotäkmots, an old shaman from the dead who died not long ago, obtained his power by chancing to visit their land. [787] [539] The themes of his songs were of the land of the dead where, he said, there were many people; where those who had been rich on earth were rich, but where those who had been poor were still poor; where those who had been blind could see, and those who had been maimed were whole. He told of Päluätl, a legless creature who lives in the land below, but can travel with amazing speed. [776] In fact this shaman stated that it was he who was sent when the ghosts wished to communicate with the living, a statement contradicted by others. He told further of Kawikudjän-a, a supernatural woman resident there, who is able to pick berries with phenomenal rapidity. [776] But this talent avails her little, since her basket is full of the teeth of dead men who devour the fruit as fast as she picks them. It was Anotäkmots who described how in the land below there were only two enormous trees of the kind known to the Bella Coola as kip, under the shade of which the ghosts played a game resembling football with huge, light balls.

A dead person usually chooses one of his own relatives as the proper person on whom to bestow the power of a shaman, but their actions in this respect can neither be coerced nor cajoled. Ceremonial chastity is of assistance, and power can usually be obtained by anyone who lies four days and four nights, face downwards, on a new grave. Nor does every sight of a deceased person bring with it this faculty; in fact, ghosts are greatly dreaded since they usually cause harm to the beholder. On one occasion the mother of an elderly Bella Coola woman left the house one evening, to return shortly with her face screwed up into a ghastly smile, green in colour, and with saliva dribbling from her mouth. She was quite mad. A shaman from the dead succeeded in curing her, or it may have been in restoring her to life, and she was able to tell how she had seen what she took to be a man with face averted. She 756* 775 787

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 called out to him, and then remembered no more. It was 775 obvious that she had seen a ghost.

[787] It is over diseases caused by ghosts that a shaman from the dead has power. If a person picks up and eats any morsels 753 which he has dropped he will usually suffer, because, though
* 756 he thinks the crumbs have fallen, they have really been pulled 775 from his hands by a hungry ghost, who thus showed his desire for food. By picking up and eating the fragments, the man [264] thwarts a dead person who retaliates by forcing some sickness into him. Ghosts may visit this land of the living and ask their relatives for food or clothing, but mortals, unable to hear the speech of the dead, are unaware of the requests of their deceased relatives, and so do not answer them. The irritated ghosts respond by causing sickness. In such cases a shaman 755 from the dead is able to suck out the cause of the ill, and some-
* 756 times to display it as a bone, twig, or other small object and at the same time to tell the sufferer what it was that his relatives desired. Like ordinary shamans, a shaman from the dead uses his own discretion whether or not to employ the violent beating of sticks, and like his fellow-practitioner re-[465] ceives payment from those whom he has helped. There are no fixed charges, but a successful shaman is always wealthy.

* 756 The intimate contact of ghosts with shamans has already 787 been mentioned in connection with the ability of the latter to 694 learn from the ghost of a murdered person whom he believes to be his slayer.

There is one method of sacrificial curing practised by 755 shamans from the dead alone. If the sickness refuses to yield
* 756 to ordinary methods, the practitioner makes ten cedar-bark 782 vessels, fills these with grease and places them near the fire, one between it and the door, one on the inner side, and four on either side of it, parallel to the side walls of the house. By each vessel are placed two small wooden figures, roughly carved to represent men, and decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark. After endeavouring to suck forth the disease, with or without the assistance of the frenzied beating of sticks, the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

154 who has been "cured" of an illness, recovers; the man whose
771 death has been "caused" by magic, dies. An average white 789 man would consider such statements to be erroneous, but they not only figure in stories and beliefs, but some of them have been actually observed by the writer. The explanation lies in the susceptibility of the Bella Coola to suggestion. The conviction that he is to die so weakens a man that death often results; belief that he is to recover, aids a sick person to throw off the malady. This sentiment, intelligible in case of disease, is equally applicable in other matters. The child who has been [868] endowed with carpentry skill grows up with the conviction to assist his labours. Moreover, his relatives and friends are also aware of it, and he receives every opportunity to practise, so that the outcome desired is often the consequence of the act.
789 Though the Bella Coola do not appreciate that psychological 828 and sociological factors may be the real cause of the result, they realize the importance of the power of thought. For [771] example, if a group of people is unanimous in wishing some end, or expects some event to happen, it is believed that their thoughts are strong enough to bring about its occurrence. The following examples illustrate this point:

It is said that when the white man first came to British Columbia, a tribe of Indians was living in a secluded valley, far to the south. As more and more settlers arrived, the occupants were driven from their homes and forced into the barren [787] mountains. One night, Alquntäm came in a vision to one of the natives, saying:

"I see what you desire; you want the white men to withdraw. You, yourself, are helpless. But if all your fellows wish the same, the white men will depart."

The man told all his friends and they agreed to concentrate the next night on their wish to expel the white man. A few failed to do so, and nothing happened. The second night there was the same lack of unanimity. The desire to drive away the intruders grew stronger in course of time, until one night this was the centre of the thoughts of all; next morning the white

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322 carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825 boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[10]

[10]This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER I

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

000

General Observations on the Kusiut Society — Powers and Functions of the Society — Initiation — The Ritual of Specific Dances — Various Origin Myths — Kusiut Prerogatives Other than Dances — The Death of a Kusiut — The Final Rite — Concluding Observations and History.

General Observations on the Kusiut Society

IN view of the importance of the kusiut society in the lives of the Bella Coola, it would seem logical to have described it in an earlier part of this monograph. Though an integral part of the complicated structure of social organization, it is a secret, semi-religious grouping which can best be treated separately. The word kusiut is connected etymologically, according to native belief, with siut, the term for a supernatural being. Thus the meaning of the society's designation is "The Supernatural," or "The Learned," for siut has both these significations. A member of the society is likewise called a kusiut, plural, kukusiut.

575* 575* 192 [176]

The investigator soon learns of the existence of the society. If he asks a man his name, and then inquires further what type of designation it is, the answer is always that it is his kusiut name, that is, the one by which he is known as a member of the society. Ancestral names are used only at potlatches or other ceremonial occasions, whereas an individual's kusiut appellation is the one which he uses commonly. Moreover, for about three months of every year the Bella Coola live in an atmosphere of kusiut dances with a performance, or its preliminaries, taking place almost every night. Preparations for this ceremonial season, for so it may be termed, begin four days after the September moon is full, while the actual dances commence early in November and are continued until March. During this period the kukusiut are believed to be in intimate

551 575* [124] 535 575* 796 [787]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bella:oola NE6

535 contact with supernatural beings, so that it is a time for grave
*575 thoughts and decorous behaviour. Even by day the members
996 pass from house to house with dignified mien, not loitering
[787] around the sidewalks nor indulging in frivolity. Every effort is made to prevent quarrels between members who are expected to show by their appearance and actions the gravity of the rites in which they are engaged. Night after night they assemble at the house wherein the dance is taking place; those who have performed, and are therefore most closely in touch with the supernatural, even sleep there, not returning to their own houses until March. A dance usually lasts four nights, and during that time the performer's house, in which it takes place, is termed a nuqpik, "An Empty House." The significance of this designation is unknown.

178 Membership in the society depends on a duly validated
*575 ancestral prerogative to perform one of the many kusiut dances.
[424] At the present time every Bella Coola is a kusiu, even babes in arms being initiated, but formerly no one was admitted until he or she had reached an age of discretion. Some informants went so far as to say that the hair of an initiate must have begun to turn grey, and all agreed that no one was ever admitted until at least twenty, or more often, twenty-five years of age. Initiates were frequently still older; one woman, for example, stated that her mother was past the age of child-bearing before admission. Since only a member of the society [551] could be called by a kusiut name, the uninitiated continued to be known by the ancestral names conferred on them at infancy until they received kusiut designations. The importance of the 178 society depends on the belief of the uninitiated in the super-
*575 natural powers of its members, and as there are now none to 996 impress, the rites carried out today are little more than pic-
128 tures of what took place years ago. It is the sin of the Bella Coola to carry out the dances as if uninitiated persons were in attendance, and since most of the following information was obtained from men who well remembered their sensations when not members of the society, it is justifiable to use the present

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not 575* inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and 774 asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps 755 forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is [784] thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck.

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to 575* an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief 774 should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect 626 for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims.

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is 575* ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural 787 beings held in Nusmät-a prior to the entry of Äłqunt̄ăm. As 776 already described, it is believed that a supernatural element 996 from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time 777 but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging 761 to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nusmät-a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Äłqunt̄ăm enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened.

*575 Ałquntām enters and confers on kusiut matters with ●787 Sexsexḱālaix, his assistant in affairs connected with his func-
776 tions as leader of the supernatural kukusiut.[1] This being acts 796 as announcer and intermediary with Ałquntām, but himself lacks the power of initiating matters. The two discuss whether or not it is advisable to allow mortal kukusiut to perform certain dances of the type known as kusiotum (II, p.128), and if so, they transmit the necessary power to the earthly dancer who has the proper prerogative, thus enabling him to give a graphic representation of what is done in the upper land.

*575 This is the essence of the kusiut dances. Each portrays a 796 performance given by one of the supernatural beings in the house above, or some other aspect of his activities. Each 787 earthly dancer has as patron a supernatural being, usually the 776 one who carries out the dance of which his own is a model, and between patron and protégé there exists a relationship by 535 means of which the latter receives the power necessary to perform. To do so, the uninitiated believe that he must receive a yax, which can be translated as "call," from his associate above. Moreover, not only is each patron a supernatural being, but each is guided by Ałquntām in the performance of the kusiut rites in the land above, which indirectly increases the prestige of the protégé.

---

*575 [1] The differences of belief of individual Bella Coola, dependent upon family 787 traditions, is nowhere shown with greater clearness than in this meeting of the leaders of the supernatural dancers. It is clear that the Bella Coola have no 776 uniformity of belief, even in what might be regarded as fundamental concepts. One informant, well versed in kusiut matters, asserted that there are five supernatural leaders, Ałquntām and his assistants, Smaistāla, Sxwaxpālaix, Sxwalāla, 796 and Sxwalāla. Others were equally emphatic that Ałquntām is the kusiut name of the supreme deity, and that Sxwalāla, Smaistāla, and Sxwalāla, are 184 merely other designations for the same deity with regard to different functions. This belief has been followed during the monograph, by designating the supreme deity as Ałquntām, the name by which he is termed with respect to his kusiut powers. These two opinions are not so basically different as appears at first sight. A man [828] is considered as having two, or more, personalities with respect to different rites at which he is called by different names. Since the supreme deity is regarded as a supreme, who functions in diverse manners, it is not difficult to understand how these are sometimes ascribed to different individuals, and sometimes to the one under different names.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

Furthermore, throughout the ceremonial season, the uninitiated have ocular demonstrations of the powers with which the kukuxiut are associated. At frequent intervals they are invited to the house of the dancer where, with wonder, fear, and awe, they see strange creatures. Although they may recognize that some of these are only their fellow-tribesmen in strange form, they have no idea how such transformations are produced, and ascribe them to supernatural assistance. They accept the strange designs of the figures as proof that the kukuxiut have been in contact with unfamiliar beings. It seems clear that the uninitiated do not realize that the representations are produced by means of masks, the work of human hands; instead, they believe that the figures displayed are really those of supernatural patrons who have come to earth to assist their protégés. It must be remembered that these dances take place within large houses, only partially illuminated by a flickering central fire, which facilitates deception and conjuring tricks, quite apart from the credulity of the observers. 575* 796 781 [354]

The uninitiated may sometimes suspect that the performers are not real supernatural beings, but there is no question of their firm conviction concerning the changes which come over the kukuxiut at this time. One member of the society, for example, may begin to act in a peculiar manner and at once the uninitiated are ejected from the house. From without they listen with mixed fear and excitement to the strange noises which they do not know are made by whistles, and presently the kuxiut rushes forth in a frenzied state, biting those he meets. The uninitiated know that he is a Cannibal, doing as his patron above is doing, and that a call from the latter has caused him to become mad. When the kukuxiut have subdued him and taken him back to his house, the non-membersh ear more strange and inexplicable sounds, which appear to go upwards, and presently the news is circulated that the Cannibal has been carried away to the land above. He is seen no more for several weeks, and when next he appears he is thin, wan, and bald, because the high winds of the land above have blown 575* 781 787 796

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the 781 dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sym-[787] pathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the ɬaɬaxiat are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which ɬaɬaxiat are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a ɬaxiat 798 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the performance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 787 equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor 424 must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his ɬaxiat name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, xaɬɬxiatxte (also called xaxe'tpate), by the supernatural woman ɬxe'ɬkwalxaic.
Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a ɬaxiat initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every ɬaxiat prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is ɬxe'ɬkwalxaic; she is one,
yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred ɬaxiat prerogatives. Her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kuxiut prerogative there localized. Ana'likwolxaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kuxiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[1] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she mocks the uninitiated: 575* 787 424 [778] [776]

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kuxiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ana'likwolxaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kuxiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ana'likwolxaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer. [776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'ou' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kuxiut."

To further this deception, kukuxiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ana'likwolxaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kuxiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to transfer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nuhaxem, an 575* 778 425

[1] [See category 116, p. 84(A) - ANALYST]
[2] (Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*575 this undoubtedly leads them to believe in the powers which 424 they claim. Each kusiut prerogative has had one of three 773 origins:

778 (a) It was brought down by the first people. Before coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his [781] patron, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest men were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

[787] (b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes altered an ancestral to a kusiut name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases each followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[1] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described [184] this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nanudjignim, a male supernatural being sent down by Ałqantłm at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Ano'likwelsais and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a kusiut is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out *575 the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his 778 forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither error nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent

[1] The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 567 struggling in fear, to the secret meeting-place. Here the marshals discuss what shall be done with him; some suggest that he be killed, others a lesser fate, and finally someone advises his initiation. After apparently due deliberation, this is decided upon; the slave is told the mysteries of the society and is warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells the uninitiated of his knowledge. The actual ceremonial rites of admission do not vary according to the preliminaries used.

*575 796 Initiation can take place at any time during the kusiut season. After consulting with the marshals in order to choose an evening when no other dance is to take place, the relatives of the neophyte, whom it will be convenient to term X, invite the kulusiut to their house. Sometimes songs are sung by way of rehearsal, at other times food is distributed at once. As the people are eating, one of the marshals stands up to address them, saying that X's relatives propose to take him to the repository of the name ———, so that he may become a kusiut. X, to whom this may be the first intimation, is called from his house and taken from the village by several of his kinsmen, with one or more of the marshals. The kulusiut disperse and tell the uninitiated in the other houses that X has gone to meet Ant'lkwalaxis. His companions hear the news with mingled envy and thankfulness that they are not to have this dangerous privilege.

[178] In ancient times X and his guides may actually have proceeded to his repository, but for several generations at least it has been customary for the party merely to go to some lonely spot in the woods for the night. These accompanying X tell him as much of the ritual of the society as they think fit, not forgetting to emphasize the trust put upon him, and the fate which will befall him if he should communicate his knowledge.

[187] [184] He is expected to report that he went to the repository where, lying face downwards on the ground, he saw Ant'lkwalaxis; in Kimsquit he is supposed also to see her husband.*

[176] *According to one old Bella Coola a score of Ant'lkwalaxis also reside in every repository.

[The Dance of Nuakamin]

[703] approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath [824] the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is [825] Smaim-a, whence its captain hops to Nuquimaxin to await the coming of Alpaxoim. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nakamim. This canoe, which brings the salmon and herring to Bella Coola, has four oars but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Nuklipaxm lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [783] times when people were purified by ceremonial cleanliness, several [83] succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsiderate, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [630] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [779] person was Nuklipaxm, but that the mandals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Nuklipaxm is patron for several kulaxiut, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river the kulaxiut dances begin.

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, [184] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [924] slight variations, if any. In Tsimsil the kulaxiut who has the [55] prerogative of seeing Nuklipaxm is a certain Kwaklo-i,* in Kimsquit, Hackwemaxm,* and in Skidegat, Lowemem. Although,

[115] *Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Kwaklo-i, who informed [436] that the canoe was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578] informed us the leading of this designation by her father and said that the present was but lately in return to. Minor listings are often created by disputes of this kind.

*Meaning "Chief Crescent," a reference to the invisibility of his person, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many further canoe have significances of this type.

[The Dance of Nialkoorim]

scratches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the same compositions from year to year, and recently some of them, both native and foreign words, have been adopted by the Bella Coola. Long ago the medicals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

As the time drawn near for Nialkoorim to start his voyage, X anxiously consults any of the older Indactar who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Nialkoorim is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fondly towards the west, and calls out:

"Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Nialkoorim must round four points before reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

Some of the medicals are always in readiness and one of them sets a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to notify the Indactar of what is about to take place. The messenger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his person having sent to him the supernatural being, Nialkoorim, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances

[The Dance of Nutkyum]

X is supposed to be gazing constantly to the west, watching for another sight of Nutkyum. With the aid of a friend, X arranges his eagle tail head-dress on a box so that it projects above the wall of the platform as if he were sitting within. The uninitiated understand that X is watching, and the novitiates further confirm their belief. Meanwhile X remains hidden in the back room, never leaving the house except when necessary, and then only under cover of night.

On the fourth day after his first vision, X stands up and cries out:

Tqáxlè, "The Point."

The significance is that X sees Nutkyum as he appears around the first point. A herald is at once sent out. First he repeats loudly the exact words said, then departs to call the initiates to X's house. When they have taken their places the singers hent out a new song previously composed, the second for X. The dance describes how Nutkyum is rounding the first promontory, in his craft which is often likened to a cloud or a flock of birds. This they practice, before carrying sounding-boards and drums to the lowest house in the village, where the singers and a number of initiates take up their stations. When all is ready X enters, the women avert their drooping eye, and, to the accompaniment of the beating of time and the singing of his new song, he dances around the fire. This same procedure is carried out in every house of the village, working from the lowest upwards. Finally all return to X's house where they receive food and the usual admonitions from a member. Then they dispersa. This is about 11 a.m.

X again climbs to the platform where his head-dress is arranged as if he were sitting constantly gazing towards the approaching Nutkyum. For four days he remains hidden, and on the morning of the fifth he again cries out:

Tqáxlè.

This time it signifies that the supernatural one has rounded a second promontory. The same ritual is repeated, the calling by the herald, the meeting in X's house, and the procession to every abode. The song on this occasion, the third for X, describes what Nuákynuw is doing on his journey, as if X were relating what he saw. The kukuziut return to X's house for another meal and the admonishments of a marshal. 575* 796* 787 533

[The Dance of Nookxnim]

For four days more X retires from sight. On the morning of the fifth day he once more calls:

Tuíkik.

Exactly the same procedure is carried out, the theme of this fourth song being of how Nuákynuw can be seen rounding a third promontory.

X remains in concealment for four days more, then cries out again. This time the song describes how Nuákynuw has rounded the fourth and last promontory and how the supernatural beings above have sighted him. This is the fifth song used for X. As on the previous occasions, he conceals himself on the platform after making a tour of the village.

On the morning of the fifth day later, X cries out that Nuákynuw is at the mouth of the river where he has tied his craft to the stakes of a salmon-trap. The belief of the Bella Coola is that he approaches up an underwater fiord, into which flows an underwater river provided with a salmon-trap; X alone can see these phenomena. The herald goes from house to house repeating the announcement. The kukuziut, too, visit each, singing the song while X dances. He and the singers always decide beforehand on his actual statement, so that the words of the song will be in agreement, as if the singers had composed it on the spot. Once again X retires from sight. [203]

Five days later he arouses the household with his loud shouting:

"Nuákynuw is in the river itself. He has reached the home of the Resident; Iwinuíttinuis is mooring his craft. Dukkukkumuw and Náklumkinuw are greeting him." [776]

The herald repeats this news throughout the village. The uninitiated know in general terms who these supernatural beings are. The Resident lives under the water at the mouth of the river; his function is to see that the stream and the 575* 796* 776 [203]

Ž: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

4 575 salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the 4 796 supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Imimátnais, 776 "The Mourer," is a supernatural child who stays with the Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Nuákynum's craft. Dakdakémem is sent by Smaien-a, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Nuákynum, and with him come Smaien-a's son, Alálkmtnum,* to assist Nuákynum in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are patrons for different kukuiat. The Resident is also known as Amitáli.

6 575 The kukuiat assemble in X's house as on the previous x 796 occasions; according to some informants two songs are used ● 787 on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the [583] usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way upstream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Nemátlem has brought a call to him. The woman and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kuciat whistles sound from within. Nemátlem is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Nuákynum for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical
[805] experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November [82] moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days more had to elapse, in which it was said that Nuákynum was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent [84] settlements on the same night, but the kuciat season is two or three days shorter in Sisaa and the upper villages than in Kynqo-ti. Exact information on this point was unavailable.
5 575 As already described, Nuákynum travels to Smaien-a, whence 4 796 he leaps to Nuqudewaite and places his pole within the house.
773 All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for Hyuwám, but as soon as the latter enters, Nuákynum seizes his

*These informants state that there are four of these beings.

2;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pole and starts his journey downstream. 575*

Now that X has received his call, the ceremonial continues 796* for four days more, in a manner typical of kuciut dances. Only variations from the pattern about to be described will be given [773] in later dance rituals.

X spends the rest of this day on which the call has come 575* to him, the twenty-fourth of the whole rite, within his house. 796*
In the evening a herald summons the kukuciut, this being the 184 night of tsaxémem. In Stuax the call used is: 203

Shiwap Stuaxo, "Cure, ye Stuax people," because it is believed that a call almost kills a Stuax person. This is probably true for the people of the other villages of the upper valley, but elsewhere this cry is used only when a novice receives his first call. In the lower valley and at Kimsquit the cry is:

Swapuddimut kukuciut, "Bring light, ye kukuciut."

Care is always taken to use the right expression with refer- 575*
ence to the locality of the dancer's repository, irrespective of 796* where he may happen to be living.

All the kukuciut are expected to attend, in fact, they are 533 glad to do so, but attendance is compulsory for novices only.
When all have assembled, one of the leading singers takes command. The coming of his call is supposed to have made X light-headed, and he must be cured by a frenzied beating of [787] sticks four times repeated. During this X himself remains quiescent. The singers now group themselves into a close circle to compose a song describing the supernatural beings seen by X during the day. As a rule, each man has one or more tunes in his mind which he hums to his associates as he softly beats time. Then another does the same, and this is repeated until unanimity of opinion is reached concerning the most suitable. The leader of the choir fits the proper words to this, assisted by his comrades and perhaps by X himself, or someone well acquainted with his prerogative.* As soon as the singers have finished their work they widen their circle and sing the song loudly so that it can be heard and learnt by all.

*This song, like the one used earlier, is sometimes prepared in advance.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

since a certain hwiat has the definite prerogative of throwing them on the fire. As each is tossed into the flames he calls out:

"Please return directly to the supernatural ones."

The only exception is for the mask of Ana'kwalnais for which his cry is:

"Please return directly to your repository."

Before X can again take his normal place in the community it is necessary to remove from him the call, which is conceived as being something physical that has entered his body. This is the belief taught to the uninitiated so emphatically that the hakaciat themselves appear to believe it; at any rate, whatever their inward thoughts, they act as if the call had substance. As soon as the masks have been burnt one of the hakaciat suggests that it is time to expel the call. All the hakaciat in the house crowd around X, as many as can reach his body pressing against his stomach with their hands, always in an upward direction. Higher and higher they go, from stomach to chest, from chest to neck, as if managing some object. At last it is thought to have been expelled, and X brings his hands together, as if holding something with great care. Suddenly he throws them up in the air, opening them as he does so, and calling out:

Ana'kkilimat ala dmitnayas, "Go back to your ancient home."

These ritual words have been handed down from ancient times and are used by every hwiat to dismiss his call. Whither it is sent is problematical. Some say to X's repository, others to Nacpalwaxlas; the Bella Coola do not know. Often one of his songs has been sung on the sidewalk outside X's house; the call may be returned from there.

This rite ends the ceremony and the hakaciat disperse. It is obvious that every nakcam must vary according to the picture of the dancer, but the above is typical of the ritual. A call can now come to any hwiat, and one often descends at this time, so that X's nakcam is finished for another dancer.

For the rest of the ceremonial season X has to observe certain rules. He must wear his collar of cedar-bark and attend every kwiat dance. Usually all kwiatat do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every potlatch he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Alpanim enters Nanqulcmaxte at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kwiatat of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Nuikpum enters his paddle (or pole?), returns to Imaiso-a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Nuikpum empties a large number of clachas into the river.* X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kwiatat.

It sometimes happens that no kwiat of whom Nuikpum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Nuikpum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kwiat. This abbreviated ceremony, nemut Imaiskwiqumiut, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

*Nuikpum is accordingly also called Nuikshum.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wila]

"Path Clearers" see to it that no one passes between him and the fire. The uninitiated are soon expelled from the house and their curiosity is aroused. Meanwhile the singers prepare songs for X, describing his supernatural patrons, and some kukusiut carpenters are instructed to make in secret ten small pieces of wood, about one foot in length and six inches wide, sometimes half-moon shaped. They cover these with dyed cedar-bark on which they paint the designs appropriate to each being.[11] On the morning of the fourth day, X blackens his face with soot or charcoal, obtained by pouring water on a fire, and dons the usual kusiut costume. A herald then invites the kukusiut to assemble in X's house. Presently they proceed to the lowest house of the village, where the singers beat out the tunes of the "Path Clearers," remembered from a previous year. They dance, while X stands, shifting is feet and moving his apron as if he also wished to perform but was too weary to do so. This is repeated at every house of the village, except that in which the potlatch was held; most of the kukusiut follow the procession, as do some of the uninitiated. Finally, with X last of all, they enter the potlatch house, where foreign guests and many uninitiated have assembled.

In Kimsquit the preliminary four days of watching are omitted, but from this point on the rites of the two areas are practically identical.[12] As X enters, all the kukusiut who have pounding sticks begin to beat on the floor and the women dance. Without delay, and without attention to the timeless changing, X begins to dance sunwise, around the fire, at intervals casting on it particles of eagle down which have the effect of making the supernatural ones above take their places. He calls out intermittently that he can see the beings above arising down, and a herald repeats his remarks loudly. In Bella Coola the four "Path Clearers" walk close behind X.

575* 796* [532] [302] [535] [789] [787] [184] [424]

[11] The distinctive designs are given by Boas, to whom the reader is referred.

[12] It is probable that X never lies in dress when Nuhymas's dancer reports that the name is on the mouth of the river.

[13] It is uncertain whether the differences in detail are typical of Bella Coola and Kimsquit, or merely represent variations in individual perspective.

[The Dance of Wi'a]

*575 The last to seat himself is Kwiliaz Nuxkāmpts, an obstreperous *796 individual, who always wants more presents than anyone else.
782 When X announces that the beings above have taken their places, a carpenter brings forward the object covered with cedar-bark and painted with a design of Xemxemālstels,* holds it above X's head, and then gives it to a herald who casts it into the fire. At the same time X throws on the flames some dyed cedar-bark, some undyed cedar-bark, a little eagle down, and some olachen grease, saying:

"Please Xemxemālstels,* accept this offering and be present," and throws his hands up in the air as if casting some object upwards.

Still dancing, X calls out hoip several times.

The painted representation and the cedar-bark are objects which Xemxemālstels likes to receive; the olachen grease supplies the flame on which they ascend to him. The same procedure is repeated for the eight other brothers, with slight variations in the words addressed to each. To Omqemēlkds, for example, X says:

[534] Ā-ōqwā-ōmēlkēmx | dīxwnxālxwnxālxwnxnxnxnxnxnx | ōxqōxōxwxnxālx
Woodpecker-coloured* | is the place where he sits, | the recipient,* hōmqemēlkēmxālx *Omqemēlkds.

When the time comes to invite the hungry Tlōxqēlēlēx-a, an offering of food instead of bark is cast upon the flames. X
*575 continues to dance after the final gift, and presently a thud
*796 is heard on the roof while some hoxiut, chosen beforehand for
● 787 the purpose, compresses a hidden bladder-whistle which the uninitiated know is the voice of the call. Whether they be-

[184] *In Kimsquit the offerings are made by a hoxiut who has this prerogative in connection with the name Hēlēlēxa.

[776] *His other name is Ōqōxwa, "The Recipient of Many Gifts."

*Ā-ōqwā-ōmēlkēmx is one of the larger woodpeckers, the species could not be identified.

*This designation, properly applied only to Xemxemālstels, is often used for his brothers as well.

[126] *These words are virtually sung, each vocional line marking the end of each subdivision. A record was made of the music for the National Museum of Canada; record VII D 6a; singer, Jim Pollard.

[The Dance of Wil·a]

lieve the thud on the roof, which is made by an accomplice, is the call itself, or a being bringing it to X, is problematical. All non-members are expelled immediately, including guests other than Kimsquit or Tâl·is kukuciut. One is tempted to conjecture whether or not the donor of the potlatch does not use this rite as a means of getting rid of his guests if they show a disposition to linger too long. 575* 796* [787] [556]

The call having come to X, this is the day of kustômem. In the early evening a herald goes up and down the platform outside the houses, calling out in effect:

"He has been pressed to earth beneath the weight."

No mention is made of who "he" may be, although the uninitiated are well aware. The herald then enters each house in order, starting at the bottom, to invite the kukuciut to assemble in X's. After he has been aided by the beating of sticks, four times repeated, the singers seat themselves behind the fire, where X joins them. The fiction is always carried out that the call has brought him a song, which he pretends to sing or recite to the singers who appear to be listening intently. Usually he says nothing, or talks about something else, though sometimes the deception is furthered by X first learning the words from the musicians and repeating them as if teaching. 575* 796* 593 [787]

The theme is always of the supernatural patrons and how the offering attracts them. Since only kukuciut are present and since they all understand the methods, this part of the ceremony may be slighted.* The singers beat out and sing the song a number of times, softly, as if practicing, then more loudly for the benefit of the audience, and finally at full strength while X dances. Later in the season when many kukuciut have performed, and there is danger of the songs being forgotten, it is customary to sing them over on the night of kustômem while the owner of each song dances. Throughout, the whistle sounds, to the awe of the uninitiated in the other 575* 796*

*Even when no uninitiated are present, the kukuciut always surround their ceremonials with an air of mystery which ultimately affects themselves.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wi·a]

*575 *796 *I..., and so...," revolving sunwise at the same time.

*Awi'kwulnis does not fail to point out to the uninitiated: "That is the way he sings up above. Look at him! That is what he does in his own home."

*575 *796 552 If foreigners, guests for the potlatch, are in attendance, Awi'kwulnis adds that the supernatural beings are disappointed at having been called too late for it. Then the uninitiated are expelled, the masks burnt, and the kukwiat disperse.

A few further notes are necessary on this dance. If a potlatch is to be given after the kwiat season, the calling of these supernatural beings is sometimes reserved as the last kwiat dance, and any foreigners present, as uninitiated guests, are told that the beings have come for the ceremony. There is [776] thus a superficial appearance of confusion between these kwiat patrons and nusut deities. It is nothing more than a resemblance, since the nine brothers do not appear at the potlatch, and nothing is said to explain their absence; it is merely a subterfuge to increase the interest of the rite. Nor is any connection necessary; in fact, X usually obtains his call like [778] any other kwiat, without the spectacular throwing of presents on the fire. In this case X and the marshals consult and select the proper day for the beginning of the ceremony. On the *575 night preceding that chosen, the kukwiat are called to X's *796 house and one of the marshals announces that he can hear X's 787 call wawing to come to him. He answers simply:

"I am afraid."

The uninitiated are not expelled from X's house, so that they learn what is to take place. No ritual occurs on that evening, but one of X's friends remains constantly with him, as if to assist in any emergency. Kukwiat are often seen up the slopes of the neighbouring mountains with whistles which the uninitiated hear, and which lead them to believe that supernatural beings are in the vicinity.

[124] A phonographic record was made of this; National Museum of Canada, record VII D 4b, singer, Jim Pollard.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of Wil·a]

About dusk on the following day X, who is in his own house, suddenly stands up and cries out: 575* 796*

"Yes. It has come. I am afraid. Yes! I will do as you bid me." 787

The ḥaḥaiat women begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Heralds announce that a ḥaiat has been pressed to earth, and presently they go to every house inviting the ḥaḥaiat to gather in X's. From this point on, the rite of ḥaaimow continues in the manner already described.

The ability of X to summon these nine brothers from above is a special prerogative; other ḥaḥaiat have one or other of them as patron, but lack the power to call the whole number to earth. One ḥaiat has exclusive knowledge of the mat which is spread for Omponkilda when the other supernatural beings summon him to a ceremony; another of the place where the brethren obtain their eagle down. Detailed information was not obtained about these ceremonies. [424]

THE CANNIBAL DANCE

Of all ḥaiat dances, the one of which the uninitiated are most afraid, and which is, therefore, the strongest, is the Cannibal dance. It is believed that the performer is exposed to greater dangers than in any other rite, and observers have the most spectacular ocular demonstrations of his powers. The patrons of most Cannibals are Alpanim, Sawanḥaiaiq, or Kimai·ix, who implant in their protégés a wolf, bear, or eagle, causing them to devour strange foods. The Bella Coola consider that a man is equally a Cannibal whether he has the prerogative of eating corpses, biting the living, eating dogs or raw salmon, or biting himself. The most common of these is the right to bite the living, and few of the older people are not scarred thereby. Fear of Cannibals is one of the strongest causes for the respect with which the uninitiated regard the ḥaiat society, but though the holders of prerogatives of this type are regarded with awe on account of their powers, they are not considered as chiefs, as the Bella Coola say is the case

575* 796* 424 [781] [796] [787] [781] [171] [222]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bella coola NE6

[Re Cannibal Dance]

among the Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and Rivers Inlet people. Indeed, in Bella Coola a poor man may be the most dreaded Cannibal of all, if he has been able duly to validate and perform his right in this respect. Nor is the dance carried out with the same rigour in Bella Coola as amongthe tribes of the outer coast.

The ritual of different perspectives varies to such an extent that several accounts must be given, in spite of the repetitions that this form of presentation entails. On account of the length of time necessary, a Cannibal dance usually begins early in the season. The following describes the manner in which Kwakiutlu of Kimsquit, who can hardly the living, carried out his rite; it was obtained from his brother, who is thoroughly conversant with the details. It will be convenient to refer to Kwakiutlu as X, and to use the present tense throughout.

A meeting is held at which the mandolin and others choose, in agreement with X and his relatives, a day suitable for him to commence his performance. Under normal circumstances it is on some pretext that a mandolin announces that he can hear X's call, and on the following evening, when the ritual has been completed, the uninitiated are startled to hear continuous whistling from the slopes of the mountains near the village. The instruments used are of the usual binder type, but the long-drawn-out sound, termed Hoolum, is said to be the voice of the kindly supernatural woman, Sisiutlu.*

*The sole function of this being seems to be the restoring to life of those who appear to have been killed in the performance of Sacred Rite. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether or not she is identical with Hamatsa. The noise which Sisiutlu has returning is produced by the whistles of those Initiates who throughout the night range the forests and mountains within one mile of the village. By bending their heads up and down, they are able to increase the volume and apparent distance of the sound. The free travel to night this, the [illegible] and apparent the branch is nearly exhausted he presses the hand of the [illegible] blows, and when whistling forthwith, while the original leader drops to the [illegible] man, who starts hoolum-ing, he signals to the same way to the third, [illegible]. As the second the whistling is continuous, and the uninitiated are [illegible] so way in this way [illegible] that it cannot be [illegible] If a non-member [illegible] prisoner, keeping

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

575*
796*
787

Towards dawn, a herald goes through the village crying loudly:

"Get up, you young men! Get up all ye people! Something strange has come upon the young man."

The uninitiated are expelled and the ḱukuxiat assemble in X's house where he is acting as if demented, biting any of his associates except other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts. Meanwhile those who are not members of the society cower in their own houses, and are told that if they dare to look out, X, scenting them, will bite them to death. At intervals during the morning, X goes around to the other houses, naked and savage, snapping at everyone he sees. The uninitiated hide in the bedrooms, but peek out occasionally and hear his growlings and the shrieks of mock terror with which his associates greet his bites and threats. The ḱukuxiat tell non-members when it is safe for them to leave their hiding-places for necessary purposes, but at all other times they remain in concealment, listening with fear to the dangerous maniac.

About midday X returns to his house where a large number of ḱukuxiat have assembled. The uninitiated certainly, and perhaps some of the ḱukuxiat as well, believe that Cannibals are carried away to the land above where they are exposed to great dangers, and to prevent this an effort is always made to bind the dancer. The marshals and X's relatives have made the necessary preparations, consisting of the manufacture of a long rope, in addition to the usual dyed cedar-bark collar and a bear-skin. The ḱukuxiat enter whole-heartedly into the dramatic spirit of the rite, and the robe is thrust over X in spite of his furious struggles. Then the collar is forced over his head, while the women drone and the whistles sound eerily, to the wonder of the uninitiated listening from adjacent houses. The thick, cable-like rope is doubled and a circle of ḱukuxiat form around the seemingly demented dancer, each man holding a section. X rushes against one part of the circle after another, as if to force his way out; sometimes he bends down, and those

[172]

[282]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

restraining him hand too, throwing him back into the centre of the circle with the aid of the rope and their bodies. Meanwhile the women are drumming, and some of them pound on the floor with sticks; intermittent calls of hoip and the sound of the whistle add to the weird confusion. The circle of hahaciat often revolves around X, each man jumping in time to his neighbours, so that the din is increased. After about ten minutes, the circle gradually contracts to a double line, and the rope is slipped over X's head, as if tying up a dangerous beast. One end is given to a haciat willing to have a call, and he goes around leading X as if he were a captive animal. The heralds go to every house to report what has taken place.*

Towards dusk two young hahaciat are sent up the mountains. Soon after the sun has set, members of the society gather on the sidewalk outside X's house, to which X is led. He is still struggling, and the hahaciat press close around him, as if to restrain him; thereby effectually concealing everything from the uninitiated watching from the doorways of their houses. At a signal from one of the senior hahaciat, all the members of the society shriek out yo – at the top of their voices. At the same time X, aided by his fellows, slips from his rope and hides himself within a bow-drum, which is then carried back to his house. Warned by the cry, the two lads up the mountains forthwith begin to growl. This furnishes clear proof to the uninitiated that X has been able, owing to the power within him, to slip away from the closest bonds of his fellows and travel aloft. In answer to the growls from above, a haciat with a powerful voice calls out:

"Go aloft on the right road. Your power will enable you to escape the dangers. But do not stray from the narrow trail."

[194] In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, the hahaciat then go to every house, crying and wailing, thinking of the Cannibals

*It is not clear whether or not the uninitiated are sometimes present at the crying.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

who have gone aloft and never returned,* and of course increasing the fear of the uninitiated. They then go back to X's home where a marshal speaks, asking all to keep silence so that they will be able to hear X when he returns from the land above. No noise is permitted during his absence, even the discharge of muskets being forbidden. The man who carries the rope from which X escaped always receives a call on this night, because the supernatural beings have seen the important part he has played in the rite, and his patron recognizes it in this way. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated and, accordingly, the rope-holder is some kwakiut who wishes to have a call. After the usual curing,* one song is composed for the rope-holder, and sung very softly, since the night's ceremony is termed Mulipaxmag, "The Actionless Night," or Nuxwinwat, "The Silent Night." The uninitiated believe that the kwakiut are filled with woe and foreboding at the fate before X. It is early morning before they disperse.

The next day, wacinilap for the rope-holder, the usual ritual is omitted since the presence of grief and fear must still be preserved. Thus the necessary wood for the rope-holder's masks is cut silently. The collar and rope from which X escaped are hung on the wall of his house, and when a herald summons the kwakiut during the evening, he bids them assemble to watch over these objects. Although a second song, composed during the day, is practised for the rope-holder, it is done so softly that the uninitiated from neighbouring houses imagine that the kwakiut are really brooding over their loss. The only sound that reaches them is an occasional hoip, accentuating their fear. After the customary distribution of work and food the kwakiut disperse.

On the morrow, the rope-holder's gulam, the uninitiated are summoned, because it is assumed that members of the

*If a Cannibal dies during his period of disembodiment he is buried secretly. The uninitiated are told that his power enabled him to cross a yawning chasm in the land above, but then it failed him, so that he was unable to return to his friends.
*This ceremony of the frenzied hearing of sticks, repeated four times.

2: McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Cannibal Dance]

society have recovered from the shock of X's disappearance. Thereafter the ducia dances continue night after night, but the Cannibal remains hidden. Sometimes he is carried to a dance, concealed within a drum; more often he remains within the back-room of his own house or hides in some lonely part of the mountains. Throughout this period he eats little or nothing, and formerly used to devour a brew of roots that produced emaciation. The length of concealment depends entirely on X. If he desires to impress the uninitiated with the dangers which he has survived, he remains hidden for a long time; consequently, the period varies from a week to two months or even more. On every occasion that a marshal addresses the ducia he warns them to watch for X's return, and garbled accounts of this reach the uninitiated.

When X's relatives and the marshals have decided that the Cannibal has been long enough absent, they make arrangements for him to reappear. The time selected is always the night of a sukwum, and after the departure of the uninitiated on the preceding evening the marshals discuss arrangements with the ducia and allot tasks to various individuals. Several ducia shave X's head, except a small patch above the forehead, to support the story which he will tell of the high winds prevailing in the land above, which blew the hair from his head.*

After the dismissal of the uninitiated on the following night of sukwum, the ducia make their final arrangements. When they judge from the passage of the stars or the state of the tide that dawn is at hand, several members of the society climb to the roof of the previously selected house. First they sound a whistle, then thump on the roof with their feet, and call out:

Xwe, xwe, xwe: this is a cry used by Cannibals returned from above which is supposed to indicate a longing for meat.

The ducia sleeping within, knowing that their house has been selected, are ready as soon as they are awakened. The

*One old man mentioned that in his youth this was done with a sharpened piece of bone; he was unable to state what was used in earlier times.

J. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

5757
796
787

women drone, while the men rush out to capture the returning X. The uninitiated hear the sounds of feet rushing over the roof, as if a furious chase were taking place, and presently a loud ye comes to their ears. Having been told on previous occasions that this assists a Cannibal who is compelled to travel through space, they realize that he has escaped his would-be captors and returned above.

Then the herald goes around the village calling:

"Young boys! Get up, see, the Cannibal is at hand!"

In the early dawn, whistling is heard from the upper slopes of a near-by mountain and the uninitiated, watching eagerly and fearfully, behold a man clad in a bear-skin, who moves around, running fast across slides, and finally dashes down one and disappears into the forest, when the whistling ceases. They assume that this is the returning Cannibal; in reality, it is a ḵwaxat who has been sent out to perform this deception. Two go together, one to lie hidden and use the whistle, his companion to appear; the latter must be a strong man, able to run easily over rough slopes because it would lessen the Cannibal's prestige were the uninitiated to see him fall. After about five minutes' silence, the whistling is heard on the river bank at a point over a mile from where the supposed Cannibal vanished into the forest, and as before a bear-skin clad figure appears. The non-members assume that it is the figure previously seen, and that he has been able to penetrate the dense forest in some mysterious manner; in reality it is another pair of helpers, one of whom shows himself while the other uses the whistle. Meanwhile other ḵwaxat go to X's house where they paint themselves black and don cedar-bark ornaments. When ready, they set out to catch the Cannibal, travelling on two canoes across which planks have been laid, but not tied, and steered by a skilful waterman at bow and stern. They land at the place where the Cannibal was last seen, and pretend to hunt him. For the benefit of the uninitiated, watching from the village, they spend a considerable time at this, failing at first, but at length succeeding. Sometimes they drive their

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 quarry into a converging "v" of hunters, or someone may lie
*796 down as bait to attract the Cannibal so that the other lurking 787 pursuers can secure him. No effort is spared to make the man-hunt realistic. Then they carry the captive, struggling and biting, to the canoes and set out for the village. The preliminaries are lengthened or curtailed until the tide is favourable for the navigation of the craft; about two hours is the usual time consumed. When in mid-stream, the cry, ye ··, is again raised; the supposed Cannibal has once more escaped! All this time X himself has been hiding in or near the village, and he now appears. Instantly the kukusiut left in the neighbourhood set off in pursuit, those returning on the canoes hurry their passage and join the chase. After a struggle they succeed in capturing X and bringing him to the village.

The Cannibal acts like a demoniac animal, struggling, kicking, and biting as if his adventures had entirely destroyed his reason. He drags his captors, a number of strong kukusiut, to the various houses, and they are barely able to restrain him within the doorways and to force him out, biting and raving at them. A skilful actor is able to impress the uninitiated to a considerable extent, and of course he is supported by his associates. When every house has been visited, X is carried back to his own and a herald summons all the kukusiut to cure him. The uninitiated are allowed to crowd near the door to watch.

The assumption is that X has had the nature and instincts of an animal enter into him; if this cannibalistic incubus[1] can be driven out by beating time, he will be restored to sanity. Two long, thin sounding-boards have been prepared previously,
[534] as well as a number of birch sticks with which the kukusiut beat time. One man stands up to lead the drummers, and the sticks rise and fall in unison with his movements, in the manner previously described. At first X prowls around the house,

[1] This expression will be used henceforth as an interpretation of ts'ēnx, the power in form of an animal which, having entered a man, compels him to eat strange foods.

[778]
[104]

2:McDougall E-5 (1922-1924) 1942
NEA Bellacoola NEA

closely guarded by his attendants, but as the noise continues, he gradually becomes quieter and at last consents to sit down in a certain spot with other hakaiat ranged on either hand. After four rounds of beating, there suddenly appears beside X the head of an eagle, wolf, or bear, according to his prerogative. This is his cannibalistic incubus, driven from him by the successful beating of time. The head, usually a real one, has been carefully fixed by the carpenters, so that it can open its mouth, move its eyes, and give other signs of life. If it is a wolf, assistants concealed behind the row of hakaiat flanking X wave to and fro a gigantic wolf tail, lending further realism to the performance. The incubus vomits pieces of meat, presumably the pieces of human flesh which X has devoured; in reality they are morsels passed into the back of the head by carpenters, concealed behind the row of hakaiat. The uninitiated see the flesh fall into a box placed before X's feet and watch steam arising from it, but they do not know that hot stones have previously been laid within to cause this. As the meat passes out through the creature's mouth, X bends down and bites at it like an animal (see Plate 5) while all the hakaiat present stand up and call out yo four times. After the fourth shout the animal's head is concealed, though the uninitiated believe that it has returned to the land above whence it came to enter X. The Cannibal is now taken by some; his guardians no longer press so closely around him and non-members and many of the hakaiat leave the house.

Another subterfuge to impress the uninitiated is sometimes employed. Instead of permitting the departure of the incubus at once, another Cannibal is chosen to receive it from X. While two guardians hold X firmly, other hakaiat seize the prospective recipient so that the two are standing face to face, each held motionless. The second Cannibal stretches his head forward and pretends to draw something from X. At once he begins to growl and throws himself to and fro as if in frenzy, while the uninitiated are told to leave, lest they come to harm. They need no second invitation, especially as the new recipient is writhing so violently that it appears as if it would be only a few moments before he breaks loose and runs amuck. Closely guarded by a band of hakaxiat, the second Cannibal is now taken to every house of the village. He seems to be striving to escape, and to be restrained by the hakaxiat. All the time he growls and calls out:

[See category 116, p.84 (E) - ANALYST]

[The Cannibal Dance]

ł .....

The call of ooo can be used only by a Cannibal who has returned from the realms above. X meanwhile remains in his own house, to which the adventure is finally brought and the cannibalistic mamen returned by the call of yo .... four times repeated.

It was impossible to learn the details of a rite that occurs during the afternoon of this day. The singers have composed two songs for X, one describing his adventures in the land above, and the other the return of the mamen which made him a flesh-eating beast. It appears probable that during the afternoon the hakaxiat assemble in X's house to learn these songs. It might be added that the ritual of a Cannibal dance differs widely from that of most hamatsa ceremonies, since there is no pathos and no sadness; the uninitiated believe that the whole affair is so serious that they are not surprised at sensational occurrences.

In the evening the hakaxiat are first summoned to X's house, and hear the uninitiated. X is sitting close to the singers, with a number of hakaxiat grouped around him in case he should become frenzied. The singers first sing over the song describing the return of the Cannibal power, with the hakaxiat joining in softly. The chorus of every Cannibal song consists of the words:

Hámdmai, hámdmai, hám', hám'.

It is said that this same refrain is used in all Cannibal songs by the Bella Bella and Fort Rupert people; the Bella Coola, ignorant of the meaning of the words, affirm that they have none.

X now talks in a low tone of voice to the singers, as if telling them of his adventures, and presently they begin to sing the song, as if they had just learnt the theme from X. Frequently the deception is increased by X first learning the song and repeating it to the singers in a voice sufficiently loud for the uninitiated to hear. The theme of this, and every other song used for Cannibals, is of the land shown and the dangers which X has survived. The singers add new facts and information to vary the monotony, but the subjects usually described are:

The flat land shown with its many trails and the river that flows through it.

The gale constantly raging there which has blown the hair from X's head and the dirt from his body.

The trail across a yawning chasm over which his supernatural strength enabled him to leap. If a Cannibal has where is unconscious, the Initiates bury the corpse secretly and tell the uninitiated that his power failed him on the other side of the abyss so that he was unable to return.

Hyaenas under his various names.

How his power helped him to escape the Bikam, "Thing of the Huge Jaws," evil beings who tried to kill X by sucking him into their gaping mouths.

The side-flats which are found at the edge of the flat land shown.

The kindly being Hemmakidishin, who gave him the necessary power to traverse the chasm. The uninitiated believe that unless a Cannibal meets this being he will be unable to return.

No one sang for any Cannibal concerns reference to all these beings and events, but it is on these that the singers draw for their themes, always altering and adding to produce a fine effect.

On this occasion X does not dance,* and the uninitiated are soon expelled. As the Initiates are eating, one member after another praises X for what he has done, and gives the most solemn warnings to all as to the necessity of complying the view satisfactorily. Towards midnight the gathering breaks up.

*There is a difference of opinion on this point.

Many of the younger and more athletic dancers sleep in X's house, ready to assist him in the "Running Song." About an hour and a half before dawn the uninitiated are awakened by confused shouting and growling from X's house, above the din rises X's plaintiff, cries, cries, cries.

The shouting and noise lead to a spot in the rear of the village, whither X has gone with the musicians and about twenty dancers. Presently the singers begin to chant forth a new song, X's third, of which the theme is again the Cat-child's adventures in the land above; the uninitiated readily believe that he has caught the singers these words, though they had been unable to hear them from within the house. There is more shouting as X runs to a second place behind the village, where the same song is used once more. When this has been repeated four times, X is led back to his house.

For four days the uninitiated remain in a constant state of terror. Although the population of the neighbouring villages has resolved to remove X's entity, he is still wild, unable either to eat or sleep. Twice every night the medicine companions bite, and he dashes from his house, barely surrounded by his faithful dancing attendants. Eager for the flesh of human beings, he rushes on the doors, knocks them down if they should be closed, growling furiously, but his guardians always succeed in dragging him out before he does any real damage. This is repeated at every house of the village. Since the uninitiated are too frightened to look out, it often happens that a substitute takes the place of X at these semi-nightly excursions. During the day he remains within his own house, concealed, on a platform built for him between the fire and the back-room.

On the fourth evening, the 8th after his return from above, the dancing are summoned to his house to awake him as they to will be down on this platform and rain. The uninitiated, listening eagerly but fearfully, hear once more the sound of the frenzied witch-dancing. The hamlet believes then that X

R/NK/Dixon/Folk E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

is now sufficiently turned so that he can lie down and rest, and thenceforth the nocturnal raids on the village are discontinued.

X remains concealed on the platform, supposedly without eating, for four days. On the fourth day occurs the ceremony of washing. Early in the morning a herald goes to every house in the village asking for urine and grease extracted from the heads of sockeye salmon. The kakaxiat gather in X's house, to which full chamber-vessels and pots of grease have been taken. No uninitiated are allowed to be present, but from adjacent houses they hear sounds of furious struggling, combined with growling. Presently they see a number of kakaxiat carrying X, smeared with liquid, to the river. Some informants state that he is actually covered with urine and fish-oil, others that these are merely emptied within the house and water poured over X, that their collection is merely to deceive the uninitiated. At any rate he is taken to the river, where, in spite of his shrieks, kicks, and struggles, he is four times dipped by his guardians. Often he seizes stones from the bed of the stream and hurls them at his captors, sometimes bruising them severely. This washing assists in the restoration of X to sanity. He is taken four times to every house in the village, no longer growling and struggling, and a herald announces that he will dance that evening.

Soon after dusk the kakaxiat are summoned and they practise the four songs composed for X. Then the uninitiated are called in. As his songs are sung, X dances in the usual kakaxiat style, but more violently than usual, and growling at intervals. The women dance and his four guardians stand close by, spinning into his ears to soothe him.* This is done by calling [227] [illegible] close to his head, so that a spray of fine saliva is sprayed over him. After dancing, X sits down once more and a member calls out that food is to be given to him; he is supposed to have eaten nothing but morsels of human flesh since his departure for the upper world. The women are now [242]

* Spinning the ears frequently in connection with curing by means of the [illegible] of water.

Jr McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Cannibal Dance]

789
575
796
[56.2]
[56.2]

away since no female can witness a Cannibal's first meal. Three Sekwiat are dispatched to ask for food, as if they were begging on behalf of X. Oolachon grease, dried salmon, dried meat, and other luxuries are always given to them, and the uninitiated women are excited at witnessing this collection of food. Sometimes a request is made during the day, and the messengers are entitled to call upon any individual by name to provide grease or some other delicacy.

[192] The actual feeding is done by a shaman who is also a Sekwiat. He first dips his hands in the grease, warms them at the fire and rubs them over X's face as the struggling Cannibal is held by six or eight Sekwiat. Members of the society keep calling out hoip to soothe X, who is supposed to be like a wild animal, and to have lost all desire for ordinary food. Like a maniac he snaps at the shaman's fingers, while the Sekwiat are out and the uninitiated watch with fear and amazement. After rubbing the Cannibal's cheeks four times, the shaman shouts out that he is almost ready to eat. The heralds echo his words, and go through the village to inform all of what has taken place. The shaman now puts a few morsels of food in a spoon and tries to feed X, who struggles and tries to bite pieces out of the utensil itself. Undiscouraged, he puts small pieces of food actually into X's mouth, heedless of the snapping jaws, and at last persuades him to swallow a little.

"He has eaten," the shaman calls out joyfully, and the heralds repeat the good tidings.

An effort is next made to force him to drink, but X only bites the vessel, and the fingers of the shaman, and succeeds in drenching himself with the liquid. But at last he swallows a few mouthfuls.

"He has drunk," calls the shaman, and as before the heralds repeat his words.

The shaman now tells the uninitiated that X will be all right, but that it will be safer for them to depart, as they leave willingly. Heralds keep everyone in the village informed of the events.

PLATE I

575*
196*
142
542
292
787

Photograph No. 8 x 1 Kodak. Normal developed [illegible]

Cemented with leather in form of a book

[p. 44 (8)]

[The Cannibal Dance]

X, now almost nude, rushes around the house, shouting ewe, ewe, ewe, while his call sounds loudly, as the whistle is pressed firmly beneath his armpit or against his stomach, and under a hole. Often the kakaxtat slip a rope over his shoulders to prevent him escaping again. Finally, he rushes from the house and all the kakaxtat crowd close about him on the sidewalk without. As many as possible press upwards against his body with their hands, while they shout, ye . . . , trying to expel the call upwards. On the fourth repetition it is supposed to have been driven forth, and in answer to the tumultuous shout of the kakaxtat, there is heard the sound of a whistle from above. The uninitiated do not know that a dancer has been dispatched with one to a mountain peak for this purpose.

The kakaxtat now return to X's house for a meal. The first dish of food is placed before X himself, while one of the marshals addresses him and the audience in the following words:

> Nanaqilmen, ninem-ta! Ikuts ti pinnit!
> Greetings, cannibal! Hail to the dreaded one (the Cannibal)!*
> Ki, pinnit! Dance. Naqilmenkuhum.
> Now, dreaded one, dance.* Eat to satiation.

There is no ritual significance attached to any particular words; marshals use their own discretion as to what they say, but the above may be considered a few examples of the kind of remarks addressed to a Cannibal at his first meal. After X has started eating, the other kakaxtat commence and the marshals deliver their usual admonitions, pointing X for what he has done and urging others to emulate his example. These personals are distributed to those who have been bitten. It is considered that a Cannibal complimentes a man by taking a piece of his flesh, and that he is under obligations to the one bitten for the latter having allowed him to exercise his prerogatives.

*Marshals mean "The Dreaded One" or "The Fearless One." It is an added compliment of the concerto marshalsmen tendon that has when possession of this.
*This is the concerto form of the word.
*Marshals use the name of the performing Cannibal on the occasion that this speech was recorded.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[The Cannibal Dance]

as the woods he is always accompanied by a number of hakaiat to drive the uninitiated from his path. If it were necessary to perform the full circuit described, it would, in effect, limit this dance to wealthy individuals. One reason why it is possible for a poor Bella Coola to become a Cannibal is that on his second, or subsequent, ceremonial, he can give an abbreviated rite, known as Alistom. The essence of this is that a friendly supernatural being has visited X on earth, saving him from the perils of going adrift. In this case the ritual closely follows that of external hacaiat dance and is concluded in four days.

After the elaborate rites of some other hacaiat have been concluded, the call comes to X, who responds by growling and biting a few people. The uninitiated are at once expelled from his house. Thanks to the friendly intervention of the supernatural being, usually Sparaiim, X's mental powers are unimpaired so that he does not become infuriated and bites only a few individuals. As with ordinary hacaiat rites, the singers have not a song composed for the occasion, describing the benefactor being who came down to X, and the hakaiat practice and learn it. No other songs are rehearsed on this night, owing to the extreme intensity of the occasion; it is a Cannibal rite and nothing else takes place at the same time.

The next day is uneventful; a second song is composed and a number of the hakaiat are sent to collect wood for smoke. Six of these must be constructed representing the following supernatural beings:

Sparaiim, who has benignly interfered to save X from risking the dangers of crip adrift.

Sparaiim, a supernatural man-eater from whom the call has come impelling X to cannibalism.

Three Sparaiim, "Shakers," who restrain Sparaiim. In the land where their function corresponds to that of the hakaiat who guard a Cannibal.

Sparaiim.

In the evening, after the work has been allotted, X's two

J:Mc'Dowell, E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

songs are sung, all that are needed when a Cannibal does not go to the land above.

On the following day, qulem, the masks are manufactured and the ritual proceeds in the normal manner. In the evening the uninitiated are invited to watch the dances, at which X is the first to perform, lengthening his face and protruding his lips to their greatest extent in order to frighten his beholders.

The ritual of the next evening, sakscaw, corresponds to the usual pattern. Before the entry of the uninitiated, X has concealed himself so that nothing can detract from their awe at sight of the masked figure. Alqumiw stands in state behind the fire, sometimes announcing his own name, while Ka'ilk-mulmis moves to and fro, adding to the solemnity of the occasion with her explanations, echoed by the heralds. Alqumiw, represented with blood-stained lips, moves around the fire, escorted by the three Holders, and the audience is told that this is how they act in the land above. When the guests have gazed sufficiently on these marvels they are sent away, and the masks are burnt in the usual manner, accompanied by the gentle singing of one of X's songs. Late at night a number of kakaxiw go with X to the sidewalk outside his house, where they expel his call by pressing upwards with their hands against his stomach and calling hoip.

For the rest of the winter X conducts himself in the manner of any kaxiw who has danced.

Although similar in outlines, the prerogatives enjoyed by Cannibals differ so considerably that no clear picture of the cult can be obtained without detailed descriptions of several. The following is an account of a dance carried out by Lakalimas, a living Cannibal of Waqalis. It was obtained from one of the mamlmis who, of course, understand the details of every performance. The origin of the name is unknown, although the informant believed that it had been created in this world by the chiefs in consequence of the manner in which a shaman member of the dancer had been in the habit of biting people

2:36-Dewalt R-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NBA Bellacoola NBA

Towards evening he summons the hahaiat to the Cannibal's house. As before, X starts to beat time, but swiftly goes into a wild frenzy of pounding from which he is awoken by repeated cries of hoip. Then the singers take the stick from him and sing over a new song which they have composed for him; this being the fourth time that the hahaiat have assembled, it is X's fourth song, with the usual Cannibal chorus. At dusk food is given, the mandals admonish their neophytes and the gathering breaks up.

Presently, as night is falling, the hahaiat return. When they have taken their places, they call the uninitiated, who enter, but remain standing near the door. X passes to and fro around the fire, not completing the circuit, but stopping and retracing his steps when he has passed as far as the upper, eastward, side of it. He assumes a threatening appearance, holding his arms stretched out to their full length, his fists clenched, while, as if to prevent him running amuck among the non-members, two hahaiat go constantly with him, one on either side, uttering the cry of hoip at intervals. At times these two guardians simulate an attempt to drive him into the back-room, but he always eludes them and continues around the fire. Meanwhile the singers, with the hahaiat, sing over X's songs; as each is finished the Cannibal's frenzy appears to rise within him so that he growls, and his guardians call out hoip at the back of his neck, accompanied by the emission of considerable saliva. This is repeated four times, after each of the songs. When these are finished the uninitiated are sent out and the hahaiat eat together while a medical functions; then they too depart.

A number of hahaiat always remain with X to act as guardians; they replace one another at intervals without specific order, and there is no compulsion upon anyone to assume the task. When the hahaiat have departed, one of these attendants takes the leading part in forcing downwards from X his spirit, the mania-like power which binds his mouth against ordinary food. All the guardians crowd around X,

S: McDowell R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
REX Bellacoola REX

575
Ja
J89

placing their hands against his mouth and neck and pressing downwards to the chest as if forcing some object from his throat, constantly uttering the cry of hoip. When the circuit has been driven down, X is offered his first food, choice morsels of dried salmon. He eats some of this but bites a small piece from the spoon, and does the same with the dish in which water is held to his lips. The assistance of a shaman is often required to find the Cannibal.

The powers of, and restrictions upon, X for the remainder of the ceremonial season are identical with those already described. At the end of the period, however, the kulaxtai assemble in X's house to rid him of his spirit which, it will be remembered, had been forced from his mouth down into his chest. By means of a violent repetition of hoip and pressing with the hands, this is extracted and cast into another dancer. As soon as the latter has received it, he acts as if he had become a Cannibal. Dashing out, he enters each house in turn, growling and calling out ooo, ooo, ooo, and at intervals ripping up the planking from the floor or pulling off boards from the wall. Then the kulaxtai re-enters X's house, where the power is returned to X himself, who, this done, rushes to every dwelling and repeats the growling and destruction. Though the uninitiated realize that two different individuals have appeared as Cannibals, they are too awe-stricken to feel anything but wonder. When he goes back to his own house, X is surrounded by the kulaxtai who call out hoip, in unison four times, while as many of them as can find places press upwards with their hands against his neck and throat to expel the spirit. This ceremony is sending back X's power to the mysterious regions whence it came. While most of the kulaxtai have time vigorously, a number of them pull down the planking and cast it into the fire. They then have a meal, while a member gives weighty advice about the care that must be exercised during the coming year in guarding their sacred secrets from the uninitiated, whereupon they all disperse.

[illegible]

[illegible]

The chief ceremony between this one and the one previously described for Kwagiutl are the lack of the coonilhaitsi involves and the presence of the opsis. It must be emphasized that there are differences of individual prerogative alone; many Kwagiutl Cannibals perform with opsis, many Bella Coola with involves.

Although every effort was used to obtain not only the general principles of the rite, but also confirmation of details, it must be remembered that many of these were omitted at the performances observed, so that reliance had to be placed upon the accounts of participants. It is probable that errors of omission have been committed in consequence; these may account for some of the discrepancies, but the most potent factors are undoubtedly lack of uniformity in individual prerogatives, and failure to enforce absolute rigidity in ritual. The two accounts just given by no means illustrate all the variations possible in this dance; others will become evident in descriptions of the rites of Cannibals other than those who can bite the living.

The following is an account of the ritual of a Dog-eating Cannibal, Gbalo-i, of Ilaxil. Long, long ago one of the ancestors of this man saw a pack of wolves devouring some dogs. In some mysterious way, which even the Bella Coola do not profess to be able to understand, the power of a wolf entered the behalter so that he was impelled to eat dogs. He was then carried away to the mysterious land above where he saw and was endowed by several supernatural beings. The first Gbalo-i was able to transmit to one of his relatives his ability to eat dogs, and the prerogative has since been carried out by his descendants. Should the holder of the name fail to call his dancing hat the details of the experiences which are to be embodied in his songs, his successors can obtain them from the singers who, of course, are familiar with the themes used on previous occasions. The repository of the name, Gbalo-i, is beneath a huge boulder not far from some carved poles behind the village of Ilaxil (see Plate 6). It is said that many years ago some soldiers unauthorized placed poles so lower beneath the rock and endeavoured to pry it over, but we to hear by the sound of the smelling of wolves from beneath. It will be convenient to refer

[See subpoena 116, p. 84 (2) - Anonymous]

After the customary consultation with the decided that the call shall come to X on the substance of some other factor. Soon after day grown and stands up naked, the call has come as if dazed, tries to talk, but the words seem mouth. The uninitiated are expelled from herald goes out, crying through the village:

"X has been entrust with the power of One is killed and handed to X. He pun actually gives the body to an assistant who some hidden spot. As X takes the animal,
"X has eaten a dog."

During the day he leaves his house at intervals through the village, accompanied by a crowd arms are held dilated as if holding a burden to be a dog. As he does so, the herald goes house crying:

"The Cannibal has eaten a dog," and "The eaten another dog."

Late in the afternoon the initiates are call to enter to be him up and to prevent his escape above. A bear-skin robe is thrown over his bound about him and weighted with stones, he and disappears from sight while members of the high four times and an accomplice situated pitch from a near-by mountain.* The uninitiated from adjacent houses, are filled with awe and

The initiates gather once more in X's house from which he has escaped is hung on the wall.
mended responses on from the solemnity of the driven away

h came forth
Made i as X.
nevhals, it is ing after the he begins to ion. He sets chokes in his house and a g dog."

to eat, but ness of it in orald shouts:

and parades behavior; his is supposed ous house to Cannibal has to X's house to the land y, a rope is from himself society about ith varying ed, listening order.

ave the rope Anthal after ression and

* The bear has consists of the Cannibal horse, which [illegible] are anchors. It is unnecessary, for example, to repeat the [illegible] from the bonds and the free-minded [illegible]

Z:McDowell R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA DeGeneste NEA

the dangers to which X is exposed, while some of his female relatives weep to further the deception. It is late at night before they finally disperse.

Like other Cannibals, X is now concealed for an indeterminate period of time, during which the uninitiated believe him to be in the land above. It is needless to repeat the details of this part of the rite, our allude to the shaving of X when about to return. Sometimes the mystery is increased by sending a young hocior to the mountains with a whistle which he sounds at dawn to prove that X is far aloft. When the time comes for his return, the process of catching him is identical with that already described, except that a dog is used for bait instead of a human being. After the capture, the hokaciut drag X, struggling violently, to his house, where a dead dog has been left near the doorway. The Cannibal seizes it and pretends to eat, while a herald announces to every house what he is doing. Accompanied by a tipsiker of hokaciut, X goes through the village carrying the carcass in his arms, and carefully shielding his eyes to further the belief, circulated among the uninitiated, that if he should open them, anyone on whom his gaze fell would die. After some of the houses have been visited, the dog is passed to an assistant who conceals it, but those who are not members of the society, having seen him tear chunks from the body and apparently put them in his mouth, naturally assume that the Cannibal has devoured it. This procedure is repeated at intervals throughout the day, and always the herald announces how many dogs X has eaten. The bodies of the animals are weighed with crows and sent in the scales at night.

About 4 P.M. X is given a black bear-skin to which the carpenters have attached the head of his cannibalistic incubus, well, in such a way that it hangs beneath his left arm-pit. Considerable ingenuity is displayed in the manufacture of this. The skin of the head is carefully removed, the bones are cleaned, replaced, and gummed together, and a hidden string enables the wearer to make the animal's jaws clash. With his usual escort, X goes to every house in the village; with one hand he shields his eyes, with the other he pulls away pieces of dog flesh, some of which he pretends to eat, while others he thrusts into the wolf's jaws. As he enters, his associates shriek and the women drone. The Cannibal does not circle the fire in each house, merely steps within the doorway and then withdraws, making the round of the village four times. Curiosity impels the uninitiated to peer forth from their bedrooms, and the bloody spectacle increases their fear.

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

X then returns to his own house where an elaborate structure of rising tiers of steps has been built between the fire and the back-room. The kakaxiut take their places on this, while X stands immediately in front, on the left* side. A kaxiut brings from the back-room a cedar box with an upright row of eagle feathers around the upper edge; immediately below there is a ribbon-like girdle of dyed cedar-bark, and below that a similar band of undyed bark. He carries the receptacle around the fire, revolving sunwise on himself four times, and sets it down before X. The box contains hot stones and alder dye, but the uninitiated, who have been allowed to crowd within the doorway, do not know this, nor are they aware that a carpenter is concealed behind X to manipulate the head. This accomplice thrusts pieces of meat through the wolf's mouth from the rear so that they fall into the box, as if the animal were vomiting. At the same time he causes the tongue, that of one of the slaughtered dogs, to go in and out, and X pulls the cord so that the jaws clash together. Steam rises from the box as the meat strikes the heated stones as if it were food warm from the stomach; and clever management makes the scene strikingly realistic. The belief is that the dog flesh eaten by X has passed into the wolf and is now being ejected. When enough has been vomited to give countenance to an assumption that all the animals devoured have been voided, the carpenter pulls the head from sight, as if it had suddenly vanished. The kakaxiut cry out four times, and someone throws eagle down on the fire; these two actions have the effect of "Making smooth the path of the wolf to the place whence it came."

*The east hence towards.

J.McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

X, now freed from the malignant influence, rushes out, and a number of dukaciut accompany him to every house, calling out in effect:

"I have lost my power."

When X returns, he takes a stick and pretends to endeavour to beat out the time of his own song describing his experiences in the land above. Madness overcomes him, however, and he begins to pound rapidly and aimlessly, requiring to be soothed by cries of hoip. The singers ultimately chant forth a song supposedly taught them by the Cannibal, but the details of this subterfuge have already been described. Crystals are sometimes thrust into him at this juncture, or the rite may be delayed until the following night. When thus weighted, X retires to his raised platform behind the fire.

The Cannibal remains on this for four days. If necessary for him to leave the house, an accomplice first clears away all uninitiated persons from the vicinity. If, however, X hears the snarling or barking of dogs, he becomes excited and rushes forth. Consequently, the dukaciut at intervals bring several animals near to his house and beat them until they yowl. The Cannibal becomes excited, howls like a wolf, rushes out, and, with a few dukaciut in attendance, dashes into the lowest house of the village. But the crystals have made him heavy; he can only sit on his heels near the door and gnaw his fingers. The dukaciut hoip at him repeatedly, until he is sufficiently pacified to rise and walk out. Then he howls again and runs into the next house, where the same procedure is repeated; every dwelling in the village is visited in this way, X finally returning to the platform in his home. During the four days he repeats this performance whenever he hears the yelping of dogs, whether natural or instigated by his fellows.

On the fifth morning, two dukaciut gather chamber-vessels. Later in the day the crystals are extracted and water thrown

* 575 over him,[20] followed by the usual immersion in the river. X
* 796 goes to every house, then returns to his own where another
* 787 song, describing his experiences aloft, is rehearsed. In the evening the kukuciut assemble once more and tie on X a long, tail-like appendage of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. Then a shaman gives him food, and at once he runs to the lowest house in the village. He enters the doorway and calls out:

"I can smell."

This announcement is repeated in every house, signifying that the Cannibal can again appreciate ordinary food.

X spends four more days on his platform, leaving it only when infuriated by the howling of dogs. On the fourth evening the kukuciut assemble once more to learn a song of the usual Cannibal type, and to listen to admonitions from the marshals.

For four days longer X is secluded on his platform. In the evening the kukuciut gather to practise another song, but this time X dances, while the uninitiated watch with fear and wonder from the doorway. After their departure, X's spirit is [424] extracted. In this particular dance, its removal is the prerogative of a certain kuciut who presses his hands along the Cannibal's collar-bone, forcing the malignant muscle-like power upward and outward. Sometimes his first meal is delayed until this has been done.

* 575 This concludes X's dance, though he must obey the same
* 796 restrictions as other Cannibals for the rest of the ceremonial season and, if he is a novice, for the following summer as well.

[424] Other Cannibals have the prerogative of eating raw salmon. Since these are unobtainable during the winter, carpenters construct imitations consisting of skins of trout stretched over wooden frames filled with the flesh of deer, dogs, or trout. The resemblance is increased by a mechanical device which wiggles the tail. The Cannibal rips these apart with his teeth so that the uninitiated see the meat inside, and readily assume that they are real salmon, while their wonder is increased in view of the difficulty, or impossibility, of obtaining fresh fish in mid-winter.

[20] This expels his evil.

[The Cannibal Dance]

The most feared of all Cannibals are those who have the unusual prerogative of eating corpses. At present (1922), there is only one man with this right, whereas at least seven can bite the living. His prerogative was recently obtained from the people of Rivers' Inlet, although the ritualistic devouring of corpses was well known to the Bella Coola in former days. All informants agreed, however, that the actual eating of a body was practically unknown.* Even when one was provided and the Cannibal dragged it from house to house, accompanied by an escort of kukuxiut, though he sank his teeth into the flesh and pulled forth morsels of the carcass, he invariably disposed of them as soon as he was out of sight of the uninitiated, as in the case of the dog. Of course, blood and small pieces of flesh must have been swallowed inadvertently, but the rite was always essentially ritualistic, not real. More often, the "corpse" consisted of a wooden frame-work, shaped like a human body, and covered with the scraped skins of deer or dogs. The interior was filled with the flesh of an animal, and the whole buried in the graveyard until the meat had become foul. The uninitiated, from a distance, watched the exhuming of this object and concluded that it really was a long-buried body. Fear prevented them from making a close inspection, so that the defects of the imitation were not apparent. The frames were kept hidden from year to year; an inquisitive non-member who chanced to stumble upon one would have to be initiated or die. 575* 796* [424] [177] [688]

On account of the long time that has elapsed since a complete corpse-eating Cannibal dance was carried out, it was found impossible to obtain a detailed account of the ritual. This deficiency is unimportant since all informants agreed that it closely resembled other Cannibal dances.

Like other Cannibals, one who has the prerogative of eating dead human flesh can perform as often as he desires, subject only to the approval of the marshals, who have no hesitation [424] [787]

*Apart from this ceremonial eating, no trace of cannibalism was found among the Bella Coola. [266]

[The Cannibal Dance]

787 *575 *796 in banning the rite if they do not think the dancer will be able to carry it out properly. When the call comes, the uninitiated are at once expelled from the Cannibal's house; later he rushes [424] to the graveyard and exhumes one of the meat-filled frames previously buried. Non-members watch with horror as he sinks his teeth in the "flesh." Closely guarded, he is then taken to every house where, if they are bold, the uninitiated peer forth from their bedrooms and watch his performance. He carries part of the corpse in his arms and periodically sinks his teeth in the repulsive mass. As usual, apparent attempts are made to tie him to this earth, but in spite of them he escapes to the upper regions where he remains for an unusually long period. Great efforts are made to reduce him to a state of [824] emaciation, for which purpose he drinks large amounts of water in which cedar-wood has been boiled. When the Cannibal ultimately returns to earth, the cannibalistic incubus is expelled and he at length becomes normal. When dancing, a [535] corpse-eater constantly bends both hands towards the floor in front of him and upwards, as though raising some heavy object towards his face. Then his head sinks towards this, only to be thrown quickly upwards and to one side, with a wild expression in his eyes. The uninitiated are told that this represents the manner in which he lifts a corpse towards his mouth and bites, only to be revolted by its putrescence. He has, they hear, no actual liking for human flesh, but his incubus fills him with an irresistible craving for it. Frequently he wears on his blanket wooden representations of skulls (see [532] Plate 7), symbolic of the corpses devoured.

*575 *796 Rarely, a corpse-eating Cannibal kills a slave and pretends to devour his body as a means of impressing the uninitiated,[66] but usually this is done only under the driving force of revenge 567 or jealousy. If a man hears that a near relative, slave of a 648 foreign tribe, has been killed, he often determines to wipe out blood with blood. He consults a corpse-eating Cannibal, and [66] Eating of corpses has long ceased among the Bella Coola; the present tense is used merely for consistency.

[see category 116, p 164(A)- ANALYST]

Boldwealth E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

In the course of generations, Snung has combined with his self-anthropophagic prerogative that of eating dogs. As already mentioned, such a merging of rights, obtained from different ancestors, is by no means uncommon. The following account of the manner in which he carries out (or carried out, for the dance has not been performed for a number of years) his rite was obtained from one of the Kimsquit marshals. Many details are omitted which have been fully described in former Cannibal dances. It will be convenient to refer to Snung as X.

As with other Cannibals, when the call comes to X he begins to cry out and the uninitiated are expelled from his house, but not before they have seen him sink his teeth into his own arm, and apparently inflict a serious wound. In reality the Cannibal usually cuts himself in anticipation, so that the application of his teeth merely serves to reopen the incision and cause the blood to flow freely. Dogs are given to X, as to other dog-eating Cannibals, and he is escorted to every house, so that the uninitiated may stare with awe upon his blood-stained body and dripping jaws. Later, when he and the ẖukusiut have returned to the Cannibal's home, a herald goes to every house, announcing that his fellows are going to fasten X. The rope used in this particular rite is long and thin, with a small loop in the centre for his neck. It is forced upon X with the usual struggling, and again the herald makes his round, announcing:

"We are measuring his arms for cords of dyed and undyed cedar-bark."

These too are placed upon him, and the ẖukusiut march X, pinioned, to every house, while he growls and gives every indication of being half mad with anger at his bonds. He is taken back to his own house and at intervals throughout the day a herald informs all in the village of the number of dogs he has eaten, and of the number of wounds he has inflicted upon himself.

That night X eludes his captors and is carried away to the

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575*
Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The kekwaist are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day kekwaist go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the later sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snung's patron is a snung of the Mountain which became [796] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [798] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [957] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Sqilianlemy, though it is said to resemble the one just described in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [424] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the repos- [787] itory of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the [778] old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The writer was a spectator when the present 575* Sqilianlemy gave his dance in January, 1924, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 178 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of xwa, xwa, xwa, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

[The Scratch Dance]

[375] They do not blacken their faces on receipt of a call as do most Sudaxiai.

[424] The theme of their songs is of the land above, instead solely of their patrons.

[787] On visiting a house where a potlatch or redbeach is taking place they sit with the Cannibals in one of the back corners; this group is given food before any of the other guests.

[533] They do not exercise their prerogative on fellow-Scratchers, Cannibals, or Breakers.

They are liable to frenzy both when the call is upon them and after its departure. In such cases they run forth, apparently guarded and restrained by other Sudaxiai, and rush into every house to frighten the uninitiated.

They must recompense those whom they have scratched.

[378] They act as peace-makers among the Sudaxiai, since the necessity of accompanying a Scratcher who pretends to be frenzied overrules all petty causes of strife.

[584] Though any definite concept of graded rank in the Sudaxiai society is quite foreign to the Bella Coola, it is generally felt that Scratchers and Breakers are only slightly less important than Cannibals. The patron of every Scratcher is Sisi'alodzi Alpuxnim, one of the sons of Alpuxnim; this supernatural being scratches the supernatural cross in the land above, and his father alone can restrain him. The prerogative is fairly common, and it is probable that in early days there was at least one Scratcher in every village.

[796] The following account of the ritual was obtained from one of the Bella Coola marshals and describes the manner in which the dance should have been performed by the Scratcher, [424] Alaxkwaix, his daughter's daughter's son, who had recently obtained the prerogative formerly possessed by his deceased mother's father. It will be convenient to refer to Alaxkwaix as X and use the present tense in recording the proper ritual, though it was largely omitted on the last occasion the dance was given.

X arranges a suitable day with the marshals for receiving the house to serve as targets, and stones as ammunition. As soon as the call comes, X rises out, begins to throw stones at these objects, and the uninitiated are at once impelled. X is usually led, closely guarded, to every house where he casts more sticks, and may break a number of utensils. Since it is well known that, under normal circumstances, he must never throw a stone, the uninitiated are convinced that he must indeed be animated by a strange power. This being continues, the Iadacrist gather in X's house during the evening to leave and practise one, or sometimes two, songs for him. If X is a novice, the theme is of his ancestor and the accident which originated the dance; on later occasions it is of his person and the land above. All Breakers do not have Ainadjiwadahi Ajiwenim as patron; some have Iwadibadi, a supernatural being who causes wealth to rise up and come to him. The chorus is the same as for Screechers, the meaningless words, 'ani, 'ani. It is said that this same refrain is used by the Breakers of all central tribes, so that their songs can be distinguished from those of Screechers only by the words. With the food, presents are given to recompense those on whom X has displayed his prerogative, that is, those whose utensils have been broken. Sometimes canoes and other valuable objects are destroyed by Breakers, depending entirely on their desire to exhibit their right.

[i.e. - the Scratchers - ANALYST]

Next morning, naturalibus, X again becomes frenzied and rushes from house to house, destroying property. Of course this is later paid for, but the uninitiated have no idea that arrangements had been made for the boxes and other objects to be placed in suitable spots. During the day a number of Iadacrist are sent to collect wood for nine masks. When members of the society gather in the evening the songs are practised, and the making of the masks allowed. One of these is of Ainadjiwadahi Ajiwenim, four are of Breakers in the land above,* four of supernatural beings who sing there for the supernatural Breakers, and one of the inevitable Ani'kibas.

*The relation of these Breakers to the patron is not clear.

[The Breaker Dance]

575 lenis. X is one of the few kukusiut having the prerogative of 796 using supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes [424] in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy so that on both gulow and nakacaw he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making every effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their [424] exact prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favourite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either real or imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous [554] prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the unini-
787 tiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely [828] alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the kukusiut make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of either gulow or the preliminaries of nakacaw, both of which follow the usual pattern.

575 When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on nakacaw
796 evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked 781 singers, of Sâwâlyumalsi Alqantâm, and of the four supernatural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the kukusiut blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fluent Ana'kîtwalsais makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the kukusiut, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most [252] houses contain a number of stones which have been used in [578] boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Kukusiut [685] who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

575 every announcement made to the kukwisut on the night of some 996 gathering in the following manner:

As the kukwisut are eating, one of the marshals rises, saying:

"I hear a supernatural one close at hand; some powerful being is drawing near."

The other marshals agree that they too hear its approach and the kukwisut, always eager for dances, impatiently await further information. After further suspense, one of the marshals announces that it is coming for X. No mention is made of which dance is to be performed, and the information is wrapped in that veil of secrecy so essential to the kwisut society that they practise it even among themselves until it becomes habitual. During the night four young kukwisut are sent out to the mountains near the village carrying small whistles. The [776] uninitiated, hearing their weird sound, realize that a supernatural being is in the vicinity. This whistling is repeated twice during the night.

575 Sometimes the actual call comes to X on the following 996 afternoon, but more often after the kukwisut in the evening.
● 989 When the display, whatever it may be, has taken place, whistling is heard from the mountain slopes. The uninitiated are at once expelled, ignorant, of course, of the fact that the noise is made by kukwisut dispatched for the purpose. As they [776] hurry out they are told that the noise is the droning cry of a supernatural being, equivalent to the droning done by kwisut women whenever they are present at a manifestation of the supernatural. X, who appears to be listening, calls out:

"Please say what you want, I will do it."

Then he utters a low hoot-like whistle and sits down, while the women drone. When several minutes have elapsed, X moves, sunwise, to another part of the house and repeats his answer to the whistling which is still continuing. This is done a second and third time, but on the fourth, the call is supposed to have entered X, who cowers as if something had struck him, while the women drone more loudly than before. Then sticks are beaten madly four times and a herald goes to every house in the village announcing that a call has come to X. Meanwhile forty or fifty kukwakas have surrounded X and accompany him as he leaves his home and proceeds to the end of the village furthest downstream. He enters the lowest house, followed by his escort, and stops before the central fire to call out:

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

"Please say what you want; I will do it."

He circles the fire, anewise, repeats his call a second time and leaves. The same procedure is repeated in every house in the village, in order from lowest to top, before he returns to his own home. The uninitiated are told that some power has come upon him, but that it is so strange that even he cannot comprehend it. After a short pause, X again sallies forth, accompanied as before, and calls twice in every house of the village. The same ritual is repeated a third time, but on the fourth round, which soon follows, he carries a knife in his hand. Thus it becomes plain to all that X has received power enabling him to have his stomach cut, and the kukwakas show signs of grief at the danger to which their fellow is about to be exposed. Needless to say, the delay in interpreting the call adds to the mystification of the uninitiated, and their wonder at X's power. The heralds do their part by repeating his words with their own comments.

When X finally returns to his own house the heralds summon all the kukwakas to it and the customary ritual of kusiutem takes place. The singers beat out and practice a song composed by one of their members for X, the audience listens attentively and then practices it until all are proficient. The theme of every kusiutem song is of the land above and the supernatural beings resident there. The wordless chorus consists of wai'eyu'ia, which the Bella Coola state is the refrain of all kusiutem dances up and down the coast.

The second day, wuiuitilap, a second song is composed and a party sent to the forest to bring in wood suitable for masks. In the evening part of the work is allotted* and the songs practised. For kusiutem dances, in addition to masks, a number of puppets is always made. Certain Sukwiat, known as dancer, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the form of small puppets. These are sometimes person-, more-often-eye, and include not only beings having human form, but snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, as dancer receives strength which can be transferred to someone else—as the uninitiated believe—by passing it into the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, sustained by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "person-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

*Some is kept for a later distribution.

Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting. As in all other Sukwiat dances, deception is practised and X is not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's. Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must

"I will get my puppet-person."

A whistle sounds, the kulaxiai women dance and the uninitiated see one of the puppet figures move across the back of the house, though they do not see the concealed cords by which this is managed. The figure disappears as if it had entered its owner who goes to X and makes the motion of passing something into him. The other puppets do likewise. Sometimes the dramatic effect is increased by sending a kulaxiai to the roof to strike one of the boards as if the puppet had landed from above with a thump; or the owner may come in from the back-room, walking backwards and drawing his puppet after him by means of a string matching the floor in colour and fastened to his foot. Another device is to have the puppets suspended from the roof by means of similar cords, invisible in the darkness. The owner of one of these takes it in his arms and swallows outwards on himself as he moves to X, and at the same time conceals the figurine beneath his blanket. The last puppet is always the giant cord, the most potent of all.

When X has thus been strengthened for the perils which he is to undergo, a number of the uninitiated are invited to come forward to see him. As they step forth, one of the senior kulaxiai kneads with his fingers against the back of the neck of each to strengthen his spirit so that it will not be drawn from him with fatal results. The uninitiated come forward, see X, without realizing that they are really gazing on two individuals, and shudder at a knife which is lying near. This was always of copper or obsidian in the old days.

The actual cutter is one of the uninitiated, though efforts are made to have as operator a son or other near relative of a prominent kulaxiai so that he may easily be initiated into the society if anything should go amiss. One informant, who was called upon to act when about fifteen years of age, vividly recalled the experience in the following manner:

He was sitting with ten or twelve lads of his own age, each of whom was asked by a marshal:

After a short interval, she is answered by the singer in the house, women, near corner of the house as follows: 575* 796*

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lo! there come to earth	the voice of Snitsmên-a	to revive
[illegible]
the one who has an injured breast

539
539

The general meaning of dancing is obvious, although there are several obscure expressions which serve to increase the wonder and fear of the uninitiated. Silence follows the singing, then whistling is heard and a herald announces that one of the puppet-persons inserted into X has left him and gone to the region above. Similar whistling announces the departure of others at intervals. When several have done so, it is time for the first to return. A thud, made by a hidden accomplice, is heard on the roof and whistling breaks out afresh. Sometimes the puppet-person returns to X, but more often to its mother, and the ceremonies previously enacted is repeated over the body of the dancer who continues to lie as if lifeless. Now and then the uninitiated are invited forward to look at him and they notice that the gaping wound is slowly closing, an easy matter to arrange in the dim light of the house. At intervals the puppet-persons go and return from the land above, and the proceedings are sometimes enlivened by the owners telling a herald, who in turn informs the audience, what the puppet-persons are on its journey aloft. Usually each goes and returns four times in the course of the night. Each of the women selected to sing the mourning songs performs once, standing in a corner of the house and waving a wand wound with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. So the long night passes. Towards dawn continuous whistling is heard. This is made by several men with a whistle apiece; each begins to blow as soon as the breath of his partner is nearly exhausted. It is known to be the voice of Snitsmên-a. In Kimsquit, but not in Bella Coola, this is the signal for the entry of the giant toad. Carpenters have made a wooden figure of the amphibian and by means of concealed strings it is

575* 796* 987

[533]

575* 796*

[776]
[184]
[532]

G: McDougall E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
BEA Bellacoola 325

*575 made to hop towards X and bend four times over him. The *796 wound gradually comes together, and the excitement grows [593] ever greater. Those near X cry out that his little toes are moving, as indeed they are, then in succession his fourth, middle, first, and big toes begin to twitch convulsively. It is often difficult to find an assistant capable of moving his toes in the proper order.

"He is alive again," call the heralds, and some of the uninitiated come forward to watch the marvel of the dead man's toes moving.

*575 X grows gradually stronger and begins to shake his hands
*796 as if he were trying to dance. Then, in a feeble voice, he begins 593 to sing, though the only word which comes clearly is Sxitcmdw-a, the name of the supernatural woman through whose kindly mediation he has been restored to life. This song has actually been composed by the singers and taught by them to X preparatory to the rite. It resembles a shaman's, since it is assumed that X has practically been made a shaman by the intervention of Sxitcmdw-a. The singers pretend to be listening intently, and then chant it over, as if they had just learnt it, while X shakes his hands as if dancing. The wailing and weeping of the kukusiut women has given place to joy, and those who had been singing mourning songs dance in time to the music. One after the other the dwayar who had cast their *575 patrons into X now go to him to recall them. Each bends over
*796 him and pretends to extract something by pressure with cupped ●787 hands, at the same time crying out keip, keip.

Each dwayar then goes through the motions of casting something up into the air with cries of the same nature; this serves to return his patron to the mysterious region whence it had *575 come. The uninitiated are now expelled and the kukusiut soon
*796 follow, without receiving a meal.[n] Those who have taken a leading part in the ceremony usually linger with the marshals to discuss the owner and lay plans for the future, but as it is now daylight they too soon retire to sleep.

[n]According to one informant, the youth who cut X's stomach was formerly detained and initiated into the ranks of the kukusiut.

The kaxiam ceremony resembles a double kaxiar rite since it comprises two sets of four days and nights. The one on which X's stomach was cut is considered to be kaxiamem. Accordingly, the lowlifs call the kakaxiar to X's house early on the afternoon following and the regular ritual of nacinaxiliq takes place. Some of the younger men are at once sent to the forest for wood to be made into more masks but, with the love of drama typical of the kakaxiar, it is assumed that X himself is too feeble to accompany them. Accordingly his power is transferred to a substitute by means of the frenzied beating of sticks and repeated cries of kaiji. On the return of the wood collectors, who carry their burdens as usual on tump-lines and set them down carefully, this power is restored to X in the same manner. The work of making the masks is now allotted. For kaxiam, and several other kaxiar rites hereafter to be described, the dancer is entitled to show as many of the beings in the Bella Coola pantheon as he desires. Consequently if X is wealthy and wishes to have a spectacular nakaxiam, he orders many masks. Then the kakaxiar practise a number of songs composed by the singers. One, or sometimes two, prepared for X is coached as if he himself were telling what he had seen in the upper regions. They describe Alqwstém, his messenger Opaliki Alqwstém, and, especially Kulelkáwidjut, the supernatural being whose stomach is periodically cut in the land above. It is he who has entered X and impelled him to suffer the same mutilation from the effects of which Snitzmém-s has restored him. X himself usually remains concealed behind the matting in the rear part of the house, but sometimes, if he wishes to practise what he will perform the next night, he comes forward for a rehearsal. He still pretends to be very ill, and instead of dancing in the usual violent manner, totters around the fire, supported by several assistants, while he feebly shakes his hands. The women drone, and the uninitiated in the other houses realize that more exciting events are impending.

* 576 at [illegible], near that village, where it has remained ever since.
* 746 It will be convenient to term Sundakʼlar X.

If X wishes to perform, he informs the ma-thala of his desire and a suitable time is arranged. On the night of rehearsal for some other Sacrat, the call comes to X who indicates that it has taken possession of him by uttering a low vocal whistle and pacing around as if dazed. Kakacist accompliers sound whistles from without the house, the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the women dance monotonously. After a few minutes, X walks to the side of the fire nearest the door and again gives his low whistle, still looking around in a puzzled manner. This is repeated a third time at the side of the fire, and a fourth, behind it. Thus the call comes upon him. Hereafter inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. The Sakacist begin to assemble in X's house, and assist him by the four times repeated dancing beating of sticks. Next the singers beat out the words of a song already composed for the occasion; the theme for all songs used by Fungus dancers is the land above. The ritual on this night of Sundmow is identical with that already described in the earlier Sacrat dances.

[187]

* 575 On the day following, [illegible], there is not the cus-
* 746 tomary collecting of wood from the forest. X merely remains 532 quietly within the back-room, visited only by senior Sacrat officials and a skilful carpenter. The latter brings a fungus which he has found in the woods; it must be a good specimen of the common semi-circular shelf variety with a clear white surface unspoiled by decay. On this he paints a face, showing eye-brows, eyes, nose, and mouth, and fastens beneath a miniature body made of dyed cedar-bark with grotesque waving legs, terminating in eagle claws (see Plate 10).[1] The total length of the figure is about nine inches. The fungus, with pendant attachment, is fastened near the end of a stout rope of plaited cedar-bark about eight feet in length, so that when this end of the rope is held uppermost, the head of the fungus hangs in a normal upright position. The carpenter starts his work on the usual ceremony to drawing forth the fungus and the spectators comment:

[1] [see category 116, p. 164 (D)- ANALYST]

"She must be a good girl for the supernatural beings to show their approval." 575* 796*

At intervals X lifts up the fungus, and his strength is shown especially when the cord has been pulled so far down that he can grip only the very end with one finger. The four kukwiut hidden below sometimes become weary of their work and tie a billet crosswise to the rope so that no one can lift it, but of course this must be removed when X demonstrates his prowess again. Towards dawn the concealed helpers cut the rope and X lifts the fungus, holding it in front of his body while the kukwiut women dance. With four assistants pressing closely around him, X turns and makes the motion of throwing the fungus up into the air with a cry of hoip. It vanishes, and the uninitiated do not realize that it has been palmed to one of the accomplices for concealment beneath his blanket. Then one of the marshals explains to non-members that in the land above the supernatural beings once endeavoured to lift up a fungus, but that X alone, referring to that part of him which visits the dances in the land above, could do so. Accordingly it was sent down for mortals to try, and now that they too have failed it has been sent back. He enlarges on the fact that X, through lying quiet for four days communing with the supernatural beings, has really become one, as is indeed the case with all kukwiut who ascend to the land above or experience other peculiar incidents in the course of their performances. This concludes the ceremony; the uninitiated are expelled and the kukwiut soon follow. [187]

Instead of a nakwam of the type just described, X has the prerogative of performing in an entirely different manner of which only the outlines could be obtained. The fungus is tied to a long rope and thrown into the rapids. One end of the cord is held by a kwiut on the bank with the result that the fungus whirls to and fro erratically. The kukwiut assemble on the bank and hurl harpoons at it while non-members watch 575* 796* 424

[The Mystery Dance]

OF THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[195] [196] [184] [188] [124]

action, and it is agreed that the call shall come to him on the following evening.

X's first task is to prepare, or to have made for him, a stick which he will use throughout the ceremony. It is of yellow cedar, about five feet in length; its Kimmpsis is adorned with four bands of swan feathers, its Bella Coola with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark.

The following evening the call comes to X. He utters a low whistle, mumbling a hum, goes towards the ground slowly swoons on himself. The hakusiut women present begin to dance and the uninitiated are expelled. Constantly turning on himself, X slowly moves sunwise around the flames, repeating his hum three times, once at each side of the fire. He stands behind it and calls out loudly:

"Please say exactly what you want; whatever it is, I will do it."

After the customary frenzied howling, he withdraws to the back-room. Heralds go to all the houses, reporting what has taken place and summoning the hakusiut. When all have gathered, X appears and asks for the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a dance-apron. These are provided, put on him and his face is blackened. Under the guidance of a marshal or singer, the hakusiut men beat furiously on the floor, without time or rhythm, until the leader motions them to conclude with four thunderous beats. In the stillness that follows X begins to chatter loudly, without using exact words, and everyone realizes that this is an invitation to guess who are the three supernatural beings in whom his power is localized. Sometimes the meaning is made still more evident by his carrying the stick previously mentioned, which is the prerogative of Mystery dancers alone. The guests enter into the spirit of the dance and call out their guesses, naming little known supernatural beings, parts of beings, or manifestations of the supernatural; sometimes three or four answer at the same time. The four remembrancers have placed themselves near X and it is their duty to recollect the replies. When hakusiut alone

2:McIlwraith R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[The Dance of Thunder]

the uninitiated are expelled. If several kukusiut in the same village are protégés of Thunder, each makes a circuit independently, but they agree to meet afterwards in the house of one of their number. Here all members of the society assemble for a meal provided hurriedly by X, or to a number of meals if several have Thunder as patron; in this case there is no pooling of food. The marshals take the opportunity of giving their customary admonitions, as if it were midwinter. Next the singers combine their ideas and beat out a new song of which the theme is Thunder who never rests; it is worded as if X were speaking and describing what his patron is doing. This song is sung and resung until all present have learnt both tune and words. If there are several kukusiut with Thunder as patron, a song is made for each and practised in the same manner. 575* 796* [533] [533]

When all is ready, one of the heralds calls in the uninitiated. Each song is sung to the accompaniment of beating sticks while a dancer performs. Instead of X, this is an old man or woman who has not had a call for many years. Often the kusiut selected is so old that he or she can dance only with the support of a stick; no reason could be learnt for this surprising deviation from the usual practice. If several songs have been composed, a new dancer performs to each. After the last dance the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut soon follow. Since no call has come, it follows that it is of a ceremonial, though not of a sacred nature, and does not take the regular course of winter dances. It is said to "make good the path of Thunder," the term employed being identical with that used for the dance on nakusam after the burning of the masks. [787]

Nothing more need be said about the Thunder dance, except to give the following origin myth: 575* 796*

Long ago, long before the white man came to this land, but still longer after its first settlement, four brothers left Kimsquit to hunt mountain goats on Mount Tcaqsekx', near the Kimsquit River.[10] It was September; 539 821

[10] This mountain is also known as Hump-back Salmon Mountain; its shape resembles the fish in question and it is said that long ago, in the very beginning of time, a salmon became petrified there. [103]

575*
796*
539
424
[777]
[551]

cure previously described. To the Bella Coola philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Saiks was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a kusiut dance. The assumption is that he was a kusiut at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the name died about 1910, each Saiks having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

THE GHOST DANCE[a]

575*
796*
[775]
[750]
[424]

Among the numerous patrons of kusiut dancers are Ghosts. The term, ástanhots, applied to a shaman whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to kusiut with one as patron, but the two functionaries must not be confused. It is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dancers in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an ancestor with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Septes of Tsomsil performed his ritual; it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the marshals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the qothw of some other kusiut, the marshals state that his call is imminent; X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

575*
796*
787
[775]

When the nalusam rites of the following evening have been completed and the uninitiated have returned to their own houses, they are startled to hear whistling from the forest near at hand. It is not the instrumentally produced sound that accompanies the coming of a call, but tuneless whistling with the mouth; everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A visitation from them is by no means unknown, and always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone cowers in the bedrooms. Presently heralds go through the village

[171]

[a] No relationship is implied with the dance of the same name among Indians of other culture areas.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 *996 ●787 [302] announcing that the dead have come with a call for X. Meanwhile a number of kukusiut assemble in the dancer's house where he strips off his clothing and covers himself with dirt and ashes. In all other kusiut dances the performer endeavours to beautify himself, or at least to blacken or paint his face according to some definite pattern, but X's aim is to imitate the appearance of the dead who are notoriously untidy.

After some delay, X rushes forth in the midst of his escort and enters the lowest house of the village. The frightened uninitiated are hiding in their bedrooms, but they peer through cracks and watch X as he bends to the floor, picks up handfuls of dirt and throws them wildly in all directions, heedless of what damage he may do. It is obvious that he is frenzied and mad, like Cannibals who have received their calls. His kukusiut associates pretend to restrain him, but he always outwits their efforts and continues to hurl dirt. At last he withdraws, moves to the next house and there repeats the performance. This is done in every dwelling in the village. Most of the uninitiated in X's own house leave it as soon as the kukusiut began to assemble, and by this time all others have fled, so that when the party returns there are only members of the society present. The frightened non-members hear the frenzied beating of sticks as efforts are made to cure X of his madness, but without avail. Soon a sound of wailing is heard, and the heralds come around announcing that X has vanished—the dead have taken him. The kukusiut spend the rest of the night in his house, silently listening to speeches from the marshals, and disperse about dawn.

X's sojourn in the land of the dead is of varying length. Occasionally he returns on the night of his disappearance, having been absent only a few hours, or he may remain in hiding for several weeks. The usual time for his reappearance is the night after his departure, and with him always come a number of ghosts. The ritual on his return is always the same, irrespective of the duration of his absence.

At dusk the heralds call the kukusiut to X's house where

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Ghost Dance]

they sit in silence, awaiting his arrival. Presently word is sent 575* to him, for he is always hiding near, and he comes through the 796* door and sits near the fire. But he does not resemble the man who left the village. His face and body have been stained [787] green with crushed leaves, in imitation of the colour of the [302] dead; in his hand he carries a bone, said to be part of the leg of a dead man, though in reality it is from a deer. After him the ghosts enter one by one. They are a number of kukusiut who have been painted black and green to give them an un- [302] earthly appearance; there is no fixed pattern, each following his own, or the carpenter's ideas of the uncanny, though the body colour on which the other tints are smeared is usually white. Each dead man has a special name and each acts accordingly in an eccentric way. One enters walking backwards, another hops on one leg, and a third walks on his hands—because ghosts always act in the opposite manner to [775] mortals. Each trills in a peculiar way and performs something like a dance, waving his arms to and fro, up and down, constantly pointing with one finger, before lying down close to the central fire. With them enters a woman with painted face, clad in a blanket and carrying a basket on her back; she is [776] Alfwulus, who gathers berries in the land of the dead. She begins to go around picking up any small articles that she sees and depositing them in her basket, from which anyone picks them out at will and returns them to the places whence they had been taken. One of the first actors to appear carries a stick for time beating, and acts as leader of the ghost singers.
Whenever a spark from the fire lights on one of the dead, causing the latter to jump, the leader pounds violently with his stick. When all are present, the leader beats time and they prepare to leave. Ghosts are feckless, however; consequently, [775] instead of going straight to the door, some go in one direction, some in another, but all are at length shepherded outside. X and his visitors, with a large number of kukusiut, go to every house in the village repeating the same procedure, in silence, except for the trill of the dead men. The uninitiated do not

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Ghost Dance]

qothm. When the dance has ended, X gives presents; first to each spectator, and then to those who have assisted him, starting with the singers. This is the last event of the evening and the kukusiut disperse. 575* 796* [431]

The factor of doing things in the reverse order appears not only in actions, but in the order of the ceremonies. Those just described, although at the beginning of the rite, resemble a nakusam in many respects. Consequently, it is not surprising that the next night is qothm. The singers are the first to assemble and they compose a second song for X, with the same theme but different words and tune to that already prepared. [533] Meanwhile the kukusiut are gathering and when they have learnt the new song, the uninitiated are summoned. No enclosure has been built, and X is much in evidence. His body has been painted green with a preparation of grass rubbed in [302] water, he wears the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a kind of head-dress with a triangular projection over his forehead. [292] His two songs are sung, and X dances vigorously to each in the manner just described. This is followed by the customary qothm ritual, kusiut after kusiut dancing as the singers beat out his two songs. Finally a Cannibal begins to growl fiercely in one of the rear corners and the uninitiated flee hurriedly. The kukusiut eat together, listening to the admonitions and remarks of the marshals, and then X dances once more. Among the peculiarities of the Ghost dance is the fact that the call may be returned at this point, or X may again become mad, according to the wishes of the marshals. If they desire a further display of his insanity, he rushes out as soon as he has finished dancing and proceeds to the lowest house of the village. A number of kukusiut follow him and appear to be trying to prevent him from picking up handfuls of dirt from the floor and throwing them in all directions in an aimless manner. As a matter of fact his guardians take care that X hurls approximately the same amount in each house, as none of them is willing to have more damage done in his own house than in others. After a visit to each dwelling, the party returns to 575* 796* 787

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 *796 [787] X's, where he is soothed by the four times repeated frenzied beating of sticks and his call returned whence it came.

During the rest of the ceremonial season X becomes mad at intervals and displays his insanity by rushing to every house and throwing dirt and sand. His kukusiut escort is always with him, and the procedure is identical with that already [424] recorded. X makes no recompense for the damage inflicted, so it is probable that his fellows do not regard his dance as an unmitigated pleasure, but nothing can be done to deter him from exercising his prerogative.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CHARMER

*575 *796 776 Although the Bella Coola are probably as moral as members of any other tribe, they enjoy humour of an obscene nature, and a dance which never fails to provide amusement is that of the Supernatural Charmer. The patron of this is Sximsximdł, [522] [831] a beautiful, unmarried, feminine being who is also termed Ałiqmân i and Nuxkmâlsaix. She is thought to disregard the efforts of her supernatural relatives to restrain her, and comes to this earth where she bestows her favours not only on human beings, but on animals. Her protégé at Kimsquit is a young [551] man, Ełâlaiuks, at Bella Coola, a young woman, Kwałâkmus; [562] like all other kusiut names these can be used either by men or [424] women. It is said that Ełâlaiuks's prerogative is derived from the experience of an ancestor in past ages, whereas that of Kwałâkmus was initiated three generations ago by a very powerful chief. The ritual in each case is identical, so the dancer [533] can be referred to as X. Each has the prerogative of singing [532] not only of Sximsximdł, but also of the being known as Winwinsmał. Many masks are required at the nałusam of either of these beings, so it is customary for X to perform with respect to Sximsximdł one year, and to Winwinsmał at the next or a subsequent ceremonial season, though the actual songs always refer to both patrons.

*796 *575 When X wishes to dance he consults the marshals, obtains their consent, and then makes final arrangements on, normally,

[The Octopus Dance]

*575 Cannibal begins to growl and soon the kukusiut are left alone
*796 in the house. The singers beat out a new song for X and the ritual continues like that of any other lsuxtämem. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on nusiuṭälsap and qothm.

On the evening of nebusam the uninitiated are summoned in due course. The exact number of masked figures shown could not be learnt, but among them is always an octopus. [532] The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance [431] are more valuable than those bestowed at most kusiut rituals, accordingly none but wealthy people are able to carry it out. [556] The heralds especially are always beneficiaries.

THE DANCE OF THE DARK-SHADE

*575 One of the most peculiar and irregular of kusiut dances is
*796 that performed by a certain Kälqam, whom it will be convenient to call X. His patron is the supernatural woman Stcqwastlustwi, Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick ever- [770] greens of the river valleys, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. X's repository is beneath some [778] large cedars near the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the fiord; it is probable that other dancers with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When X wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the marshals who insist that he delay his performance until after the solstice at earliest. The reason is because his [796] patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository; X brings her to the village and [787] in consequence calls come to many kukusiut,[188] which would be undesirable during the first few weeks of the season. On *575 the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance,
*796 X steals away from the village with three or four kukusiut,

[188] The implication in this case is that calls come from repositories, not from the land above, the customary source.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Dark-Shade]

preferably skilled carpenters. Heralds visit every house in the village informing all that X has gone to meet, or to wait for, Dark-Shade. 575* 796*

Meanwhile X and his companions are utilizing the last hours of daylight in collecting a large quantity of gum. They build a fire, and by its flickering light the dancer is coated with gum so carefully that even his teeth and nails are invisible; in this disguise he represents Dark-Shade. Early the following morning the singers and those kukusiut who have already danced during the current season set off on lashed canoes to meet X and his party whom they take on board. Waiting till the tide is favourable, the canoes are slowly poled up the river. As they come in sight of the village, the singers strike up some well-known tune, and in time to it everyone on the platform between the canoes begins to dance, each using the style proper to his prerogative. It is an animated scene. The uninitiated watch the approach, and gaze with wonder upon the strange dark figure; it is all so uncanny that they need little urging from the kukusiut to withdraw to their houses, where they peer curiously through chinks in the walls. Members of the society line the river bank and, as Dark-Shade draws near, one after another cries out that a call has come to him. The marshals have previously decided who shall dance at this time and informed those selected; sometimes it is a kusiut who has already performed once during the season, or it may be a person who has not performed for many years. [535] [424] 575* 796* 787

All the kukusiut accompany Dark-Shade and her escort to X's house from which all uninitiated have long been expelled. The singers compose a new song of which the words are arranged as if Dark-Shade, not X, were speaking. The theme of one, used a number of years ago, is: 575* 796* [533]

"Let X fetch me to visit mortals."

Unfortunately, the details of X's dance were unavailable. Dark-Shade herself remains for four days hidden within X's house, though he attends the ceremonies of other kukusiut and his presence there on the nights of qothm and nebusam is a

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 source of awe to the uninitiated, who marvel that a man can still appear like an ordinary mortal when he has just brought a supernatural visitor home. According to one informant who, however, is not well posted on kusiut matters, there is neither qothm nor nebusam, and Dark-Shade is merely sent away after four days. This may be the case, but the dance has not been carried out for many years, and the man frankly admitted that he did not know the details. It seems more likely that there [533] is some kind of ceremony, since a song would not be composed unless for a definite purpose.

*575 *796 ●787 424 The coming of Dark-Shade complicates the kusiut ceremonial since a number of dancers receive their calls simultaneously. In this case the ritual is carried out in unison which requires, for example, the composition of one song for each performer on Isxtämem. Calls never come in this way to dancers with important or complicated prerogatives, but it is a useful means of dealing with those whose right is merely to sing of their patrons. On nebusam the patrons of all are displayed, a method which has the advantage of producing a dramatic effect which would be lacking if only one were in evidence. The coming of a call by means of Dark-Shade is called twilmdimut, "Emerging from Below to Plain Sight." Another time when several calls may come simultaneously to different kukusiut is at the winter solstice when, on the entry of Älquntäm, the supernatural beings rush forth and some of them fall, causing calls to come to their human protégés.

THE DANCE OF THE STONE MAN

*575 *796 Yuyulmgl, the man who was petrified with his Ootsa Lake wife and four children at the beginning of time, is patron for a [776] Kimsquit kusiut man named Kwasta. His repository is just [424] above high-water mark on the east side of Dean Channel, about [551] five miles from its head, and about one hundred and fifty feet [778] north of the legal fishing boundary. This is almost immediately opposite Yuyulmgl's station. The repository is beneath the ground, and its doorway is a beaver which became

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 mortal watched until the unfortunate Nuxuicuxnam had almost vanished
* 575 from sight. Then a sound betrayed her to Ăxe'likwelxaix.
* 796 "If you are a mortal," she said, "come in."
The woman did so, and Ăxe'likwelxaix continued:
539 "I am Ăxe'likwelxaix. You have found me, hence I give you a kusiut dance prerogative. You will have Nuxuicuxnam as patron."

The woman returned to her home, where she performed a kusiut rite in which she portrayed the sinking of Nuxuicuxnam into the earth.

ORIGIN MYTH OF A PECULIAR REPOSITORY

In the beginning of time there came down to Xmaxets, a point a little distance below Mount Nuxqalst, a woman whose name was Spuxpuxhailaix. Ălquntăm had given her a kusiut prerogative with a peculiar [778] repository in four parts, as if two were in either hand. Their names were Spelyădjutăn-a, Sxa-lutsmăn-a, Sinlan-i, and Samsiutăn-i. When she [532] danced she wore a wooden head-dress representing Woodpecker, and the masks used (her patrons?) were the sun when it is red, and an eagle. This dance has since been carried out from generation to generation by the owners of the name Spuxpuxhailaix.

Kusiut Prerogatives Other Than Dances

424 The most valuable possession of a kusiut is the dance which
* 575 he has the right to perform, but each member of the society has,
* 796 in addition, a somewhat peculiar object, sometimes material and sometimes intangible, known as a skusiut or yeaxmax. The meaning of these two terms will become evident in the description of their uses, meanwhile they can be termed "prerogatives." With every call, this possession of the dancer's comes
• [787] automatically to him, though it can also be attracted to him by other means and without a call. There is no connection between the patron and the prerogative; for example, one kusiut who has one of the sons of Ălquntăm as the former has, as the latter, the Hummingbird. Another may have Fog, Sleep, a Snake, or one of many other objects, animate or inanimate. The "patron-puppets" described in kusiotem rites belong to this class.

In almost every case the origin is lost in antiquity, and the owner knows only that it belongs with his dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Few prerogatives are used when the uninitiated are present; they are essentially secret, but provide considerable amusement and are a welcome interlude in the serious rites. When the prerogative is made visible, carpenters must be employed to make it, and be paid for their work; hence this part of the ceremonial is often omitted. When no handicraft is required, it is more frequently called into play, but even in such cases its employment is not universal. Not being an essential part of the kusiut rites, the use or omission of a prerogative is a matter which concerns the dancer alone, and he acts strictly in accordance with his own wishes, whether or not he desires the ceremony to be aco mpanied by every possible show. It is impossible to estimate with accuracy the relative frequency of employment, but it is probable that prerogatives of the type under consideration are used in about one-third of the kusiut ceremonials.

424 575* 796* 183 [532]

If a dancer decides to display a material prerogative, he consults with a carpenter before the coming of his call and asks him to make, for example, a wooden Hummingbird. On the night of 'nuxtāmem, when all the kukusiut are present, the bird is seen to move across the back-wall of the house, pulled by concealed strings. The dancer rushes to it and appears to catch it, in reality hiding it beneath his clothing. The women drone and the heralds announce to the uninitiated in the neighbouring houses what has taken place. Carefully holding his hands cupped, as if clutching something of great value, the dancer moves to the centre of the house and returns the bird to the land above by throwing his hands upwards while the kukusiut call out hoip. This is the usual procedure when the prerogative is a bird, a small mammal, or a reptile. The same ceremonial is often repeated on the night of nusiutālap, particularly if the ritual proper to the occasion does not suffice to occupy the requisite time. If the prerogative is immaterial, the ritual differs. For example, when it is Fog, the dancer stretches his hands upwards, as if receiving something from above, and then makes the motion of throwing this "some-

424 575* 796* 787 [532]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 thing" into one of his companions. The recipient acts as if
* 575 blinded, staggering around the house and colliding with articles
* 796 of furniture or his fellows. One after another receives the 787 same present, until perhaps half the company are acting as if moving in a dense mist. Sometimes they reel from the house, falling into bushes and walking into the walls of other houses, as if deprived not only of sight but also of all sense of direction. The prerogative of Fog was given to Ninitsamlaix (II, p. 244), but many other kukusiut enjoy the same right from other sources. After a short interval, the dancer goes to the victim and makes the motion of drawing something from him, thus restoring his sight and sanity. Fog is then returned aloft in the manner described for a Hummingbird.

When first told of this custom, difficulty was experienced in visualizing the attitude of the kukusiut to what they realize is a mere dramatization, lacking the presence of the uninitiated to give it zest and purpose. When several performances of this type had been witnessed, the difficulty vanished. The kukusiut enter whole-heartedly into the spirit of the affair, regarding it as a game, and yet as a game in which they must acquit themselves creditably. Each recipient endeavours to [522] excel his fellows in the realism of his performance, and his blind staggers never fail to cause merriment. The Bella Coola delight in acting, and this is an occasion on which they can indulge their tastes to the utmost, without fear of disaster if an error should occur, such as hampers them in the presence of the uninitiated. Moreover, each strives to assist the performer, and these two reasons combine to make the whole a success.

Although these prerogatives are often used on the nights of lxustämem and nusiustälsap, the time most suitable for their appearance is during the ritual of sawadjut, which may be translated as, "The Restful Ceremony." The Bella Coola say that the word is derived from sawa, a pillow, and that the meaning of sawadjut is a ceremony of "Pillowness," that is, resting, combined with pleasant relaxation. In spite of the number of prerogatives, it sometimes happens that a week or more elapses without a kusiut wishing to perform. In such a case the marshals instruct the heralds to summon the kukusiut for the Restful Ceremony to a house from which the uninitiated have been expelled. When all have assembled, the singers beat out the song of any kusiut and the audience joins in, although the owner does not dance. Song after song is repeated, the singers choosing particularly those which they fear may be forgotten. The uninitiated, who hear the singing from the adjacent houses, wonder what it may signify. The marshals arrange with a kusiut willing to receive his prerogative, and soon after midnight this person puts on a ceremonial collar, even though no call has come to him, and is ready to play his part. Sticks are distributed and one of the singers leads the audience in frenzied beating. This suffices to bring the intangible prerogative to the willing kusiut, who makes the motions of catching something in his upstretched hands while the women drone. Amid the continued pounding of sticks, the dancer circles the house and presently throws what he has received to one of his fellows. The actions of the recipient of Fog have already been described, but there are intangible prerogatives of other kinds. One of these is Rabbit; the owner hops in imitation of the animal to any kusiut, presses his cupped hands against the other's chest, and the latter likewise begins to hop. He in turn passes it to a third, he to a fourth, until finally the owner withdraws his prerogative and returns it above. The kukusiut become so interested that they often forget to continue the beating of sticks, a matter of no importance since no uninitiated are present. No one offered the prerogative from the owner ever declines; to do so would expose him to ridicule and a refusal is unthinkable according to an elderly Bella Coola. Another prerogative of the same type is an Adze, in which case the possessor pretends to be using that tool. When finally withdrawn by the rightful owner, he often makes the motion of throwing it on a rafter instead of sending it back above; in this case it can be used

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 again later in the season without being brought from above.
* 575 A Bat prerogative impels the owner, and likewise the tem-
* 796 porary possessor, to move lightly to and fro like a bat; it can 787 be thrown from one side of the house to the other, and is "caught" with arms stretched far above the head. Sleep, like Fog, can be projected into a number of individuals simultaneously, and causes all to slumber; while Anger causes everyone to fight with his neighbour. Still another prerogative of the same class is Ants. Some dancers have Bull-roarers, as is also true for some sisaok dancers. Details of their use were unobtainable.

Although these prerogatives always amuse and please the kukusiut, they also have two serious aspects. The insertion of one strengthens a kusiut, and in the case of a Cannibal, Scratcher, or Breaker causes him to become frenzied. Whenever this happens he rushes forth to all the houses, frightening the uninitiated, always attended by a band of kukusiut. Moreover, the injection of a prerogative so stimulates a kusiut that he is more liable to receive a call. As many as fifty kukusiut may have prerogatives of this type thrust into them during a single "Restful Ceremony." Of course not all of them receive calls, but one or more of them is likely to do so. The writer endeavoured to investigate the attitude of the Bella Coola on this point. Only kukusiut are concerned, since they alone can have this power inserted into them. They realize the deceptions practised by the society, and no individual interviewed claimed to have been so strengthened that he received a call, yet all stated that this had been the case with others. There is no doubt that the projection of a prerogative directs the recipient's attention to kusiut matters, and may often lead him to the point of giving his dance. In any event, the "Restful Ceremony" gives the marshals an opportunity to stimulate the interest of the members of the society, and to impress on them the desirability of dancing. The uses of "patron-puppets" have already been described.

In addition to these prerogatives, which normally remain in the land above and come to their owners only on special occasions, there are four of similar type considered to remain constantly within the possessor's body from the time of his admission, with respect to the name with which the right is associated. One of these, the use of crystals for initiation purposes, has already been described. The others are nixobäxta, lsubilta, and sio°msta, all untranslatable terms.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One use to which the first of these prerogatives is put is to encourage the kukusiut to hasten to the house in which a ceremony is taking place. Delay is part and parcel of all dances, but particularly on lsuxtämem and nusiutälsap the kukusiut are often very slow in arriving. In such a case the dancer himself, one of his friends, or a marshal, may ask the owner of a nixobäxta prerogative to perform. It will be convenient to refer to this kusiut, who may be man or woman, as X.

The uninitiated have been told that X carries in his right knee a rock crystal which he can thrust into anyone through the anus. The kukusiut do not share the belief, but they have acted for so long as if they did, that it is probable that they almost place credence in it themselves. When X performs, he leaves the dancer's home and goes in a crouching attitude, yelling fiercely, to the lowest house of the village. As he enters, the uninitiated flee to the bed-rooms, but peer curiously and fearfully through the cracks. X rushes to and fro, still crouching, while the kukusiut appear to be trying to avoid him, but at last he seizes either a man or a woman. In spite of his victim's well-simulated struggles, X makes the motion of thrusting something into him, whereupon the person cries out as if in pain and pretends to be nauseated. Away rushes X, enters the next dwelling, and does the same. This is repeated in every house in the village. As they go to the house in which the ceremony is taking place, the victims pretend to be suffering from a stomach-ache, caused by the foreign substance within them, and this pretence is maintained after their arrival. After some delay, X takes a stick and beats furiously four or five times with it, while the singers accompany

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 him with sticks and drums. Following another pause, he does
* 575 this once more, causing the return to him of the crystals. The
* 796 heralds visit the different houses to report what has taken place and the regular ritual of the evening continues in due ● 787 course.

Occasionally the nixobäta ritual is elaborated to impress the uninitiated. Within this century a woman received a crystal in this manner and, so non-members were told, it became stuck so that the owner could not recall it. In this case two kukusiut were in grief; the woman who had lost her crystal, and the one who had it within her body. The former went from house to house for several days, weeping and asking that the kukusiut insert their prerogatives into the possessor's body to drive out the crystal, while the sufferer maintained a crouched attitude as if in intense agony. Her home was in Qomqo·ts, but she went even to Sinxl to see whether the kukusiut there could not help her. Meanwhile the uninitiated were both amazed and impressed. After several days the marshals of the two villages decided to try in unison to force out the crystal. It was day-time, and they gathered around the stricken woman in an open spot between the two villages, while the uninitiated peered with interest from the background. One kusiut after another called his intangible prerogative to himself and passed it into the sufferer, and after each insertion the owner of the crystal tried to withdraw it, but without avail. After each failure, the one who had used his possession recalled it to himself by pressing with cupped hands and calls of hoip, then sent it back above. Throughout the ceremony, a man with a loud voice kept informing non-members which prerogative was being tried. At the insertion of Ants, and again of Anger, the sufferer reeled, but the owner of the crystal could not bring it forth. It had been decided that a Bird-Arrow was to be the successful prerogative, and when this was inserted by its owner, the woman staggered, fell, and rolled wildly on the ground, her arms and legs flying apart in all directions. Then the joyful owner was able to draw back her crystal and the sick woman at once recovered. 424 575 *

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Another prerogative of the same nature is Isubilla. As the kukusiut are gathering and before the main ceremonial of the evening, the man or woman with this prerogative can display it if he so desires. He stands up, stamps, then bends down and begins to beat with a stick on the floor; the singers, who know what is to take place, quickly join in. This serves to concentrate the performer's power, consisting of the ability to scratch the external genital organs. The sticks continue to sound as the performer moves about the house, acting in accordance with his right, and at the same time rolling his eyes and licking his lips. Choosing either man or woman as he desires, he calls out his name, and the person addressed must come forward to take his hands. The power is thus transmitted and the one so chosen begins to scratch, with the same accompaniment of rolling eyes and licking lips. 796 * 787

"It is sweet," he cries.

The power is then returned to the owner, who later passes it to another victim, until the marshals decide it is time to proceed to the main rites of the evening. The use of this prerogative is a source of never-ending amusement to the kukusiut. The only explanation given of this somewhat peculiar ability is that it is practised by the supernatural beings in the land above. Like every other kusiut rite, it can be performed only by a person who owns a name in which it is embodied. [522] [776]

Sio'mstu, the third of these prerogatives, is to imitate the action of holding sexual intercourse. Like the last, its use is limited to the house in which a dance is taking place, and can be carried out only while the audience is waiting for the main ceremony. The performer, man or woman, stands up with a rope pressed close across his stomach, held with hands clenched at the hips. It is said that in this position nothing can pass behind him. The singers and other kukusiut begin to beat time to concentrate the actor's power as he stamps around in a crouching posture, crying hoip and shaking his hips. Pre- 424 575 * 796 * 787 831 522

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 sently he begins to grunt, and calls the name of either a man
*575 or a woman. The person so designated must take the per-
*796 former's hands, thus assimilating his power, and in his turn 787 begins to shake and grunt, amid the laughter of all. Presently 831 the "gift" is returned, and later passed to another recipient.
522 Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her [776] hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some time the owner draws his power to himself and the main ceremony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform sio°msta.

The Death of a Kusiut

*575 A detailed description of kusiut dances and ritual has now 766 been given, but certain special features still remain. One of *796 these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member 787 of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cannibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the patron of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done.
From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The marshals discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kusiut, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kukusiut sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cannibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kukusiut are still waiting and watching for his return.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When all hope has been abandoned, they are summoned and the relative completes the ceremony, doing only that part of it left undone by the original recipient of the call. The principle is the same as that described when a novice dies, that someone must finish the rite. This aspect of the kusiut ceremonial is still preserved tenaciously as the writer found to his cost. It was proposed that he be formally initiated into the society, but this was not allowed on the ground that he would not be present the following winter to complete the rites necessitated by the coming of the call. 575* 796* 766 787 [123]

The Final Rite

The commencement of the kusiut season is regulated by the coming of Noäkxnum, but its conclusion is a matter of arrangement. By February the number of kukusiut wishing to dance has become negligible and the marshals decide to terminate the ceremonial season. It must be remembered that an enclosure has been built in every house where an important kusiut dance has taken place, and that as long as these are in existence the uninitiated have not been allowed to live in those houses. The social life of the community has accordingly been profoundly disturbed. Of course several dances may have taken place in a single dwelling, but even allowing for that, the fact remains that the uninitiated have been forced to dwell temporarily in perhaps only one or two houses. The most obvious mark of the end of the ceremonial season is the destruction of these enclosures. 575* 796* 591 784

A few nights after the last nebusam, the heralds summon the kukusiut to the house in which it took place. They sit down but the usual droning is omitted. Presently sticks are distributed and one of the singers takes his place to lead in the customary frenzied beating. But before he raises his baton, one of the marshals, or another kusiut with ability in that respect, steps to the centre of the house and spits noisily in all directions, his aim being to deluge the house and spectators with a spray of saliva. Then the singer leads the beating of 575* 796* 787 784

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

784 * 575 * 796 [787] sticks, while everyone calls out, hoip. This is repeated four times. The sticks continue to sound irregularly as the younger men pull the enclosure to pieces and throw it on the central fire. By these means the kukusiut have been freed from their contact with the supernatural and, perhaps even more important, the repositories have been "tied up," to use the native term, for another year. Those members of the society whose dances have taken place in the house now wash the black from their faces and all share a light meal. The marshals take this last opportunity of addressing their fellows, impressing on them the necessity of maintaining the secrecy of the rites during the summer season. Above all, they warn them to hide the whistles and other paraphernalia most carefully. This concludes the season's ceremony in the house in question; some of the kukusiut withdraw, others remain, and the uninitiated are free to enter and take up the old threads of family life, as it was before the coming of the first call.

If it is not too late at night the party may move to a second house and remove the taboo from it in the same way. More often this is done on the following night, when a second body of kukusiut are allowed to wash. Another house is visited on the next evening, and so on in succession till all the enclosures are burnt and the only visible mark of what has happened is the collar of dyed cedar-bark worn by each novice.

[424] There may be certain prerogatives connected with this finale which could not be learnt owing to its discontinuance for many years. In fact, one old woman claimed to have a definite right to sing at the destruction of the enclosures, but it was unfortunately impossible to investigate the matter.

Concluding Observations and History

* 575 * 796 182 571 It is virtually impossible to overestimate the importance of the sociological aspects of the society. During the ceremonial season the whole fabric of social life is altered; families are divided, parents and children being separated in many

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 C Ilplxtmaxdumilnlu | yao ttilxmtmuxlu | hmalkaxulaixhlxhx | Ilulxyandaxhx
There was a big cloak for him(f) forefather; two men held him in it(g).

Yao sxxxxkalaixxuhx
Hail, Sxxxxkalaix(h)!

(a) This song was composed and used during the hamat season of 1923-4.
(b) Referring to the call. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of these two subdivisions.
(c) Presumably referring to the supernatural beings in the land above.
(d) The dancer's cannibalistic incubus was the eagle. The slightly vague expressions are necessary to deceive the uninitiated.
(e) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.
(f) Referring to the dancer.
(g) The meaning of this is obscure. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of each subdivision.
(h) The dancer's patron.

Song Used for Kel-iaiyakmy, a Bella Coola Cannibal Dancer(a)

A Sawaxpelkmailaixmalnlx | a'lhhlkalxwulnlx | daxumaxkaixulhlm
No one spoke | at the meeting(b) | when he counted sxxxxlkxmahlmal)

how many should be eaten(c).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

B Sawaxmmmmalxxlaix | waxxxlx(xxdjalaix | ahxxxlxhxxxdjilhl)
Alternately, two men | kept giving him food(d) | in his house(e);

yao dahxhx idjadx
there is incessant growling(f).

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

C Wawxxxxxlxlmlxxmdai | aiaxxxwx ia'lilxhx | Yao ds'alxpanlilxhxxhx
The wood shivered(g) | as he walked(h). | Hail to the shaking off(i)!

Yao xxxxkalaixxuhx
Hail to Sxxxxkalaix(j)!

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed and used during the hamat season of 1923-4.
(b) The uninitiated assume this to be a reference to the meeting in the land above at which it was decided to send down a call to the dancer. [787]
(c) That is: He, the dancer's patron, decided how many human beings should be eaten. The reference is slightly peculiar since Kel-iaiyakmy has the prerogative of biting himself.
(d) The uninitiated assume that this refers to human flesh.
(e) Referring to his repository. The exact meaning is intentionally obscure.
(f) A reference to the growling of the Cannibal by which the uninitiated are frightened.

(c) The theme is worded as if the dancer were listening to the supernatural beings discussing the call which they proposed to send down. The uninitiated are led to believe that she actually has this ability. 533* [787]

(d) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(e) The implication is that the power of the dancer is so great, and the rite so dangerous, that even the supernatural beings themselves are afraid.

(f) The discussion is so animated and on such an important subject that the faces of the participants take on strained expressions.

(g) When a Bella Coola meeting is being held, those who hold similar views usually group themselves together. [623]

(h) A man of forceful character has expressed himself and the others concur.

Second Song Used for Smaníkʼhs, a Bella Coola Fungus Dancer(a)

A xnáiqnxáiqhqs | xnlaxnmxmayumhalʼ | xhá·hímqnxinuxnis
It is true what my mother | recounted to me(b); | has opened to me

xiyumanqs-ayʼmals Sangʼ(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Yuu hnqnixumhiʼqalnsis | ahxinlunumʼlimlnsis
He(d) told me to raise my head to see what he was holding(e), hxinlwinmhlumals | xmnqnlrmnisis

the model(f) | of the gathering above(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Iqmahalirumalumals | dmhlnudimutalals | yuu dixlrumalsdjalʼlus
Bent their heads together(h) | all the chiefs(i); | those of lesser prestige dmqnisinhumals;

fled away in fear, unable to participate(j).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 21a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song, composed by Peter Nelson, was used during the hamat season of 1923-4.

(b) This was the second song used when Smaníkʼhs danced, and the theme follows, to a certain extent, the first one. The uninitiated are led to believe that the dancer was able to see what her mother had described to her in previous years.

(c) That is: Sangʼ has opened to me.

(d) Referring to a supernatural being, probably the dancer's patron.

(e) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions. The implication is that the dancer was sitting with head bowed on her chest when the supernatural one bade her look upward to see what he was holding out to her in his hand. [787]

(f) Model is a poor translation. The reference is to the rim above on which the dancer patterned her performance.

(g) A reference to the gathering of the supernatural beings.

(h) As if in secret and animated discussion.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

727 overland to Kimsquit, and from there to Bella Coola. The crew of another craft lost their way among the islands and fiords and wandered around for days until their food was exhausted. They were then near China Hat where they could have landed in safety but, thinking that they were still in hostile territory, they feared to camp and hunt. At last, spurred by hunger, they determined to catch some eagles, the only living creatures in sight. A rude shelter was built on the shore, a bark tray placed before it, and one of the party gashed the fleshy part of his back until the blood ran sufficiently freely to fill the vessel and serve as bait. A companion hid himself and clubbed the eagles as they swooped down to the fresh blood. Though the food was coarse and had to be eaten raw, it enabled the refugees to continue their journey home.

727 Another canoe was surprised at the entrance to Douglas Channel by a party of Kitimat who slew all the crew except a certain Yē·k"arwarwa 648 who succeeded in escaping into the woods. Thinking that the survivor would be driven down to the beach by hunger, the Kitimat patrolled the shore for days, but he eluded them by travelling overland, though his only food was uncooked plants and a single goat, killed by a stone. Yē·k"arwarwa was a Kimsquit man whose wife was from Kitlobe; her relatives, hearing of his plight, watched the shore of Gardners Canal, hoping that he might be able to reach that refuge. He managed to do so, though at the last gasp, and was taken to Kitlobe whence he returned to Kimsquit. This was the first time that anyone had travelled overland from Douglas Channel to Gardner Canal.

Still another canoe actually landed at Kitimat where the crew was butchered except for five men who fled to the forest. One of them, Xnuth, uncle of a man about seventy years old in 1923, had made several trading expeditions into the interior and was familiar with part of the route. He acted as guide, but soon lost his way and the five wandered for months through the trackless interior, often in dire straits for food, and becoming more and more weary. Their journey began in May, and 727 by October they were all enfeebled through hardship and lack of food. ● 787 Xnuth himself was the first to give up the struggle, saying that he could go no further. He asked his comrades to make him as comfortable as possible, and then to leave him; regretfully they laid him on some evergreen boughs, and tottered off, expecting their own death within a few days. Soon after their departure, there was a violent thunderstorm and, at the moment of a tremendous clap, Thunder, himself, appeared to the dying wanderer. The supernatural one went to a near-by rivulet and dipped up water which he brought Xnuth to drink; when he had done this four times, the man felt as if he had had a hearty meal. Thunder then told Xnuth to close his eyes. He did so; then the supernatural one

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

spit upon his own hands and rubbed them over the patient's head, his 727 arms, his trunk, his legs, and finally his feet, as if massaging him. Xnatli's 787 strength began to return at the first touch of Thunder's hands, and, when the treatment was finished, he felt entirely rejuvenated. Thunder told him to overtake his friends and to massage them in the same way and they would be revived. He explained that they had been travelling in circles of ever-decreasing radius which was the reason that they had neither reached their destination nor recrossed their own tracks. He added that they must think constantly of their first objective, Ulkatcho, Nuktsto in the Bella Coola language, and that at night Xnatli must sleep on the side of the five nearest that goal.

Soon afterwards the four wanderers were surprised to see a stalwart 727 man swinging along the trail behind them, and their amazement was intense when they realized that it was Xnatli whom they had left at the point of death. He bade three of his comrades hide, and massaged the fourth as Thunder had done to him; this restored his strength exactly as in his own case. The one so cured then concealed himself, while Xnatli treated another of his comrades, and finally the third and fourth. This was not the end of the assistance so obtained. Within a few minutes of their recovery, they found the trail they had so long been seeking and reached Ulkatcho before night, though under normal circumstances the same distance would have required four days of travel. There were several Bella Coola at the settlement who were overjoyed at the safety of those for whom all hope had long been abandoned. They rested for four days, then set out for home. Xnatli told his comrades to fix their minds upon their objective, and as a result they were able to make the journey with phenemonal rapidity.

Thunder had granted Xnatli the boon of utokwaladjut on this occa- 754 sion, and had promised that he would come to his help whenever called [776] upon. Xnatli was a sorcerer, a profession which had been practised for generations in his family, and he now performed more openly than ever, assured that Thunder would be able to protect him. The malefactor killed more and more people, until he became an object of universal hatred and fear. At last the principal chief of the village, confident in [685] the power which the giving of many potlatches had bestowed upon him, ordered an expert shot to slay Xnatli. The man so deputed had himself lost several relatives and gladly watched an opportunity. This came when the sorcerer was paddling across the Bella Coola near the old Hudson's Bay Company's post; he took careful aim from ambush, fired, and the evil man fell dead. A medicine can be made from the corpse of a murdered person, which, when used by the relatives, causes the killer's death. To prevent this, the executioner called his friends and they took

8: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B 754 the body to his own house, preparatory to burying it. It was April, but [776] as they were waiting, a violent thunderstorm blew up from the east, the only time that such had ever occurred at that season. Thunder had promised to come to Xnutli's aid, but the latter had died too suddenly to make any appeal; the supernatural one had just learnt of his pro-
B [789] tégé's death and had come rushing to his assistance. Realizing the danger, the executioner and his friends hastily buried the corpse, throwing over it a number of blood-stained cloths, and finally stamping down the earth. There was a furious hurricane; trees were uprooted, houses shook, the earth over the grave seethed as if in a whirlpool and chunks of it
B [789] were carried up into the air. Only the potency of the blood on the cloths prevented the return to life of Xnutli.[8]

This second unsuccessful attack on the Kitkatla so disheartened the B T 648 Bella Coola that they made no more raids on their northern foemen who, flushed with victory, became even bolder than before. As usual, the Kimsquit and Tāl·is people suffered more than the inhabitants of the [721] main valley. On one of these forays, about 1855, the Kitkatla killed Ḵoḵwelistl, a brother of Potlus, the leading chief of the Bella Coola at the [726] time. This was contrary to all the rules of warfare since he was a member [622] of one of the leading families and the donor of many potlatches, a man whose name was as well known as that of Potlus, Nukāpunkam of Fort Rupert, or Tcukua himself. The fame of such chiefs was enough to protect them except during the actual heat of conflict, and the Bella Coola were justly angry.

A few years later a single canoe came paddling up North Bentinck
B T Arm and was beached about half a mile from the head. Scouts investi-648 gated, and returned to Ḵomq·ts with news that the occupants were Kitkatla, and that Tcukua himself was among them. At once there was 728 heated discussion among the people of the lower valley. Many who had lost relatives in the protracted struggle wished to wipe out the party;
B T others, to see what they wanted. A few daring individuals skulked through the forest and fired on the visitors at long range; they were [726] answered, not with bullets, but by the four times holding aloft of a moose-skin, a sign of friendly intentions. If the strangers had fired on the scouts, a fight would have ensued, but this peaceful reception disarmed suspicion.

B [787] [8]This tale is a curious illustration of the manner in which supernatural elements become woven into accounts which have an historical basis. It is to be assumed that the wanderers were in a suggestible state owing to privation, and readily believed that supernatural powers must have assisted them. Xnutli was feared as a sorcerer, and probably boasted of a visitation from Thunder during his wanderings. This was accepted and the incorporation of impossible incidents followed in due course.

2:McIlwraith:E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Coola the important men of Sunxl, Temotl, and Ăłqăläxl met at Ḑomqo·ts and discussed the matter stormily. Potles was the leading Bella Coola chief at the time, but he alone did not attend the meeting at which all the others were present, though he sent a man to search a storehouse owned by the murdered woman on the south side of the mouth of Bella Coola River, near the former Hudson's Bay Company's post. Bilxwalaks had a large amount of ammunition stored within, and this was brought to the house of Potles. Next morning, the chief himself appeared, his face smeared with ashes and his hair tied in a top-knot with a weasel-skin. This is done by anyone who has killed a man, and it was a clear intimation that Potles had decided on war. He seated himself in the doorway of his house, a cocked musket in either hand, and intimated that he would shoot anyone who passed on the sidewalk before him. For four days he sat there, neither speaking nor eating: he was numitl, so no one disregarded his wishes and the inmates even of his own house used the refuse holes for egress during that period. No other case is known of such an action, but Potles could do as he liked, and he manifested his grief and determination in this spectacular manner. On the fifth day, he ordered drums to be beaten, and the inhabitants of the adjacent villages gathered; Potles wasted no words:

"Bilxwalaks has been murdered," he said. "She was a chief and my relative.[12] I am going to war. We shall use her own powder and shot."

The ammunition was distributed and the Bella Coola prepared for the expedition.

Owing to the prestige of Potles, volunteers came swarming in, not only from Bella Coola itself, but from Kimsquit and Tăl·io as well. No one was thoroughly acquainted with the geography of the Kwakiutl territory except a slave named, like the Kwakiutl warrior chief, Siwid, though not, however, related to him. This man had lived among the Bella Coola for so long that he was thought reliable; he readily agreed to act as guide, only asking that his old mother be spared, a request which was granted.

After the usual delays, the expedition set out and spent the first night at Kwatna. Next morning, Kwalsänl, one of the leading warriors, tied his hair into a top-knot and smeared his face with ashes. He was a man whose bravery had been firmly established by the distribution of valuable presents. To show his valour, he stood up on the beach within easy musket range and called out:

"Please fire at my top-knot. If you hit it and make it fall, so will we lay low our foes."

---

[12] It is doubtful whether she was a kinswoman, but Potles used the term figuratively in speaking of one who, like himself, was a person of importance.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Kwakiutl NE10

B 726
787

For some time no one was willing to take the risk of hitting a comrade, but Kwalsänl continued his request until a good shot took careful aim and fired. The bullet cut the knot and the warrior's scanty locks fell streaming over his face; he was partially bald so that his top-knot was thin and collapsed easily. Everyone was pleased at this incident as foretelling victory. Those whose courage had been established either by magical means or by the distribution of wealth, often deliberately took public risks of this kind to show their bravery.

B
K
648
726

Then the expedition continued, travelling only by night after leaving friendly waters. It was decided to attack the people of Kingcome Inlet, though it is unknown whether that objective had been decided upon before leaving Bella Coola or en route. When close to their goal, a scouting canoe was sent forward, guided by the slave. He led the party into one cove, then into another, without seeming to arrive anywhere; the scouts feared that he was deceiving them, so they landed, and while two or three lay in hiding, the others took Siwid back to the main party. One Bella Coola had a slight knowledge of the route, so he was sent forward to join the hidden scouts; their canoe was cautiously paddled forward in the darkness till the crew was able to land unobserved about a quarter of a mile from the objective. Kingcome Inlet is famous for its olachen, which attract fishermen from all parts of the coast; on the day previous a canoe from the north had arrived for the spring run and reported the departure of the Bella Coola expedition. From the time which had elapsed, the Kingcome Inlet people knew that this must now be in the vicinity. Two canoes filled with men were sent out from the threatened village; they scoured the neighbouring coasts, but although one of the crews almost stumbled over the hidden scouts, they found no trace of them, and returned, reporting that no enemy was near. Having avoided those who were looking for them, the Bella Coola scouts returned to the main party and preparations were made to attack at dawn.

The warriors gained positions in ambush behind the village without being discovered, and just before daybreak the assault was launched. The Djoldänux, taken unaware, could offer no real resistance; many of them were killed or captured although Siwid, the chief, himself escaped. The Bella Coola suffered only one casualty, the captain of one of the canoes. During the journey, the bow-man of his craft had misjudged the amounts of food and cedar-bark required, so that his leader, in the stern, had received neither and was in no fit condition for fighting. Some of his friends advised him to remain with the canoes and promised to bring him prisoners to guard; the captain refused this offer, rushed into the fight and was slain. It was generally felt that lack of war decorations was responsible.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Ashla: Village at Salmon House, on the upper Dean River.
ashma: Position between two fires.
as·lail: 1—Raised bed behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural.
2—Waterfall.[1] [823]
as·maias: To teach.
as·maiasamkit': Hereditary lore handed down secretly in a family. [424] Asqāmks: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
asqwawa: Sisaak song in slow time. [533]
astakan: 1—Box, archaic; hence, seat.
2—One of the nights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representation of the deceased appears.
astas: Rocky Mountain jay. [825] asuxwatl: Carved house post.
Asualnexkl: Wife of Swaks; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
asutcānnk: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Aswinwinaiats: Expedition of the supernatural being Winwina against berries and fish.
Ăs·gānam: Smoean's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the name has since been used by his descendants, asymsaxta: Only sister in a family of several brothers. [601] ats": Seals. [825]
atxwaltom: Steeping in medicinal smoke as a curative measure.
ātāqulp: Fir. [755]
Ātāt·iaitl: Evil male supernatural being. [824] ā·lma: 1—Death, not anthropomorphized.
2—Dead. [825]
ālmak": Kingfisher.
ālsi: Fish-hook. [227]
Ālsham, "They of the Huge Jaws": Supernatural beings resident in the land above.
ālskmas: Kusiut spy.
atsfutl: plural, anatsftutl; vocative plural, anatsftaatl:
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Ālsk: ustāmg village.
Ātā: Stuix man mentioned in an ancient story.
ate·hendjut, "He Urinates Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indication of misfortune, hence the word really means omen. It is the Kimsquit variant of ā·wendjut. [787] ā·wendjut: Omen of death.
Ātut·i, "Occupied Mound": 1—Village at Kwatna.
2—Artificial mound at Tāl·ia.
3—Village on the Kimsquit River.
4—Island near Ocean Falls.
Ātut·i nas Wawalnuks, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Ocean Falls where the dogs came to earth in the beginning of time.
aguaw·i: Varied thrush. [825]

[1]The latter is a favourite place for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

uxsiut, "The Time for Kusiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice.
uyuyuyut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ālqālxl in the beginning of time. [805]
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Suaok name of a Kimsquit man.
ulululāk: One of the supernatural carpenters.
ulsämämmtmm: The repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] uxaiāk': Synonym for spuxdjut, a present for which a return is not expected. [431] uxāxsmxdjut: Hereditary tendency.
uxem: Kusiut name of a Stuax man. [827] uxiax: Red rock cod. The difference between this and ilakwik is problematical.
uxlqolam: One of the first men to settle at Qomqo·ts in the beginning of time. [825] uxlliwatem'xiamut·ālāt': The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage. [583] uyu·abālawadjutlaix: Sterile supernatural visitation. [787] uxkukuta: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up.
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position. [556] uxlathmhq, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
uxlexwan·i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
uxlokwaladjut: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
uxlqotlamsqwaxdjinas: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tāl·ie in the beginning of time.
uxnukwmlsaix, "The Track of the Sun": A'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
uxnutlxāmlaix: Supernatural name of uxiutl.
uxquntām, "Commander":1—Said to be the word from which Ālquntām is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
uxlikmosaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
uxwappätsdjut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
uxwal·a: Kusiut name of a Stuax man.
uxwinxala: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
ux·wnaisa: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
uxyälyotsaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
uxyukam, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Snulali and Tāl·ie.

K

kai: 1—Snow. [821]
2—Unidentified berry. [824]
Kaiusdias: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kakamit: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
kakas: Crow. [825]
Kakohn: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Łäliaxsa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Łähaml: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Stuix story of the beginning of time.
Łälläliämdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.
Łäloxmän·a: Smaoan's son in the beginning of time.
łälas·i: Small portable canoe.
łälsum: Desertion of a spouse. [586] Łäxsmai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.
łahmmakgwas: Imitation potlatch carried out by nusäxkämy.
Łäknus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.
Łilixwnimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smaoan for his son in the beginning of time.
łima: To loot.
Łixlixkihka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.
łixwnimut: Person of placid disposition.
łdłła: Bull-roarer.
łdł: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, łm, is supposedly derived from this. [556]
łm: Potlatch.
łmkmitł: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.
Łmołim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821]
Łmołis di Nusäxkämy, "The Potlatch of the nusäxkämy": Second moon after winter solstice. [805] Łhamkila, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nukiłs in the beginning of time.
łkłwädjut: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756] łkumkskta: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.
łmänkmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556] łmänsimtim: The turning over of a mountain.
Łe'ya: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
łqomkskta: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Qwiyai in the beginning of time. [765] łqia: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]
'Łsmdimut: Cannibal kusiut name used by the first settlers at Sałłia in the beginning of time.
Łsiqwam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher.
łuklai: Aversion.
Łukwala: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsmołł man.
2—Shamanistic power.
łułułmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787]
Łulqwa·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.
Łułukwahntmm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Thłcap-łław·a, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mixmixłulp: Leaf of salalberry.
mla·wadjut: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mlka: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mna, vocative, mnao: Child. [601] Mnakais: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mnk': Excreta.
mnmnts, vocative, mnmnntcän·i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person. [614]
mnskänmaxta: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211]
Mntlato·smm, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being. [764] Mstelos: Man mentioned in a song.
Mtlakila: Supernatural being who gives potency to sisook rites.
mtlststa: Grandiloquent expression used by the kukusiut with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776]* mtlalosäm: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775]
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mok': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mokwaks: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by kusiut initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
moqla: Lice. [825]
moqwila: Adolescent youth.
moxmoxk': Blue grouse.
moxmostlolkända: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] mu: Hand net for catching olachen. [227] mudcämbaksta: Yellow cedar stave decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
mustomax: Wrestling.
Mutan·a: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nain'akwas: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Nä'mu: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nän·: Grizzly bear. [825]
Nänäntlis: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time.
Nänätl: Kusiut name of a Nusłalst man.
Nänätskwi: One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
Nänalskwitl: One of the names of Mount Nusłalst as chief.
nän·imnt: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Naos: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [15.2]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nunutcuxnam: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ano°likwolsaix and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer.

[787] nunulliuts: Omen of death.

Nunutsmmkmem, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Ṫlitcāplilān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nunuxemlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Ḷomoqwa's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nunuxim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nunuxmeux: Kusiut name assumed by a Stuax woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nunuyaxum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qālāxm is obscure.

Nu'exwalamnaix, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nuṗāxsikel·um: Synonym for ṗāsutum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nupltānlsikān, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuḷoo·exta: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqāxlām·i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqāxmāts, "Place of Much Qāxmāts": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqeqāmis: Nusqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqiliagailn·a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuḷmuime·tl wa sonq°als: One year.

[828] nuqom: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuḷpik, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuḷsdjut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuḷsilq°: 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqslitsta: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqwaxots: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiutem and other important kusiut rites.

[777] nuq°antnikim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwikumlaix: Stuaok name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwilax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqwials: The upper heaven.

nuḷuna: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwxulioḷisān·i: A Stuax repository.

Nusālqantāmsta, "Where Alqantām Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nusāmgwa·nay: Cottonwood buds.

Nusāpānia'sta, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smaaan in the beginning of time.

nusālkamx: Canoe-maker.

Nusālnm: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nusḷalst.

[535] [869] nusāxkāmx: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

qālikw: Omen of death, generic term.
qālka: One of the berries, probably raspberry. [787]
qāmā, vocative, qāmao: Mother, term used by child.
Qāmālxem: Celebrated Carrier chief. [824]
Qāmelx: 1—Village on west bank of the Necleetsconnay, about three-quarters of a mile from the sea. [601]
2—Mountain behind the village.
Qāmspoxtāmem: am'hl-a name of a Kimsquit man.
qāmxāmila, vocative, qāmxāmilao: 1—Term used for spring salmon during the ritual following the first taking of the fish. [825]
2—Term used by smnq to human beings, who are like salmon to them.
3—Salmon, in the language of supernatural beings. [198]
qaouxta, "Rope Fastenings," i.e., something binding: The function of the "Bed Covering" and other presents given with a wife which bind her to her husband. [585]
qao·ltaks: Unidentified species of duck. [431] Qaominoaka: Kwakiutl term for "The Weeper," a female supernatural being.
Qapātus: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [825]
Qā·pxaok: ustāmx chief living soon after the beginning of time.
Qāqāt^a li: Herald who came with the first settlers to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Qāqos: Carrier pronunciation of Tcaqos, one of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
qālāxm: Kusiut with ability to produce a puppet-patron, cf. nunuyaxum.
qātitsta: Sweat-bath. [515] Qālmus: Slave mentioned in an ancient story.
qātsx': Star-fish. [825]
qāx: Rabbit.
qā·x: Salmon-berry. [824]
Qāxlawāls: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
qāxmāts: Unidentified plant.
qahm: Black cod. [825]
qam, "A Wiping of the Feet upon the Ground of Chiefs": Term applied to a deadly insult offered to persons of importance. [578] qamta: Wooden armour. [714]
Qankilst: 1—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Island off Rivers Inlet.
3—Island.
Qax·axwsila: One of the names of Raven as chief.
Qril: 1—One of the first men to settle at Siskiut in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
qe·ko: Unidentified migratory bird, black in colour. [825] Qeldjut: Scratch River, near Bella Bella. qi'aqa: One of the a'alk dances.
Qitlia, "Head": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
qskqālqālxostlaixqnam: A verbal exposure of what should have remained concealed, such as comments upon the slave ancestry of a person whose blot in this respect has been covered over by lavish giving. [578] [431] qkolulitsta: Presents distributed by a wife to strengthen her husband's seat, and thus prevent him from "wobbling." [556]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 her the secrets of the Kū'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair 776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kū'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kū'siût.'

Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kū'siût. When a man has 575 seen Anaūlikūtsai'ʜ sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a 776 Kū'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kū'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kū'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted 614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the Sisau'kʜ dances (see above), but belong to the 424 members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed [426] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower 575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kū'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kū'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kū'siût names,
[428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tl'akō'otl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[556] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'kʜ, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kū'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] ʟlaqō'tla (the Hā'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ō'lɛq (the Nū'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dā'tia (the Nō'ntsistatl of the Hē'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kū'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the ʟlaqō'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held 787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be
[266] killed, in order to serve as food for the ʟlaqō'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ʟlaqō'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn have to put the firewood. This opening is called K·awa'umsta, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Masmasala'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following kû'siut song refers to these deities: — 776 821

7:Boas E.5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[539]

Ai'mats tā mnatsai' tāsxts ti sō'nx·tsgī t'aix.
Aiēlx tā mnatsai' ōL ti S'ałwalō'szms ti Sōnx· t'aix.
Sk·ī ya'lx·tux ti sī'lxnō tā mnatsai'.
Sk·a anōg·a wa exemē'x ti K·awa'umtask· ti Sōnx· t'aix· tā mnatsai.

("My child perished like the sky when it broke.
Go to S'ałwalō'szm of the sky, my child!
Gladden my heart, my child!
Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'nēkō'ōL or Qenk·ī'lst, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called AłēP!ālaxtnaix·. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Snēnik"pstak·imtōLs," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called SēLsāts, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the kû'siut ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kōLk"LōLē'mx·). It is called Asiutā'nem. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 There is a special deity who initiates the shamans. His name is LALA-[756] IA'IL or Sxai'exoax (Plate XI, Fig. 9). He lives in the woods. He carries a wooden wand wound with red cedar-bark, which he swings in his hands, producing a singing noise. Around his neck he wears a large ring made of strips of bear-skin and red cedar-bark. He sometimes plays in ponds which are believed to be in certain mountains. When he jumps into the water, it boils. When a woman meets him, she begins to menstruate; when a man meets him, his nose begins to bleed. When initiating a person, he touches the chest of the latter with his wand, and paints his face with the design of the rainbow. Then he swings his wand, the noise of which causes the person who hears it to faint. He creates sexual desire in man [787] and animals. A shaman who was initiated by this being told me that he very often sees LALAIA'IL, who tells him who will die and who will fall sick. Sometimes he sees that the body of a person is black. Others he sees dancing on their heads. These are signs that they will die at an early date. I obtained from this man the description of the visit to the country of the ghosts, quoted before (p. 38). He told me that when reaching the country of the dead, he saw the ghosts of his deceased relatives sitting in the house. When they saw him, they began to weep, and said, "Don't come here. We don't want to see you so soon." While they were speaking to him, the chief's speaker entered the house, and called all the people to come to the dancing-house of the ghosts. One of the ghosts painted his face black and white, and tied long strips of white and red cedar-bark in his hair. The people were called four times. Then they started to go to the dancing-house. The entrance to the door was over a narrow plank. When he had just stepped on the plank, he suddenly saw LALAIA'IL, with his large neck-ring made of red cedar-bark and strips of black bear-skin, who took hold of him, turned him round, and told him to return to his own country, because, if he should once enter the dancing-house, he would not be able to return. Then he revived; and from that time on, LALAIA'IL was his supernatural helper.

A. Jacobsen describes this spirit as follows:[1] — 776 "The most prominent among the spirits of the shamans is Kle-klati-e'il 756 [LALAIA'IL]. He lives in the woods, where the youth who intends to be initiated tries to find him. When the spirit meets him, the youth faints. When he recovers, he begins to sing a song, the tune and words of which have been given to him by the spirit. Now he has become a shaman, who uses this song in all his incantations; but he does not retain it throughout life, because he meets his guardian spirit almost every year, and then he receives new songs. The Indians believe that Kle-klati-e'il has human shape, but he is clothed in cedar-bark, and wears a great many rings of cedar-bark.

[113] [1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 104.

8;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kū'siut. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kū'siut." 575 773 776 535

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kū'siut. When a man has seen Anaūlikuts'ai'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kū'siut. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kū'siut lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kū'siut are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisau'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kū'siut is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kū'siut name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akō'oL. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisau'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kū'siut have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the ƛaxō'La (the hā'mata'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'lEx (the nū'LmaL of the Kwakiutl), and the dā'tia (the nō'ntsistalaL of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kū'siut novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 614 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the ƛaxō'La is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the ƛaxō'La. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ƛaxō'La order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [152] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [756] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ELAXŌ'LA dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [292] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'ā'LPsta (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of BaxbakuālanuXsī'waē of the Kwakiutl. Some ELAXŌ'LA do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and [266] devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The ELAXŌ'LA has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his [525] initiation he must not
[834] gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
MASK OF THE S'Ā'LPSTA.
Bi'ixula.
Cat. No. 19[illegible], U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The ō'LEX (the laugher) and the dā'tia (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The ō'LEX "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The dā'tia carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The ō'LEX and the dā'tia, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the kū'siut, for instance, when 688 the ELAXŌ'LA gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [692] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-688 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 754 to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-756 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go to the homes of their friends in the village; it is a matter of convenience, not of ritual. 556* [574]

In the evening, there may be no rite of any kind, but X often invites everyone to his house for the performance of non-ceremonial dances. The singers strike up one of his susaok or a'alk (I, p. 273) tunes and he dances to it. Then a tune belonging to one of his relatives is beaten out, and he too dances. After several have thus performed, a meal is served and all disperse. No supernatural beings are in attendance, hence there is no solemnity to the occasion; the evening's rites merely serve to show the guests the dances owned by their host and his family. 535 556*

As each party of guests arrives the same procedure is repeated. X provides food for those who have assembled from day to day, so he anxiously awaits the last-comers. When at last they come the guests from all other towns are in their allotted sections of X's house, and are free to make gibes at the tardiness of those latest in appearing. Occasionally, hard feelings are engendered in this way, although it is an established custom to mock at the last to arrive. They seat themselves and a small amount of food is given them. 556* 574 [628]

RITUAL CARRIED OUT BY THE GUESTS

Two youths, chosen by X for the purpose, sprinkle eagle down over the heads of all those present, as far as possible blowing it first over the chiefs. It serves as a token of good-will, and marks also the ceremonial nature of the occasion. Then a leading susaok, perhaps a siki, stands up and says in effect: 556* [788] [237] [575]

"Thank you for coming. You are welcome. We thank you for coming to witness what X has done. He is delighted to have you here, because he has lost many of his relatives and wishes to perpetuate their memory. They would be grieved if he did not do so."

An elaborate meal is now served by a number of young men. [264]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ever object was desired, and then set in a window of his house so that the sun could fall on one uncovered end. The owner firmly believes that this stone has brought him money on various occasions, and will do so again, though whether he expects the coins to be found inside of the wrapping, or merely to come to him in the course of trade is questionable. According to Bella Coola belief, they ought to appear beside the stone, but as this man attributes any good fortune to it, he never has any difficulty in proving its powers. 777 823

This stone is also used as a means of increasing the efficacy of prayer. When its owner washes ceremonially in the river before eating in the morning, he rubs it over his body as if it were soap and requests it to make him strong, make him well, grant him his desires, and so forth. [515] [789]

Shamanism

More important to the Bella Coola than any other manifestation of the supernatural is that power which makes an individual either an ālukwala or an āskankots. The former is a person who, owing to ability granted him by a supernatural being, is able to perform miraculous feats, especially in curing the sick; the latter is one with similar powers obtained from a ghost.[3] It is impossible to translate either of these terms accurately; the designation "shaman" is accordingly used in this monograph to describe both types of supernaturally endowed individuals. The most common and most important method of obtaining such power is from a living supernatural being; a person receiving the boon in this manner will be termed "shaman," and one empowered by a ghost will be known as "shaman from the dead." 104 756* [787]* [788] ●

The Bella Coola believe that long ago men were so much more powerful than at present, and so close to the supernatural, that all were virtually shamans. The prowess and adventures 756* 773 538

[3]Ghosts are, of course, supernatural, but as the Bella Coola distinguish between shamans whose powers are derived from these two sources, it is accurate to follow their example.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and those who have knowledge of them are sorcerers. Even 754 a man of this kind is not outside the pale of society unless he [755] practises indiscriminately; members of the kusiut society, for [789] example, frequently employ one to kill an individual who has [575] offended against their regulations (I, p. 740). A man is regarded as a sorcerer not on account of his knowledge but on account of the ends to which he applies it.

Closely related to, if not identical with, the belief that 784 certain consequences follow certain acts, is the conviction that the infraction of ritual prohibitions brings disaster. There are many such taboos, for so they may be called. Though most important at the critical periods of life, puberty, pregnancy, while observing ceremonial chastity, and so forth, there are many which must be obeyed at all times.

Restrictions pertaining to the river and regulations at birth and death have already been described. Like magical acts, these often verge on the religious owing to the belief that disregard offends supernatural beings. On the whole, however, it seems as if most infractions bring their own punishment without intervention of higher powers, a concept which throws [789] taboos into the category of magic rather than of religion, with the ever-present proviso that the two cannot be separated entirely from one another. With them may be associated a [788] number of ritual acts connected with fishing and hunting in which, though the element of propitiation is not absent, it is satisfied by the performance of definite rites. Finally, there have been included in this chapter a number of unimportant beliefs, the psychology of which cannot be analysed.

What is the basis of these rites defined as Medicine, Magic, 154 and Taboo? As already described, the Bella Coola either do 771 not explain their origin and function, or merely state that 789 Alquntam is responsible, as he is for every activity of life. This is unsatisfactory because many which, viewed scientifically, have neither curative nor causative power, produce the desired end. A child who has been "made" a carpenter during infancy, usually grows up to be proficient in that profession; the person

4: McIlwraith E-5 (1944-1949) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533
756

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The supernatural one held me in his carefully cupped hands. The theme is worded as if the shaman were speaking and describing the way he was carried away to some far-off spot for treatment.

Fragment of a Song Used by Ālkuziyastem, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Ānuxkhomalhuddlxlx	eiyumaxeyo·ay^{w}alx	dawaqmiaiaulim	dāhuziadai
Laughed	Song^{w}(b)	when they(c)started	my rite as shaman(d).

[WOMAN'S CHANT]

Kalxuxlulas
See how wretched I am(e).

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 42a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lazue Charlie.

(b) That is: The sky laughed. Shamans often use grandiloquent expressions such as this.

(c) Refers to supernatural beings in general.

(d) It is not known how this woman received her power except that it was from a salmon.

(e) The singer entered fully into the spirit of this song, and ended his singing by calling out these words and chattering his teeth as shamans are wont to do.

Fragment of a Song Used by Kasiyat, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Sanxtkila	Sanxtkila	dimānxtudai	xaxi
The sun(b),	the sun,	is our father	(c)!

The rest of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[821] (b) That is the sun's name as chief.

[796] (c) The meaning of this word is unknown. When the song was sung, the people used to follow the shaman to the river and throw water over themselves four times, accompanied by the crying out of this word.

[788] (d) It seems highly probable that incoherent songs such as this were commonly used by shamans. Kasiyat herself is supposed to have derived her power from Tlīnxpilāx-a, but no explanation could be learnt for the rite of washing.

The most fragmentary of all shaman songs are those used by snāxem. Although the last survivor of this type of visionary died many years ago, all the older Bella Coola state

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 subject. He does not often appear to mankind, though every
* 776 Bella Coola knows of his existence.

Another supernatural craft is that of Winwina.[17] It, too, [579] brings salmon and berries from their home in the extreme west. Knowledge of this canoe is limited to certain families who own stories connected with it, and it likewise serves as patron for kusiut dancers. Although both Noākynum and Winwina can [761] easily destroy human beings, they usually pay no attention to them, and have even been known to bestow supernatural power. Winwina will be described in greater detail in connection with kusiut dances.

The third canoe is termed Wināt di Sā-ldjo-ts, "The War-Party of the Tide," or Wināt di Qala, "The War-Party of the Ocean." Its home is among small islands in the ocean. It is a large canoe, manned by invisible submarine beings, who are able to drive it at tremendous speed wherever they wish. The members of the crew are not in themselves dangerous, but the craft is greatly feared because it always transports Sxlo-xf'. This supernatural creature is about the size of a seal, brown in colour, and of jelly-like substance; it lies in the boat immediately aft of the place from which water is bailed and constantly rolls to and fro, like an animated mass of repulsive jelly. Poison is constantly spreading from Sxlo-xf', and anyone placed in the canoe soon becomes weak, begins to shake like Sxlo-xf', and presently dies. This canoe is a source of danger to those with whom it may come in contact, and an even greater peril indirectly. The poison emanating from 773 Sxlo-xf' kills clams and mussels in the vicinity and renders
* 776 them unfit for food. In some cases they die at once, with 825 open shells, and anyone finding them knows what has hap-761 pened and does not eat them, but in other cases they live for a considerable period though saturated with the venom. If [756] anyone eats these shellfish, he becomes flabby and jelly-like, and soon dies, unless a powerful shaman can conquer the
* 776 poison. Sometimes when a party is encamped on the shore
● 789

[17] Cf. Boas, p. 38.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of the ocean, one of the members is awakened by the rhythmical beat of the paddles of the War-Party of the Tide. If he is wise he at once calls out, "Hi . . . ." This serves to keep the War-Party at a distance, and to waken the rest of the party who hastily throw on the fire objects which have been in contact with the human body. 776* 789

Many stories are told by the Bella Coola of the appearance of the War-Party of the Tide. The following can be regarded as typical. 539 776*

A few years ago, a hunter named Ouikstl, and his wife, Ăuqwiăls, were encamped on Labouchere Channel at the point known as Nuxqul, near the Hot Springs. They were discussing a private matter when, to the amazement of both, their dog, who was with them, joined in the conversation. This unnatural behaviour should have warned them of approaching danger and they ought to have killed the animal, as indeed the woman desired to do. But Ouikstl foolishly refused and presently they lay down to sleep. In some mysterious manner the dog was able to summon the War-Party of the Tide, which carried the two away. When they awoke they were in the dread canoe, and the poison from Xalo-al' was spreading over them. They were powerless and could only lie still as the canoe travelled up South Bentinck Arm, circled the island near Tăl-ia at its head, and three other islands on the return journey. The two were put ashore at their camp, apparently unharmed, but they knew the danger to which they had been exposed and fled next day to Kimsquit. The woman told a shaman what had happened and accepted his somewhat drastic treatments. Consequently, though she showed signs of insanity, she was cured. The headstrong Ouikstl, on the other hand, refused to pay attention to the danger; within a few weeks he became crazy, and then died.

Quite another category of Bella Coola supernatural beings consists of ghosts. These beings, once human, have passed by death into the ranks of the supernatural. Their home is the land below the earth, where they live like mortals except that everything is strange and ethereal. In form they resemble human beings, but their faces are green and weird. They can visit the land of the living at will, and make their presence known by whistling, which is their language. Their actions are the reverse of those of humans; for example, they often 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 talons resembling, but larger than, those of an eagle. It has no tail. The great strength of these animals rests in the fact that their eyes revolve in their sockets, so that, when reversed, piercing beams shoot forth which strike senseless anyone on whom they fall. Having thus stunned its victim, the sminiq picks him up and stuffs him into a broad-mouthed basket, carried on the back. It is provided with spikes inclined inwards and downwards so that a person thrust within cannot climb out. Human beings are carried in this way to the beast's lair, a cave in the mountains, where they are devoured [825] at leisure. Wolves always accompany sminiq; in fact, they may almost be termed attendants upon them (see vol. II, chap. v). Like other supernatural creatures, sminiq are impervious [789] to most mortal weapons, but there is one method of overcoming them. If a hunter cut himself on the under side of his right leg so that the blood flows freely, and smears a bullet with this, it can kill a sminiq. Similar success is gained by biting the tongue and coating the bullet with blood so obtained.

Another animal which is rendered powerless by the same charm is the hoqs. This beast somewhat resembles a man, its hands especially, and the region around the eyes being distinctly human. It walks on its hind legs, in a stooping posture, its long arms swinging below the knees; in height it is rather less than the average man. The entire body, except the face, is covered with long hair, the growth being most profuse on the chest which is large, corresponding to the great strength of the animal. The most peculiar feature of the animal is its penis, which is so long that it must be rolled up and carried in the arms when the creature is walking; it terrifies its enemies by striking tree-trunks and breaking branches with its uncoiled organ. It is said that a woman was once drawing water 539 776 at the edge of a stream when a hoqs, concealed on the other shore, extended its penis under the water to the further bank and held intercourse with her. The contact rendered her powerless, as if turned to stone; she could neither flee nor remove the organ. Her companions tried unsuccessfully to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 and gaping holes in the earth. In such regions no fire can be [778] lit. The last known area of this kind is up the river behind Green Bay, about four miles from the sea. So far as could be learnt, kähink' have never assisted Bella Coola in any way nor played any part in the social life of the community. They are feared on account of their supernatural power, but appear so seldom that they are practically disregarded.

More common than the last, and accordingly more important, is the haohao. It is an enormous bird with bony wings and long, flexible beak. As it flies, the wings rattle violently, and its note, an oft repeated "Hao, hao, hao," can be heard for miles. These birds are said to have been numerous in former [535] years, and are well known to all Bella Coola. Masked figures [575] representing them are often used at kusiut dances. The haohao
761 is feared for its practice of inserting its long beak into the rectum of anyone sleeping carelessly in the forest and drawing
* 776 forth his entrails. This can be prevented by standing upright [789] a staff, such as all hunters carry, before going to sleep.
[539]

A popular story states that once, not many years ago, a number of men camped at the edge of a canyon near their home, without taking this precaution. One of them was awakened by a slight movement of one of his companions and, looking up, he saw the long neck and beak of a haohao projecting over the rim of the canyon and sucking his partner's entrails. The convulsive shiver of the stricken man had awakened him. With his bow he shot an arrow into the bird's neck, causing it to disappear over the brink. Presently the long beak reappeared and he discharged another arrow with the same result. Again and again this happened until the attack ceased at dawn. The hunter assumed that a single bird had been repeatedly attacking, but when he looked over the edge of the cliff, he saw below a number of carcasses, each with an arrow in its throat. The canyon must have been a roosting place for the birds. His companions seemed still asleep, but when he investigated he found that all were dead; only the slightly enlarged orifice showed how they had been killed.

* 776 No haohao has been seen within recent years, but one infor-789 mant and her husband heard them on the south side of the Bella Coola River about two miles from the sea. They would have

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

been frightened at any time but nightfall increased their fears. 776 *
Their dogs heard the sound and howled in dread. The woman 789 ● threw on their fire several soiled blankets, her only pair of shoes, and some dry salmon, which all supernatural beings [825] abhor. Then she and her husband fled home, waving lanterns to and fro and firing musket shots in all directions. The birds did not follow them, but they considered themselves fortunate to reach Bella Coola unmolested.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural 776 * animals just described are fairly exact; they know their appearance, what to expect, and what to do if one is encountered.
In addition to these, they assume the existence of monsters of indefinite form which they term snusx. Any supernatural creature, a bäbınk' for example, is spoken of as a snusx in [184] general, not specific, classification. Consequently, what one Bella Coola may describe as a snusx is given a distinctive name by someone else with wider knowledge. As far as could be learnt, there is no designation other than snusx for creatures [825] which move from the ocean in April to clear the way for salmon and spend the summer in the lakes of the interior, or beneath the ice of glaciers. They can assume various forms, sometimes even human, though they usually appear as giant, hairless, bear-like creatures with short legs and brown skin. Their eyes are large, round, and glass-like. In whatever form these crea- 761 tures may appear, they are almost certain to bring disaster to 776 * the beholder. One of the haunts of snusx is beneath the glacier on Mount Oqwan·i, behind the small mountain which rises [778] behind Qomqo·ts, on the south side of the Bella Coola River about half a mile from the sea. It is said that only a few years ago a white man, having heard of these creatures, went to that place with a number of Bella Coola. All the latter were able to hear the roaring of the beasts, louder than the whistle of a steamer, but the white man seemed deaf to it, though the power of the snusx had affected him, for he died on the way back to the village.

Other snusx are said to live near Kimsquit. The father of [778]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 seized and carried to the shore. He had thought that it would
* 776 be easy to free himself, but he found it impossible and was carried under the sea. He bit frantically at the enfolding arms, until he succeeded in freeing his own, with which he pushed up the beak of the octopus, thus killing it. He rose to the surface and returned home none the worse.

[825] The Bella Coola do not profess to know all the animals of the world; and if they see a strange one, they assume it to be one known to their ancestors though unfamiliar to them.
539 Since any unknown animal is considered to have supernatural
761 power, due care must be exercised when one is seen. The fol-
* 776 lowing incident illustrates this point.

825 The mother's brother of an informant worked for some thirty years for a white man in Victoria. His employer once sent him to see a turtle which was confined in a pool in a basement preparatory to being killed for a banquet. As soon as he saw it, he said:

"My parents in Bella Coola told me of such a creature."

A few days before Christmas the turtle was cut up and displayed on four platters in the window of the store; the Bella Coola saw it, and thus learned that it had been killed. The same night a sore appeared on his wrist, and by the next day it was large and running. He said to his employer:

"In a few days I will be dead. Do not grieve for me. The sight of such supernatural creatures is too powerful for Indians; I survived one experience, but twice has been too much for me and I will die."

His employer wisely sent him to a white doctor who cured him, although the scar remained. Years later the man returned to Bella Coola where he displayed the mark as proof of his story. A few weeks later he died, and the Bella Coola are firmly convinced that his death was due to his having seen the turtle many years before.

* 776 Although the forests of British Columbia abound with
● 789 supernatural animals of enormous power, the attitude of the [781] Bella Coola hunter who penetrates into lonely places is not one of constant fear. It is true that he may meet danger at any turn, but danger is part and parcel of human life, and he is by no means defenceless. He dreads the powers possessed by creatures of another plane, but they for their part dread certain human objects. Clothing which has been worn for so long that it has become steeped with the emanations of its human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a sninq, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings.[29]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind.

776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Ālquntām created men and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural

776* 825 773

[29] This matter will be described more fully in connection with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xi.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 forefathers of the Bella Coola had the ability to talk with 825 animals and birds. The men of today, who realize that such [773] intercourse is not now possible, assume that they have degenerated from the golden age of their first ancestors. On the other hand, they see no reason to believe that beasts have undergone a similar change, and take it for granted that they have continued in the supernatural, or semi-supernatural state in which they were created by Ałquntäm. It is true that man is stronger than most animals, but that does not affect the attitude with which the latter are regarded, for supernatural and powerful are not synonymous terms. Ałquntäm decreed that they should serve as food for mankind, and they have since obeyed his command, but the Bella Coola do not consider themselves undisputed lords of creation. They fear snusx, snunq, and other creatures of great power, but they know how to avoid them; similarly, deer and mountain goats fear men, but they are not entirely defenceless, because their speed and agility give them advantages corresponding to those of men in combat with beasts stronger than themselves. All living creatures use the weapons with which they are equipped. For example, when a mountain goat eludes a hunter by scaling a precipice too steep for its pursuer, the latter considers it has escaped through supernatural climbing ability; whereas the goat has merely used the power granted by Ałquntäm. Like-
• [789] wise, when a snusx or a snunq is outwitted by the use of soiled clothing or smoked salmon roe, the means, unnatural to it, are natural to the human being employing them. Men and animals alike regard each other's weapons as supernatural.

In consequence of these beliefs, the attitude of the Bella Coola towards animals is fundamentally different from that of white men. They regard them as possessing human mentality, and even the ability to assume human form if they so desire. In fact, they believe that animals merely appear to them in the shape of beasts, but can change to human, or other form and behave accordingly whenever they wish to do [756] so. The degeneration of mankind has made it impossible for

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

concerning the danger of near approach to this creature: 539

Ḱwilais was a man of mixed lineage, Kimsquit and Ṗa·s, near Newitte. With several companions he was gathering berries when he stepped into a hole and felt numerous tiny creatures crawling over his legs. Looking down, he saw that they were small snakes, that had just been hatched from a Mother of Snakes. He fled, terrified, pursued by the reptiles, which he managed to keep off to some extent by brushing behind him a branch of spiny swamp gooseberry, a known deterrent. When he had out-distanced the snakes he called his companions, told them of his adventure, and returned home. There he repeated the tale. Though Ḱwilais did not know it, many of the snakes had succeeded in entering his stomach. Presently he began to swell; his body became larger and larger until he was in danger of bursting. The reptiles within were breeding rapidly. Luckily, one of his fellow villagers knew the proper remedy. A raised bed was made for the sufferer about five feet from the ground where Ḱwilais stretched himself on a number of thorny branches, while his friends built a fire of devil's club and swamp gooseberry twigs so that he was fumigated in the smoke. Then, to give greater potency, they cast on the flames soiled clothing and pounded cedar-bark pads stained with menstrual blood; even this was of no avail, so finally a woman squeezed out into a vessel some of her menstrual blood which Ḱwilais drank. This killed the snakes. The patient began to vomit, emitting a mass of wriggling serpents, and at once began to grow thinner, soon regaining his normal condition. Had he not been able to eject the reptiles, he would have died.

776 * 825 755 [789] [753] [841]

Ḱwilais was not the only one to have this unpleasant experience. Many others have suffered in the same way, but in no case has anyone been able to feel the snakes at the actual place or time of entry.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the power possessed by animals are clearly shown by their attitude with regard to killing them. Man is immortal, so are animals. Ałquntäm decreed that beasts and birds should serve as food for mankind, but it is only their clothing, their worthless "blanket of flesh," as the Bella Coola express it, which they give to hunters. In the autumn leaves appear to die, but every spring they are reborn. Similarly, when an animal is slain, it merely discards its visible self while its spirit[21] ascends

825 775 224 [774]

[21] Xumdnods, see vol. I, p. 94.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[775] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to [774] earth again to reanimate a new body.[22] Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an [785] animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ashes across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves [183] [22]There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 824 (II, p. 196). In this way the belief is kept before the eyes of the Bella Coola, but it is not a matter of prime importance in their lives. Rather contradictory is the concept that though each plant lack individual life, there is a supernatural mother of each species, corresponding in general terms to the Mother of Snakes described in the last section. As one informant expressed it:

"If there is no mother, how can a plant grow?"

These mothers are assumed to live beneath the ground. Occasionally, one of them has been discovered. Not many years ago, a number of women were collecting bracken roots when one which had been gathered began to turn into a snake. The women were alarmed and puzzled at this strange phenomenon. As they stood watching, the ground in front of them fell away as if there had been an earthquake, and they realized that the snake-root had been the mother of the plant. Without further fear they cooked and ate it.

776 823 Stones, too, and mountains were made by Ăłquntăm; consequently they have supernatural abilities and can understand the words and actions of mortals. When a wise man passes close beneath a precipitous mountain he always says to it:

"Please make yourself firm."

Most mountains, when requested politely, refrain from sliding and killing those passing beneath.

539 776 823 In former days mountains in many cases rose to meet hunters, and sometimes turned completely over. The Bella Coola are not sure whether this was caused by the mountain itself, or by a snuuq within. Wise hunters carry ropes with them when they penetrate into deep valleys, and when they feel the first tipping of a mountain they leap for a convenient tree, grasp it with their legs, heads downwards, and tie themselves in that position. Slowly the mountain rises and turns over, but, if the ropes do not break, the hunters suffer no ill effects. After a varying interval the mountain returns to its [789] normal position. This reversal can be hastened if a man bites

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 539 776 823

his left cheek until the blood flows, takes also a mouthful of his own urine, and spits out the mixture.

The following instance of this belief was recorded. [789]

A Bella Coola chief and a number of followers were once at Kwatna where they had been gambling for stakes of mountain goat grease. Two of the men had lost their supply, so they went into the mountains between Kwatna and Restoration Bay to replenish it. They saw two goats, killed them, and at once two more appeared in the same place; these they also slew. When a fifth and sixth goat appeared and were likewise dispatched, one of the hunters tried to restrain his comrade, saying that such phenomenal success must be due to supernatural power which they should not abuse. They stopped firing, cut the grease from their quarry, and started on the return journey. Presently the mountain began to tilt upwards before their feet. They had no ropes, and almost in despair concealed themselves in a small rock shelter. Their dogs too felt the movement and barked in terror. Fortunately, the mountain did not rise more than a few feet and soon subsided, so that the men escaped. [525]

The attitude of the Bella Coola to supernatural powers of all kinds may be termed a doctrine of Opportunism. Supernatural beings abound and constantly play a part in the affairs of mortals. An alert and bold man can take advantage of these opportunities and obtain assistance, but he who hesitates is indeed lost. Certain types of assistance are most commonly granted to orphans and other unfortunates; accounts of these belong to the realm of mythology and will be described in a later chapter. On the whole the supernatural ones do not show discrimination in conferring boons, and the man who is quick to take advantage of them is the one to whom success comes. 776 [736]

Supernatural Elements in Human Beings

The Bella Coola believe that in the human body itself there are certain supernatural elements. Neither sticks nor stones can move, because they lack these attributes possessed by men and animals. Considering the firm belief of the Bella Coola in the omnipresence of the supernatural, it is not surprising that they should ascribe the phenomena of health and sickness, 774

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 small particles of food on a fire; these become large when they 782 reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Ānukäldimut kuskao," "This is to make straight your road, beloved one."

[756] The needs and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, realized that food placed on the ground does not reach the [372] land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire sink through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made [753] with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach-aches and other ailments.

782 Other instances, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient feature is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a [789] large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religion proper, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. I, chap. XI).

THE OBSERVANCE OF CEREMONIAL CHASTITY

831 In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have 785 yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to occur. This is by the practice of sxetsta, ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is neces-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

831 785 ence was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chas- [773] tity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years [789] ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a tombstone for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went seal hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his [789] boat, none the worse for his mishap. The men who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella [124] Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only [783] potent in itself, but it is also the favourite means by which a man can cleanse himself of the impurities of human existence so that he finds favour with the supernatural.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

428 influence of a chief is usually sufficient to settle claims as to 553 which of his brothers shall receive which name. Even if none [578] of them is a chief, some one of them is certain to have greater influence than the others. If a dead man has no sons, his daughters can assume his names, which they may transmit to their children. Failing both sons and daughters, a man's brothers and sisters are his heirs, as usual, the one of influence being the one who really arranges matters.[6] None the less, it [614] must be emphasized that if the members of the immediate family are slow to validate a dead man's names, they may be taken by any member of the ancestral family.

463 In former days it was customary to create a "remem-869 brancer" to preserve the ancestral myth. The older and more influential members of the ancestral family would choose an [614] intelligent young relative to whom to relate the myth in great detail. One informant described how her mother, the last official "remembrancer," had been instructed by her grandfather. The old man had been accustomed to take his granddaughter, a girl about twelve years of age, to bed with him, and whisper to her the myth, with his hand pressed over her anus to prevent escape of his words. At the conclusion of the recitation [789] he always spat in her ears to make the words stick. The members of the ancestral family, recognizing that the "remembrancer" was the person best acquainted with the myth, were wont to consult him or her about it, and, of course, about the [553] names embodied in it. A "remembrancer" had no authority to decree who should receive names, but appeals were often made to him, and a tactful individual was frequently able to settle disputes.

578 Considering the extreme fluidity of the whole system it is 428 surprising that quarrels are not more common. These are limited by the system of wills, through which a man bequeaths
614 his most valuable personal property, especially his intangible 553 property in kusiut name-prerogatives (II, p. 2). Ancestral

[6]At the present time the same principle governs the disposal of houses and gardens on the reserve.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 assistant blows a whistle, sounding like an eagle. When the 575 figure has disappeared into the back-room, the heralds discuss with one another in a loud tone of voice how that was the form [535] in which the initiate's ancestor appeared long ago. At the present time there is uncertainty concerning the proper ritual connected with the appearance of the tutwinam at this juncture.

A senior susaok then calls on X to bring forward goods, "to shield our eyes from the supernatural being." These articles, part of which may have been provided by relatives of the initiate, are piled beside those brought forward by X's wife, which may also have come from the same source.

[535] The singers strike up the second song of the initiate; again he appears and dances to it, then vanishes into the rear room.

The two assortments of goods are now distributed. First, those provided by X are presented to the singers who composed [465] the songs for the initiates, to the carpenters who made the masks, the heralds, and announcers, and any others who have assisted; if any remain they are presented to the stranger-guests. Then the goods which are "mats for the dancer's feet" are distributed, entirely to the guests, and are said to have "become nothing" or to have "flowed away" in the transaction. Neither set of goods is returnable. These presents validate in the eyes of the guests, the right of the initiate to membership in the susaok society.

Then a second, third, or fourth neophyte is called out, one at a time, and the same procedure is repeated.[31] In distributing the goods, efforts are made to remember those guests who received nothing at the first distribution.

Toward dawn, one of the important chiefs, it is immaterial which one, calls out:

"I want a siki."

[789] It is understood that for this part of the ceremony a foreign expert is required, and one such comes forward according to previous arrangement. He retires to the back-room and re-

[31] Though desirable, it is seldom possible for all the initiates to dance on the same night.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

turns, clad in his ceremonial costume, including a long cape with pockets. With him come the four or five young men who have just finished dancing. The singers beat time furiously with their sticks, and the siki whirls round and round, working himself into a frenzy with twists and gyrations. Gradually, he approaches one of the initiates, and pretends to pluck something from his body. As he opens his hands the spectators see that there is something in them, what exactly, they cannot distinguish. Only those who are susaok understand that, whatever it is, it has been palmed from one of his cape pockets. He pretends to throw this object upwards, at the same time slipping it back into his cape. As the article is, theoretically, thrown aloft the sound of whistling is heard, which grows weaker and weaker till it finally ceases. Meanwhile the heralds discourse loudly with one another about how the "eagle" or whatever it is, has been extracted, and is now returning above. The same procedure is repeated for the other initiates. This concludes the night's ceremony. Food is distributed and the people disperse. 556* 575 789

The employment of a foreign siki to expel the power from the initiates is necessary since this particular prerogative is not native to Bella Coola. Formerly the expulsion was done in the back-room without any elaborate ceremony. This rite marks the admission of initiates into the susaok society although they cannot yet leave the back-room. It must be understood, however, that a youth may be initiated several times, on each occasion receiving new songs and perhaps a different mask. In this way his prestige as a susaok is increased, and the son of a powerful chief will often be initiated ten or more times. A mask so acquired is preserved in concealment as the personal property of the owner who may use it at potlatches on future occasions. It will be the guise in which a dead person returns to visit the living. After being used for this purpose, a mask may be burnt, or willed to a near relative of the deceased, who slightly alters the painting before using it himself. [424] [177] 556* 575 [422] [532] [428]

It is somewhat difficult to understand the attitude of those [781]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 watching either the masked dancer or a representation of the 575 deceased. Usually, the feet are plainly visible, and the spec-781 tators cannot fail to realize they are looking, not at an eagle or other supernatural creature, but at a man. Yet no one ever expresses this doubt. It must be remembered that all are firmly convinced of the close relationship existing between denizens of the land above and members of the ɬsaok society. To the uninitiated this is proved by the whistling. They regard the figures as supernaturally endowed representations of those beings with whom the participants are able to come in contact. A sophisticated Bella Coola likened their attitude to that of a man praying before images of the saints, fully realizing that these are only inanimate statues, yet mentally experiencing a feeling of close contact with the saints themselves. Another expressed it thus:

"The uninitiated are trained to believe what they see. It would be most improper for them to voice any doubts, in fact they do not have any, so firm is their belief in the supernatural power of the members of the ɬsaok society."

This last appears to be the real explanation. Everyone must have his or her doubts, but each is afraid to express them, realizing that so doing would not only offend the chiefs, as individuals, but the supernatural powers with whom they are in touch, which is obvious from the whistling that accompanies the ceremony. It appears that the uninitiated have no idea how this is produced.

CONCLUDING CEREMONIES AND OBSERVATIONS

*556 The number of ɬsaok initiates is usually too great to allow 575 all to dance on one night. If possible, this is done; but if not, on the following evening more of the initiates perform in the manner already described. The distribution of presents and the expulsion of power from the young ɬsaok also follow the [789] same lines. If many of them are secluded, three, or even four, nights may be required until the last one has danced, and the last cleansing has been performed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

There now remains only the necessity of removing from the house itself the supernatural power with which it is firmly believed to have been impregnated throughout the many weeks of the ceremony. Should this not be done, it would be so strong that only sisaok could thenceforth live in it, and no kusiut rite could be performed therein. One of the senior chiefs, acting on X's behalf, requests as many siki as are present to go to the back-room. At the same time a drum is beaten slowly. The siki call out loudly, in unison, hoip four times. The whistles sound from the back-room with ever-lessening intensity, as if the supernatural being, whose voice they are, were going away. It is said that this practice has been comparatively recently adopted from Rivers Inlet: there used to be nothing of the kind. The siki re-emerge, and one of them stands behind the fire with his stick which he beats on the floor and calls on the audience to shout with him, "hi . . ." This is done four times. It serves to purify the house from the supernatural power with which it has been saturated. The people then disperse, without food.

Goods from the general store are reserved to pay these men for their services, and also for cleansing the initiates from the powers with which they have been imbued, a rite that takes place the following morning in the presence of several siki alone. The initiates are brought from the back-room and seated in a close circle between the door and the fire.* A foreign siki is chosen by X to perform the actual cleansing rite. He has been asked beforehand and has come provided with a long pole and some soiled clothing. It is immaterial whose this is, provided that it has been in contact with a human body; the most potent articles are catamenial cedar-bark pads.

The siki covers the young men with a large cedar-bark mat. Then he fastens the clothing or pads to his pole and holds the end in the fire until they are smouldering. Then he swings it four times over the heads of the initiates and throws the stick with the objects back on the fire. In some cases four sets of cloths are used. This rite, which is regarded as very important, frees the lads from the supernatural powers with which they have been endowed, and permits them finally to leave the back-room and return to normal life, just as their earlier cleansing freed them from the tutwinam. During their period of seclusion no initiate can perform a kusiut ceremony of any kind. The supernatural beings of the two societies, though closely akin, are yet independent, and it would be unthinkable for a man to enter into contact with the two at the same time, unless he should be the owner of a rare prerogative enabling him to do so. Only a few men have the right, which undoubtedly was derived either from the Bella Bella or the people of Rivers Inlet.

*Behind the fire according to some informants.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

X pays the functioning siki with new clothing. This completes the whole ceremony. The guests either return home or adjourn to some other house where a potlatch is taking place, but no rites mark their departure.

Such, then, are the principal features of the Bella Coola potlatch. Without making a careful comparison of its features with those of neighbouring tribes, the following points stand out with great clearness:

(1) The basic concepts of the potlatch in Bella Coola are the same as those of the rite practised elsewhere on the coast.

(2) A potlatch has not the same importance at Bella Coola as it has on other parts of the coast, especially among the Kwakiutl. All informants stated repeatedly that they did not carry their potlatches to the same lengths as did the "foolish" Kwakiutl, nor were they as keen financiers. A Bella Coola would never entirely impoverish himself by lavish giving.

(3) The potlatch, though fundamentally the same as it is elsewhere on the coast, has certain rites characteristic of the locality. The central Bella Coola feature, the return of a dead ancestor, is not equally important elsewhere. It would be interesting to be able to trace the history of this. The most

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 as possible, a potlatch is the most suitable occasion. Goods 463 distributed for this purpose are not returnable; they have "become nothing" in the acquisition. The value of presents so *556 bestowed differs enormously; a man who is proud of his prerogative validates it lavishly until he is strong in his vocation, whereas another establishes himself on a lesser scale. The origin [773] of professional rights, like so many of other kinds, is lost in antiquity and ascribed to the wishes of Alqantăm as expressed to the first people. Some of the early settlers came to earth [551] with definite duties and vocations, each indicated by a special name; others, lacking these, created them through their own enormous power. At the death of one of these incumbents, 424 his name passed to one of his relatives who acted in the same 463 manner as his predecessor after duly validating the name in 553 question. Ever since that time, the owner of a confirmed professional name has been able to perform the functions of the *556 prerogative. This is never a man's sole designation, but merely [551] an addition to those of ancestral, kusiut, nsask, and other types. Like them, professional names are usually willed by their owners, though if this is neglected, one can be revived by any member of the deceased's ancestral family. In such a case, the older people usually decide on a suitable incumbent and suggest the matter to him; if he does not accept, the opportunity is given to another. If a member of the group is eager to validate the name, it is unlikely that anyone would try to [789] forestall him. Ability in certain respects can also be obtained by magical means (I, p. 701), and a member of the ancestral family so endowed is the natural choice for the prerogative in question.

Prerogatives of this kind can be grouped according to the types of vocation included.

THE PROFESSION OF RIVER GUARDIAN

424 In the beginning of time, Alqantăm is said to have sent 463 down with Ḳril, who landed on the mountain behind Ḳmqa·ti, 551
693
773

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

quit. Details of this prerogative were not obtainable, but it seems to follow the general type.

THE PROFESSION OF FIRST BERRY PICKER

All women can pick berries, but in every village there is at least one who has the prerogative of picking the first of every kind. The origin of this right is lost in dim antiquity, but, like all others, each first berry picker has a special professional name embodied in her ancestral myth which must be duly validated before she can function. One of these is Sîlwawuk-nimûn-a, another is Ła'ya. Though normally reserved for women, one of these names is occasionally given to a male child, in which case it is said to have been hermaphroditized. No one would dare to pick berries until the legal picker has paraded up and down the sidewalk carrying on her back her picking basket decorated with a representation of the sun, an act which is believed to ripen the berries.

"Get ready to pick red elderberries [or whatever species is ripe] tomorrow," she keeps calling out.

The berries may then be picked by anyone. This is repeated for every variety. As far as could be learnt, there was no social mechanism to punish a woman who picked berries before the announcement of the official picker; obedience seems to have been so universal that infractions are said to have been unknown though formerly there may have been some penalty of which even the memory has disappeared.

THE PROFESSION OF WARRIOR

The profession of warrior is another prerogative handed down from the distant past and requiring validation before it can be used. As with other rights of this type, magical means are in many cases employed to make any young man brave and successful, but there are a number of warriors confirmed as such by the distribution of presents at the time of bestowal on them of professional names. At the present time, it is

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium, [301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early 434 times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [989] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe [538] how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their 882 daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance; but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry 886 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Be-[881] tween the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first 841 discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 789 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is the most kaman of all substances, and, therefore, a potent protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers. In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola regard the married state as the normal condition of man. Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

763 to earth close by. In the winter of 1921-2 three Bella Coola
[824] were almost crushed in this manner; within a year the deaths took place of the wife of one, the mother of the second, and the daughter of the third. This was considered definite confirmation of their belief.

963 When a chief dies, a supernatural woman, Skwanăt-ăn-ă, "The Weeper," comes to earth to lament the loss. Crying 776 piteously, she walks to and fro in the woods near the village where the death has taken place, but can be heard or seen only by a person in whose family there will soon be a fatality. This [789] can be counteracted by going boldly to her and collecting some of the clotted mucus that drips from her nose as she weeps. If this is wrapped in the finder's clothing and stored for a year, it brings him good fortune and probably deflects the impending death, but to see "The Weeper" without knowledge of the proper procedure is to court disaster. A prominent Bella Coola woman died in June, 1922, and her son believed that he heard the lamentation of the supernatural visitor about six the next morning in the woods behind the missionary's house. He rushed forth to find her, but was unsuccessful. Within a few days, one of his nieces died, as was to be expected.

763 A comparatively common bird in Bella Coola is the 825 kwakwas, which is about the size of a robin and dark, greenish brown.[1] Its whistle is frequently heard and no significance is attached to it, but it is an omen of death if a kwakwas comes close to a house and chirps out, "Isi-s." On the night of February 20, 1924, one called beneath the window of a man who was about to start on a journey in his motor-boat. Next morning, although the bird lay dead beside his house, he insisted on starting. He camped at Restoration Bay where he was awakened by a voice calling his name, but could see no one. This was probably an owl, a bird which often foretells disaster by calling the name of the person to whom it will occur. Even this did not deter him and within twenty-four hours his

[1] The bird could not be identified, although it belongs to fact, not mythology.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Indeed, a grave is never 765 disturbed except, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a [789] portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [761] opener, so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

768 Burning or deposition near the grave is not restricted to the actual utensils and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready [764] by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person seems indescribably indecent. In recent years, the crop, if a man dies after tilling and sowing a field, is allowed to ripen, and then rot unharvested. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is [761] apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of [784] death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

764 The rituals described above may be considered as religious in nature; almost equally important are the social require-431 ments of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This 556 indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the ancestral family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite [614] manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the woman who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as misers with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death tries to speak to living relatives, but his whistling language is unintelligible and frightens the hearer. Ghosts dislike urine, and the only means known to keep them away from a house is to sprinkle this liquid outside the door, a common Bella Coola custom. There is no actual danger in hearing a ghost, and little even in seeing one, provided the observer does not relate his experience, but should he try to do so, something happens to his mouth as if an invisible hand had been clamped over it to prevent his words issuing forth. He can neither eat nor drink and soon dies.[45] It is possible that other beings are responsible for this same affliction, but as no sufferer has ever been able to explain the cause of his ailment, no one knows. The most dangerous ghost is that of a person who, buried without a nose-ring, is unable to disintegrate into his elements. The sight of such an apparition causes almost immediate death through contraction and closing of the mouth.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

An unpleasant habit of ghosts is the throwing of stones at the living. This is done partly from a love of mischief, and partly to remind their relatives of their needs. An old Kimsquit man described how, when encamped on King Island, he had almost been struck by a stone which seemed to fall from a tree. He realized that it must have been thrown by a ghost, and his opinion was confirmed when he found he could not speak. He instantly built a fire and cast on it both food and clothing as offerings to the dead, which had the effect of loosening his mouth. Pondering on the reason, he remembered that one of his relatives had died not far away, and that he had failed to give him any crumbs for a long time. In this case, as in many others, the stone was visible, though the thrower remained invisible.

Even near approach to ghosts is sometimes dangerous. The same man related how, when hunting, he heard what he thought was the note of a water ouzel, and passed by heedlessly. In a few minutes he thought he heard the cackling of geese, but the sound, instead of continuing to come from a pond a few hun-

[45] The disease attributed to the actions of ghosts may be lock-jaw.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 owing to the failure of hunters to observe ceremonial chastity.
* 787 When obtained, a susiutl was cut into small pieces, one of which [789] worn upon the person would make the flesh so hard that an arrow could not penetrate.

[776] Sometimes the susiutl assumes the form of either a spring or a cohoe salmon. Not long ago a Bella Bella man, travelling in a canoe, ate one of these. Once devoured, it reformed itself, made its way out by consuming the man's lower jaw, then jumped overboard and was lost.

The mere appearance of a susiutl does not necessarily bring misfortune to the beholder, even if he has not the necessary knowledge, or courage, to take advantage of it. The following is an instance.

On one occasion the father's father of a middle-aged Bella Coola was going upstream at the time the salmon were jumping, when, unknown to him, one leaped into the canoe behind him. His first knowledge of anything untoward came to him when the bow rose out of the water, and, looking around, he saw that this was caused by the weight of a grease-covered stone lying in the bottom of his canoe; the salmon had vanished. The man threw overboard his floor-board with the stone on it. When he told his friends afterwards of his experience, they informed him that he had missed an opportunity for obtaining supernatural good fortune, as the "salmon" must have been a susiutl.

789 The susiutl can also be used as a charm. If a man, while in [776] a pure condition through the observance of ceremonial chastity, eats a small portion of the flesh, it renders him proof against bullet or arrow. An intelligent Bella Coola stated that his father's brother had done so on one occasion, with the result that a bullet, fired by his wife's mother's father, fell harmless at his feet after striking him.

278 Medicine can also be obtained indirectly from a susiutl.
776 When one of these fish-like creatures swims through a pond,
824 wriggling as it goes, it frequently sheds some of its scales.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ever object was desired, and then set in a window of his house so that the sun could fall on one uncovered end. The owner firmly believes that this stone has brought him money on various occasions, and will do so again, though whether he expects the coins to be found inside of the wrapping, or merely to come to him in the course of trade is questionable. According to Bella Coola belief, they ought to appear beside the stone, but as this man attributes any good fortune to it, he never has any difficulty in proving its powers. 777 823

This stone is also used as a means of increasing the efficacy of prayer. When its owner washes ceremonially in the river before eating in the morning, he rubs it over his body as if it were soap and requests it to make him strong, make him well, grant him his desires, and so forth. [515] [789]

Shamanism

More important to the Bella Coola than any other manifestation of the supernatural is that power which makes an individual either an ālukwala or an āskankots. The former is a person who, owing to ability granted him by a supernatural being, is able to perform miraculous feats, especially in curing the sick; the latter is one with similar powers obtained from a ghost.[2] It is impossible to translate either of these terms accurately; the designation "shaman" is accordingly used in this monograph to describe both types of supernaturally endowed individuals. The most common and most important method of obtaining such power is from a living supernatural being; a person receiving the boon in this manner will be termed "shaman," and one empowered by a ghost will be known as "shaman from the dead." 104 756* [787]* [788]

The Bella Coola believe that long ago men were so much more powerful than at present, and so close to the supernatural, that all were virtually shamans. The prowess and adventures 756* 773 538

[2]Ghosts are, of course, supernatural, but as the Bella Coola distinguish between shamans whose powers are derived from these two sources, it is accurate to follow their example.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

755 offender. A shaman is able to diagnose the malady, and when
* 756 he has pulled it forth in the manner previously described, he [825] ties it up in a bundle of four pieces of dyed, and four of undyed, cedar-bark, sprinkles eagle down over the whole, and throws it into the river. This not only causes the sickness to return whence it has come, but placates the salmon who are glad to receive the beautiful cedar-bark.

755 (6) Another method is by making a present to Ṫhitcăp-
* 756 lilăn·a. The shaman prepares four collars of hemlock twigs, 782 wrapped around with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, and with numerous cross-pieces of dyed cedar-bark. When these are ready, all assemble to witness the curing, and to assist the practitioner by beating sticks. He first sets four basins, one at each corner of the fire, and then proceeds to pull it apart, leaving a glowing expanse of embers in the centre. The shaman throws on this bed pieces of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as well as eagle down, and ● [789] walks through, between the two halves of the separated fire. Several men stated that they had seen this done, but none could give any information as to the method. If actually carried out, the way in which the fire was prevented from burning the shaman and the highly inflammable bark and eagle down has been lost.

The shaman himself now guides the beating of sticks. When the tumult has reached its height he goes to the patient and places over his head one of the collars, passing it right down over his body, breaking the cross strings of dyed cedar-bark as he does so. The patient rises and the shaman picks up the collar from beneath his feet; his body has thus passed entirely through it. The sick man then revolves once, sunwise, while the shaman carries the collar once, sunwise, around the fire. He then stills the beating of sticks, which has been going on throughout, and casts the circlet on the fire. The same procedure is repeated with the three remaining collars. It is believed that these offerings reach Ṫhitcăplilăn·a who, pleased to such a ceremony, that is, if he is validating his name, the gifts must be valuable. On later occasions, irrespective of whether it is the same trick or another that is performed, the presents will be of small value. Goods so given are not returnable. After dancing, a shaman wears his collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark all summer, in fact until he rids himself of his supernatural endowment by the performance of a kusiut rite the following winter. 756* 556 [292]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Thus there is close inter-dependence of shaman and kusiut dances. On any later occasion, at a ceremony when songs of all types are being sung, if the singers beat out the tunes of those used at the ritual just described, the shaman dances to them. This is said to "cure" him, as if the power within him was a source of danger. [575] [533] [535]

The following are examples of the conjuring tricks performed, most of them done by the shaman Ninitsamlaix, a relative of an informant, who was able to learn the methods employed. 756* 789●

On one occasion Ninitsamlaix prepared two boxes, apparently the ordinary wooden sort used for cooking; across each he arranged a diagonal cross-piece so that the receptacle contained two watertight compartments. Previous to the performance, Ninitsamlaix poured water, dyed red with the bark of the alder, into one section of one of the boxes, and put eagle down in one of the compartments of the other. When the time came to carry out the rite he asked an accomplice, another shaman, to bring some water and pour it into his box. This was done, the assistant taking care to put it into the empty half, not into that which contained the dyed water. Ninitsamlaix shook the box and poured out some of the liquid to prove that it really was water, and then drank. The spectators, unaware of the cross-piece, did not notice that he did so from the corner opposite to that from which he had poured the water. He had, of course, drunk the dyed fluid. Ninitsamlaix cried out that what he had swallowed was paining him, and proceeded to vomit the red water, much to the surprise of the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756
789

uninitiated, who readily believed his claim that what he had drunk had changed to blood. Again the performer asked his assistant to bring in some water which he poured into the empty section of the other box, of which the other half contained eagle down. Ninitsamlaix moved to and fro, shaking the box to spill some of the liquid, and then announced that there was so much he could not drink it all, but would pour some on the fire. As before, he tilted the opposite side of the box, so that, instead of water, the eagle down came floating forth. The uninitiated, firmly convinced that the performer was endowed with supernatural power, never suspected that they were being deceived.

For her performance a female shaman once split a long, green stick, and gouged out the centre, so that it formed a narrow tube-like receptacle in which she laid a piece of undyed cedar-bark covered with eagle down. With wooden pegs she fastened the stick together so that it appeared to be an ordinary branch. When ready to perform, the woman asked some people to pile more wood on the fire, and, among others, an accomplice threw on the prepared stick with its butt protruding at the edge of the flames. As the fire blazed fiercely the female shaman danced; then the assistant announced that she wished to draw something from the flames, whereupon the woman seized the end of the cedar-bark from its enclosure in the projecting butt of the stick, and drew it forth. The uninitiated, ignorant of the prepared stick, were greatly impressed and puzzled as to how such inflammable material could have been in a fire without being consumed.

Ninitsamlaix used his skill as a carpenter to carry out elaborate tricks. On one occasion he sawed the boards surrounding the smoke vent of his house, and fixed them with skin hinges so that they could be raised by ropes from outside the building. To show his supernatural power he threw several large baskets up towards the roof. As he did so his assistants outside pulled the ropes so that the opening was enlarged and allowed the baskets to pass through. In the gloom of the house

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the spectators could not see the manner in which the hole was increased in size. It had been too small to permit the passage of the baskets at the time they were thrown, and it was still the same size after the feat was accomplished; hence supernatural means must have been employed to force them through the roof. Thus ran the logic of the uninitiated. 756* 789●

An informant, when acting as a kusiut spy (II, p. 14), once assisted four accomplices of a shaman who had obtained a stone from one of the lakes above Nułłeax. Many landslides fall into this, bringing down stones which are full of holes and float in water. Unless closely examined, the riddling is not evident, so that an ordinary river stone of the same size and colour can easily be confused with it.

Previous to dancing, the shaman had placed a few embers in the recesses of his stone, covered them with pounded cedar-bark, and concealed the object near the fire. When all was ready, he asked the informant, whom the uninitiated did not know to be an accomplice, to fetch him a stone. This he did, bringing one previously chosen as closely resembling the prepared one from the lake. This ordinary stone was passed around among the spectators and then given to the shaman who, unobserved, palmed it off for the other as he began to dance. At intervals he blew on the stone until the embers ignited the dry bark; first smoke appeared, then sparks, and finally a mass of flame. The shaman dropped it as if it had become too hot, choosing the spot where lay the river pebble; and again passed the latter from hand to hand through the audience, who could not understand how flames had been made to appear from an ordinary river stone. The words used for the songs on this occasion did not refer to the feat about to be performed, but to the alleged power given to the performer by Ťłitcäplilän-a.

On another occasion a woman who was a shaman produced an eagle's tail and said that she could make it revolve in a bucket of water, following her steps. She hid the tail, while appearing to cast it into the water, and by means of a con-

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 cealed cord succeeded in drawing feathers, previously placed 789 on the surface, around in the direction in which she was dancing. It was impossible to learn the details of the method employed in this trick. The subterfuge was long ago practised by a shaman.

A simple but effective trick was the substitution of a baton made of light maple wood for one of the heavy type used by the singers. The real stick had been passed around the audience and apparently returned to one of the singers, though in reality the false one had been given to him. As he beat time the hollow sound that emanated was a source of surprise to the uninitiated spectators, nor was their wonder lessened when a real baton was again handed around, as if it were the one that had been in use.

[178] According to an informant, the last time that a supernatural being helped the person on whom it had conferred shamanistic power to perform a rite of this kind was about 1870. A man who had fallen from his canoe into the ocean was rescued, but for a long time was ill as a result of exposure.
[776] River Measurer, the supernatural being who governs the [787] height of tides in the river, appeared and made him a shaman with the ability to cure through the use of a wash-basin. As this shaman danced, he had a large box filled with water. Presently he called on one of the uninitiated to examine the height of the water and point out to his fellows how high it was. A little later he called a second man who likewise indicated on the outside of the box the height of the liquid within. It had fallen, though its disappearance seemed inexplicable.

781 The above furnishes a good example of the attitude of the 789 uninitiated. The informant, a very intelligent Bella Coola, gave a number of instances of the conjuring methods employed, some of which he had helped to carry out. Unquestionably, this was of the same nature, yet, because he was deceived at the time of its performance, he readily believed that the rite was supernatural; since then he had never thought of doubting

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

it. The uninitiated are so steeped in the atmosphere of belief that any simple conjuring trick is sufficient to delude them. 781 789

Finally, the following account is here inserted, though the details of the performance could not be learnt.

The father of an elderly Bella Coola was once so sick that no one could help him. He had coughed up blood, eagle down had been heaped on his body, and hope had been abandoned. Then a sisiutl came to him, restoring his health and making him a very powerful shaman. His supernatural visitor had told him to employ his power beneficially, and had further instructed him in the use of a rod wherein it lay. Whenever this man danced, a stick, decorated with bands of cedar-bark wound spirally, was hung horizontally from the roof of his house. He carried one similarly embellished, but smaller, about two and a half feet long and three inches in diameter, having at one end a tuft of bark. During his dance, in which he sang of sisiutl, he went under the suspended stick, held the small one in his hand, blew on one end of it, then threw it up so that it struck the large hanging one. This was presumably done by the tuft of bark folding over and catching in some way. Again he danced and, when underneath where the two sticks were suspended, he jumped up, and caught the lower end of the smaller with his hands. This supported his weight, and he swung back and forth on it until he voluntarily released his grip and dropped. When next he danced at the same spot he held out one hand with palm uppermost beneath the smaller stick; the other was held in front of his mouth pointing towards the suspended one. He blew on the latter as if blowing dust from his hand to the point of contact of the two sticks, and the smaller dropped into his outstretched hand. 756* 789

By means of this stick the shaman could cure diseases. When told in what part of the body the pain was situated he pressed on that part with one end of his stick. Then he carried it to the fire and held in the smoke the end that had been in contact with the sickness. He puffed twice at it with his 755 756*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 755 mouth, and the malady departed. It had been absorbed into the stick, and later driven from it by the shaman's breath.

* 756 789 This man made a great reputation for himself with his ability to hang from his small stick. On one occasion, after fishing on the lower Fraser River, he was encamped on the ocean beach near Seattle, where he had gone to pick hops. Four white men who had heard of his powers came to his tent for a demonstration. He put on his robes, took his small stick from his box, and used the ridge pole of his tent as the heavier horizontal one. The white men examined the small stick and found nothing peculiar about it. The man performed his dance, in the course of it throwing the small stick up against the ridge pole, where it remained suspended with the actor hanging from it. After releasing his hold, he struck the smaller stick a slight blow with his hand and it at once came away from the ridge pole.

* 756 787 As already mentioned, it is extremely difficult to obtain accounts of dreams which have served as sources for shamanistic performances. They are unconsciously embellished by the performer to such an extent that the ritual displayed has probably slight resemblance to the vision on which it is based.

The following, however, is an example of the type that could have served as theme. A man once dreamed that he saw Mount Nusqalst with its rocks adorned with handsome pictures. The other mountains of the valley were also decorated, but none of them was so fine. If he had had the desire and the necessary wealth he could have arranged with the carpenters to have the designs that he saw in his dream painted, and could have displayed them as a shaman's vision.

* 756 782 A shaman, particularly one who has received a vision from Tlicāplilān-a, and who has had marked success both in curing the sick and in giving conjuring exhibitions, is considered to be in peculiarly close association with supernatural beings. Accordingly, he is regarded as a fit person to ask their assistance, not that he has any means of gaining help that are not open to others, but merely that his greater acquaintance with

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER XI

MEDICINE, MAGIC, TABOO[1]

Introductory — Causative Medicines — Preventive and Curative Medicines — Sorcerers — Taboos — Ritual Acts — Miscellaneous Beliefs

INTRODUCTORY

THE beliefs described in the last chapter are essentially 771 religious since they display an attitude of respect and 789 often of propitiation to supernatural powers having greater strength than human beings. This is self-evident in the earlier [756] sections and, though less noticeable, is present also in ideas concerning shamans since these men have themselves acquired ability placing them on a plane slightly removed from that of their fellows. Theoretically, it seems as if a clear division might be drawn between the concepts just recorded, and others of a magical nature in which, although the element of contact with the supernatural is present, yet the end desired is obtained by the mere performance of an action. To the Bella Coola there is a slight overlap between the two types. For example, [777] the acquisition of an object from which supernatural good fortune may be secured is religious, but its use is virtually magical since once obtained, neither supplication nor further favours are necessary. Nevertheless, it is possible to separate most magical beliefs from most religious ones, though it must be emphasized that the cleavage is less distinct to the native than it appears to the white man.

If it is difficult to find a clear dividing-line between religion 757 and magic, it is impossible to draw one between the latter and 789

[1]The late Harlan I. Smith has dealt with certain aspects of the subjects treated in this chapter in two articles: "Sympathetic Magic and Witchcraft among the Bella-coola" (American Anthropologist, vol. 27, no. 1, Jan.-March, 1925, pp. 116-121) and "Materia Medica of the Bella Coola and Neighbouring Tribes of British Columbia" National Museum of Canada, Annual Report for 1927, Bulletin 56, pp. 47-68). [113]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 the science of medicine. The Bella Coola are familiar with 789 many acts which cause definite results. To place a new-born girl in contact with the representation of a beautiful woman [856] so that she may grow up to be like her, seems false science,
[752] magic, to the white man; whereas the application of splints and gum to a fractured limb is a medical treatment, crude perhaps, but definitely scientific. The two are identical to the Bella Coola. They do not ask why or how a result follows, they merely know that it does. Such lore has been handed down from time immemorial; it is steeped in the sanctity of antiquity and hallowed by the knowledge that their ancestors have done the same for generations. All such acts may be described as "medicines," for so they appear to those who practise them. To separate them into magical and scientific categories would misrepresent the native point of view; the only division that can be made is between those that cause, and those that prevent or cure. Even in this there is some overlap. A medicine that cures a child from crying likewise causes him to be placid and amiable; so, too, medicines of a preventive nature comprise elements of both types. The principle governing most of these is sympathetic magic, a concept which, if put in words to the Bella Coola, would be regarded as logical and scientific. The second important class of medi-
[755] cines consists of objects, either herbal or derived from the human body, which are believed to have such abundant power that they are effective against ailments of supernatural origin, or against supernatural beings themselves. Some of these have already been mentioned in connection with the attitude of the Bella Coola towards these beings of the earth, sky, and water.

754 Most curative medicines are used by the practitioner on himself; most causative, on someone else. The latter are either 755 social or anti-social, depending upon whether the result is 789 benevolent or malevolent. Shamans frequently use magical means in curing the sick and are highly regarded by the community, but medicines of the same kind may be used to kill

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and those who have knowledge of them are sorcerers. Even 754 a man of this kind is not outside the pale of society unless he [755]
practises indiscriminately; members of the kusiut society, for [789] example, frequently employ one to kill an individual who has [575] offended against their regulations (I, p. 740). A man is regarded as a sorcerer not on account of his knowledge but on account of the ends to which he applies it.

Closely related to, if not identical with, the belief that 784 certain consequences follow certain acts, is the conviction that the infraction of ritual prohibitions brings disaster. There are many such taboos, for so they may be called. Though most important at the critical periods of life, puberty, pregnancy, while observing ceremonial chastity, and so forth, there are many which must be obeyed at all times.

Restrictions pertaining to the river and regulations at birth and death have already been described. Like magical acts, these often verge on the religious owing to the belief that disregard offends supernatural beings. On the whole, however, it seems as if most infractions bring their own punishment without intervention of higher powers, a concept which throws [789] taboos into the category of magic rather than of religion, with the ever-present proviso that the two cannot be separated entirely from one another. With them may be associated a [788] number of ritual acts connected with fishing and hunting in which, though the element of propitiation is not absent, it is satisfied by the performance of definite rites. Finally, there have been included in this chapter a number of unimportant beliefs, the psychology of which cannot be analysed.

What is the basis of these rites defined as Medicine, Magic, 154 and Taboo? As already described, the Bella Coola either do 771
not explain their origin and function, or merely state that 789 Alqunsăm is responsible, as he is for every activity of life. This is unsatisfactory because many which, viewed scientifically, have neither curative nor causative power, produce the desired end. A child who has been "made" a carpenter during infancy, usually grows up to be proficient in that profession; the person

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

154 who has been "cured" of an illness, recovers; the man whose
771 death has been "caused" by magic, dies. An average white 789 man would consider such statements to be erroneous, but they not only figure in stories and beliefs, but some of them have been actually observed by the writer. The explanation lies in the susceptibility of the Bella Coola to suggestion. The conviction that he is to die so weakens a man that death often results; belief that he is to recover, aids a sick person to throw off the malady. This sentiment, intelligible in case of disease, is equally applicable in other matters. The child who has been [818] endowed with carpentry skill grows up with the conviction to assist his labours. Moreover, his relatives and friends are also aware of it, and he receives every opportunity to practise, so that the outcome desired is often the consequence of the act.
789 Though the Bella Coola do not appreciate that psychological 828 and sociological factors may be the real cause of the result, they realize the importance of the power of thought. For [771] example, if a group of people is unanimous in wishing some end, or expects some event to happen, it is believed that their thoughts are strong enough to bring about its occurrence. The following examples illustrate this point:

It is said that when the white man first came to British Columbia, a tribe of Indians was living in a secluded valley, far to the south. As more and more settlers arrived, the occupants were driven from their homes and forced into the barren [787] mountains. One night, Alqantäm came in a vision to one of the natives, saying:

"I see what you desire; you want the white men to withdraw. You, yourself, are helpless. But if all your fellows wish the same, the white men will depart."

The man told all his friends and they agreed to concentrate the next night on their wish to expel the white man. A few failed to do so, and nothing happened. The second night there was the same lack of unanimity. The desire to drive away the intruders grew stronger in course of time, until one night this was the centre of the thoughts of all; next morning the white men had vanished. It is possible that in this particular case there was a belief that Alqwstâm granted the wish when convinced that all had the same desire, but this element is often entirely lacking.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Belief in the power of thought is a concept which the investigator constantly meets in Bella Coola at the present day. For example, in 1921 a government official working in the valley, purchased a representation of a merganser which had been used in a ceremonial.[1] Although this should have been destroyed after use, no difficulty would have been raised if the transaction had remained a secret. Unfortunately, the buyer allowed the object to be seen by several Bella Coola and by some Carriers. This caused indignation throughout the community and news of it reached the Bella Bella, who concluded that the vendor would suffer disaster for allowing a secret object to be seen by the despised Indians of the interior. Within a year, his wife died. The Bella Bella believed that his sin had brought its own punishment, but the Bella Coola, who knew the details of the sale and did not consider the exposure of the article to have been the fault of the seller, attributed it to the power of the thoughts of the Bella Bella. They all expected that he would be punished; therefore he was punished; the expectation was sufficient to effect its own fulfilment. This incident was too fresh in the minds of several men to allow them to sell ceremonial objects to the writer.

The most common form taken by this conviction is with regard to death; if it is believed that a man will die, he is almost certain to do so. In June, 1922, a woman died in Bella Coola and her father claimed that she had been murdered by a certain man either with material poison or by magical means. He took no direct steps in revenge but stated emphatically that the man whom he suspected would die within a year. The threatened man knew of this, and more than once said that he

[1] The article, now in the National Museum of Canada, consists of a cloth and wood representation of a merganser canoe such as was used by Nuxtsis in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

754 would probably fall a victim. He became ill in May, 1923, 761 and, though treated by a white doctor, grew steadily worse 789 until he died in the latter part of June, three weeks after the 828 year had elapsed. All the Bella Coola firmly believe that this [622] was due to the power of thought. The father of the woman was a powerful chief whose thoughts were accordingly potent, and some consider that his concentrated desires and expectations were enough to kill the accused, while others believe that his expressed statements convinced others of the result, and that it was their combined thought that caused the death. It usually requires the thoughts of more than one individual to lead to this effect. The doctor who attended this man stated that his patient had shown symptoms of melancholy and resignation during his last sickness; it seems clear that the expectation of death must have lessened his chance of recovery.

771 A prominent theme in Bella Coola folk-lore is the belief 954 that a person cannot long survive who has made himself un-828 popular. It is sometimes stated that a magical means was [538] employed to remove him, and this was no doubt often the case; a person who learns that a "medicine" had been employed to kill him is in no fit mental condition to counteract the power of suggestion, particularly if he knows that others are aware of what has been done. His death is regarded as proof of the efficacy of the means employed and the belief of others grows stronger. As already stated, this conviction still survives. When this ethnological investigation was being conducted, a [648] point under discussion was whether or not the Kimsquit people should be allowed to live in Bella Coola. One chief took the lead in objecting and everyone expected that, having thus roused the ire of would-be immigrants, he would die. He did so soon afterwards, and it is universally believed that it was caused by the concentration of the hostile thoughts of the Kimsquit. Similarly, the potency of taboos is increased by the fact that since [784] time immemorial the thoughts of everyone have been opposed to any infraction. Consequently, an offender is liable to punishment both for breaking an injunction and because he

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Causative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy

●789 To Cause Tallness

856 As soon as the umbilical cord is cut, blow upon it and pull it out; the infant will grow up to be tall and big.

The following medicines are applied four days after birth:

The infant is washed, formerly in a circular cedar or cottonwood basin, and the remedy pressed against its body while drying. Some families prefer to wait until the child is able to crawl.

To Cause Strength (three means)

[824] [825] (1) Collect four pieces of bark, each from a different tree where a grizzly bear has scratched. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over his body. This ensures him the strength of a grizzly bear.

(2) Collect four water-smoothed, green stones from the river. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over the body. After four days, return the stones to the river.

[825] (3) Warm the body of an octopus, beaver, or wolverine in the smoke of a fire and gently press the carcass against an infant's body, saying:

"Friend, may he be like you."

This provides the child with the strength of the animal used.

To Cause Long Life

[826] [824] Collect four pieces of wood which have been rolled hard and smooth in a landslide. Boil them in the infant's wash-bowl, cool, then re-warm them at a fire and rub them over the body. This makes him strong and healthy, able to endure all dangers and weaknesses even those caused by a sorcerer. The principle is that the child will be as hardy as the wood pressed itself to be by withstanding the crushing weight of stone and earth. An old Kimsquit man expressed the firm conviction that his great age was the result of this treatment soon after birth.

1:Mc(Dowell) E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

To Cause Impervious to Cold

Kill a water ouzel, warm it at a fire, then press it against every part of the infant's body. This makes him as hardiness of cold water as the bird. A mosquito may be used in the same way, or the foot of one be placed in the child's hand and pressed as his fingers clutch it.

To Cause a Quarrelsome Disposition

Burn the nest of wasps and rub the ashes on the infant's face. He will become as bellicose and quick to resent injury as the insects. One old man who habitually beats his wife explains that this is involuntary, since he was treated in this way when a child. Fighting is no longer allowed, so the only person on whom he can exercise his martial ardour is his wife. The woman regards this treatment as a matter of course and the reason is accepted as valid by her associates.

To Cause Success in Thieving

Kill a pack-rat, warm it at a fire, and rub the carcass lightly over the infant's body. This will make him as successful a thief as the animal. Other methods are to cut off a foot and put this as the infant clutches it in his fingers, or to rub its hands with the ashes of a burnt rat.

To Cause Success in Singing

Catch a live robin or omamomsuh (probably one of the thrushes), warm it at a fire, and rub it lightly against the infant's throat, saying:

"May he be a singer like you."

Then release the bird, and the child will grow up a songster. The following story is told of the power of the omamomsuh's song:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

538 In the beginning of time is used to sing.

789 "I shall use a spoon and eat when the Bella Coola River has been its bounds on account of the running salmon in it."

125 The people used to laugh as it repeated this song year after year,

856 until the bird changed its song:

[534] "I shall use a spoon and eat when all is cold and clear. Then there will be Death instead of salmon in Bella Coola."

The next year the streams were so clear that no fish could be caught and the starving people asked the bird to return to its first song. When it did so, the water became murky so that it was possible to catch salmon once more.

The Bella Bella, not the Bella Coola, use the body of a blue jay to cause an infant to grow up with the ability to master difficult tunes in the same way that the bird has a variety of notes. The method of applying this medicine could not be learnt.

789 Most of the above medicines are well known and can be applied by any parent. If, however, a man has employed one 856 of them successfully on a number of occasions, he is often requested to use his ability for others. In such a case, the father of the benefited child is expected to reimburse his friend.

[184] The application or non-application of such medicines is purely the concern of the child's family; they can use as many as they like, or none at all, according to their discretion.

The following medicines are used during the first year of life:

304 To Cause Beauty

789 Bandages of the softest undyed cedar-bark are prepared for 856 infants of both sexes soon after birth. A woman who is a good

532 artist is requested to draw with charcoal two pictures on one of the pieces of bark—of handsome men if the child is a boy, or of lovely women if a girl. An unmarked wrapping is fastened round the infant's head, then the painted one so arranged that one picture is over the forehead, the other over the occiput, and finally other plain bandages to cover the whole. These [124] are left in place for about one year. They flatten the forehead

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 156 [532] [126]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 156 [125]

To Cause Left-handedness

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a ilakmult (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [125]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [124]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 156

"Thou be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [124]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thereafterwith wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [125]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

856 To Cause Ability in Carpentry (two means)

789 (1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good carpenter to impart to him ability similar to his own. He spits on his tools and rubs these over the child's heart, saying:

868

"Please be a carpenter."

This is done only for male children.

(2) Cut splinters from the tools of an expert carpenter, burn them, and rub the ashes over the child's hands. This is most efficacious when performed by the carpenter himself who says as he rubs:

"Please be a carpenter."

To Cause Ability in Thieving

Indians from the vicinity of Sitka are said to fasten a live mouse in an infant's clothing or tie one in the cradle. This causes the child to amass riches easily, but when practised by a Sitka man and woman who were slaves of the Bella Coola it was so potent that their son grew up to be an inveterate thief.

895 To Cause Ability to See Beneath the Water

856 When the infant is in the cradle, kill a gull, cut out its tongue, and rub this around inside the child's mouth. Strip the feathers and lay them so that the infant sleeps upon them. This gives him the same ability as the bird to see beneath the ocean and tell where fish are to be found. This was done not many years ago to a Bella Bella child whose ability was consequently so great that it frightened his friends.

789

To Cause Ability in Hunting

The Kitlebe achieve this by making a child sleep upon dog hair. No instance is remembered of this having actually been practised by the Bella Coola, although, being well known, there is no reason why it should not be used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856
speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Alquntăm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and [858] place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his [785] son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is 789 matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat [785] has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[168] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Strength

Place pieces of octopus flesh in the infant's bowl and wash him with these. This causes him to grow up with the strength of the animal. 825 856 789

To Cause Understanding of the Speech of Ravens

When a child is able to toddle, but has not learnt to talk, shut him in a box and turn this upside down. Leave him alone for four days and four nights, passing in what food is necessary during darkness.

Knowledge of this medicine was learnt from ilkas, a female slave born near New Westminster who was owned by the maternal grandfather of the wife of the elderly Kimsquit man from whom this information was obtained. The slave's father had treated her in this way when an infant; while so confined she had not only learnt the language of ravens, but Cowichan, her own speech, as well. ilkas used to tell the Kimsquit people of her ability, but few believed her, though she asserted that this was a well-known Cowichan method, and her captors had their own means of imparting the same ability to their children, as well as an ancient tradition of the practice she described. One day she informed her master that the ravens had told her of the near approach of a raiding-party. He summoned the chiefs, but they laughed at the warning and disregarded it. ilkas received the same intimation for four days, and on the fourth the raiders appeared and she was vindicated.

The inversion of the box is due to the belief that ravens, when bringing news, turn over upon themselves like tumbler pigeons. The Bella Coola do not know whether the box must be so tight as to hold the child upside down.

To Cause Ceremonial Intelligence

When a child is one or two years of age, paint on its back the picture of a black bear's gall-bladder. Leave this in position for four days, then wash it off secretly in a mountain stream. A child so treated will grow up with ability to perform 856 789 532

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.
[532] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes.
[825] A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [622] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious, and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For 771 example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Alquntăm, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere washing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Agility

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kill a squirrel, clean it, wash the entrails carefully and leave them hanging in the sun to dry for four days, then tie them around the child's stomach for four days more. It is important that the infant should not break thestring. On the fourth day, remove them and hang them in the doorway of the house. On this same day, another squirre must be killed, treated as before, and its viscera allowed to dry for four days. The child wears these in the same way for four days, when they too are hung in the doorway. A third squirrel, and finally a fourth, is killed and made use of in precisely the same manner. When the final set of entrails has been hung up, the four are left suspended for four days, till the twenty-eighth after the killing of the first animal, when the father takes them to the forest and deposits them beneath some projecting rock where no water can penetrate and where they will dry and keep indefinitely. 825 789 856

This causes the child to grow up endowed, like the squirrel, with agility so that he can scale even precipitous mountains. This medicine is frequently used in conjunction with one for hunting ability.

To Cause Easy Delivery [843]

Place the foetus of a porcupine against theback of a girl's neck and allow it to drop to the ground. Pick it up, replace it, and let it fall again. This is repeated four times while the person says:

"Please, may she be like you and have no trouble in giving birth."

This medicine can be used at any time before puberty.

To Cause Bravery (four means)

(1) When a grizzly bear has been shot, a lad who wishes to make himself brave approaches it and thrusts his arm down the dying animal's throat. This kills it by choking. Then he rubs his hand over his heart and the back of his neck, the seat [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825 of the spirit, which imparts to himself the courage and strength 789 of the animal he has just slain.
856 (2) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, the [774] bloody pelt is wrapped around a lad whose parents wish him to be brave. He is lashed in securely and the bundle, attached to a long rope, is thrown into the rapids. After a few minutes, it is drawn ashore, but immediately thrown in again. This is repeated four times. This medicine causes the child to have the courage of a grizzly bear. It is said that the first youth to whom this was applied rescued his mother from slavery among the Tsimshian.

This treatment is usually applied to boys of from three to five years of age.

(3) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, two lads, whose parents wish them to be brave, are called. They are told to crouch on their hands and knees and while in this position the pelt is thrown over their backs. They crawl to and fro for a few minutes while dogs are encouraged to bark and growl at the "animal." The skin is then removed and the two sent to wash in the river. They are called back and the whole rite repeated a second time, followed by a third and a fourth application, with washing in every case. This gives them the bravery of grizzly bears.

This medicine can be used at any time before the holding of sexual intercourse.

(4) When an octópus has been killed, a lad is placed within the freshly removed skin. Those present say:

"Please, may he be like you, afraid of nothing."

The skin is removed and the lad sent to wash in the river. The rite is repeated four times which gives him the bravery of an octopus. Like the last, this medicine is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse.

To Cause Ability in River Work

Fasten a boy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw the bundle into the river. Lift it out when it has gone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beneath the surface, and throw it in a second time. Repeat this four times. If the wrapping has been carefully fastened, little water leaks in and the child suffers no discomfort. This causes him to grow up confident and brave with regard to canoeing and every kind of activity on the river. Like the last medicine, this is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse. It cannot be applied to a girl since beaver are unfavourable to women who must observe many taboos concerning them. 825 789 856

To Cause Modesty and Respect for One's Elders

When a boy is about six or eight years of age, his father beats him lightly, four times, with a rope-end. This is done in the early morning, then he takes his son to wash immediately. Four days later the beating and washing are repeated. From this time on, a parent should whip his son four times every fourth morning until he is old enough to marry. The force of the chastisements increases as the lad grows older, so that when he is about fourteen years of age, he is beaten with the full force of his parent's arm. It is a point of honour for a lad to endure his whippings without whimpering; one who shows the pain he is suffering is laughed at by his fellows and not allowed to wash with them. This medicine makes a child strong, manly, respectful to his elders, and, generally, the type of individual to whom supernatural beings are likely to show favour. 789 856 [152]

This practice has long been discontinued and it was impossible to learn whether or not it had ever been carried out with full vigour. Several of the older men stated that in their childhood they had been beaten periodically by their fathers, but none had had this last over a period of years. It was claimed that such had been the case in earlier times, but it seems almost certain that this type of chastisement could never have been carried out regularly. During the winter, for example, when kusiut dances were taking place, the whole community used to sleep late and it is improbable that a father rose every fourth [178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 morning to whip his son. It is clear, however, that such was 856 regarded as proper by anyone practising this medicine, even though few did so regularly.

MEDICINES APPLIED TO YOUNG DOGS

789 To Cause Ability in Hunting
231 When a bear has been killed and the first incision made for skinning it, take a puppy, force its head inside the opening, and rub it to and fro. Throw the animal into the river and when it has swum ashore, repeat the rite. If this act is repeated four times, the dog will grow up to be a good hunter.

To Cause Ability in Hunting Beaver

Wrap the puppy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw it into the river to the accompaniment of hand-clapping from as many as happen to be present. After submersion for a few moments, remove the bundle and throw it in again. Repeat this twice more. This makes the dog grow up unafraid of water and, accordingly, useful in hunting beaver.

To Cause Disregard of Musket Shots

Lay some black powder at the nose of a sleeping puppy and ignite it. The dog will grow up without fear of musket shots.

To Cause Keen Scent

Slit any kind of salmon so that the liver is exposed and hold the puppy with its nose immediately over this. Make an incision in the tip so that the blood flows freely on to the organ of the salmon. Hold the animal until flies have gathered from all directions to feast upon the fish and fresh blood.

The dog will grow up with the ability to locate game in any direction, just as flies gather wherever there is blood. He will also have their ability to travel without requiring a path. One [424] old man stated that this medicine was the property of an ancestral family, and should be used when a puppy is one month old.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Hunting Mountain Goats 789 281

Steep the freshly removed head of a fisher, wolf, or wolverine in smoke for four days. Break a hole in the top of the skull and hold the puppy's head over this; then slit its nose so that the blood drips down into the interior of the cranium. Release the dog, take the head to the mountains and bury it in the ground beneath a spot where mountain goats have been sleeping. Dig it up four days later and conceal it under a shelving rock where it is protected from the rain.

This medicine causes the dog to grow up with knowledge of the haunts of mountain goats as well as with the bravery of whichever animal was used. This means can be practised only by members of the ancestral families to which it belongs. [424]

To Cause Ability in Hunting Otters or Seals

Obtain the head of whichever is desired, and proceed as described for mountain goats. Instead of burying, place the skull under shelter near a creek much frequented by land otters, or near the ocean where seals are plentiful. It need not be taken up after four days.

To Cause General Ability

This medicine can be applied only by a successful hunter, who expects compensation for his assistance. It is employed when a puppy is about one month old.

Early in the morning the hunter seats himself on a box within the house of the dog's master, his legs stretched out before him. He seizes the puppy firmly and passes it, sunwise, around and under his legs four times, frequently spitting on its nose and kneading it with his hands to make that organ slender. This causes the animal to grow up with good tracking ability, while the passing makes it faithful to its master. Next the hunter seizes the dog by the hind legs and swings it four times, sunwise, over and through the smoke of the fire. This prevents it from being dizzy and afraid of precipitous mountains, but if it yelps as it travels through the air, it will be a poor dog. Finally, the hunter carries it to the river and throws

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 it in. He seizes as it swims ashore and throws it back once more. This is repeated four times and causes the animal to 231 have no fear of water.

In former times great attention was paid to the training of young dogs.

MEDICINES PERTAINING TO LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND CHILDBIRTH

832 To Cause Love

This medicine is applied by women to men, and by men to women.

Obtain a hair of the person whose love is sought, place with it one of the wooer's, and tie the two in a strip of birch-bark together with a morsel of octopus skin. This causes intense desire between the two. This medicine is usually personally applied by amorous youths.

A similar usage is to wear the two hairs next the stomach, hidden by a belt. Men, especially, do this to cause love on the part of girls whom they admire. An old Bella Coola mentioned that he had once had occasion to investigate the box of a Kimsquit man within which he found the tip of a land otter's tail, split, and containing two small tufts of hair, one the owner's, the other, his wife's. This ensured lasting devotion between the two.

To Cause Love for Oneself

A few years ago a certain Kâlsl of Kimsquit used the following medicine to attract two sisters:

He made two figures, one representing a male, and the other a female. To each he tied birch-bark, octopus-skin, a few of his own hairs, and some obtained from the girls. Each figure was provided with sexual organs, and he placed them in position for sexual intercourse. This caused the two girls to desire Kâlsl so madly that they almost became demented in their infatuation. Their mother, Kwa-tsas, suspected that Kâlsl had been using something of the kind and searched his box during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kälotl had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Kwa·tsua placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kälotl tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Kwa·tsua washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kälotl to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 832

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This medicine can be made only by a skilful carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 833

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 886 825

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 842 789

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex

789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

843 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)

789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk

757 Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy

789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:

825 "Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life

Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:

825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.

886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so ensnared are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that one man accidentally sucked when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its master could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dyed and undyed cedar-bark. 789 825 886

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

To Cause Obesity 789

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten. 826 622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an squaw-i (varied thrush?) alive and put it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying: 583 789

"May she be a singer like you." 825

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

To Cause Ability in Hunting 224

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained. 789 824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Heat the penis of a mountain goat or beaver at a fire. 789 821

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the ocean or a river, saying: 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

789 "Please, may it be as it was when you held intercourse."

821 The basis of these medicines is that mountain goats and 825 beaver mate in November when it is cold, and deer in October when it is rainy.

An old Kimsquit man mentioned that one winter he had been driven ashore by continuous cold winds and was on the verge of starving. He slew a buck and by using the medicine just described was able to bring rain with consequent lessening of wind so that he could continue his journey.

MALEVOLENT MEDICINES

754 To Destroy the Benefits of Another's Ceremonial Chastity

825 Place pieces of flesh from any recently skinned animal within a coffin from which the skeleton of an enemy has been removed, uttering at the same time the name of the person to be injured. This destroys the "cleanness" acquired by the observance of ceremonial chastity.[9]

To Cause Insanity in a Woman

Catch a squirrel alive and tie one of the woman's hairs around its stomach; then release the animal. As it runs violently through the forest, sometimes head upwards, sometimes head downwards, so will the brain of the person whose hair it is carrying begin to churn violently till madness ensues.

To Cause Ferocity in Grizzly Bears

Throw the body of a recently killed muskrat against a man's back. The next grizzly bear he encounters will be ferocious, and may kill him. Knowledge of this medicine was learnt by noticing that a number of men who had been struck in play with muskrats, were killed by grizzly bears. The potency of the act has since been recognized.

754 To Cause Disease in a Malefactor

727 A number of years ago, when three Bella Coola were killed

[9]This medicine was learnt from a rather unsatisfactory informant and was not confirmed by others.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy and Childhood

989 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

974 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing involuntary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

843 825

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to postpone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

[846]

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will die during infancy, though the means by which the slain animals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

825 989 [846] [961] [974]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [961]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 955 [961]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

Lib. McDermott E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

752 For Fractures

An effort is made to straighten the limb and to place the ends of the broken bone together in their proper position. If there is considerable swelling, an incision is made, to let blood escape. Hemlock gum is applied freely to the whole region to soften the wound and hold the splints in position. This penetrates the cut, if one has been made, and is believed to facilitate the knitting process. Any small sticks are used for splints.

REMEDIES FOR AILMENTS CAUSED BY SUPERNATURAL OR HUMAN BEINGS

753 Persons suffering from diseases or accidents of the types described in the previous section are not the only ones whom the Bella Coola consider to be sick. A girl at puberty, a mother who has just given birth, a man or woman whose consort has just died, has been placed in a peculiar relation to the supernatural and is in a condition identical to that of one suffering from a disease. The ritual acts prescribed at these crises of life are medicines, just as truly as an herbal potion or a curative treatment. In fact, anyone who has been in close touch with the supernatural is in a critical condition and must act circumspectly, the reason for the taboos observed by shamans.

754 Hunters particularly, and others who are likely to come in contact with supernatural beings, employ a number of medicines to protect themselves or to alleviate the dangers to which they have been exposed. As already described, the most potent of these are articles which have been rendered essentially human by contact with the body. For example, an evil supernatural being such as the Wee-Pawy of the Tides can be kept at a distance by casting soiled clothing upon a fire. Even more powerful are stained cedar-bark sanitary napkins. It is remembered that when a Bella Bella lad was treated with a gall so that he could see beneath the ocean, his friends became so alarmed at his tremendous ability that they destroyed it by throwing pads of this kind on a fire built beneath the bed on which he was sleeping. The basis of this medicine is the belief that the proximity of such intensely human articles is enough to counteract and render powerless anything of a superhuman nature. Likewise, when a certain woman came to contact with the Wer-Fury of the Tides and began to exhibit symptoms of insanity, she was cured by drinking water in which other women had squeezed out their menstrual pads. Another defence is the burning of dried salmon, fumigation from which is particularly effective for one who suffers from nightmares. Other remedies already mentioned are to cut the right leg and smear a bullet with the resultant blood in order to kill a swing, and to lacerate the inside of the mouth and spit to withstand a capsizing mountain.

Lib.Decrotik E-1 (1911-1914)161
NEA Reference NEA

The medicine most commonly taken is false bellebore, the use of which was learnt by some ancient shamans. At dusk a hunter should eat a small twig of it, raw; it drives from his stomach everything injurious, particularly women's hair, which are abhorred by animals, and ensures him success on the morrow. If he takes too much of it, he becomes ill and must swallow the antidote, mountain goat grease or marrow. He should also carry twigs of the plant with him, ready either to swallow or throw in the direction of any dreaded supernatural being whom he may encounter. Eagle down and dried salmon roe are sometimes similarly used.

The powers of a person who has obtained supernatural ability, whether or not he is a shaman, can be destroyed by similar means. For example, a bad control so that he understands the speech of ravens, will lose his ability if he eats food cooked or prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has lost her husband within the last year, or if he passes through the hole in the floor used by an adolescent girl. The last Bella Coola with the skill was deadened to the cooing of the birds' croaking by lying near his sister one night for warmth, since her mere proximity was enough to nullify his power. This aspect of medicine merges with taboo. So, too, the power of an object can be destroyed by washing; an instance of this is

● 784 regard to two figurines prepared to cause love has been described.

785 In addition to these non-specialized medicines, the Bella Coola are acquainted with remedies for several specific ailments caused by supernatural beings. One of these, to cure a person in whose head a toad was formed, has already been described.

To Prevent Blindness

[783] [784] Loss of sight is caused by a bee flying into a man's face, or by a raven's dropping falling upon him so he looks upward. After either accident, rub a feather from any bird in a raven's liver and draw it across the eyes. The person practising this [785] cure must remain continent for one year or blindness will result.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Leg

If a man puts his foot in a hole so that he crumbles and falls, he without the use of that leg unless he overcomes the danger by placing a small stick upright in the cavity. In the summer of 1922 the writer noticed an old Bella Coola, with whom he was walking in the woods, break off a branch about one foot in length and place it in a hole where he had crumbled. He could give no explanation for his act, except that failure would cause him to lose the use of that leg.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Feet

If a person should happen to set his bare feet upon a dead wolf, he will lose the use of his lower limbs. The ancient to this has been forgotten within recent years, and patients are usually cured by shamans.

786 775 To Prevent the Revenge of a Ghost

The ghost of a murdered person usually rises to avenge himself on his killer, who can protect himself by obtaining a small piece from the body or clothing of his victim, a tuft of hair, a shred of cloth, or even a piece of earth from above his [734] was used by some of Pelle's ancestors. It was brought to the house and thrown in.

[735]

Taboos

[736] The Bella Coola regard as taboos those injunctions that are observed in the belief that their neglect would cause automatic punishment. The mechanism of enforcement is frequently not understood; it is enough to know that an unpleasant result would follow disobedience. Some taboos are in force at all times, others only during certain seasons of the year, and still others at critical periods of life. Since the psychology of such beliefs is essentially magical rather than religious, they could justifiably be grouped at this point. Unfortunately, to do so would destroy the continuity of accounts of birth, adolescence, death, ceremonial chastity, and many other aspects of Bella Coola life subject to taboo. The injunctions enforced by the River Guardian, the restrictions observed by a girl after puberty, the continence required after different medicines, all are taboos, disregard of which brings certain punishment. These and many others have already been described in connection with the activities to which they pertain. It is doubtful whether the Bella Coola have a single word to describe taboos in general, though they are all regarded as ramin, that is, as something which is ceremonially unclean.

[737] Scarcely to be distinguished from taboos are ceremonial errors, yas tsesa or ists tsesa. Failure to give presents to hereditk when a man breaks beneath a chief or a dance crumbles, or unnecessary activity during the year's waiting for the fruition of supernatural good fortune are ritual mistakes of this type. Neglect of such regulations brings punishment, though of a lesser kind than the breaking of taboos. If the error has been in connection with a ceremony, the offence can be wiped out by presents to hereditk, and the terms yas tsesa and ists tsesa are likewise applied to some of their prerogatives such as the ability to claim clothing during the marriage of a chief's child.

[738] Most taboos and errors can best be described with other

Schlichtkrull E.-: (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

hanging rock where no rain can penetrate. Long ago, some hunter failed to do this and became blind in consequence, hence the rite has since been carried out.

When a hunter is in the field, his wife must not swing. To do this causes him to go up into lofty and dangerous places as she rises on the swing, and also destroys the power laboriously accumulated by ceremonial chastity.

Ritual Acts

Ceremonialism is an extremely important aspect of Bella Coola life, but most of their rites are social or religious rather than magical, so that descriptions of them belong to other chapters. In connection with the taking of the first olachen and salmon, however, a number of ritual acts are performed to bring about desired ends; the element of propitiation is not entirely absent, but on the whole they may be considered as magical.

Rites connected with the first olachen

In the height of the olachen run, the fish are so abundant that they can be taken profitably in large purse-nets. They do not, however, come simultaneously, and eager fishermen keep watching for their arrival and catching the straggling forerunners in hand-dip-nets. These fish must not be eaten immediately. Each fisherman arranges a box in the front part of his house in which he deposits them as taken; if several men are doing this in a single dwelling, one box for each will be arranged near the front-door. Whenever a dance is held, eagle down is blown over the receptacle to placate the olachen and prevent them from being disturbed by the noise. As soon as a man has caught enough for a feast, he invites all his fellows to his house and the fish are distributed. It is taboo for any woman to share this meal, and it is most improper for a man to summon his neighbours until he has enough olachen to allow each guest to carry home a plentiful supply for his family. In former times, there used to be a number of meals of this kind,

[The Dance of Noakenim]

any uninitiated from their path. The kukuxiut also call hoip repeatedly, a further deterrent to the inquisitive. Alder and birch trees are selected and the hewers start to work. Whenever a tree falls, one of the party calls out: 575* 796X 532

Xuw...

This meaningless ejaculation, spoken as if by X, has the virtue of causing the tree to fall gently. The logs are cut into sections and as many provided as will be needed, since it is contrary to kuxiut custom for more than one trip to be made for wood. Towards dusk the cutters return, each carrying a burden by means of a tump-line across the forehead. The wood is laid softly on the floor, for it would be a gross insult to throw it down roughly. Meanwhile heralds are summoning the kukuxiut with a call of: 784 313 789 682 203

Nuxiutilap kukuxiut.

X has long since consulted his relatives on the one hand and the marshals on the other, concerning the number of masks to be used, and the beings to be portrayed. A mask of Ax'ilkwulaic is prepared for every kuxiut dance, but with this exception there is no uniformity in the representations. A man always shows his patron, as well as any beings intimately connected with him. Thus X must have a mask of Nuikpum, many of his passengers, and the supernatural beings who meet him at the mouth of the river. A present must be given to the carver of every mask, hence their actual number depends upon the expenditure X and his relatives are willing to make. 431 465

At dusk the kukuxiut are summoned by the heralds. X is with the marshals behind the fire and he heeds their advice as to the best carpenter for any special mask. When all have assembled X holds up one of the blocks of wood, calls on one of the kukuxiut by name and says: 203

"For Nuikpum," or whatever may be the figure required.

As the carpenter comes forward to take the billet the heralds call out: 203

"Pay attention to him," and as the carpenter takes the wood, X calls out at the top of his voice, xuw... 789

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This ejaculation is supposed to make the work of manufacture less difficult. The same procedure is repeated with every mask ordered, except that if the being to be represented is a woman, X's ejaculation is i ....., Any kwiat can make a mask, but the preference is always given to a man who has shown ability in previous tasks. The carpenters endeavour to follow well-recognized designs for many representations, but a great deal of latitude is allowed, and a workman receives greater praise and fame for turning out a fine and distinctive piece of new design, than for rigid adherence to a former type. This, combined with the burning of masks and consequent loss of permanent patterns, is responsible for the variability in Bella Coola forms, and the difficulty which they themselves experience in recognizing portrayed beings.

As soon as all the carpentry has been allotted, the singers strike up one of X's eight songs. Whether or not he dances to them is a matter about which there is a difference of opinion among informants. In any case the re-singing on nuxwiddlap is purely for rehearsal, made necessary by the large number of songs. Later on in the kwiat season, the songs of other dancers may be practised on this night, and if the owners wish to practice their steps, it is quite proper for them to do so. Finally, a meal is distributed, while the marshals discourse in the usual way. Feasts are features of all kwiat dances, and the food distributed is regarded as a free-will gift, without thought of repayment. After eating, the kwiatist disperse; X must sleep within his own house, but no longer remains within his platform-enclosure.

The next day, the twenty-sixth of the ceremony, is quiet. Early in the morning a herald summons to X's house, where the blocks have been left, all those to whom work has been assigned. All morning they carve diligently. The speed with which masks are completed is surprising, although this has undoubtedly increased since the introduction of metal tools. In the middle of the day a few kwiatist men, no women, are invited to share "the carpenters' meal," as the food provided

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

pelled; a Cannibal (II, p. 71) begins to growl and those who are not members of the society leave hastily. 575* 996*

The next event is the burning of the masks. The wearers remove them and lay them on the floor in front of the back-room at the point marked O in the accompanying sketch. Then X asks a friend to help him. The person chosen picks up any two of the masks and carries them around the fire, eastward, through B, where X is standing, to the point marked A (see Fig. 1). The helper throws one mask on the fire, and as he does so X lifts his arms, as if throwing up some heavy weight, at the same time uttering hoip, which has a beneficial effect in returning the mask whence it came. [989]

FIG. 1.
Diagram showing positions of participants during mask-burning.

As one informant put it: "May you have a safe journey."

The assistant throws the second mask on the fire, and again X throws up his arms and cries hoip. He crosses to A where he twice repeats the same cry, then returns to B. The assistant picks up two more masks and throws them on the fire at the same place and in the same manner as the two preceding, X also doing as he did before. The masks are taken two at a time until all have been burnt. The explanation given is to avoid the danger of the uninitiated seeing them, but whether or not this is a mere rationalization is doubtful. The Bella Coola say that the Bella Bella do not burn their masks. Next the singers strike up the first of X's songs and he dances, while musicians and audience joi' in; this is repeated for each of his songs. If it is desired to hasten the ritual, the lengthy singing and dancing is replaced by X giving only a short dance, unaccompanied by music. The Bella Coola do not appear to understand why they dance at this time, although it is said that it makes easy the departure of the masks. [322] [971]

In Kitamaat the ritual of mask-burning is slightly different. [114]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Wita]

"Path Cleaners" see to it that no one passes between him and the fire. The uninitiated are not expelled from the house and their curiosity is aroused. Meanwhile the singers prepare songs for X, describing his supernatural patrons, and some kekaxiat carpenters are instructed to make in secret ten small pieces of wood, about one foot in length and six inches wide, sometimes half-moon shaped. They cover these with dyed cedar-bark on which they paint the designs appropriate to each being.* On the morning of the fourth day,* X blackens his face with soot or charcoal, obtained by pouring water on a fire, and does the usual kaxiat customs. A herald then invites the kekaxiat to assemble in X's house. Presently they proceed to the lowest house of the village, where the singers beat out the tunes of the "Path Cleaners," remembered from a previous year. They dance, while X stands, shifting his feet and moving his arms as if he also wished to perform but was too weary to do so. This is repeated at every house of the village, except that in which the potlatch was held; most of the kekaxiat follow the procession, as do some of the uninitiated. Finally, with X last of all, they enter the potlatch house, where foreign guests and many uninitiated have assembled.

In Kimsquit the preliminary four days of watching are omitted, but from this point on, the rites of the two areas are practically identical.* As X enters, all the kekaxiat who have pounding sticks begin to beat on the floor and the women drum. Without delay, and without attention to the tinsmen drumming, X begins to dance, surveyor, around the fire, at intervals casting on it particles of eagle down which have the effect of making the supernatural ones above take their places. He calls out incoherently that he can see the beings above sitting down, and a herald repeats his remarks loudly. In Bella Coola the four "Path Cleaners" walk close behind X.

*The distinctive designs are given by Boas, to whom the reader is referred.

*It is probable that X must fast in doing what Hodgson's dancer reports that the tunes is at the mouth of the river.

*It is uncertain whether the differences in ritual are typical of Bella Coola and Kimsquit, or merely represent variations in individual prerogatives.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bilacoola NE6

575 the enclosure in the opposite corner to that from which they had emerged.

Awmuxtekum. Three or four masked figures appear together to portray these beings. Their function is to remind Alpenaw of those whom he should invite to his ceremonials above.

Snung. As this dreaded monster appears, the uninitiated cower convulsively and the kulaxiat women drone. Several masked figures accompany the Snung around the fire, blowing eagle down over the creature, and Ax'itsalxait explains to the uninitiated that this is to protect them from the monster. The heralds as usual echo his remarks. After one circuit of the fire, the Snung disappears into one of the enclosures behind the fire.

Hauhau. This supernatural, mythological denizen of the mountains, is in the form of an enormous bird with long beak and bony wings. The mask worn with tsdinguine is usually almost three feet in length, in the shape of a bird's head with long beak. A cloth passes from its bill down the wearer's back and is held in place by his belt, thus balancing the heavy, projecting bill (see Plate 6).[1] It is hinged so that the performer can make the mandible snap together by pulling a cord concealed under his blanket. A gesticulator, and such is always chosen to represent this creature, ends forward and downwards so that the snapping beak almost brushes the floor; then he rises and passes like a bird whooltstening and half crouched. Next he runs a few steps, in a circling manner, thus slowly circling the fire, and ultimately pass from sight into the enclosure other than that from which he has emerged. Several kulaxiat accompany the actor, blowing eagle down over him, the women drone and Ax'itsalxait keeps up a string of comments. After a short pause a second hauhau appears and circles the fire with its attendant kulaxiat. The same procedure is repeated for a third and fourth.

Alpenaw. This is the supernatural herald for Thunder, the leading kulaxiat among supernatural kings. He wears

[1] [see category 116, p 164 (1) – Analyst]

[The Dance of Thunder]

575 796 776 [123] [981] with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming fiercely. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1922-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the kukusiut were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Rainwater-Dripping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ant'lkwulnaie explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the planking. The Clowns [522] are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Ant'lkwulnaie. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

575 796 Dancers whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patron occurs. If [424] [821] Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too lustily up aloft. Xuo ...."

[989] The call of xuo ... is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any kukusiut women present at once drum, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

714 and one was held up by the bow paddler as the craft neared the 726 shore to protect him and those behind from arrows and stones cast by slings. When not in use, shields were laid away in boxes with some white substance resembling flour.[1] On the [103] shore of the fiord below Bella Coola, opposite Winter Bay, there are some boulders of the same white tint; even now these are often spoken of as "The Shields of the Bella Coola." It is said that hostile raiders, seeing them, used to remark that they had reached the outposts of Bella Coola.

726 The same lack of leadership shown during preparations for 901 a war was evident during hostilities. The so-called leader had 703 little authority over his men, who could desert and return home at any time. Lack of martial ability among their own chiefs [648] sometimes led the Bella Coola to place themselves under the [642] authority of a Bella Bella in a way which would be impossible for a war-like people. Frequently such divided leadership led to disaster, and is the surest proof that the Bella Coola were not as aggressive or bellicose as other coastal tribes.

726 Except when attacking the Carriers, all raiding parties
[589] embarked in canoes and followed a definite order of procedure [703] handed down from the past. In the stern of each craft sat the captain, a chief, who, as the craft was leaving, began to sing his ec-tle song, keeping time to it with the beats of his paddle; the recounting of the glories of their ancestors was supposed to encourage the warriors. Instead of leaving simultaneously, a rendezvous was often chosen down the fiord, and the expedition finally moved off from there when all the canoes had arrived. While still in friendly territory, a flotilla proceeded 726 openly. A small amount of dried salmon and water was car-
● 789 ried by a war party and morsels of the former were eaten at intervals. The bow-man took as much food and drink as he thought could be consumed at one sitting, put a fragment of dried salmon in his mouth, chewed it four times on the same side of his mouth as he was paddling, and swallowed it. Then

[1] Some understanding informants said to have had protective or preservative qualities.

2:14c Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

he took a sip of water, followed by another piece of dried fish, 926
chewed it four times, and washed it down as before. This was 789 four times repeated so that the provender consumed consisted of four morsels of salmon, each chewed four times, and four sips of water; it was most important that no more should be taken into the mouth than could be swallowed at a single gulp. Having eaten, the bow-man passed the food which he had taken from the store to the paddler behind him who ate and drank in the same manner, except that he chewed with the other side of his mouth, corresponding to the fact that he paddled on the other side of the canoe from the man in the bow. So the food and drink was passed down to the captain. If possible, he was required to eat whatever was left, though if there was too much, he threw the remains over his shoulder into the water. He was also expected to swallow whatever water was passed to him, but if there was too much he would lie back, his head projecting over the stern, and pour it out over his face so that it fell into the ocean. As the food and drink were completely consumed, so it was believed the enemy would be annihilated. If the bow-man had failed to take out enough salmon and water, the captain received none of it, since no second portion could be served.

Each captain took with him a supply of dyed and undyed 926 cedar-bark which was stowed in the bow of the canoe. During 914 the course of the day, the party would land and the chief decide 824 upon some decoration made by combining strands of the two colours of bark to serve as a distinguishing mark for members of the same canoe. He took out as much bark as he thought would suffice, and the bow-man was the first to don the symbol. The second paddler followed, and each in turn did the same in order of his position in the canoe. If too much had been taken, the captain had to wear collars of whatever was left over; if too little, he had to do without. Having thus arrayed themselves, the party continued until nightfall when a secluded spot 926 was chosen for camping. Wood was collected and fires laid, 784
but no light was ever struck and the warriors lay around the 922

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Tsimshian NE15

the body to his own house, preparatory to burying it. It was April, but as they were waiting, a violent thunderstorm blew up from the east, the only time that such had ever occurred at that season. Thunder had promised to come to Tsesti's aid, but the latter had died too suddenly to make any appeal; the supernatural one had just learnt of his protégé's death and had come rushing to his assistance. Realizing the danger, the executioner and his friends hastily buried the corpse, throwing over it a number of blood-stained cloths, and finally stamping down the earth. There was a furious hurricane; trees were uprooted, houses shook, the earth over the grave swirled as if in a whirlpool and chunks of it were carried up into the air. Only the potency of the blood on the cloths prevented the corpse to life of Tsesti.[1]

This second unsuccessful attack on the Kitkatla so disheartened the Bella Coola that they made no more raids on their northern foemen who, flushed with victory, became ever bolder than before. As usual, the Kimsquit and Tsi'o people suffered more than the inhabitants of the main valley. On one of these forays, about 1835, the Kitkatla killed Sakwaxlaxl, a brother of Parka, the leading chief of the Bella Coola at the time. This was contrary to all the rules of warfare since he was a member of one of the leading families and the donor of many potlatches, a man whose name was as well known as that of Parka, Nakinkelem of Fort Rupert, or Tsakwa himself. The loss of such chiefs was enough to prevent them except during the actual heat of conflict, and the Bella Coola were justly angry.

A few years later a single canoe came paddling up North Bentinck Arm and was hailed about half a mile from the head. Scouts investigated, and returned to Kimsquit with news that the newcomers were Kitkatla, and that Tsakwa himself was among them. At once there was heated discussion among the people of the lower valley. Many who had had relatives in the previous struggle wished to wipe out the party, others, to see what they wanted. A few daring individuals skulked through the forest and fired on the visitors at long range; they were answered, not with bullets, but by the four crews holding aloft of a mountain-skin, a sign of friendly intentions. If the avengers had fired on the strangers, a fight would have ensued, but this peaceful reception disarmed suspicion.

[1] This tale is a curious illustration of the manner in which supernatural elements become more less accurate which have no historical basis. It is to be assumed that the murderers were in a suggestible state owing to privation, and readily believed that supernatural powers must have assisted them. Tsesti was found as a corpse, and probably boasted of a visitation from Thunder during his wanderings. This was accepted and the interposition of impossible incidents followed in due course.

Jv Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NEA Bellacoola NEA

SYMPATHETIC MAGIC AND WITCHCRAFT AMONG THE BELLACOOLA

By HARLAN I. SMITH

MANY OF the Bellacoola Indians today believe in sympathetic magic and witchcraft, after over a hundred years of contact with white men. Most of them live within hearing of the bells of the mission church, and the government school. Not a few of the men take logging contracts; some of them build and operate motor boats; many of them join the fishing fleets at the salmon canneries; most of the women work in the canneries; and all deal at the white men's stores.

The Bellacoola lived at the heads of the long inlets half way up the Pacific Coast of Canada and in the tributary Bella Coola valley. Now, numbering perhaps two hundred and fifty, they, with the exception of a few families, are concentrated at one reservation at the mouth of the Bella Coola river. The Bella Coola valley has been called the Norway of Canada. This was where Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to cross Canada overland, reached the sea.

Aboriginally, the Bellacoola were of the North Pacific Coast culture of America, which is characterized by the extensive use of red cedar and its products, particularly salmon, the making of graceful, sea-going canoes, each hewn from a single cedar, the erection of large rectangular houses made of cedar planks, with carved house posts and totem poles, lack of pottery, and expertness in carpenter work, carving, and painting. This culture belongs to the hundred arts, but the Bellacoola were secondary to a certain extent. The art of the area was first best known from the paintings and carvings of the totem poles, largely of conventionalized animal forms. The life centered around a very highly developed social organization, an extensive and powerful financial system, and property rights to names, rituals and houses. The Bellacoola language is one of the Salish linguistic stock. They are apparently more recent comers to the coast than their neighbors and have not fully adopted this coast culture.

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The following examples of sympathetic magic and witchcraft, collected during 1920 to 1923 among the Bellacoola, illustrate the extent of their belief in this direction.

Most of this information was given me by the late Captain Schooner, born about 1848, and Joshua Moody, born about 1868, both apparently full-blood Bellacoola Indians. Neither of them spoke English and both gave me the data in Chinook jargon, which I have endeavored to interpret and arrange in logical order, but have tried to render in as nearly as possible the Indian mode of thought, feeling and expression. Schooner was a pagan gentleman. Joshua has great knowledge of plants and animals, and is a Bellacoola scientist, but his great ambition and jealousy, combined with his disloyalty in giving up his own people's customs and adopting a very thin veneer of Christianity, color his statements relating to beliefs, although his plant and animal data have always withstood cross examination and comparison with the data supplied by other Indians. Alec Davis and Mrs. Willie Mack told of the toad. They do not talk English and spoke to me in Chinook jargon. Only the accounts about the grizzly bear skin and the bracelet of beaver skin, which were given me by Mrs. Stonsiger, were told in English.

The material was not given as accounts of magic or witchcraft, but rather as part of the data regarding the properties of plants and animals of which I was endeavoring to collect as complete information as possible.

Joshua, who is even younger than Captain Schooner, remembers the time when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in the Bella Coola valley, and when they saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently these men remember the old Bellacoola beliefs before they were much, if at all, affected by European ideas.

It will be noticed that magic among the Bellacoola is considered of use both for beneficial and injurious purposes, and that the materials giving effect to it are of both plant and animal origin.

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

759 The beneficial purposes include: making a child grow up to
● 789 be a good dancer, industrious, a swift berry picker, or a strong 856 man; curing lung trouble; making the river crude where wanted; and two ways of stopping rain. The injurious purposes include:
two ways of making a person grow up to be a thief; the causing of cruiness and quarrelsomeness and the three ways of causing death.

759 The materials and actions used include: ashes of aspen leaves;
789 a dead toad, used with hair, with a red cedar bark face wiper, 824 and with lost pieces of thimble berry shoots which were acciden-825 tally dropped while being eaten; ashes of a yellow jacket's nest; a living raven with phlegm; beaver paws, in two instances; a skin bracelet from a beaver's foreleg; a dead wood-rat; a dead mouse;
a grizzly bear's skin; a living red squirrel with a bit of spruce fringe; setting fire to a wood-rat's house; and poking an ant hill.

789 To make a person a good dancer the ashes of the burned leaves 856 of the aspen or trembling poplar were said to be useful, but 824 Jenkins said this may have been a joke. The Bellacoola Indians 836 say the leaves dance. They never say that they tremble. When a baby was born, if the parents talked about it and the father desired that the baby grow up to be a good dancer, the mother or father got the leaves, burned them and put the ashes on the baby's hands, knees and elbows. When telling of this Jenkins held his hands with the finger tips up and moved them as the Bellacoola do in dancing. Both rich and poor men danced.

789 A baby girl would grow up to be industrious, it was believed,
825 if the warm flesh of a recently dead beaver were applied to her.
824 The Bellacoola apparently observed the great industry of the beaver.

To make a baby girl grow up to be a fast berry-picking woman, the ring of skin from between two ribs around a beaver's foreleg was put on her wrist and was left on until it were off.

To make a boy grow up to be a strong man, a skin of the grizzly bear, was thrown over him, generally by his father.

755 For phlegm on the lungs, more permanent than a simple cold, 825 the patient expectorated in something and some one secretly mixed the fresh phlegm with salmon eggs and put the mixture

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NES Bellecoola NES

eat for the ravens to eat. This was done four times, and if a raven ate it, the patient recovered, according to Captain Schooner's belief. As the call of the raven sounds somewhat like a person affected with phlegm in the throat, this may be a case of sympathetic magic, at any rate it is one of witchcraft. 755 835 [754]

To make the river erode at a certain place in order to break a log jam, a beaver's foot was buried in each of several spots in the place. 757 835

A continuous rain would cease, and the sun would come out, it was said, if the people set fire to a wood-rat's house.

When it rained too much the Bellacoola Indians poked down an ant hill and said, "Give us warm sunshine." They believed this would bring results, but now that Joshua is a Christian he says he does not believe it and says it is useless play talk.

Bad boys or girls, but not adults, would take a dead mouse, warm it over a fire, and rub the warmed mouse on the hands of a baby. This made the baby steal when it grew up. The so-called stealing habits of the mouse were supposed to be transferred to the child. 754 836 835

The still warm body of a freshly killed wood-rat was used in the same way to make a baby, boy or girl, "crazy," and grow up to be a constant thief. The notorious habits of the wood-rat, as well as those of the mouse, were evidently well recognized by the Bellacoola.

To make people crazy, the red squirrel had to be properly used by a shaman and then it possessed strong power. One woman who had been made crazy in this way died in 1897. She did not like the shaman and he did not like her. He stole her apron. She was sorry. He took it into the forest and performed witchcraft because he wanted to spoil her life by making her crazy. He caught a red squirrel alive, possibly in a little basket. He had a box called a "bad box," in which he kept his things of evil power. He put some of the fringe of her apron around the red squirrel and let it run far away. The woman then became crazy and sometimes fell down, but part of the time she seemed well. My Indian informant, Joshua, had seen her. This example of sympathetic 754 756 835

B
C 114
[04]

of these data refer to insects, and may be of interest to entomologists, although my spelling of Indian words is very problematical, because some of the sounds I can neither hear nor make, and I am unable to record adequately many of those that I can hear. The data here given are preliminary to a complete working over of my notes, but are believed to be nearly complete.

B
$25

Insects apparently were not so well observed by the Bellacoola as were useful mammals and plants, the stinger of the bumble-bee, for instance, being supposed to be in its mouth. Few insects had names, that is, mainly those which were used or which troubled the Indians. Insects were not used for food, and honey was unknown until after the coming of the white man. The head of the gad-fly was used as a pattern in painting designs, the nest of the yellow-jacket in sympathetic magic or witchcraft, and "fly spit" was said to be good for sores. They had a story about the bumble-bee.

B
[262]
[532]
[757]
[789]

C
$25

Among the Ulkatcho also observation of insects was weaker than that of mammals and plants, and they apparently had names for only a few insects, those which troubled them. Ant lyon pits and its method of taking prey were known. Insects were of no use to the Ulkatcho whatever. An instance was observed of an Indian smoking himself with a bumble fly held in his mouth. They employed smudges, fish oil, gum of the cottonwood, and blossoms of cow parsnip with oil to protect themselves from mosquitoes, black flies and no-see-ums, and smoke to protect foods from flies.

C
[75]

The Ant lyon, among the Ulkatcho, is called Kimulkets. It is said to be numerous at Ulkatcho, but that it was unknown and that there was no story about it. My informant voluntarily showed me the pits made by the larvae of this insect and, catching ants for the purpose, demonstrated its well-known method of taking its prey.

The grasshopper (Orthoptera), that makes a noise by rubbing its wings together when it flies, was called Tokus, among the Ulkatcho.

B $25
757

"Fly spit," that is the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, also known as a frog hopper (Cercopidae), is said

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

with a number of the large cone-shaped whistles used for sisaok ceremonial. Towards dawn, sounds come from these, and sometimes a dull thump is heard on the roof, as if a heavy being had landed there. At once there is great excitement within the house. The voices of supernatural people prove them to be at hand. No one is allowed to leave except a sisaok siki[9] who is skilled in dealing with Mulakila,[10] also called Sixsixqwtnam, the supernatural being closely connected with the sisaok ritual. Those within can hear the voice of the siki raised as if he were speaking to someone at a distance.

"Chief, you have come too early," he says. "The house is not yet ready. Please return later."

He is answered by loud whistling, which grows fainter, as if the being who made it were moving away. In reality the young men are merely blowing less forcibly into the whistles.

---

[9]The accounts of all informants agree that much of the sisaok ritual was newly imported into Bella Coola from Bella Bella. According to some statements, Pudas, a Bella Coola chief who died between 1870 and 1880, married a Bella Bella wife, also one from Rivers Inlet, and it was these two women who brought with them as dower certain sisaok prerogatives. It is said that previous to that time the Bella Coola did not understand the use of the large cone-shaped whistles, nor were they able to summon the supernatural beings to the youths secluded in the back-room, nor to dispel the beings at the conclusion of the rites. On the other hand, some Bella Coola claim that their first ancestors brought the whistles with them from the land above. It is probable that the calling in of the supernatural beings is a recent addition to the potlatch, which accounts for the contradictory accounts, but whether or not the whistles are a new feature is more doubtful. It appears certain that the prerogatives of siki has recently been obtained from the Bella Bella. Siki means "the one who cures," and the name is given to the man whose prerogative it is to tend the hasiat initiates in whom supernatural powers are located. In Bella Bella there is a similar functionary for sisaok matters, known as a hai-alakila. Through intermarriage several Bella Coola have recently obtained this prerogative; in each case it is frankly stated that it has been derived from the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola apply to these, as favoured, the term siki, as they do for the hasiat "cures," though the Bella Bella name, hai-alakila, is used with equal frequency. The present siki have endeavoured to claim for themselves certain ceremonial functions formerly carried out by any sisaok. In this account of a potlatch it is assumed that a siki is functioning on all occasions, but in many cases any senior sisaok is considered sufficiently close to the supernatural beings to act satisfactorily. Until about 1870 it is clear that any sisaok was regarded as capable of doing so.

[10]Knowledge of this being is said to have been acquired by the marriage of a certain Smoqu of Kimsquit to a Bella Bella woman in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

served ceremonial chastity and was, therefore, in a good position to receive premonitions of this kind. The next day, as they were paddling down the river, they came upon some treacherous ice. Forewarned, they hastily abandoned their canoe, one side of which was soon broken in the way Tsálin had described; if they had continued their journey they would certainly have been drowned. 787 *

The dreams thus far recorded have all been capable of simple explanation; in fact, their meaning is obvious, either visually or audibly. In addition, there are a number of types considered to be symbolic by the Bella Coola. There are no professional interpreters, but it is believed that in ancient times shamans learnt the significance of certain images and this knowledge has since been transmitted from generation to generation. [791] [956]

One type indicates a coming birth. If a woman dreams that she travels to some distant spot, under the ocean or into the mountains, and there takes something in her hand, it signifies that she will soon bear a male child; on the other hand, if she picks up some small object when gathering berries, a daughter will be born. A Kimsquit informant stated that before his birth, his mother dreamt that she had gone far under the mouth of the Dean River to the vicinity of *Ḡwaqme'*s house, where she had taken up a child. From this she knew she was pregnant and he was born in due course. If the scene of the dream is in the mountains, it means that the child will be a good hunter; if under water, that he will be a successful fisherman, as it proved in this case. There is a vague belief that death takes place either near the spot where the mother received indication of conception, or that the life and spirit of the deceased visit the place before setting out on their journey back from generation to generation. The old man from whom this information was obtained expects to meet death by drowning, though he is himself uncertain whether his premonition is due to his mother's dream or to the fact that there has been a tendency for this to occur in his family. 787 * 843

787 * [961] [996]

[Kusiok Society Initiation]

* 575 all is that something strange has happened to the "mural." 203 At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, 796 and towards nightfall goes around calling:

Shrap, shrap, Sakaciani, "Care, care, ye members of the Sacriar society, power has come to the son of the chief (or to the mural)."

The Sakaciar assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a ciki to help X."

* 575 In every village there are at least two Sakaciar who have, 791 embedded with their Sacriar names, the professional prerogative 796 of acting as leader to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a [428] revelation from some supernatural leader. Since that time the [773] owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own supernatural power into a talisman to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fetish taught to the uninitiated. The profession of ciki can be trans- [428] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is ciki for both Sacriar and Kusiok. In answer to the herald's call, the two ciki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, [202] decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his [257] shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hoofs or puffin beaks. Meanwhile bearing sticks are distributed among most of the Sakaciar who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the ciki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a small crystal (see Plate 5). He waves this to and fro in his hands, then gives through the motion of throwing it to his partner, the crystal disappears! It has been pulled out of sight at the instant of throwing, but the presumption is that it has entered the other side who falls to the floor as if stricken down by the powerful object given to him. Now one of the Initiates, who has been primed for the duty, strikes the recumbent man on the back, causing him to consciousness. Slowly he pulls himself together, rising at intervals as if crushed beneath a heavy weight, and writhes until he finally produces a rock crystal from his stomach, as if it had been thrown to him. In reality it is his own which he has carried concealed from the beginning of the ceremony. He pretends to throw this to X, often so violentally that the novice blinks, expecting some object to strike him. All this time a Tactor, it does not matter who, has been drinking water at intervals and spitting it out over the face of X, "to strengthen him." When X has received the stone, the bearing on the floor-boards, willed during the transference of the crystal, breaks out again with full din. After a short interval the first side stops the noise, goes through the same contortions and produces, apparently from his stomach, another rock crystal, which as before he throws across to his partner who falls down, and later passes it to X. Again the bearing on the floor is renewed. The same ritual is carried out until four, or sometimes only two, rock crystals have been given to X. Then the procedure is reversed. The second side goes to the novice and after much contortion draws from his stomach one of the crystals, which he pretends to throw back to his partner. As the latter makes the motion of catching it, he produces his own crystal which he, as it seems, forces into his own body. This is done for all the crystals (see Plate [illegible]). At this juncture the uninitiated are told to leave.

[See category 116, p 84(2) - Analysis]

[Rosicrucian Society Initiation]

One of the side now kneels the back of X's neck and goes through the motions of pulling something from it. The Grand Master realizes that his spirit is being drawn from him and his nerves, great in any case, is not lessened by the side taking it in his cupped hands to the fire where he snaps up some saliva which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course he mentioned only the saliva but X, unaware of this, is convinced for the love of his spirit. So fast is to succeed to him and he is told that the rite has altered it from that of an uninitiated person to that of a Saint.[1] The psychological effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the rite is tremendous.

[See Glossary 116, pp 60-63) - Author]

[Secret Society Initiation]

The four rite now instructs two Initiated sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the rite announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, pausing here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call, but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a grain or bean Shellfish-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

"Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two Initiated on whom X is sitting.

If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the line. His father, or whoever is may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up and exhibits his origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes an-

[1] This part of the rite has been carried to so much more that some of the middle-aged Initiated have forgotten it.

575*
996*
142
342
292
991

PLATE 3

Photograph by R. J. Smith, Natural History of Canada

Old grubbing a crystal from his stomach

[p. 84 (c)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Cannibal Dance]

* 575
* 796

his song, which they now proceed to sing as though they had obtained it from X in his vestige; they have, of course, composed it themselves in advance. The words describe the experiences of X in the region aloft. When the song has been practised, food, and later presents as "bandages" for the wounds, are distributed. Other gifts are often given to everyone, irrespective of whether or not the recipient has been bitten. A marshal functions as usual; then the people disperse.

[491]

Presently as night falls and the people are preparing for sleep, X goes outside with a number of kokaxiut followers. On the sidewalk the singers, a number of kokaxiut women, and men with drums have assembled. X begins his high pitched call of ewe, ewe, ewe, as if longing for meat; the whistle sounds at intervals and the singers begin their song with the women joining in. When the melody has ended, the party moves to a position outside another house where the same ceremony is repeated. X suddenly becomes frenzied, rushes madly from place to place, his ewe, ewe, ewe resounds, and he dashes into a dwelling, growling ferociously. The musicians pay no attention to his actions, but complete their singing of the same song outside every house. When this has been finished, the kokaxiut gather in X's home to make him sufficiently heavy so that he can lie down. This is done by calling upon those individuals who have the prerogative of using the crystals at initiation. They come forward and, with wild gyrations, extract them from their stomachs and insert them into X's body through his nose, thus partially deadening him so that he can relax. The people disperse when this has been accomplished. As usual, the heralds have informed those living in the other houses of what has been taking place.

[424]
[491]

The next morning the kokaxiut construct a strong platform behind the fire on which X is supposed to rest for the next four days. In practice he can do almost anything he likes, provided that he is not seen by the uninitiated. The crystals present into his nose dashes him to small noises, but if he hears people talking loudly together, he at once becomes excited and rushes

1:Mc:Dwratth NEA Bellacoola NEA

431, 796

/For information on the potlatch as a means of gaining prestige and a description of the ceremonies, see category 556./

● 796
765

/For information on the details of the memorial potlatch ceremonies for the dead, see category 765./

124 where I was working. Before I left, this medley contained so much Bella Coola that it was unintelligible to white people who knew Chinook alone.

Activities in the camp would have interfered seriously with my work during the summer of 1922 if two men had not been confined to the village, Captain Schooner owing to an injured wrist, and Jim Pollard by the illness of his wife. These two men were willing to work half a day spare without jealousy. Each was intensely proud of the traditions of his people and, realizing that their culture was passing away, was glad to assist in making it permanent in writing. An intimacy sprang up between Captain Schooner (see Plate 3) and myself culminating in my adoption, a circumstance which established and improved my position in the community. In this way I was enabled to collect a large amount of material before July when it was necessary for me to leave for the east.

In September, 1923, when I returned to Bella Coola, I found that Captain Schooner had died a few months before, regretted alike by white men and Indians. With the aid of others with whom I had made contact it was possible to obtain much new information, as well as to clear up many obscure points. The previous summer I had been so overwhelmed with material that I had no time to collate it in the field and the gaps only become apparent after a year's study. The men were so busy hunting and laying in stocks of fire-wood, however, that I found it difficult to arrange regular hours of work, but this was a little compared with the initial difficulties of my first trip. In October, when the Bella Coola began to prepare for the winter dances, they had to appoint a successor to Captain Schooner, who had played a leading part in their productions. Having been adopted by him, it was suggested that I take his place, a proposition which I readily accepted. This admitted me to the circle of the old men, and I imagine that my interest encouraged them to hold more ceremonials than they had done for several years. In former times, a number of the older men used to devote much time and thought to the composing, remembering, and ordering of songs; in 1913 it was found that Jim Pollard (see Plate 2) alone had a sufficiently accurate memory to act as announcer. As more and more rites wished to perform, he found himself unable to keep the town in order, and asked me to join the chair as prompter. I held this position for the rest of the winter, taking a full part in every ceremony. Although the old customs had broken down enormously, this actual participation enabled me to understand the winter dances in a manner impossible from mere description. Later on, phonographic records were made of many of the songs and, thus preserving specimens of the fast disappearing music.

[illegible]

My intimate association with the Bella Coola enabled me to collect the material here preserved which, having been verified and reverified, I have every reason to believe is correct. Nevertheless, it has one serious defect owing to the lack of assistance of my own. I found it almost impossible to differentiate certain sounds; in fact, I sometimes recorded the same word with different spellings. Consequently, I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the native terms used in this monograph. Moreover, I was entirely unable to analyze proper names, which would have been of great value in understanding the attributes of supernatural beings.

When writing up field notes, the realization of my own inefficiency in the recording of sounds tempted me to rely upon the spelling of Boas whenever possible. After considerable hesitation, I rejected this course for the following reason. Ethnological work falls into two categories, descriptive and comparative. This monograph is of the former type, based on actual work in the field and the inclusion of any material from another source would destroy its originality. I believe that a descriptive work should consist exclusively of the author's own research, and I have adhered to this principle in spite of the advantages which would have followed the use of Boas' linguistic terms. For the same reason no attempt has been made to compare the customs and beliefs of the Bella Coola with those of other tribes, although this would undoubtedly have shed from Swalik. My informant's grandchildren signed themselves as Swalik boys, and their names are embedded in myths of their village, although their fathers have not lived there for five generations. There is no reason to suppose this case exceptional. Other instances were obtained of movements of people from one village to another at earlier times, and there seems no cause to doubt the general accuracy of them. Names embedded in the origin myths of different towns are used as patronymics and have been potent factors in keeping their memory alive. Unconscious and inconscious there must be in the foregoing list, but on the whole it appears to be fairly reliable, since few contradictions were received from different informants.

Instances obtained of the same connection from the descendants of people of different villages were found in most cases to be identical. There were a few differences in custom between the people of Dean and those of the other upper valley towns on the one hand, and the inhabitants of the lower valley on the other. These will be mentioned when necessary, but on the whole the inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley can be considered as a tribal entity.

Boas (p. 28) gives a list of Bella Coola towns which agrees fairly well with the above. Among his villages are included Pe-ech (no. 4), Pelqaqelmax (no. 7), and Pacelkum (no. 16).* All the other people agreed that these are the names of towns, though settlements located on them may have been known by the same designations. Names of the five villages recorded by Boas, nos. 4, 5, 9, 14, and 14, were not known by several old men questioned on the subject.

The villages of the Bella Coola valley did not form a political unit; each was independent. A common language was spoken throughout and the inhabitants of the different towns recognized that their origin and customs were similar. This was also recognized to be the case with regard to the people living on South Bentinck Arm, and on the head of Dean Channel.

* Spelling is such as in the spelling of his ethnography.

others. This differentiated them clearly from all neighbouring tribes.

B. Consanguinity. A member of a secret society in any of the above towns was accepted as a member in any other one. A person of another tribe, even if known to belong to a compatible society, was treated as an uninitiated person.

C. Gnomes and Ancestors. The people of Bella Coola, Dean, and Kimsquit felt themselves to be akin through acquaintance of the fact that their ancestors had been created together in the beginning of time. This marked them off with great clearness from all other tribes, especially from the Carriers of the interior. This belief formed a sentimental and religious bond of great strength.

Neighbouring Tribes

It is desirable to describe, briefly, the tribes with which the Bella Coola came in contact.

THE CARRIERS

East of Bella Coola, until the mountains of the interior, dwelt the Carriers. In summer they often came down to the river valley to fish or trade for salmon, and in winter they were sometimes forced by cold and starvation again to visit the Bella Coola, Bella Bella, or Rivers Inlet people. There was a good deal of intermarriage between them and the inhabitants of the upper valley, so that the wanderers were able to spend the cold months with relatives. Since the law, the Bella Coola considered these people utterly foreign in habits and beliefs, and to call a man a "Carrier" was, and still is, a deadly insult. The Carriers lacked the rich ceremonial life of the coastal peoples who, therefore, regarded them with scorn and contempt. The presence of a few of the much-despised Carriers was, however, almost necessary to the correct performance of the winter dances since they were established spectators whom it was necessary to impress and delude.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

from the moon and stated that there were mountains and snow on it. It is commonly stated that the marks on the moon represent a man carrying a basket.

The stars figure but slightly either in Bella Coola mythology or thought; it is not even known who made them. Two in the Great Bear constellation are called respectively Tpikste and Xwqwaw, "Little Girls." A lone star in the same part of the sky, named A'lox, is said to be following the girls to the forest for illicit intercourse.

Moon, stars, and shows all the sun, were, and still are to a certain extent, used by the Bella Coola in computing the passage of time. There are no individuals with the definite prerogative of keeping count of time, but formerly wise old men used to do so.[9] Differences of opinion were thought rather than the exception, a condition which often led to bitter disputes concerning the proper date for starting the winter ceremonials. Boas (p. 41) has recorded the Bella Coola calendar in greater detail than the present writer has been able to do. The making of calendrical observations is a lost art, and the following list of the months was all that could be learned. It will be noted that these agree with Boas in regard to the months in the early part of the year, but not in those between the summer and winter solstices; no explanation is offered for this disparity.

First moon after the summer solstice: Sk̓ālamstat, which has the significance, "The Time for Sockeye Salmon to Ascend the River."

Second moon after the summer solstice: Sl̓ēlalil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon."

Third moon after the summer solstice: Sl̓ēmsi ot, "The Time for Eating Coho Salmon."

Fourth moon after the summer solstice: Sqēlqum, "The Time for Gathering Fern Root," or Sēlalmx̌ Xwl̓ēmkstsin,

9. Khwapilt informant stated that there were professional calendrical experts in the being when he was a young lad although members of the leader society (Sk̓ēmp. 1) sometimes attended to this matter.

1:Mc:Dermith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

621 establish himself with the traditions of his new home. This is another illustration of the patrilineal tendency of the whole 614 organization. 553

Politically, the village is the most important Bella Coola unit. Usually, though not always related to one another, the inhabitants are always friends. If an attack is made on a village by a hostile war-party, all the inhabitants suffer equally. On the other hand, if the residents decide to attack another 628 settlement, there is no compulsion for anyone to share the burden. Each individual, with the exception of slaves, follows his own inclination. In the case of murder or other wrong 619 inflicted by an individual, the responsibility rests on his immediate family, not the village. Factions within the village seem 575 to have been unimportant; individual jealousies were common, and often led to murder, but if a family became unpopular or 627 considered itself aggrieved, it usually moved to another village. Neighbouring settlements were generally on friendly terms and 628 often assisted each other in war, but this was not compulsory. Indeed, cases are known in which a war-party from the outer coast, about to attack Ilaxul, passed within a quarter of a mile of Qoqqa·ts without its inhabitants even warning their downstream neighbours.

As far as internal organization is concerned, the village is as fluid a unit as are most Bella Coola groupings. If one individual has attained a position of eminence through the potlatch 622 system (vol. I, chap. iv), he is "chief" of the village, and his 554 advice is generally followed. If several men have approximately the same importance, there is no dominating figure. 536
In any case, a chief lacks executive authority, and such obedience as he receives is due to his personal influence. Some slight deference is paid to the man who uses the name of the eldest of the first group of settlers, the first chief, but this is not sufficient to warrant the title of "chief" with the significance usually attached to the term. The important members of the village 621 are summoned to meet for the discussion of ceremonial mat- 623 585
796

Schiffer/Swanton E-3 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

621 628 [535] [196] 361 [184] [342] [171] [417] [164] [433] 342 [354] [572] [623] [261] [353] [535]

sers, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the sidewalls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and anyone present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

Although guests from different tribes are sometimes invited to other ceremonials, it is at potlatches that they are essential. Since the validity of such transactions as marriages, divorces, or the assumption of professional prerogatives depends on the presence of witnesses, and since the importance of such a rite depends on the number of witnesses, a man is always eager to carry out any public performance at a potlatch when he is sure of the attention of foreigners, and the consequent wider diffusion of knowledge of what he has done. The man who has invited guests is usually willing to allow others to perform at his potlatch, since it increases the complexity and importance of the affair. It follows that no two potlatches are alike; one will contain features entirely lacking in another. Moreover, the wealth of the donor determines how many rites he himself will cause to be performed. The fundamental concept of the potlatch is the inviting of guests from abroad to witness rites in connection with an ancestral myth, especially the return of a recently deceased relative of the donor to visit the living.

At any important potlatch the following rites are carried out, and in the account of the ritual it will be assumed that these alone are taking place. If the reader bears this summary in mind, he is less likely to be confused by the complication of rites.

(1) The return of a dead ancestor to visit the living.

(2) The initiation of young men or women into the nuxnt society. This includes the validation of a nuxnt name for each, and a period of seclusion in the back-room. The initiates may either be relatives of the donor of the potlatch, or young persons whose relatives are taking the opportunity to carry out the rite in the presence of foreigners. Some of the initiates may already be members of the society, undergoing a further period of seclusion in order to increase their status by a further distribution of presents.

(3) The payment by the wife of the donor and her family of goods to "rebuy" her from her husband. This is a legal fiction, though necessary to maintain the status of the children.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(4) The strengthening of the donor's seat. 556*

(5) The strengthening, or initial establishment, of seats for a number of young relatives of the donor who may, or may not, be those who are being initiated into the nuaxk society. Other youths may also be established on seats by their relatives. 796

The duration of a potlatch varies with the number of rites being performed. The preliminaries, including the beginning of seclusion for nuaxk initiates, requires at least several weeks, in some cases months. There is further delay of a week or more after the arrival of the first guests, as only when the last party has arrived can the actual potlatch begin. This can then be completed in three days and nights, although if many initiates are performing their nuaxk dances, a longer time is required.

What are the consequences of giving a potlatch?

In the first place the donor spreads the fame of his name far and wide, also the myth with which it is incorporated. Thus he increases the renown of his ancestors, a source of intense pride and gratification. 556*

More important even than this, it elevates the donor himself. With the proper carrying out of the complicated ritual and the knowledge that his name is now known among different tribes, a man experiences a feeling of mental superiority which enables him to take a leading part in the affairs of his community. In Bella Coola a chief (stâhmq) is a person whose influence is paramount owing to his success in giving potlatches.* If several chiefs in one village have given potlatches, he who has given most is generally of greatest importance, although often a man of forceful character who has held, for example, five potlatches will be regarded with greater respect than one of lesser weight, even if he has given six. The whole system is exceedingly fluid, as might be expected where chieftainship depends on individual prowess. In theory, the man who holds the name of the first person to occupy a village, at [156] 556* 622 [554] [182]

*Particularly if he has given four potlatches and can accordingly be described as a nuxwâl chief (I, p. 172). In nuxwâl songs the archaic word stâhmq is also sometimes employed for "chief."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

ability are always seeking to lend goods to those who are planning potlatches or other rites, knowing that the investment is safe and lucrative. 556 [426]

X uses his own discretion as to how much wealth is necessary. He knows how much he owes for presents received on previous occasions, and would not dream of giving a potlatch until able to repay these. Failure to do so would hold him up to the derision of the whole countryside. But he acts upon his own judgment with regard to interest. If he continues to hoard goods until he is able to repay with great increase, he gains prestige from his generous returns, but meanwhile he does not enjoy the distinction which would have followed a smaller affair at an earlier period. Further, there is the uncertainty about how much his wife's family will contribute, though that can be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy; in Bella Coola every transaction is made publicly, so each man knows the wealth of his neighbour. The favourite month for a potlatch is October, before the kusiut dances, when there is abundance of food. At this season there is plenty of salmon roe, berries, and crabapples, all of which might be ruined by frost. Occasionally, a potlatch takes place after the kusiut period, but in that case the only foods available are olachen grease, smoked meat, smoked fish, dried hemlock-bark, and dried berries. If several men in one village decide to give potlatches in the same year there may be rivalry and dispute as to which shall be first. There is no satisfactory method of settling this point. [626] [796] [262] [578]

When all is ready X tells a herald (I, p. 244) to summon his fellow villagers to his house the following day for xläxtnim. It is customary for all to accept, but no social obligation is broken should a man or woman fail to do so. [203]

The next morning no one eats in his own house, knowing that free food will be distributed. While his expected guests are adorning themselves by washing and painting, X, aided by his family and others, prepares large quantities of food, borrows boxes, and makes other necessary arrangements. Pre- [302] [426]

292 whiskers over which is scattered eagle down. From the back 535 of the head-dress hang weasel skins. In Bella Bella it is said to
* 556 be customary for a skin to be added on every occasion when a 575 sisaek is confined to the back-room. This may happen as many as fifteen times to the child of wealthy parents, and a few Bella [237] Coola have adopted the practice of marking each with a skin. Usually, some six or nine are hung in two tiers, without consideration of the number of times the wearer has been in seclusion. The central figure of the forehead mask is a head with [532] a hooked nose, the recurved hook being joined to the face itself. This figure does not vary with the wearer's ancestral myth, and no one knows what it represents. This design is [177] said to have been introduced to Bella Coola from the north a [237] few generations ago; before that time the head-dress consisted [824] of a circular band of dyed cedar-bark, decorated with the tail feathers of one of the large woodpeckers. The Bella Coola call it simply, "forehead mask." Each initiate carries a hollow
[532] rattle, carved in the shape of a bird, which he holds in his right [534] hand, belly uppermost. Long, long ago, when a dancer failed to do so, the rattle became alive and the bird flew away; hence, this rule has been obeyed ever since.

535 Each initiate takes up his station in some part of the house
* 556 behind the fire and dances to the beating of the sticks. The 575 left hand of each is clasped behind his back and in his right he holds the rattle and keeps it in constant motion by shaking his wrist. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a good dancer. Keeping the body stiff and the legs close together, he rises with slight jumps, barely altering his position on the floor. Sometimes he slowly turns around sunwise[11] in his series of jumps, at other times he does not alter his position. The head is bent from side to side and downwards at each jump, causing the eagle down to fly in all directions. Sisaek assistants blow more of the material on to the head-dress at intervals (see Plate 16).[1]

[821] [11] The Bella Coola believe that the sun moves from east to south to west to [796] north. Many ceremonial movements follow this direction, which will henceforth be described as sunwise.

[1] [See cat 116, facing p 219 - ANALYST]

203 survives. None the less, one of their primal prerogatives, the 553 visible embodiment of an element in their ancestral myth, is *556 no longer present. In such circumstances, no member of an 614 ancestral family would give a potlatch unless able to revive at [424] it the dormant name in a new herald. The intending donor usually consults with the senior members of the ancestral family as to a suitable incumbent, or especially if he is an influential chief, he may simply use his own discretion. In either case, some relatively young member of the ancestral family is offered the post. If he accepts, the matter is settled; if not, another is invited in his stead. The new herald cannot function until his name and appointment have been validated by the distribution of presents at the potlatch. Such gifts are not returnable, since they are held to "have become nothing" for the name. Relatively lavish expenditure for this purpose is one of the many ways in which a chief is able to show his prowess and generosity. Thus established, a herald can carry out his duties thenceforth. He functions at every ceremonial, but especially at potlatches given by members of his own ancestral family, in whose origin myth his own name is embodied. From [627] constant participation in all kinds of ceremonials, a herald *[196] becomes conversant with every type, and is appealed to as arbiter in difficult points of ritual, thus adding to his reputation.

203 Although acceptance of the post of herald somewhat cur-
*556 tails a man's activities in other respects, instances are known of energetic ones using the gifts received to establish themselves as chiefs, passing on their herald names at the same time to other incumbents. More often, a herald uses his wealth for the benefit of a son or other relative, being satisfied with his own status in the community. He takes a prominent part in every ceremony and is a person of some standing, yet is spared the responsibility of actually giving rites himself, a position which offers many attractions to a man lacking great ambition and initiative.

[illegible]

ponded, so that it serves as a visible and tangible memorandum of the chief-like generosity of its owner. By means of these media, debts are passed from one individual to another without actual liquidation in goods; in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers.

556* [illegible] [illegible]

Prerogatives, Professions

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's name is his only because his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a kwiste dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific totem-pole designs, the portrayal of bird or animal on spoons, seats, house-posts, and other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; so is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. The concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's ceremonial life based on this principle, but on it depend his actions as chief, and the economic sources of his food-supply. No prerogative, even though it be the property of a man, is effective until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the validation and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds are caused by the infringement of one individual on another's rights.

424 556* [532] [796] [431] [627] [578]

In addition to the various types already mentioned, there are a number of professional prerogatives on which depend a man's vocation. That of herald approximates this class, although the Bella Coola consider it rather as a right operative only during ceremonials. Professional prerogatives rest on the belief that a man's ability as a hunter, wood-worker, and so forth does not rest in his innate skill, but upon an inherited right which must be confirmed and validated by the distribution of presents. These can be given at any convenient time when the people have been called together, but, as it is to the man's advantage to have his right made known as widely expenditure though he must forgo the prestige enjoyed by a man who has been able to shower his professional favors in a lavish manner. Selection is a common factor in the social life of a Bulu Cocin; the man who uses all his wealth to acquire a few ntoe cannot be "strong" in ntoe matters; the man who desires to specialize in bassor affairs cannot afford to display an elaborate ntoe-pole. Amid these conflicting desires, it often happens that a man somewhat neglects his professional prerogatives, especially those of which the dignity has been slightly lessened through superior skill shown by individuals endowed with no more than native ability. Upstarts of this kind have always infringed upon professional dignity, and the coming of the white man has added a new factor which has almost destroyed vocational prerogatives.

424 463 556*

A'ali Dances

The most important, as well as the most spectacular, dances that occur at pollachos are those given by members of the ntoe society. In addition to these, a feature of many pollachos is the performance of a'ali dances.* As already mentioned, from 1870 onwards there have been many changes in ntoe ritual; new elements have been acquired by the marriages of Bulu Cocin to members of the coastal tribes, with the result that details of procedure vary at every ceremony according to the prerogatives of the dance. Since 1910, the influence of white civilization has increased to such an extent that ntoe ceremonials have virtually been abandoned. This took place at a time when the ritual was in transition, a state of affairs which rendered difficult the collection of coherent information. A'ali dances are associated with ntoe, but the addition of new features to the latter was accompanied by a decay of the former. Both societies have now almost ceased to exist, but whereas the ntoe organization was abandoned during a period of change and accretion, that *Called e'ajoe in Kimapin.

[574] [575] [576] [577] as these sounds he retires utterly exhausted. The time beaten out for a nuxpuel or um'hl-a dancer is the same. He too comes near the fire and at first dances in the same manner until the singers in unison bellow out, W'ai-, "More." With a run that ends in a crashing leap that seems to shake the floor, the performer takes his position between the fire and one of the side walls and begins to revolve furiously upon himself. His body is bent forward until it seems as if all that prevents him from falling to the floor is his hands clutched together as far as possible behind his back; while his feet move so rapidly that the short mincing steps run into each other. Gradually the beating becomes less violent, only to be followed by another cry of W'ai-, and another rush and jump that lands the dancer behind the fire. Here he revolves once more in the same furious fashion; the same is repeated on the side of the fire opposite to the place where he first performed, and finally between the fire and the door. Nuxpuel and um'hl-a are the most strenuous of all Bella Coola dances and the performer is glad to retire. He afterwards joins the audience. This dance entails no taboo or restrictions on the dancer.

This terminates the performance of this type of dance at a potlatch, but among the goods distributed are some to validate the name acquired by the dancer, and others to legalize his actual display.

[578] [579] [580] The occasion on which importance and solemnity are attached to a'alk dances is during potlatches, but they are also given at other times. Most Bella Coola performances are so steeped in the presence of the supernatural that the element of enjoyment is secondary, but in the spring, after the end of the tsaxiut season and before the salmon come to the rivers, dances for pleasure are of common occurrence. A nuxuil can call his fellows to his house and the singers beat out nuxuil songs to which the owners dance, but the most common hours are a'alk. Of course an individual may be a member of both societies, but the heralds invite the guests in his a'alk name. Those summoned include both members of the society

533 of each song dances to it. Anyone who has enough food to 535 provide a meal for all is glad to invite his neighbours to such 574 an affair, but the singers and heralds can force a stingy man to act as host. Everyone knows his neighbour's resources and the singers have no hesitation in going to the house of a man with an ample supply of food and beginning to bout out songs [208] there. The heralds are quick to see what is happening and [62] call the people, with the result that the involuntary host is compelled to provide a meal in order not to be thought mean and churlish. Without waiting for the singers to take the [203] initiative, heralds likewise often invite people to the house of a man whom they know to be well provided with food.

During the summer, the necessity of laying in supplies of [221] salmon makes it impossible to hold many dances, although one [796] of the non-sacred type just described takes place whenever there is a lull in the fishing. In the early autumn, when ber-556 ries, fish, and game are abundant, the thoughts of chiefs turn 796 to potlatches and the lengthy preliminaries are begun. At this season, too, a chief who lacks sufficient wealth to invite foreign [221] guests, calls in his neighbours for a nuxnê dance and initiates [575] some of his young relatives into that society. The ritual, [535] described in the last chapter, resembles that of a potlatch except that no new house is constructed, there is no return of a dead relative, and the ceremonial connected with the coming of foreigners is necessarily omitted. In some cases a chief performs this type of rite a year before he proposes to hold a potlatch, and explains that he is doing so because he will be unable to give presents to the inhabitants of his own village [426] at the later affair. Gifts so distributed are returnable with interest, though it is not obligatory for recipients to do this in time for the donor to make use of their repayment at his potlatch.

Ceremonials of this nature occupy the Bella Coola during [575] the early autumn, while in winter tsaiut dances take place [535] almost nightly. When they are over, it is time for the non-sacred variety of a'alt performances, and for another type of rite, nusāxkāmx.

ciz, sandáang. This can be described here, since, although not closely associated with the potlatch, it serves to teach children the principles of present-giving and indifferentism. February is the proper month for sandáang, although preliminary arrangements are made early in the winter. A chief who has a son or daughter about ten or twelve years of age may decide to use some of his food, and a small part of his wealth, for the benefit of the child. With the assistance of his relatives, the father begins making large numbers of toy canoes, miniature bows and arrows, small baskets, and models of all other types of articles commonly given away at potlatches. The manufacture of these requires several months, but towards the end of January they are nearly ready.

A name must then be chosen for the child. Since a sandáang dance is a humorous, non-sacred affair, a sandáang name is not embodied in a myth, but is drawn from some story. Occasionally, parents decide on a new one, but more often the designation selected is one used for the same purpose by a grandparent of the child. There is no rivalry with regard to names of this type, and one of them can be re-used without asking consent of the last incumbent, although permission would never be refused. There must be a song with each name and the grandparents and other elderly relatives teach this to a number of boys who are to act as singers. The words may have been remembered from a previous occasion; if not, a simple theme is composed by one of the old people having some reference to the name about to be conferred. For example, one appellation of this type is Tsplmar, Fawn, and the accompanying words are:

"We hear that Deer has borne a child."

Another name is Xplm, Beaver, and the song: "Be of good cheer, the Beaver is coming."

A third song is, "Go outside under the house like a dog."

Occasionally a small incident in an ancestral myth is used. The teaching of the song to the juvenile singers is a source of constant merriment; the parents and grandparents are the [532] principal instructors, aided by the professional musicians.

[547] Boys are always willing to act as singers for the practice they [533] receive, and the gifts they will acquire. Other lads are chosen to act as heralds, an effort being made in each case to pick those likely to pursue these professions.

[546] The day finally selected for the ceremony is in February, on a date when nothing of importance is taking place. The juvenile heralds summon the child guests, who have been invited in accordance with the rules governing a potlatch, special care being taken to omit none to whom the child donor is indebted. His father carefully instructs him in this matter, thus impressing on his son's mind one of the fundamental points of Bella Coola life. In the late afternoon, when all have [535] assembled, the boy singers beat out the donor's song and he dances to it. It may be in the nature of a round, o'wit, or kwiat dance, according to the wishes of his parents. In many cases, one of the grandparents or some other old relative likewise dances to the song, using whatever style he chooses.
There is no ceremonial significance to the ceremony and all enjoy themselves immensely, especially the adult guests. After [553] the dancing, the new name is announced and presents are given to the guests. The father of the young donor carefully instructs him as to the scale of his gifts, emphasizing the necessity of rewarding the singers and heralds, and of repaying with interest those children from whom he has received favours. In this way, the ceremony serves as a practical example of how to conduct a potlatch. The parents of the donor always provide some tasty food for the occasion, and this is distributed after [554] the gifts have been handed round. The necessity for food and presents makes it impossible for any but the children of chiefs to enjoy this training.

After the ceremony, the children parade up and down the sidewalk in front of the houses, singing boisterously. The performance has been for their benefit and they wish to "show off." One night completes the affair, but the following afternoon another child may summon his comrades to a similar ceremony. The child sings first but not the song of the present donor, then that of his predecessor, to which the latter dances once again. If food is plentiful, wedding ceremonies may be carried out every day for several weeks, or a year or two may elapse without one. A child's song is remembered from year to year and he dances whenever it is heard sung. The name acquired in this way is used semi-jocularly by a lad's comrades. After marriage, it is considered unfitting for a youth to be concerned with wedding and he normally becomes an e'ak.

Ceremonies of this kind have been discontinued for many years and it was impossible to obtain detailed accounts. The main features are clear: they served to instruct children in the methods of present-giving. According to one informant, there were two types of wedding ceremonial; one of the burn-cross pattern above described in which, however, food alone was given away, and another in which miniature presents were distributed. This man believed that the latter was only possible for the children of wealthy chiefs, and that on such occasions the themes consisted of small incidents in the family myth. In either case, the importance of ceremonial can be judged from the manner in which it was impressed upon mere children.

ceremony, they can part at discretion without anyone being offended. 586

When a wife runs away and seeks refuge with another man, her husband sometimes tries to kill his rival, but frequently both families endeavour to heal the breach amicably. Some of her relatives, particularly those who played an influential part in the marriage, first ask the husband whether or not he is willing to take her back. If the answer is in the affirative, they next try to persuade her to return. Every argument is used, in many cases combined with threats against her relatives, and the reconciliation often succeeds. But she must never go back without presents, "so dry with fire she never has entered the marriage." The husband invites all his fellow-villagers to his house to a ceremony which is said "to uproot the house [of trouble]." The singers are in attendance and sing in succession many funeral songs, followed by ocad songs, and to which the owner of the song dances, but since the supernatural beings are not present, the affair is of a non-sacred nature. The goods received from the family of the erring wife are distributed and the matter is at an end. Those who persuaded the wife to return are especially rewarded. 837 [796] [431]

If the faithless wife should refuse to return, or if she should bear a child to her lover, reconciliation is not possible. Then it is incumbent on the woman's relatives to return to the husband as much goods as he has expended, with additions if they wish to uphold their own reputation. If the husband is clearly to blame, or if he is the deserting partner, his wife's family are not required to return the gifts they have received. There is no judicial tribunal of any kind, the force of public opinion alone impels restitution if the offender wishes to maintain his reputation in the community. Acting on this principle, the relatives of a deserted wife sometimes restore to her husband's family the presents they have received, thereby demonstrating their nobility and at the same time shaming the offender. 586 837 [626]

Formerly there was an elaborate ceremony to shame the [796] [626]

Bella Coola E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

586
626
837
796

husband or wife who destroyed a marriage by deserting his, or her, partner for a lover. One informant, aged about seventy, twice took part in this rite when a young man, but probably did not know the full details of it. He stated that it followed a divorce of two persons who had been married with full ceremony, whereas another, slightly younger informant, who remembered having seen the ceremony once when a mere lad, believed that it was only in the families of commoners. It appears certain that the rite has not been practised since about 1880, consequently there is an element of doubt as to the actual details, and even as to whether it was an affair of chiefs or commoners. It is probable that it was among the former.

When a woman deserted her husband one of the leading chiefs would take this opportunity of giving a ceremony of the type known as lleiyakam.[10] After consulting with his fellows to ensure that no one had any objections, and rarely including the deserted husband, he summoned the singers to his house. He would tell them his plans, and they would prepare the songs for the occasion. Five or six were always composed, with an effort to include as many foul remarks and allusions as possible, particularly with regard to the organs of the woman and her lover.

The singers spent about a week composing the songs, and meanwhile the chief who was giving the ceremony prepared food and made other necessary arrangements. When these were ready, the donor invited to his house all the members of the sisaok and kusiut societies for a rehearsal. The singers sang over the airs for the instruction of the guests. They were always worded as if it were the deserted husband speaking in foul terms of his ex-wife. The theme of one was:

"My wife has pudenda like those of a black bear."

The guests joined in the singing and also supplied foul themes by calling out observations about the organs of women in general, and of the deserting wife in particular. The singers

[10] The relation of this to the a'alt dance of the same name is obscure, cf. I, p. 279.

[536]
[486]
[537]
[496]

used to incorporate as many of these as possible, so that the rite soon became a chorus of obscenities. The songs were sung and resung until all present were familiar with them, then the donor of the rite distributed food and all dispersed.

The following afternoon everyone, including those uninitiated into either society, were invited to the donor's house. Probably the only absentees from the village were the deserting wife and her lover, while guests from neighbouring settlements were often in attendance. On this occasion, for the first time, the deserted husband used to take the leading part. When the singers struck up the tune of the first song, he used to appear, supported by four or five assistants. His face was blackened with soot, he wore a lynx-skin belt, and above his head was fashioned some insulting object, usually a representation of the female organs made of wood, cedar-bark and berries, as realistic as possible. As the singers sang, aided by those who had learnt the songs on the previous day, the husband danced, moving his body so that the ornament on top of his head was shaken suggestively. Meanwhile the spectators kept calling out filthy epithets of any kind on his ex-wife and her lover. Sometimes the dancer was able to insert some obscene remarks into the display. On one occasion, for example, he pulled some lynx fur from his belt and threw it in the face of a Tâl-ie man who happened to be present, and who had once seduced a married woman and accordingly been the butt of a similar rite, with the remark:

[302]
[392]

"All Tâl-ie women have hairy pudenda like that."

The guests were invited to suggest foul nick-names for the man with whom the dancer's wife had eloped. One of these was adopted by general agreement of opinion, and the man was commonly called by it henceforth. Two names so created were:

[551]

Skulsos, "The One Whose Face is Wrinkled like a Woman's Organs," and, Emolsaik, "The One Who Cohabited Publicly."

One very old man is still, 1923, commonly called by this last designation, much to his annoyance.

When the songs had been sung, each accompanied by the dancing of the deserted husband, the donor of the ceremony distributed food and the guests departed. The only advantage to the giver of the rite was that it enabled him to show his wealth in an apparently disinterested fashion by gifts of food. Usually he was a friend of the aggrieved husband.

When a husband deserted his wife, the other women of the village used to perform an exactly similar ceremony. The same type of songs were composed, and during their singing the deserted wife used to dance, wearing above her head representations of a penis and testicles. By means of hidden strings she was able to cause the former to become erect.

On other occasions the ceremony was varied by an announcer asking the offended party about the appearance of the deserter. There followed a minute and highly coloured description about the unpleasantness of his genital organs, a description which was swiftly incorporated into the songs.

It can be taken as a matter of course that the above description is little more than an outline of the Bella Coola ceremony of shaming. In spite of its deficiencies, it is important, as evidence of the former sentiment with regard to divorce. Obscene though the ceremony must have been, both in acting and in the free use of personalities, it must have been a powerful deterrent to divorce.[11] Indeed it would be difficult to imagine a stronger one in a community where a man's position is judged by public opinion and where his greatest aversion is to public ridicule. It is unfortunate that we shall probably never know whether the rite was associated with chiefs or commoners.

CEREMONIAL MARRIAGE

Since marriage gains much of its importance from the complicated business transactions between the two families, with [11] A similar rite was occasionally carried out for unmarried mothers.

[illegible]

DEATH

Death Rites—Memorial Rites—Fate of the Dead

Death Rites

DEATH is marked by even more complicated and prolonged rites than marriage. Like so many primitive peoples, the Bella Coola not only carry out elaborate rituals soon after the actual decease, but hold lengthy commemorative and mourning ceremonials in later years. As these require the co-operation of a large number of people, the death of an individual affects a wider circle than his own relatives, and the celebrations have, therefore, an important social as well as religious significance. 196 [182]

[illegible]

It is not surprising that the Bella Coola, believing in the omnipresence of the supernatural, should consider various peculiar occurrences to be omens of death. One of the simplest of these is to hear the falling of a tree when there is neither wind nor other reason to account for it. Such a fall is audible only to the person whom it warns of approaching death, either to himself or to one of his relatives. A number of men may be in the forest together, when one of them hears the crash of a tree and notices that his companions are unaware of it; he realises that this is an omen and protects himself by calling out: 763

"Let this evil recoil against whoever has been plotting evil against me."

The basis of this custom is the belief that someone has been practising black magic against the hearer, who, by this answer, is able to cause the sorcery to recoil upon the malefactor. Even more dangerous than to hear a falling tree, is to have one crash [954] [824] body became angle down and was walled upwards in psycho-logically of the type which might serve as basis for a rite of this kind. If the descendants of the person to whom this had happened had dramatized the incident as subsequent death, a custom analogous to the one here described would have arisen.

BURIAL OF THE DEAD

There is no fixed time for the disposal of a corpse. When possible, it takes place on the day following death, but as many as four days may elapse if delay is necessary for the performance of the rite just described. Another reason for postponement in the absence of near relatives, if they can be summoned within four or five days, the funeral may be delayed until their arrival. There is always endless discussion concerning the exact details; all relatives and members of the ancestral family take part, though the wishes of a son, brother, or other near kinsman are usually followed. In this, as in so many points of Bella Coola ritual, an influential chief often overrules the desires even of those who are more closely related to the deceased.

Herolds announce the hour chosen,* usually about noon, and the people begin to assemble in the deceased's house, even strangers being welcome. Women wail dolorously, and another indication of the occasion is the bundles containing clothing, cooking utensils, and other articles belonging to the dead person. The lid of the coffin has been left open, but when everything is ready, an elderly man is asked to strike it, once, with a stone; then the lid is closed. Planks have been removed and a hole made in one of the front corners of the house, through which the man throws out the stone. The women redouble their lamentations as an old woman, previously asked to do so, lights a bundle of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and climbs through the opening carrying this. No request has been made for pall-bearers, but any strong men, especially

*This is done at present, even after the carrying away of the "body." In former times it was omitted when the corpse was merely buried by the ramak.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

and recompense to funeral assistants is usually deferred until that time. Such was often true even in former years, although poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any convenient ceremony, such as a non-sacred nusk dance. As repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature. It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crest, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery. Those who carried them were the ones who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge. 764 431 556 [375] [796] [766]

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or olachen are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some informants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The taint on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days. 764 783 [825]

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that Sā-lma [776]

Ethnologia E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

556 769 diate family. Confusion is probable only when a chief is bereaved after he has stored up goods and made preliminary preparations for a potlatch; he may then carry out the rites intended, but designate the ceremony a memorial potlatch. [975] More often, however, the affair is limited to rites associated with the deceased. Consequently, there is omission of the initiation of neophytes into the nusaá and a'alá societies,[*] there is no establishment of new seats for young relatives of the donor, and no strengthening of his own. It must be emphasized once more that there is no unalterable sequence of prescribed rituals at either potlatch or memorial potlatch; the omissions just mentioned are customary, not universal, and when present the ritual of the two ceremonies is identical. Except on those rare occasions when omitted at a potlatch, the return of a dead relative is the central feature of both.

[184]

In recent years, the great increase in wealth has made it [178] possible for a chief to perform a memorial potlatch soon after the death of an esteemed relative. This was rarely the case in former times, but as there was no other reason for which valuables were so ardently desired, every expedient was used to obtain the necessary goods. Occasionally, a chief happened to have the needful goods stored up so that he could give a memorial potlatch almost immediately. To such a fortunate individual the term, yestla, was applied, a word difficult to translate but combining the significances of rich, ready, fortunate, and revered.

[796] Memorial potlatches, like those of the ordinary kind, are usually held in the early autumn, though occasionally one may be postponed until after the kasiut season. When an intending donor has decided that he owns sufficient goods, he first calls in his fellow-chiefs and makes known his intentions, at the same time expounding in considerable detail the myths which [533] he proposes to use as themes for mourning songs, and for other [*] Performance of such rites at a memorial potlatch would be considered sinful by the Bella Bella and were always omitted during the period when their influence was important.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

type of dance differs from all other Bella Coola ones, since no inherited prerogative is required. Years ago such exhibitions were common, although curing shamans were rare. 756* 556

The usual time for a shaman's performance is at the conclusion of the kusiut season, though one is sometimes held prior to that period if the would-be performer fears that the food which he has stored up for the event is likely to be frozen. [796]

When he decides to give a dance, the shaman first summons the singers to his house and teaches them a song of his own composition. Theoretically both text and tune should have been received from his supernatural benefactor, but many performers undoubtedly employ songs used by shaman ancestors which they have chanced to remember. Another device is to describe a supernatural being seen in a dream. In some cases there is deliberate deception, but in most the performer persuades himself that he has received supernatural authorization. The texts are full of obscure allusions, a river, for example, is spoken of as swift running water. Often a man will treasure a song for years, before collecting the wealth necessary to use it publicly, with the social prestige attached. A shaman always obtains a name from his supernatural benefactor, but if a man merely uses a feat observed in a dream, this is impossible, so he adopts the designation of some deceased shaman, soon convincing himself that it was uttered by the apparition. Others will probably remember this name, hence suspicions may easily be aroused concerning the authenticity of the performance, but it is not customary to voice these. The singers repeat the song which they have just heard, and continue doing so until they have mastered it. Sometimes they compose further songs themselves for the performer. During the practising, those who are not kukusiut are expelled from the house. A shaman is a person who has come in contact with the supernatural; hence he is akin to the members of the society who, therefore, support him during his rite.[1] A herald is sent out

533 756* 556 [195] [553] [183] 756* 556 [575] [203]

[1] Theoretically, a shaman need not be a kusiut, but visitations usually come only to those of religious and imaginative temperaments, who are in the majority of cases already members of the society.

1:Mollwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 756 *

shaman pours the grease on the central fire, and throws on it 755
also the figures and some dried salmon. Thus propitiated, it 782 is believed that the dead will be more likely to allow the sickness to be sucked forth.

Shamans from the dead perform conjuring feats and 756 *
dramatic performances of the same type as ordinary shamans. 556
Until he gives his first dance a newly created shaman is known [575] as a lsux, the same word that is used for a kusiut initiate, and during this period he wears the shaman's collar of intertwined dyed and undyed cedar-bark. If he is wealthy and influential, a shaman will repeat his dance every fourth year. Such a performance can be held at any season, although the usual time is [796] after the kusiut ceremonies. The dramatic representations are of scenes witnessed in the land below, though sometimes they are done in a reverse manner, following the practice of the dead in doing things strangely. Thus one shaman reported that the ghosts wore very long blankets, but when he danced he wore one that came only to his hips. The method of singing is the same as that employed by ordinary shamans, but one whose [535] power is derived from the dead dances with head bent downwards, his free hand pointing to the ground with first finger extended. Also his cry of "xwai, xwai, xwai," uttered at intervals with a deep cadence, differs from that used by ordinary shamans. A dance always terminates with the distribution of food to validate the ceremony.

Like ordinary shamans, those from the dead cannot trans- 756 * mit their power. At death their songs too are lost, unless they 533 choose to give them to a friend who is also a shaman from the [428] dead. This is obviously contrary to the theoretical belief that all songs have been obtained during revelations, but is not at all contrary to the Bella Coola practice of having the singers assist the visionaries in "remembering" their visions.

The following tale, although drawn from the distant past, 539 is a typical illustration of one of the many ways in which 756 *
shamanistic power is received from the dead.[1] 775

[1] A few stories of similar type have been included in vol. I, chap. VIII to explain the life of the dead, and others are grouped together in the next chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

224 hanging rock where no rain can penetrate. Long ago, some [732] hunter failed to do this and became blind in consequence, hence the rite has since been carried out.

When a hunter is in the field, his wife must not swing. To do this causes him to go up into lofty and dangerous places as she rises on the swing, and also destroys the power laboriously accumulated by ceremonial chastity.

Ritual Acts

796 Ceremonialism is an extremely important aspect of Bella
226 Coola life, but most of their rites are social or religious rather than magical, so that descriptions of them belong to other 789 chapters. In connection with the taking of the first olachen and salmon, however, a number of ritual acts are performed to bring about desired ends; the element of propitiation is not entirely absent, but on the whole they may be considered as magical.

Rites connected with the first olachen

226 At the height of the olachen run, the fish are so abundant 796 that they can be taken profitably in large purse-nets. They 574 do not, however, come simultaneously, and eager fishermen keep watching for their arrival and catching the straggling forerunners in hand dip-nets. These fish must not be eaten immediately. Each fisherman arranges a box in the front part of his house in which he deposits them as taken; if several men are doing this in a single dwelling, one box for each will be arranged near the front-door. Whenever a dance is held, eagle down is blown over the receptacle to placate the olachen and prevent them from being disturbed by the noise. As soon as a man has caught enough for a feast, he invites all his fellows to his house and the fish are distributed. It is taboo for any woman to share this meal, and it is most improper for a man to summon his neighbours until he has enough olachen to allow each guest to carry home a plentiful supply for his family. In former times, there used to be a number of meals of this kind,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark. 796 574 [865]

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full time to the task, working with zest and energy.[1] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, smxmxaxts, which signifies that the nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as: 226 [562] [825]

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[2]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish are relatively complicated. 226 796 [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[1] For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[2] Cf. Boas, p. 78.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226
796
[343]

structure with a roof but without side walls. To this the successful fisherman brings long strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, eagle down, and spoons made of maple-bark; in this task he is assisted by his relatives as well as by anyone else willing to help.

When all has been prepared, the fisherman asks the men of the village to gather on the bank to assist him. No one is compelled to do so, but in actual fact everyone is glad to be present unless prevented by some valid reason. A friend takes a canoe pole and points at the head of the first salmon, while all call in unison, xak'loi·, a word for which no meaning is known, and which is said to have been used unintelligibly for many generations. If he is standing on the south bank of the stream, the fisherman passes his left hand outside his right, seizes the fish behind the neck with the former, and by the tail with the latter; then he turns around sunwise, uncrossing his arms, so that his catch is still pointing upstream. If the village is on the north side of the river, the position of the hands is reversed. He carries the salmon to the Spring Salmon House and places it on a layer of fresh cottonwood and willow leaves spread over the ground. A young assistant, who is decorated with bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, lifts from his left arm one of a number of two-foot strips of the same material carried there and lays it over the salmon's head so that part of the string is within its mouth. As he does this he says:

Ipāxollai, qāmxāmilso,[1] "Accept, O Salmon."

Qāmxāmila is not the usual word for salmon, but signifies rather, "Food"; it is the designation used by supernatural beings for these fish and is hence applied by snmq to their prey, human beings.

After this has been done, eagle down is blown over the fish. A second salmon is likewise taken from the river, with the same cry of xak'loi·, laid with its head on its predecessor's tail, and the same rite carried out. This is repeated till all are arranged in line, with their heads pointing upstream. The women listening from the village are able to tell how many have been caught from the number of times the cry xak'loi·s raised. 226 796

[1] The vocative form of the word.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Then the salmon are cut up (only shell knives may be used for the purpose) and cooked. Everything must be used, heads, bones, and entrails, the only refuse being the blood which is scraped from the leaves and carried into the woods. The leaves themselves, and the strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark are thrown into the river in accordance with a desire expressed by Noākxnum long ago. When everything is ready for a meal, the men take their places in two rows, facing each other across a coarse bark mat. Bark spoons have been provided, and when the heralds call for food, the fisherman brings the heads of the salmon and the guests make the motions of eating, though in reality these parts are dried and kept for winter. Boxes containing a liberal portion of the choice meat are next served and all eat freely. Each guest puts on one side what he has not consumed as if to carry it away, as is the custom at an ordinary feast, though his share is really left in the shelter until the following day. Finally, a third course is provided, the back of the fish cooked with the bone in position. Like the last, the guests eat as much as they desire and pack up the residue as if to take away. Then they leave the Spring Salmon House. [412] 226 796 574 [251]

All the fish are not cooked on the one occasion. The following day the fisherman again calls back the men of his village. The same type of meal is served, but this time the guests carry away what they do not eat for the benefit of their families. This portion may be eaten by the women without affronting the salmon. [562]

This rite has not been performed in full detail in Bella Coola for many years, and it was impossible to collect information on some points. It is uncertain, for example, whether this ceremony was carried out by every fisherman or whether there used to be certain individuals with the prerogative of dealing with the first catch. The latter appears to be the most logical 226 796 424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 manner, and was definitely stated to be the case by one well-796 informed old man. It is clear, however, that every spring [424] salmon was landed with the cry of xak'loi·, taken to the Spring [574] Salmon House, and cut up by the men until the time when [251] women were allowed near the river. Another old man stated [562] that the feast took place at night and that only the heads and refuse of the first catch were eaten, the remainder being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed on the river bank, and were rigorously excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when the sun's shadow reached a diagonal scar on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there was no calling of xak'loi·, and women, except those who were taboo, could cut salmon freely on the bank. It was even stated that refuse of salmon could be thrown into the river after that time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition, or why it should end when the sun reaches a certain point, but it was faithfully observed in former times.

In Kimsquit similar rites were carried out, the chief variation being that the bodies of four swans were placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish laid with these at intervals in the line. Moreover, the youth used to bite the back of each salmon as he presented it with the cedar-bark streamer. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon as for olachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

372 The following miscellaneous beliefs and customs cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a spark from a fire jumps out and lights on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you [the person on whom the brand has fallen] food."

827 If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

796

/For a description of the ritual of specific dances of the kusiut society see category 116, pp. 41-271./

2: McIlwraith NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575, 796 ●

/For texts and comments on songs used in kusiut rites see category 116, pp. 305-331./

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER I

WINTER CEREMONIAL DANCES

000

General Observations on the Kusiut Society — Powers and Functions of the Society — Initiation — The Ritual of Specific Dances — Various Origin Myths — Kusiut Prerogatives Other than Dances — The Death of a Kusiut — The Final Rite — Concluding Observations and History.

General Observations on the Kusiut Society

IN view of the importance of the kusiut society in the lives of the Bella Coola, it would seem logical to have described it in an earlier part of this monograph. Though an integral part of the complicated structure of social organization, it is a secret, semi-religious grouping which can best be treated separately. The word kusiut is connected etymologically, according to native belief, with siut, the term for a supernatural being. Thus the meaning of the society's designation is "The Supernatural," or "The Learned," for siut has both these significations. A member of the society is likewise called a kusiut, plural, kukusiut.

575* 575* 192 [776]

The investigator soon learns of the existence of the society. If he asks a man his name, and then inquires further what type of designation it is, the answer is always that it is his kusiut name, that is, the one by which he is known as a member of the society. Ancestral names are used only at potlatches or other ceremonial occasions, whereas an individual's kusiut appellation is the one which he uses commonly. Moreover, for about three months of every year the Bella Coola live in an atmosphere of kusiut dances with a performance, or its preliminaries, taking place almost every night. Preparations for this ceremonial season, for so it may be termed, begin four days after the September moon is full, while the actual dances commence early in November and are continued until March. During this period the kukusiut are believed to be in intimate

551 575* [124] 535 575* 796 [787]

535 contact with supernatural beings, so that it is a time for grave
*575 thoughts and decorous behaviour. Even by day the members
● 796 pass from house to house with dignified mien, not loitering
[787] around the sidewalks nor indulging in frivolity. Every effort is made to prevent quarrels between members who are expected to show by their appearance and actions the gravity of the rites in which they are engaged. Night after night they assemble at the house wherein the dance is taking place; those who have performed, and are therefore most closely in touch with the supernatural, even sleep there, not returning to their own houses until March. A dance usually lasts four nights, and during that time the performer's house, in which it takes place, is termed a nuqpik, "An Empty House." The significance of this designation is unknown.

178 Membership in the society depends on a duly validated
*575 ancestral prerogative to perform one of the many kusiut dances.
[424] At the present time every Bella Coola is a kusiut, even babes in arms being initiated, but formerly no one was admitted until he or she had reached an age of discretion. Some informants went so far as to say that the hair of an initiate must have begun to turn grey, and all agreed that no one was ever admitted until at least twenty, or more often, twenty-five years of age. Initiates were frequently still older; one woman, for example, stated that her mother was past the age of child-[551] bearing before admission. Since only a member of the society could be called by a kusiut name, the uninitiated continued to be known by the ancestral names conferred on them at infancy until they received kusiut designations. The importance of the 178 society depends on the belief of the uninitiated in the super-
*575 natural powers of its members, and as there are now none to 796 impress, the rites carried out today are little more than pic-
128 tures of what took place years ago. It is the aim of the Bella Coola to carry out the dances as if uninitiated persons were in attendance, and since most of the following information was obtained from men who well remembered their sensations when not members of the society, it is justifiable to use the present

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a number of young men and women ignorant of the significance of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in impressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the a'alk were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the prerogatives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without special invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non-

* 2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

informant, the entry of a strange spirit into his body does not inconvenience the dancer, although he senses its presence, and asks who will pay for its return. Unless the owner at once steps forward to claim his property and promises to pay, his spirit is thrown into the fire and he dies. The kukusiut sometimes tell an uninitiated person that his spirit has been attracted from him, thereby terrifying him so greatly that he appeals to a shaman to recover it for him. The expert greases his hands, warms them at a fire, and pretends to pluck something from the kusiut which he inserts into the loser's neck. 575* 774 755 [784]

In view of the firm conviction that the spirit is essential to an individual's welfare, it is not surprising that this belief should awe the uninitiated and fill them with profound respect for the kukusiut. The diversity in the details of procedure proves that the practice has not become standardized; those who are not members of the society believe and do not test the claims. 575* 774 626

Another source of strength claimed by the kukusiut is ability to witness and imitate the dances of the supernatural beings held in Nusmät·a prior to the entry of Äłquntäm. As already described, it is believed that a supernatural element from every living creature upon earth ascends at this time but, in a way that is not fully understood, only those belonging to kukusiut can take part in the ceremonies. Is it strange, therefore, that members of the society are regarded with awe by their less fortunate fellows? Presents are given after every dance in Nusmät·a and the supernatural elements receive their due share. When, however, Äłquntäm enters, he is so big and so hot that almost all who have assembled rush forth furiously, and in the crush at the narrow doorway disaster overtakes many of the visiting human representatives. Some drop their gifts, and their owners will be unfortunate; others fall, and their owners cannot survive until the next ceremonial season. This same fate may befall even those who are not members of the kusiut society, but they do not have the ability to appreciate what has happened. 575* 787 776 796 777 761

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 787 776 796 Ałquntäm enters and confers on kusiut matters with Sexsexkälaix, his assistant in affairs connected with his functions as leader of the supernatural kukusiut.[1] This being acts as announcer and intermediary with Ałquntäm, but himself lacks the power of initiating matters. The two discuss whether or not it is advisable to allow mortal kukusiut to perform certain dances of the type known as kusiotem (II, p.128), and if so, they transmit the necessary power to the earthly dancer who has the proper prerogative, thus enabling him to give a graphic representation of what is done in the upper land.

*575 796 787 776 535 This is the essence of the kusiut dances. Each portrays a performance given by one of the supernatural beings in the house above, or some other aspect of his activities. Each earthly dancer has as patron a supernatural being, usually the one who carries out the dance of which his own is a model, and between patron and protégé there exists a relationship by means of which the latter receives the power necessary to perform. To do so, the uninitiated believe that he must receive a yeix, which can be translated as "call," from his associate above. Moreover, not only is each patron a supernatural being, but each is guided by Ałquntäm in the performance of the kusiut rites in the land above, which indirectly increases the prestige of the protégé.

---

*575 787 776 796 184 [1]The differences of belief of individual Bella Coola, dependent upon family traditions, is nowhere shown with greater clearness than in this meeting of the leaders of the supernatural dancers. It is clear that the Bella Coola have no uniformity of belief, even in what might be regarded as fundamental concepts. One informant, well versed in kusiut matters, asserted that there are five supernatural leaders, Ałquntäm and his assistants, Smaisikila, Sexsexkälaix, Snunlhäls, and Sunnälotla. Others were equally emphatic that Ałquntäm is the kusiut name of the supreme deity, and that Sunnälotla, Smaisikila, and Snunlhäls, are merely other designations for the same deity with regard to different functions. This belief has been followed during the monograph, by designating the supreme deity as Ałquntäm, the name by which he is termed with respect to his kusiut powers. These two opinions are not as basically different as appears at first sight. A man [828] is considered as having two, or more, personalities with respect to different rites at which he is called by different names. Since the supreme deity is regarded as a superman, who functions in diverse manners, it is not difficult to understand how these are sometimes ascribed to different individuals, and sometimes to the one under different names.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Furthermore, throughout the ceremonial season, the uninitiated have ocular demonstrations of the powers with which the kukusiut are associated. At frequent intervals they are invited to the house of the dancer where, with wonder, fear, and awe, they see strange creatures. Although they may recognize that some of these are only their fellow-tribesmen in strange form, they have no idea how such transformations are produced, and ascribe them to supernatural assistance. They accept the strange designs of the figures as proof that the kukusiut have been in contact with unfamiliar beings. It seems clear that the uninitiated do not realize that the representations are produced by means of masks, the work of human hands; instead, they believe that the figures displayed are really those of supernatural patrons who have come to earth to assist their protégés. It must be remembered that these dances take place within large houses, only partially illuminated by a flickering central fire, which facilitates deception and conjuring tricks, quite apart from the credulity of the observers. 575* 796 781 [354]

The uninitiated may sometimes suspect that the performers are not real supernatural beings, but there is no question of their firm conviction concerning the changes which come over the kukusiut at this time. One member of the society, for example, may begin to act in a peculiar manner and at once the uninitiated are ejected from the house. From without they listen with mixed fear and excitement to the strange noises which they do not know are made by whistles, and presently the kusiut rushes forth in a frenzied state, biting those he meets. The uninitiated know that he is a Cannibal, doing as his patron above is doing, and that a call from the latter has caused him to become mad. When the kukusiut have subdued him and taken him back to his house, the non-membersh ear more strange and inexplicable sounds, which appear to go upwards, and presently the news is circulated that the Cannibal has been carried away to the land above. He is seen no more for several weeks, and when next he appears he is thin, wan, and bald, because the high winds of the land above have blown 575* 781 787 796

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed
781 and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the [787] dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sympathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut
778 to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the per-
787 formance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is equally well known that his specific power has been brought 424 to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuskāsiutsta (also called nusxi'ipsta), by the supernatural woman Ano'likwolsaix. Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ano'likwolsaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 778

years in deceiving, undoubtedly begins to convince himself that he is different from lesser mortals.

575* 796

Before describing in detail initiation into the kusiut society, and then the ritual of various dances, it will be convenient to outline the type of ceremonial, although emphasizing the fact that each differs so much from every other that lengthy descriptions will be necessary later on. When a person has been initiated either in the proper manner during the ceremonial season or as a "shaman" during the summer, he is known as a lax, a novice, until the kusiut dances of the next winter. During this period he wears certain distinctive cedar-bark ornaments and is expected to keep himself somewhat apart from the uninitiated. He is always required to give his ceremonial during the first dance season after initiation; by so doing he ceases to be a novice. In later years a kusiut can suit himself whether or not to perform. Having once done so, he is a fully qualified member of the society, nor does he increase his rank in direct proportion to the number of his ceremonies. It is true that one who often dances hears himself praised by the marshals, and gains a certain amount of fame among his fellow kukusiut. But no matter how often he may perform, he cannot become a chief, with prestige spread far and wide among neighbouring tribes, nor can he increase the fame of his ancestors by adding lustre to his ancestral names. Thus the benefits are not sufficient to urge a man to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials in preference to potlatches. The society is essentially one in which a relatively poor man can display his semi-religious prerogative equally with a chief. Usually, a man performs a complicated ritual, such as that of a Cannibal dance, three or four times during his lifetime; less onerous ones in which no dramatic theme is presented may be more often given.

[301] 575* 796 556 575* 796 424

A man who proposes to give a dance must always notify one of the marshals of his village, who summons his fellows, some of the senior members of the society, and chiefs who are also kukusiut to discuss the intention. If it entails one of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 more difficult dramatic rites in which failure would lead to the 796 uninitiated learning the mysteries of the society, the matter is 424 debated at length. The writer was present at one meeting held for this purpose, with regard to a performance which had not been carried out for over thirty years. An air of solemnity was evident throughout, as if each present realized the gravity of the topic. The prospective dancer explained what he wished to do, then anyone was at liberty to comment, and most of those present took advantage of it, the marshals speaking last of all. The influence of each speaker depended in part on the [554] type of kusiut dance which he himself had given, and in part on his general status in the community as chief or otherwise, an intangible position dependent on public estimation rather than upon functional rights. In this case, after considerable discussion, it was decided that the dancer could proceed with his arrangements. But if there should be any doubt as to the would-be performer's ability, the marshals have no hesitation in prohibiting his intended rite, and they often do so later if rehearsals show that it is unlikely to be successful.

Refusal of permission to perform occurs only in case of the more difficult dances, which include the Cannibal, Scratch, Breaker, Fungus and Kusiotem. Members of the society whose prerogatives are for one of these types are considered as having greater importance than those who can merely sing of some minor deity-patron; yet all are equally members of the kusiut society, which is not graded according to the performances of its members.

*575 Many of the more difficult dances require weeks of pre-796 paration, when it is sometimes said that the dancer has disappeared to the land above. When he returns they usually conclude in four nights, the time taken by those of a simpler [104] type. Each of these nights[1] is known by an untranslatable term, and, as it will be necessary to use these throughout, it may assist the reader to summarize the ritual which takes place on each. It can be assumed that it is a simple dance, that is, one without elaborate preliminaries.

1 [i.e. of a Kusiut dance - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The first night is lsuxtälaix or lsuxtämem.[5] This is when the call comes to a prospective dancer. This may be heralded by whistling from above, made by a kusiut sent with a whistle to a neighbouring mountain for the purpose, by a thud on the roof, likewise produced by an accomplice, or by no intimation whatever. The dancer utters a low call, sometimes begins to walk in circles with bent head, or to act in some other peculiar manner, while a whistle sounds repeatedly. The uninitiated are at once expelled from his house and a herald informs the village that something strange has come upon the dancer. The kukusiut gather in his house, and four times help him by the frenzied, but regular, beating of sticks. Then the singers sing a song previously prepared, the words describing either his patron or the land above. After listening closely, the kukusiut join in and rehearse it until it is familiar. The dancer may or may not perform; if he is inadept in the steps, he does so for practice. If the hour is not too late, the singers may choose, purely for practice, to beat out a number of the songs of those kukusiut who have already performed during the ceremonial season. A meal, provided by the dancer and his family, is then served. The singers next beat out the dancer's song once more and he dances, concluding the evening's performance. Novices and those who have already performed during the season take up their abode in the dancer's house, where they remain for the ensuing four days and nights.

The second day is nusiutälsap.[6] Quite early in the morning a herald calls the kukusiut to the dancer's house, an invitation accepted by as many as wish to do so. A second song is usually composed and practised in the same manner as on the previous evening. Several kukusiut are sent to the forest to cut wood for masks, the number of sections required depending upon the number to be used. In the evening all members of the society assemble to practise the songs.[7] The making of the masks

[5] In Kimsquit called Alrwolitmm.

[6] The term qai·nuqs is occasionally used for the rites occurring on the day itself.

[7] The rehearsal of the second is sometimes postponed until this time.

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The making of the masks

*575 is allotted to different kukusiut, usually in accordance with the 796 dancer's wishes, although a marshal normally gives out the 532 actual tasks. The dancer, or one of his relatives, bestows pre-[43] sents on each person to whom work is allotted. The evening [465] of nusiutälsap is called ämläämkim.

[104] The third day is qothm. Those to whom mask making has been entrusted assemble early in the dancer's house to start their work. About noon they are provided with a meal, to which other kukusiut may be invited. By late afternoon, when most of the work has been accomplished, the chips are carefully swept up and burnt, and the house tidied, ready for the uninitiated who will be invited during the evening. On either this
*575 day or the one preceding, a platform, with raised sides, is built 796 behind the fire on which the dancer can conceal himself and where he is supposed to remain during the remainder of the four days. About dusk the kukusiut are called in; the singers take their places behind the fire, Cannibals, Breakers, and Scratchers are in one of the back corners, where a matting enclosure may have been constructed for them, and the remainder group themselves without distinction around the [184] walls. In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, one or more of the masks may be displayed, suspended from a sloping pole behind the fire. If the singers think it necessary, they may [533] practise the dancer's two songs once more. Then the uninitiated are called in, taking their places near the doorway. The singers beat out one of the dancer's songs and he dances in time to it, and the same is repeated for his second song. After some delay, which appears to be one of the requisites of every kusiut performance, the singers strike up the songs of either a novice or a kusiut, especially one who has already had a call during the ceremonial season, and the one thus summoned dances to his two songs. Late in the season, when many kukusiut have performed, only one song may be used, to prevent the ceremony dragging out to an interminable length, and songs of previous years are omitted. In any case, the ritual lasts for most of the night. When all have danced, the uninitiated are expelled, with the exception of the sisaok to whom, as guests, a meal is served. Then they too leave and the kukusiut eat together. Finally, the singers strike up one of the dancer's songs, and he dances to it to end the evening's rites. 575* 796

2:McIlwraith E-.ɔ (1922-1924) 1948
NEó Bellacoola NEó

The fourth day is nebusam, "That Which Is Opened." During the day the carpenters work to complete the masks, and towards dusk the house is again put in order. The kukusiut are summoned again to practise the songs, if necessary, and always to arrange who shall wear the masks, a matter left to the marshals and the carpenters. Then the uninitiated are called in to see the masked figures and watch any dramatic representation. After their exclusion, the masks are burnt. Then the kukusiut gather outside the dancer's house where his song is sung once more to send his call back above. Frequently another kusiut now receives a call, so that the nebusam of one dancer is likewise the lsixtämem for another. The kukusiut assemble in the latter's house, but the uninitiated are not allowed to return to that from which they have been ejected until the platform-enclosure has been destroyed at the end of the season. [104] [532] [533] [532]

A word might be said about kusiut paraphernalia, although much of this will have to be described in detail for special dances. Boas gives illustrations of a large number of kusiut masks and gives such an admirable description of them that little need be added. They are carved from the solid wood, the larger of beech, the smaller of alder, and each carpenter endeavours to make a striking effigy of the being portrayed. Ano'likwolsaix is present at every dance and has become so well standardized that she can always be recognized. This is true, also, for Thunder, Echo, the haohao, the Laugher, the Hermaphrodite, and a few other supernatural beings, but so much variation occurs in others that even a kusiut of much experience cannot always tell what being is represented. The masks are painted, and sometimes the designs indicate the being, even though the carving fails to do so; verisimilitude is 575* 796 532 [114] [824] [776]

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 796 be noted, kusiut masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to [171] avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated. The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).[1] 796 The large, cone-shaped form used in susaok ceremonial is re-534 placed in kusiut dances by a smaller type consisting of portions of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from [237] beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kusiut can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the [426] summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 796 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One old man described a pipe formerly used at Täl-io, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[824] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole. Little could be learnt of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his patron and displayed through pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
609 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers
796 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire of the kukusiut to impress their uninitiated tribesmen, they [648] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes [123] that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

1 [see category 116, p84(B)- ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

perform several ancient rites through a desire to "show off" before someone who was ignorant. In recent years there has been a tendency to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials, and to judge a man's worth by his lavishness in them, but this is only a modern development due to the prohibition of the potlatch. Nevertheless, even in former times some individuals preferred to invite foreign guests to kusiut dances and to give them valuable gifts rather than to save these for potlatches; such a ceremony is called a kukusiutek. Whenever strangers are present at a kusiut dance they receive small pieces of dyed cedar-bark as proof of the friendly intentions of the host. The general consensus of Bella Coola opinion is that it is foolish for a man to concentrate on kusiut performances, particularly if he impoverish himself to the detriment of potlatches.

Although foreign guests are seldom invited to kusiut rites, a dancer frequently calls in his fellows from adjacent villages. But as the ceremonial season is simultaneous in the different settlements, with almost nightly performances, it is often impossible to avoid conflict in dates. Which invitation shall have preference is decided in the following manner:

During the days of qotlum and nebusam the dancer sends a herald of powerful physique to invite guests from as many villages as he wishes. Simultaneously, a messenger may be approaching from the opposite direction with a similar invitation. Each envoy watches carefully around each bend in the path for his rival, and whichever can first call out his message is entitled to continue to give his invitation in the village of the outwitted herald. It is considered exceedingly bad taste to decline a summons, so the ceremony to which the defeated herald was bearing an invitation must be postponed. Sometimes the two messengers sight one another simultaneously, and the relative priority of their messages is then decided by a contest of strength. The rivals stand in the path, shoulder to shoulder, arms close to their sides, and shove with all their strength, the winner being the one who can force his opponent to move his feet. This last means of deciding is used exclu-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 sively when the villages in which the dances are taking place 203 are adjacent or separated by such a short distance that envoys cannot meet en route.

*575 A word may be said about the attitude of the Bella Coola 177 to the dances of other coastal tribes. They know that the Bella Bella, Rivers Inlet, Kwakiutl, and Kitkatla people have 829 kusiut societies, but until recently their members were con-[648] sidered to be uninitiated, as Bella Coola were when they visited foreign tribes.[8] A few years ago the Bella Coola, Bella Bella, and Rivers Inlet people decided that their rites were sufficiently akin to permit membership in one tribe to carry with it membership in the others:

"We have now one repository," they say.

This development is due to ease of communication and diminution of population in the three tribes. None the less, the Bella Coola recognize differences between their own rites and those of their neighbours. They say that no other tribe [171] has repositories; also that in the other tribes the kusiut society is more intimately connected with the chiefs, in fact, that in Bella Bella and Fort Rupert the Cannibals are the chiefs, whereas in Bella Coola even a poor man, uninfluential in every other respect, can be one.

*575 Theorization is out of place in a descriptive monograph such as this, but the writer gives it as his personal opinion that 177 the Bella Coola have adopted much, if not all, of the kusiut [796] ceremonial from other coastal tribes, though they have profoundly altered it in respect to certain ancient beliefs connected with localized guardian spirits and the patrons of ancestral families. He further believes that it will be found that this Bella Coola technique has in its turn affected the Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet Indians. There seems little doubt that the [171] Bella Coola are correct in saying that the society is more im-[796] portant among them than among their neighbours, and the writer feels that dances and rituals of different types have certainly been adapted to the kusiut pattern of the Bella Coola.

[8] Except a few individuals who had inherited foreign prerogatives.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 struggling in fear, to the secret meeting-place. Here the marshals discuss what shall be done with him; some suggest that 567 he be killed, others a lesser fate, and finally someone advises his initiation. After apparently due deliberation, this is decided upon; the slave is told the mysteries of the society and is warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells the uninitiated of his knowledge. The actual ceremonial rites of *575 admission do not vary according to the preliminaries used.

796 Initiation can take place at any time during the kusiut season. After consulting with the marshals in order to choose an evening when no other dance is to take place, the relatives of the neophyte, whom it will be convenient to term X, invite the kukusiut to their house. Sometimes songs are sung by way of rehearsal, at other times food is distributed at once. As the people are eating, one of the marshals stands up to address them, saying that X's relatives propose to take him to the repository of the name ————, so that he may become a kusiut. X, to whom this may be the first intimation, is called from his house and taken from the village by several of his kinsmen, with one or more of the marshals. The kukusiut disperse and tell the uninitiated in the other houses that X has gone to meet Ano°likwolsaix. His companions hear the news with mingled envy and thankfulness that they are not to have this dangerous privilege.

[178] In ancient times X and his guides may actually have proceeded to his repository, but for several generations at least it has been customary for the party merely to go to some lonely spot in the woods for the night. Those accompanying X tell him as much of the ritual of the society as they think fit, not forgetting to emphasize the trust put upon him, and the fate which will befall him if he should communicate his knowledge.
[787] He is expected to report that he went to the repository where,
[184] lying face downwards on the ground, he saw Ano°likwolsaix; in Kimsquit he is supposed also to see her husband.[9]

[776] [9]According to one old Bella Coola a sister of Ano°likwolsaix also remains in every repository.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

The following morning the kukusiut alone are invited to X's house. The marshals meanwhile superintend the laying and lashing of planks across two river dug-outs to form a dancing platform. On this the singers take their places, in addition to as many kukusiut as can scramble aboard. The craft is slowly poled either up- or downstream, according to the direction of X's repository, and more kukusiut accompany it along the bank; the uninitiated watch with keen interest from the background. X and his companions proceed towards the river and on meeting the lashed-together canoes are taken aboard. The singers strike up any well known kusiut tune, and in time to it as many kukusiut as possible dance on the platform surmounting the craft. Each uses his own style of dancing according to his prerogative, so that the scene is strikingly varied and animated. X himself cowers in the centre, practically concealed from the uninitiated by the dancers. On reaching the village the whole party hurriedly runs to X's house, from which the uninitiated are rigorously barred for the rest of the day. Those kukusiut who accompanied the party along the bank of the river have preceded them and, as X enters, the droning cry is raised which always heralds the appearance of one who has been in close contact with supernatural beings.

575* 796 [535] [535] [424] [201]

If X is considered trustworthy, he may be allowed to go alone to his repository, although this is only customary when he takes a second or third prerogative. If this procedure has been followed, X tells those present what he has seen; otherwise his companions do so. The uninitiated listen eagerly from the adjacent houses, wondering anxiously what is taking place. Several kukusiut blow, or use bellow-whistles to increase the awe of the hearers. Presently a herald is sent out. He goes first to the lowest house[10] of the village, then in succession to those above, announcing in each that:

575* 203

"Something strange has happened to the son of the chief."

796

X's name is not mentioned; if his father is not a chief the [10]That is, to the one farthest downstream. By always going to each house in order from bottom to top of the village the herald avoids any danger of omissions.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 call is that something strange has happened to the "mortal." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, 203 and towards nightfall goes around calling:

796 Skinap, skinap, kukusiaot, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kusiut society, power has come to the son of the chief [or to the mortal]."

The kukusiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

*575 In every village there are at least two kukusiut who have, embodied with their kusiut names, the professional prerogative 791 of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the 796 ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a [424] revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever- [773] present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be trans- [425] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kusiut and sisaok. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, [292] decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an [237] apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukusiut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3).[1] He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes through the motion of throwing it to his partner; the crystal disappears! It has been palmed out of sight at the instant of throwing, but the presumption is that it has entered the other siki who falls to the floor as if stricken down by the powerful object given to him. Now one of the kukusiut, who has been primed for the duty, strikes the recumbent man on the back, restoring him to consciousness. Slowly he pulls himself together, rising at intervals as if crushed beneath a heavy weight, and writhes until he finally produces a rock crystal from his stomach, as if it had been thrown to him. In reality it is his own which he has carried concealed from the beginning of the ceremony. He pretends to throw this to X, often so realistically that the novice blinks, expecting some object to strike him. All this time a kusiut, it does not matter who, has been drinking water at intervals and spitting it out over the face of X, "to strengthen him." When X has received the stone, the beating on the floor-boards, stilled during the transference of the crystal, breaks out again with full din. After a short interval the first siki stops the noise, goes through the same contortions and produces, apparently from his stomach, another rock crystal, which as before he throws across to his partner who falls down, and later passes it to X. Again the beating on the floor is started. The same ritual is carried out until four, or sometimes only two, rock crystals have been given to X. Then the procedure is reversed. The second siki goes to the novice and after much contortion draws from his stomach one of the crystals, which he pretends to throw back to his partner. As the latter makes the motion of catching it, he produces his own crystal which he, so it seems, forces into his own body. This is done for all the crystals (see Plate 4). 1 At this juncture the uninitiated are told to leave.

[1] [see category 116, p 84(C)- ANALYST]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

575* 791 796

One of the siki now kneads the back of X's neck and goes through the motions of pulling something from it. The frightened youth realizes that his spirit is being drawn from him and his terror, great in any case, is not lessened by the siki taking it in his cupped hands to the fire where he scoops up

[774] [781]

1 [see category 116, p84(D) - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 791 ●796 [774] [781] some ashes which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course he masticates only the ashes but X, unaware of this, is concerned for the fate of his spirit. At last it is restored to him and he is told that the siki has altered it from that of an uninitiated person to that of a kusiut.[11] The psychological effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the siki is tremendous.

The first siki now instructs two kukusiut sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the siki announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, peering here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle [534] is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call; but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a goat or bear bladder-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

*575 796 "Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two kukusiut on whom X is sitting.

[688] If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the fire. His father, or whoever it [425] may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up [553] and unfolds its origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes re-

[178] [11]This part of the rite has been omitted for so many years that many of the middle-aged kukusiut have forgotten it.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

X sometimes receives two prerogatives at his initiation, one from each parent, 575* or from some other interested relative. In this case both are 796 expounded. The singers listen intently, knowing that they [425] will later be called upon to compose songs on the theme, or [553] themes. According to some informants they immediately sing [533] one, as if they had just created it, though it was really prepared in advance. The kukusiut listen until they have mastered it.

Helpers now distribute the food provided by X's father, 575* or whoever is responsible for his initiation. At every kusiut 796 ceremonial the marshals are the first recipients, then the 556 singers, and finally the others without distinction. As the [264] guests are eating, X's father gives presents to all, without deference to rank. An announcer calls out:

"Here are [for example] ten bear-skins from X's mother. They are to obtain for him his cedar-bark bracelets."

These goods are then distributed. Similarly other gifts from various relatives are handed out for his anklets, his blanket, his collar, his head-dress, and all other parts of his clothing. As each item of his ceremonial costume is validated, [425] X dons the prepared article. A novice's head-dress consists of a round roll of dyed cedar-bark, covering a grass frame; in [292] Stuix and the other villages of the upper valley this is decor- [184] ated with a tuft of swan's down. The kukusiut of these villages also wear a distinctive decoration consisting of a swan's skin [237] with the feathers attached. In recent years it has been customary to pile all the goods together and distribute them as ăłq"łł, which has the significance of "something that has vanished for the novice's dyed cedar-bark." Theoretically, the aim of the donor is to bestow his presents on all equally, but if he finds that he has some remaining, he gives these to the chiefs, or to the relatives of someone whom he expects will soon be a novice. None of the goods used in general distributions are returnable, but a chief who receives an extra gift at the end usually remembers from whom it was received and cancels his indebtedness at the earliest opportunity. There is no close connection between the disbursements and the worth of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount
● 796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kusiut prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kusiut ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, since none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kusiut society, is still a 784 novice and cannot give a dance[12] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he
[262] is a Cannibal, Scratch, or Breaker dancer he must not eat unsmoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[13] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign [302] tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened.
[292] Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [524] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games,
[525]

[12] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a complete dance the following year.

[13] This prohibition was once broken at Lomo-ts. A skilled leader was required to arrange the texts at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Sunul, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the infraction became known.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

prohibitions that last not for one year, but for four. X is not subject to any other restraints. If he wishes to go hunting he can remove his cedar-bark collar and hang it for convenience in the forest near his village, redonning it on his return. The kukusiut show considerable interest in their new member, not only by warning him what he must not do, but by teaching him how to dance and to growl or make other of the necessary, but unusual, noises. During the remainder of the ceremonial season X is required to attend every kusiut dance, thereby learning much of the ceremonial, and during the following summer his relatives, especially if food is plentiful, frequently invite the kukusiut to their house. The singers beat out well-known tunes, or practise those which will be required for the following winter; if a song has been composed for X he dances in time to it, in the style proper to his prerogative. Formerly, when there were many novices, dances of this type took place frequently and were useful in giving constant practice to singers and neophytes alike. As no calls from supernatural patrons can come at this time of year, it follows that all such dances are of a non-sacred nature, although the uninitiated are excluded. During his period as a novitiate, X has one privilege; he can take food from anyone at any type of ceremony. It is remembered that one novice was even bold enough to take food which had been placed as an offering for the dead.

575* 784 [524] [525] 575* 533 535 575* 264

When the next kusiut season opens, X attends every performance. This is probably the most thrilling and nerve-racking period in his life. He does not know exactly when he will be allowed to give his dance, since that is a matter of arrangement between his relatives and the marshals, but he knows that the time will soon be at hand. When the great day, or rather night, actually comes, X is usually in a state of abject terror. The rite itself does not differ from those about to be described except that the first song relates the manner in which X found the repository. But the mental attitude of X differs greatly from that of an old performer. One informant,

575* 781 796

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 781 796 a woman about sixty years of age, vividly recalled her fears when she, a young woman, gave her first performance. It was the Dance of Winwina (II, p. 187), in which she had to call out loudly when a large number of uninitiated persons, including Carrier Indians, were present. One of the marshals was her great-uncle and he had carefully taught her what she was to say. A few minutes before the time for her announcement he came to where she lay hidden in an enclosure behind the fire:

"Do you see your relatives here?" he said. "Look at your father, your mother, and your uncles. If you fail to say what you are expected to say, they will all die in a few weeks, and so will you. Be bold!"

The woman asserted that it was the most terrifying experience in her whole life because, though she knew there was [688] deception in the rites, she also knew the power of the society and that the threat of death in case of error was no idle one. She was so frightened that she forgot the carefully learnt words and it required the prompting of the hidden marshal to get her through the ordeal.

But once the first rite has been successfully negotiated, it is a proud day for the novice. He feels himself a real kusiut and glories in his superiority over his former associates. For the rest of the season he, like everyone else who has performed a dance, must attend every rite. Energetic novices sometimes give their dances on two, or even three, successive years, though usually a man allows five or six to elapse between displays.

*575 766 If X should die during the year's interval between his initiation and his first dance, he is secretly buried by his fellow kukusiut without the customary mourning rites, and with no [533] uninitiated persons present at the grave. His song, if one has been composed for him, is sung softly, and he is interred adorned with his collar of dyed cedar-bark. During the next ceremonial season, that at which he should have danced, it is necessary for a brother, or other near relative, to receive a call since it is felt that a dance once begun must be completed,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 in the following examples. The subdivisions as called out by the announcer are separated by vertical lines and, where possible, a translation of each is given. The sounds of wordless choruses were not recorded. The different types are arranged according to order of mention in this monograph.

Sisaok Songs

*533 575 796 The themes of sisaok songs differ according to the purpose for which they have been composed. For instance, when a young person is being initiated into the society, the words usually refer to his crest, the tutwinam which brought his song; at potlatches, to the goods which will soon be given away and the phrasing is often grandiloquent; sometimes the two concepts are combined. These differences are clearly shown in the examples which follow. A few sisaok songs have been preserved for generations, but most are newly composed for each winter season and the old ones forgotten. Since few rites of this type have been carried out during recent years, it was difficult to obtain complete versions.

*533 Song Used by Wilnlks (a) of Kimsquit when Initiated into the Society (b)

A Litwumaxywa·o	stä'ähsaolt	skälpolmipdai(c)	didahända
Go out	ye citizens	to see	the arrival disiutsäls of my supernatural being.

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (d)

B Diqwisandai	daklähmdus	dikukpilsdai	dikästälwalamstems
That is what	brought down	my grandfather(e)	and has left for me(f)
Alkälwnildjudax	mnmmtcanai	mnmmtcanai	kästiktupqwinndai
Be careful	my children	my children	it will spear you
dalP'lähmsdai	dikwalntälsaiyla
what has come to me	my crest(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Yexadusdax	didiqaxdai	didiqaxdai	Diqäxäxä-mälwala
Shame him	the unsuccessful one(h)	the unsuccessful one.	He desires

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 prerogative, he was debarred from seclusion in the back-room and consequent [701] initiation as a sisaok. The exact relationship between warriors and members of [575] the sisaok society is obscure.

(b) Laxaiyao·k' is a Kitkatla name from the north. The first owner moved to [424] Kitlobe where he married, and the designation was transmitted to his descendants. One of the latter migrated to Kimsquit, where the name has since been handed [177] down from generation to generation though its original source has not been forgotten.

(c) Recorded as song VII D 36, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been used about 1870.

(d) Vocative form.

(e) That is: I double my importance. This kind of expression is popular among chiefs.

[424] (f) Ło̱wi is one of the ancestral names of Raven, the dancer's crest. In thus addressing the bird, he called attention to his ancestral history.

(g) The home of the first Laxaiyao·k' was near a point where dead whales often [262] drifted ashore. The dancer likens himself to a whale on which people will dine.

(h) Such repetition is not uncommon. The dancer implies that his wealth will be divided in a manner similar to the cutting up of a whale's carcass.

(i) A promontory owned by the first Laxaiyao·k'.

(j) That is: I summon people [to a feast.]

(k) An invitation not to be taken too literally.

Xe·tła Songs

The tunes of xe·tła songs are believed to have been handed down, unaltered, for many generations. The words, too, are frequently ancient although the singers sometimes make slight changes so that they will be more suitable for the chief in whose honour they are being sung. Owing to the decline of cere- [796] monials in which they were used, few xe·tła songs are now remembered.

Xe·tła Song Used by Sinuxsil of Kimsquit(a)

[727]

A Alinaxwoo	Ahlxwal'aiḑai	Di siałtaiämxdai	dänuilumik
Come!	See!	The chief	a man stands in the bow(b) di yälxotsal'aikdai of those who travelled everywhere.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Alaiqwalnuxsoists	da'änänuskxilsdax	aiyatätpämätłalsdax
He did so,	my pattern(c),	whence I came(d);

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

q̣mustmāltxwanuxst	aiyawasoyo·nxwalx
he circled and returned	Sonx^{w}.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 39a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) A sign of victory, eagerly watched for when a war-party is returning. [727]

(c) A reference to Wixus, one of Sinuxstl's first ancestors in the beginning of time. He made a journey to the Skeena, returning from there with canoe and paddles decorated with sun designs. The exploits of his descendant are compared with those of his pattern, that is, his first forbear. Such references to family history are sources of pride to the chief being honoured. [773]

(d) That is: From whom I am descended.

Fragment of a Xe·tla Song(a) Used by Qwoyusditsas of Kimsquit(b)

A Kaiyumsāmālsan	di stālaiāmxdai	kaiiḃainuxits
Presently he will be ashamed	that chief	if I get aiyadilāliaisdai my copper.

[177]

(a) Both tune and theme are said to be of Kwakiutl origin.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 34b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Fragment of a Xe·tla Song Used by Sinuxstl of Kimsquit(a)

A Sānusikqomosīsandai	yao (b) diq̣xstcaiyailtumdai	Oldiq̣xlāmitlisandai
They are smiling,	greetings to the out-stretched glass!	They drink sewās qomcuadju

the food of white men(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 41b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) Literally: Hello!

(c) This song was used at a potlatch where the fare provided was whisky. The tune is said to be very ancient although new words were composed for the occasion. [556] [273]

A'alk Songs

A'alk songs somewhat resemble sisaok ones and, like them, are difficult to collect completely. Parts of many are remem- [575] [796]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 [575] [796] bered, but the rites in which they were used have been practically discontinued for several years so that unabridged versions are almost impossible to obtain. A'alk themes vary according to the ceremonies in which they are used. For potlatches, they consist of incidents from ancestral myths; whereas for non-ceremonial occasions following the kusiut season, they deal with current events. The following examples are divided into these two classes.

THEMES DRAWN FROM ANCESTRAL MYTHS

Qi'aqa Song Used for Nuximatllaix, a Man of Kimsquit(a)

A Yeyutsämatotolaix	dialimilsudai	dixłwunlaixdsuldai
They give valuable counsel,	my goods(b);	they formulate their own opinion

oldiłomätsdulsdai | aiyaskäi·aiämkilsdai | oldiamtainutilsdai concerning to whom of those seated in my house I shall give presents(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ka'äisiyusdjmaisandja	skakilłimodjmils	Wasältwinmodjdumant'
I speak loftily	of everything(d).	Through them(e)

siłłwalstliwada·uals	ithmstaiämdids·ls	aiyawamän·uksalsals
I become elevated,	my power to give potlatches [is]	my male relatives(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Känunukäwälmidsmals	dusnut'łänals·kidax	dununułłänemtskidax
Presently I shall stand	within the box	at the corner door(g),

sxälxäldimutdämkis	dusnuskmnals·kidax	łwalosdimutsudax
where flowed to all(h)	the moose-skins(i)	of Twalosdimut(j)(k).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The goods which I am about to distribute advise me. This statement is not to be taken literally.

(c) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.

(d) Refers to the dancer's many prerogatives.

(e) Refers to his male relatives.

[424] [773] (f) The dancer had obtained several prerogatives from ancestors, traced patrilineally.

(g) A reference to the dancer's origin myth (I, p. 329). The house of his first forefather, uyuyuyut, had its door in a back corner instead of the centre front.

(h) That is: Whence were distributed at potlatches.

*533 B Sāostxtxugwsa | olāsults | skā'alpsdulsdai | dismāt·ampdjs
Go within | my house, | I am giving food | to my friends.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

[614] [424] [685] (a) Recorded as song VII D 28b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said that this song has been handed down for generations in an ancestral family; they now regard it as a family possession and would consider its use by others to be stealing.

[609] (b) Many years ago a solitary Bella Bella used to paddle to Kimsquit almost every year. He was dressed like a chief and had the mien of one, so that his hosts assumed him to be a person of importance. It was later found that he was a poor man. The mocking of foreigners is a common theme of a'alk songs.

am'hl·a Song Used for Xumxumlaix(a)

*533 575 578 A Nulwulukāxānamqualsan | sitxwosmaikila
He has fallen so that his buttocks are uppermost, | Hail(b)!

Damunmulsan·imut | skusiustas
He has come to hurt, | that kusiut(c).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C. The second and third parts have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 3c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) A mockingly deferential salutation used in a'alk songs describing the kukusiut.

(c) Xumxumlaix was an a'alk who is said to have seen a Cannibal kusiut when the latter was supposed to be in the land above. A song was composed about the incident, and the above fragment has been remembered for many years. Xumxumlaix was initiated into the kusiut society; see vol. II, p. 265.

*533 575 ●796 203 As already described, whenever a dancer is performing, the women utter a peculiar high-pitched drone and the heralds call out remarks suitable to the occasion. A phonograph record[3] was made of the drone, followed by a cry suitable for either susaok or a'alk dances. The following words are virtually sung:

Yalosāldimut | stāhmpakais
Do not err, | chiefs.

[3]Recorded as song VII D 29c, National Museum of Canada.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nusäxkämx Songs

The texts of nusäxkämx songs are fragmentary and unsatisfactory. The rites in which they were used have long been discontinued and, since they were never ceremonially important; there was nothing to impress either tunes or words on the minds of the singers. In addition, it is probable that the songs were always less carefully constructed than those of other types. 533* [796]

Song Used for Qolon(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

Qixänaowitaiya	sîhmstänätcistaiya	sätwinumlsundai
Be happy,	ye people,	it is about to come,

dässqwluyumdai	däqolonlaotcaiya
that hidden one(c),	Beaver.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Qoloni'i	Qoloni'i	wa·xai·yai
Beaver(d)!	Beaver!	wa·xai·yai(e).

(a) This word means "Beaver." It is most unlikely that it was the dancer's own designation, more probably a nickname used in connection with the nusäxkämx rite. [551]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 9b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louie Hall.
(c) This signifies a person who is hidden ceremonially, such as a kusiut dancer who has gone to the land above. The dancer expected to be a Cannibal and the rite in which this song was used served as a kind of rehearsal. [796] [575]
(d) This refrain replaces a second and third part of the song itself.
(e) A meaningless series of choral ejaculations.

Song Used for a Kimsquit Woman(a)

Äxnnupdimqwduks	Ilopiwacsudax	tuxwismaoskidax	ältusmätskidax
They heard	of Fawn(b),	when they were playing	long ago(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9d, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) The theme being of a fawn, the dancer wore a deer-skin. [595]
(c) As in many nusäxkämx songs, the words refer to an ancient story, probably one describing the adventures of deer and wolves; see vol. II, p. 425.

Song Used for Waoxiqslaix, a Kimsquit Man(a)

Lilitwmustäninux	waowunjaqstän·ai	waiytski	sqolänops
Run in all directions,	ye dogs,	for the first time	it is there

nunupaolinum	ensitäyänum	maoxlc	maoxlc
he brings much food(b),	go below the house	?(c)	?(d).

[776] [192]

CHAPTER III

WARFARE[1]

General Observations — Specific Accounts

General Observations

721 648 PRIOR to the establishment of British rule, there was considerable warfare among the coastal tribes of British Columbia. Long-continued struggles leading to the extermination of one or other of the participants were unknown, but there were constant raids, counter-raids, forays, and attacks. These were never as continuous as on the Plains, where martial achievements were regarded more highly than on the coast, but it appears probable that at least several villages of the Bella Coola were embroiled every few years. Nevertheless, [796] war was secondary in importance to ceremonial rites. During the winter, peace reigned and members of hostile tribes were [556] even received as guests at some dances. At potlatches they might be subjected to insult, later to be avenged in the same manner or by active hostility, but seldom was actual violence offered either to envoys or guests. The symbol of peace and 726 friendliness was eagle down; the occupants of a canoe who 825 bore an invitation to a potlatch, or who were guests them- 778 selves, used to blow this substance up into the air whenever [486] another craft approached, and it was incumbent on the latter [578] to veer over to the other side of the channel. Eagle down was [627] considered to be so sacred that when two men were quarrelling a chief could stop them by blowing some of it over their heads. 721 In winter, hostilities were prevented by ceremonies, and in summer the people were usually busy laying in supplies of food; consequently, it was only in the late spring that fighting was [575] at all common. Even then the dictates of ceremonial life were [622] not entirely forgotten; no kusiut novice went to war and

[1]Warfare having long been discontinued, the past tense is used throughout this chapter.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [296] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [789] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women [291] have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [796] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the [152] chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the com-231 fort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands [577] generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to their forefathers. Profound as these material changes have been, those of a psychological nature have been even more important. New worlds have been thrown open to them, stimulating ideas have been brought to their attention, and they have realized for the first time that the world is infinitely larger than they had imagined. Hand in hand with this extension of knowledge has gone disbelief in their own ancient lore. The white man, whose superiority and mechanical skill they admit, positively denies the actuality of their mythology, and laughs at the dramatic performances which were wont to fill the winter with engrossing interest. Such rites can flourish only in an attitude of profound belief: this has been so shaken that the dances continue listlessly, a mere shadow of a once living art. The young people were the first to embrace a scepticism that has rapidly grown into disbelief of the faith of their ancestors, and a half-concealed scorn for their elders, the upholders of the old customs. Worst of all, prohibition of the potlatch has made it impossible for a man to reach a position of social eminence. Moreover, since the holding of any type of ceremonial requires a distribution of gifts, formal gatherings of all kinds have become virtually impossible; even marriages have no longer the social support that formerly made them so lasting.

These cumulative blows would be enough to shake any civilization, and that of the Bella Coola has been entirely unable to adjust itself to the new conditions. The young people, having lost respect for their elders, are deprived of the advice and support essential to the continuity of culture. They ape the white man's dress; they want his mechanical devices, but have failed to assimilate them. For example, a gramophone in a Bella Coola house is an anachronism, while several similar articles spoil the old picture but do not provide a new one. Seeking to copy the new ways thrown open to them, they have achieved the outward show but not the substance, and in so doing have destroyed their own culture. In the old days they were ambitious to hold potlatches and willing to work steadily towards that goal; now, new desires have not kept pace with

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
[426] ahwekam: Excess of amount returned over that previously received as an investment present.
Aiamkikhs: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Aiislaxk: 1—Supernatural beings who drone as the sun moves.
2—Voice of the supernatural woman, Snitsman·s; the term is occasionally applied to the being herself. The sound is produced by kusiut whistles.
Aimalaila: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Aimalue: "The Coming of Foul Weather," in the language of supernatural beings: The phenomenon is semi-anthropomorphized.
Aima·ti: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2—Ancient chief from whom the village is supposedly named.
Aiqnaisamlaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[821] Aiqwoinst: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the moon at eclipses.
Ailsamka: 1—One of the first women to settle at Tal·ia in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of an ustamy chief mentioned in an ancient story.
Aiutla: 1—One of the designations of Kamai·ti, the mysterious supernatural woman.
2—Ferocious, awe-inspiring, adjective.
[526] akaxya: Swing consisting of two long ropes with cross-seat.
[824] akpadukt(s): Spruce leaves.
Akmtci: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
alipamam: Lehal.
Alkalahs: 1—One of the first men to settle at Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Naxwlst in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Aima·ti in the beginning of time.
alkjalas: Stake supporting olachen net.
[796] alkuxhitmm: Ritual repeated at intervals between the allotment of tasks for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being to the first nasek initiate.
alt", plural, wealt"ats: Herald.
Altamam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[533] alus: Third part of song.
'alus: Pleasure expedition of boys and girls to the forest.
[517] Ales: Name of an isolated star.
[821] Alqatlas: Supernatural man-eater, patron of Cannibals.
Alqualas: Stick decorated with abalone-shell used by one of the settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
Alqwalas: Supernatural female berry-picker resident in the land of the dead.
alsaia: Announcer.
Alsatalalo·s: Bay of the Thousand Islands near Namu.
Alsalmaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
alsatla: Cannibal.
[587] alsualtm: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife; the word is undoubtedly connected with the verb, to bequeath.
Alstwis: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.
Alsla: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Ice.
Alstala: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
[425] alstlhem: The transference of a name, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.
[559]
[584]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nixōōsta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [424]

Nixpi: Expert supernatural dancer; to his associates he is a yearling mountain goat.

nmlq or nmlqhmut: First complete dance given by a kusiut initiate.

mmmmk: Mammal, any kind. [825]

Nniwanaix: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

Noakila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuiili in the beginning of time.

Noakqmm: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Noamtaxait: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Siskiut in the beginning of time.

nolcista: Kusiut prerogative as a Breaker; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

nolyāsta: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kimsquit, kusiut masks are hung.

nomuk: The making and use of hand nets for olachen.

Nomdjamōstem: 1—"The Adviser": One of the names of the supreme god. [622]
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; virtually, "The Sages."

no'omātlim: 1—Ceremony at which nsook names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796]

no'omdjut: Assemblage of the kukusiut to practise difficult rites.

No-fuma, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Tlaiyakam name given to a deserting wife.

Nowakila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nowlrikātum: Sentence of death passed by the kukusiut on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [688]

nsaiyas: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [426]

Nsālālmm: Synonym for Noakqmm, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nu'aas, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nuāpsuta: Toilet-hole.

nuaska: Birth. [821]

Nuchāqas: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [769]

nudak-an: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead. [823]

nudak-an du ihmsta: 1—High tide.
2—Long life.

nudjiqasta: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold olachen-net post steady while being driven.

Nu'eymāj, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nuk[w]: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nuskmāhais: Synonym for Sximsximit, an immoral supernatural woman.

nuqal: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nukamlnuāmam: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the kusiut season. [535]

Nukar-sa: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the Kû'siût these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks which I have copied. Qû'mtsica and Qtsqûmalâ'otla wear the design of the full moon, indicated in the mask Qû'mtsica (fig. 4) by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Qtsqûmalâ'otla has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin (fig. 5). Aiumkî'likya (fig. 6) and Aiumalâ'otla (fig. 7) wear the design of the crescent, drawn

556
773
776
532
575
776

FIG. 6.—Mask representing Aiumkî'likya.

FIG. 7.—Mask representing Aiumalâ'otla.

in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second. The fifth, K'ômk'ômkî'likya, and K'ô'mtsica have designs representing stars (fig. 8), both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is K'ula'qawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmonberry bush (fig. 9). The next in order, Kulâ'lisa (=who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue (fig. 10). The ninth, Ae'mâ'k wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a birdskin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called Ti'tsâ'qâttlâsa (=the eater), the sister of all the others. Her face is painted with a bladder filled with grease (fig. 11). She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

The Sisna'ka, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of greater, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the Sisna'ka, and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned he asked the people to clean their houses, and to strew them with clean sand, before he consented to enter. Then he danced the Sisna'ka, and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with

575
773
776
796

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, 773 returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Sisan'kH.
776 Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.
●796

FIG. 8.—Mask representing K·'ōmk·'ōmkt'likya.

FIG. 9.—Mask representing K·ula'qawa.

532
575
776

614 Each gens has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the Sisan'kH 532 only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred posses-
422

FIG. 10.—Mask representing Kulê'lias.

FIG. 11.—Mask representing Tl'ētsa'aplêtlāna.

[575]
[776]

[534] sions of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved [292] headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ɮlaqō'tla dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some ɮlaqō'tla do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The ɮlaqō'tla has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house. 575 [774] [756] [292] [301]

The Ō'lɛq (= the laugher) and the Dā'tia (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'lɛq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'tia carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ōlɛq and the Dā'tia must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses. [785]

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kū'siūt, for instance when the ɮlaqō'tla gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the Kū'siūt are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Atlqulā'tɛnum, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qē'mtsiōa and his brothers and his sister (see p. 412), Masmasalā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Nusqē'mta, and many others. 575 688 575 532 796 [776]

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro- 844

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of SENX and ALK'unta'm. These two might be called the rulers of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar charac-
773 teristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on 776 pp. 78 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, ALK'unta'm's mother, Nānusōmik·ēeqonz'm, is described as a Cannibal, who inserts her long snout in the ears of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with ALK'unta'm, the stake being the salmon. ALK'unta'm lost, and the man took the salmon down [825] from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 38, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl. In the tradition quoted above, ALK'unta'm also gives to man the power to cure [755] disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

776 A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might be called the assistants of the principal deities. In order to understand their [772] functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the 796 Bella Coola which is called kō'siut, and which corresponds to the ts'ētsa'eqa [515] of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial, and its importance in the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The kō'siut is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the kō'siut are mostly dramatic representations of myths [532] referring to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths: therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials. Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are SENX, ALK'unta'm, and SnōLk'ulx·a'la. The functions of many of the 575 inferior deities seem to refer solely to the kō'siut. These deities and their 776 functions are as follows: Slx·sek·llal'x· (Plate VII, Fig. 6) ordains the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the kō'siut. This deity is mentioned by Jacobsen, who calls him Sek-seik Kallai.[4] Nusnē'neq'als (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the Snēne'lq of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 295.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311–738.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Rudolph Weber.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 388.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 the middle of the water, the barnacles and worms bit her. She jumped up, and the canoe capsized. The birds swam ashore. After a short time the barnacles and sea-worms came ashore too. They looked very stout, because they had eaten the bear. Then the youth said to the girl, "There are two trails here,—one leading to the left, the other to the right. You follow the one, I will follow the other. If the trails meet, we will marry; if they do not, we here separate forever. They started, and after a while met each other. Then the youth married the girl. (Mask of the Bear, Plate X, Fig. 12.)[1]

VI.

121 It is necessary to make a few remarks on the relation of the ceremonials 796 of the Bella Coola Indians to their mythology. I have not seen any of their ceremonials, and my descriptions are based on inquiries, and upon the accounts [124] published by Fillip and Adrian Jacobsen.

The Bella Coola have two ceremonials,—the sisau'k· and the kō'siut, which 796 correspond to the LAō'laxa and the ts'ētsa'eqa of the Kwakiutl. I have described these ceremonials fully in another paper.[2] The sisau'k· ceremonials 575 are mostly dramatic representations illustrating the clan legends, some of which have been recorded in Chap. IV, while the kō'siut ceremonials are dramatic representations of the initiation of members of various clans into certain secret societies. Among these, the Cannibal Society, the Society of the Laughers, and the Society of the Throwers, are the most important. These are called by the Bella Coola the ƚlaxō'LƚIa, Olx, and Da'tia. I described on pp. 34, 35, the spirits presiding over the two first-named 114 societies. The information which I obtained on these points is perfectly 575 clear and consistent. I cannot quite reconcile the explanations given by A. and F. Jacobsen to the accounts which I received. It seems that their 776 accounts do not clearly distinguish between the opinions held by various tribes. In the article above referred to, I described fully the opinions held 796 by the Kwakiutl in regard to the origin of their Cannibal Society. They believe that a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae initiates the Cannibals. He is represented as having an enormous black head with dilated nostrils and large mouth. I have made frequent inquiries among the Bella Coola, but received the uniform answer that this being does not initiate their Cannibals. It is not impossible that a few families may have adopted this tradition from the Kwakiutl tribes, but I have not been able to find it among the Bella Coola. Jacobsen maintains that Baxbakualanuxsi'wae is the particular spirit of the Cannibal among the Bella Coola, and brings forward the well-known

[113]

[1] Additional legends of the Bella Coola have been published in the publications quoted on pp. 26, 27.
[2] Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 311–738.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tradition of the Awī'k·'enôx as an explanation of the ceremonial. The only modification which I note in this tradition is that the Cannibal's wife is described as sucking out through their ears the brains of children,—an incident which I heard related of the mother of ALk'untā'm.[1] He calls him "Beck-Beck-Kvalanit, and in the Bella Coola dialect, Pāh-Pāh Kualanusiva." This word is decidedly of Kwakiutl origin, meaning "the one who eats human flesh at the mouth of the river (or at the north end of the world)." Neither have I been able to find any mask representing this being among the Bella Coola tribe. The masks which they use in connection with the Cannibal ceremony are of quite a different character (Plate XII, Figs. 1-8). I am the more inclined to think that Mr. Jacobsen did not clearly distinguish between the customs and traditions of various tribes, since he introduces "Ganikilla Ko" (Qa'nig·ilak·) in the traditions of the Bella Coola, while it is distinctively a legend of the Kwakiutl tribes of the extreme northwest of Vancouver Island. Jacobsen does not distinguish clearly between the sisau'k· and the kū'siut, stating that the kū'siut dances are performed during the sisau'k· in the same way as, among the Kwakiutl, a LaŌ'laxa may be celebrated during the ts'ē'ts'aēqa. This may be, but theoretically the two ceremonials must be considered entirely distinct. According to the information which I received, sisau'k· dances may be held in summer, in which case the kū'siut could not possibly form part of the sisau'k· ceremonial. When, on the other hand, the sisau'k· takes place during the kū'siut period, it would naturally be accompanied by kū'siut dances.

114 575 776 796

As stated before, the sisau'k· is a ceremonial in which the legend of the clan is illustrated by means of dramatic performances. At the same time valuable presents are distributed among the guests who are invited to witness the ceremonial. The value of the gifts amounts often to several thousand dollars. At this time the family legend is told in general outlines, but the details of the legend are kept a secret, and are transmitted only to those who are initiated in the sisau'k· of the clan. It seems that we must consider the transmission of the sisau'k· legend in the following manner: At any given time it is the property of the chief of the family, who, at the time of the celebration, transfers his rights to his successor, generally to his son. The full tradition is kept secret by the owner. It seems that there is a close analogy between the conditions prevailing in the northwest and those found among the southwestern Indians, among whom certain priests are guardians of traditions. Among the tribes of the northwest coast the chief of a family is the guardian and owner of the family tradition, while among the southwestern tribes the priest is the guardian of the tradition belonging to a clan or to a fraternity. My impression is, however, that among the northwestern

575 424 [431]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 394.
[2] Ibid., 1894, p. 890.

[113]

424 Indians the tradition is considered much more clearly the property of the 575 person who has it in charge than it is among the southwestern Indians. A description of the sisau'k· ceremonial has been given by Jacobsen in the paper above referred to.[1]

614 A clan legend which is illustrated in the sisau'k· ceremonial is called by the Bella Coola "SEMSMA" or "Smā'yusta." These traditions are the 424 exclusive property of each clan. The laws according to which they descend from generation to generation differ from the laws prevailing among the other [621] Coast tribes. The inhabitants of each Bella Coola village are not subdivided into clans, gentes, or septs; but each village community forms a unit, and possesses the same tradition. In order to keep the tradition in the tribe, the 614 law requires that no person shall marry outside of his own village community.
Thus the clan tradition is kept the exclusive property of the village com-424 munity by means of endogamy. I have made very careful inquiries in regard 582 to this point, and all the old men make substantially the same statement. Even marriages among near relatives are permitted;[2] and although marriages of people who are distantly related, or not related at all, are preferred, it even happens that cousins marry, or that an uncle marries his niece, in order to keep the clan tradition from being acquired by another village community. It seems, however, that, owing to the influence of the Coast tribes, the endogamic system has begun to give way to an exogamic system. Powerful [622] and wealthy chiefs marry outside of their own village community, in order to secure an additional clan legend through marriage. This new system agrees with the one prevalent among the Kwakiutl tribes.

575 The kū'siut, as stated before, is a religious ceremony in which all the 614 deities of heaven are personified. The members of various clans are initiated according to their clan traditions; but the same societies and the same deities 796 appear in the traditions of all the various clans. From what little I have been able to learn, it seems that there is an elaborate opening of the whole ceremonial, corresponding to the opening of the ceremonial among the Kwakiutl.[3] I received the following description of the opening ceremony:—

575 The person who invites to the kū'siut, that is to say, the man whose 796 son is to be initiated into one of the secret societies according to the tradition of his clan, requests a person who is called Ē'xēm to invite the nine brothers [776] and their sister, who reside in the House of Myths, and in whose charge the kū'siut is placed. The names of the brothers are Xēmxēmalā'oLla, Xē'mtsiwa, Ōmq'ōmkī'lik·a, Q'ō'mtsiwa, Aimalā'oLla, Aī'umki'lik·a, K·lē'llas, Q'ulaxa'wa, Āt'mak·; and that of their sister, L'ētsa'apleLana (see p. 33). In the rear of the house an elevated room is prepared for E'xēm, in which he lies down. He is covered with rings made of red cedar-bark. For four days he stays

[1] Vmar, 1895, pp. 1-23.
[2] I have described this fully in the Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 300ff.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in this room. Then the host sends messengers to invite the people. They take staffs, and tie red cedar-bark round their heads, and go from house to house, singing, "Nayaxdets wa nōnōsp'otstsē' he!" ("I wish to find some one who understands the winter ceremonial.") This they repeat in every house. Then they return to the host's house, who sends them out again, ordering them to sing, "Qōts'ak·im totēts wa nōnōsp'otstsē' he!" ("I wish the dancers would wash their hands.") Again they return to his house. They are sent out once more with the message, "Xoōtsak·umtotēts wa nōnōsp'otstsē' he!" ("I wish the dancers would make their hands tremble.") They return once more to the chief's house, and are sent out again with the message, "Tapamak·tēts wa nōnōsp'otstsē' he!" ("I want the dancers to look at their hands.") Now the dancers are ready, and come to the house. Then Ē'xēm arises and dresses. He puts on a head-dress of birds' skins, ornamented with red cedar-bark. He is accompanied by women. Another man, who is called Nusx·ia'mt., adorns himself with red cedar-bark. He carries in his right hand a small baton covered with red cedar-bark. In his left he carries a larger stick, on which he beats time with the small baton. He sits down, and now all the people enter. First of all, Ē'xēm comes in, accompanied by many women. Nusx·ia'mt. begins to sing and to beat time, and Ē'xēm shouts, "Ooo!" Ē'xēm walks around the fire, keeping it to his left, and shaking his bark. Before he begins the circuit, he gives four jumps near the door. Four times he goes round the fire, and every time he reaches the door he gives four jumps. As soon as he does so, Nusx·ia'mt. beats time slowly. When E'xēm has finished his dance, the people take him to a place near the door, and a woman sings near him. Nusx·ia'mt. and the people join her, then she dances her winter dance. Before she quite finishes, the people make her stop, and another woman begins her dance. Nusx·ia'mt. beats time, and the other people join his song. The people make her stop again. Thus a great many people perform their dances. Now Ē'xēm appears again, crying, "Ooo!" and Nusx·ia'mt. beats time. Again he jumps four times to the right and four times to the left when reaching the door. After this, two more men and two more women perform their dances. After this has been done twice, Ē'xēm stands near the door, looking upward, and says, "They are very near now." By this time the whole house is full of people. He goes around the house three times, dancing. Then he stays near the door, looking upward, saying all the time, "They are near by." When he reaches the door the fourth time, he cries, "They have arrived! Now they are here, dancing on the roof." Ē'xēm continues to dance in the house, in order to induce them to come down. The first to come down is Xēmxēmalā'ot.la, who stops at the rear of the house and sits down. Ē'xēm continues to dance, and the others enter in order. Ē'xēm stands near them and says, "Now I have placed 575 796 them. Let the chief give them red cedar-bark." The people take small pieces of blankets, and sew red cedar-bark on to them in designs corresponding to the paintings on the faces of these deities, and they give these to the deities in order to appease them. Then they throw grease into the fire. During all this time É'xêm stands in the rear of the house; and when a painting has been finished, the man who offers it to the deity shouts, "Xêmxêmalâ'ôɫla t'aix·tau'!" ("This is Xêmxêmalâ'ôɫla.") And É'xêm sings, "Yayak·lamêts'êk·a wa k'waɫtɛnai'x·aɫ t'aix· tai'ya; aɫt'aɫ'ô'mataxstôs nusk·asiôtstani'x· asɛlkulatôtita'ya." As soon as he has finished his song, a loud noise is heard on the roof, as though a heavy stone were falling down. É'xêm arises and performs a dance, while the noise of whistles is heard proceeding from him.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 I am not familiar with the details of the ceremonial, and shall proceed to record the principal characteristics of the various societies. The Cannibal is initiated in the House of Myths by Bâ'ɛxôɫla. I recorded above (p. 34) how a young man was initiated by this spirit, and how he was returned to his friends. The return of the Cannibal is accompanied by ceremonies similar [184] to those recorded in this tradition. It seems that the ceremonies of the Cannibals of various families are much alike, each having a tradition of its own referring to the initiation. It is believed that all the Cannibals, during their initiation, go up to the sky. I was told that on this journey they have to take human flesh along for food. It is said that in former times the chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and any one who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for Bâ'ɛxôɫla. The offer was accepted, and a [266] payment made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the Bâ'ɛxôɫla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods.

The spirit appears to the novice while he is in the woods, and takes him up to the House of Myths, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside of the houses. He has lost all his hair except a little in the median line of the head. It is believed that it has been torn off by the strong wind blowing in the higher regions. Some Cannibals do not devour human flesh, but tear dogs to pieces or devour raw salmon The 575 ceremonial consists in pacifying the Cannibal, and exorcising the spirit that 796 possesses him. This is the object of the kû'siut ceremonial. After a Cannibal has returned, the people try to capture him. When he is first heard to approach, the speaker, whose face is painted black, and who wears a cedar-bark ring, and is covered with eagle-down, shouts, "Tix·ma'ts'ɛn tak·'axta'ɫiɫ tsaɫ'ai'ôts'ai. P'alx·êxtsalatstɛnai' tix·ma'ts'ɛn tasiswalô'ɫiɫ t'aɫ'aiôtst'ai'!" ("Arise, it may be our Cannibal. Awake!") The Cannibal is accompanied by four assistants, who are called Aɫiɫpa, and who from time to time utter the cry, "Hoip!" which is intended to pacify the Cannibal. They wear masks (Plate XII, Figs. 4 and 5). The people try to throw a noose over his head; but he throws it off, refusing to be captured. Then the people shout, "Ya'i!" beating time rapidly. The Cannibal tears the ropes that hold him, and disappears. Then the people follow him, and search for him until they find him. As soon as they approach, he attacks them, but gradually he becomes quieter. Then the speaker (Alk°) invites the people to the dancing-house, saying, "Ip'a'nap kukusiau't!" That means, "Dance, dancers!" Now the Cannibal opens the door, accompanied by his assistants. He wears the mask shown in Plate XII, Fig. 3. At once a number of women arise, ready to surround him as soon as he enters the house. They are called ALAL'au'LTEMX°. The speaker, who holds a staff, arises and shouts, "Ō n ya'li-watimōtx Alqōlayak°ai's!" That means, "Act like a real Cannibal." The Cannibal utters his cry, "Hoaaa, hoaaa, hoaaa!" ending with a long deep growl. He stays in the doorway for a long time. Then he steps into the house, turns his left shoulder outward once, bites one man on the right-hand side of the house, and one on the left-hand side, and then performs his circuit of the fire, leaving the fire to his left. In dancing he holds his fists in front of his chest, one on each side. He moves in a stooping position, raising his feet very high. He dances for four nights, during which time the people try to pacify him by means of songs and dances. After he has first been induced to enter the house, he becomes quieter. Then he tells the people what he has seen during his absence, and the song-leader makes a song on the subject. The women do not learn about the events that took place during his absence until they hear the song. After four days the ceremony of exorcising the S'a'LPsta (Plate XII, Figs. 6 and 7), the monster that possesses him, is performed. A large dish is ornamented with red cedar-bark; and the assistant of the S'a'LPsta (Plate XII, Fig. 8), by means of incantations, makes the Cannibal vomit the snake, or the wolf, or the eagle, that possesses him. Then he is seen to carry the head of the animal under his left arm, while the body is seen in the rear, being held by his assistants. Then this animal is seen to vomit flesh and blood into the dish which has been prepared for the purpose. The Cannibal's assistants cover the body of the animal with down; while they cry from time to time, "Hoip!" Then the people beat time very rapidly, and suddenly the S'a'LPsta has disappeared. The people beat time four times, and after this the Cannibal has become like an ordinary man. He walks around the fire, which he keeps to his right, and says, "Now Ba'EXōLla has left me." The contents of the dish are thrown into the water, but the dish itself is burned in the dancing-house. It is supposed that it is thus conveyed to heaven. After the dish has been burned, the Cannibal does not dance any more. Then a bed is prepared for him in the rear of the house, in which he must stay for four days. After this, he is allowed to re-enter the houses; but before doing so for the first time, he must stop at the door and shout, "Wa, wa, wa!" Then he jumps over the threshold. Accompanied by many men, he is led, after four days more, to the river for final purification. He is pushed into the water, but struggles to free himself. He tries to duck his companions, and utters his cries. Finally he is led back. Then he weeps, because the spirit has left him entirely. The people beat time while he is going back to the house. Then he is offered a piece of salmon, which is placed on his throat, while the people shout, "Hoip, hoip!" The salmon is taken away again, and after some time he is allowed to take one bite. Then he must lie down. After the dancing season is ended, he is again allowed to eat in the same way as other people do. The piece of salmon that was placed on his throat is eaten by children as a protection against sickness. Finally a ceremony is performed which is called "taking the lip of the S'a't.psta out of the Cannibal's body." While this is being done, the people cry, "Hoip!" Then they throw the lip upon another Cannibal, who at once falls into an ecstasy. Then the shaman takes it back and throws it up towards the sky, where it disappears. The dish and the spoon that the Cannibal used during his ecstasy are destroyed. For four years he must wear a small ring of red cedar-bark, in summer as well as in winter.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The Ölx is also initiated in heaven by the being described before (p. 35). There are different traditions regarding his initiation among different clans. Some Ölx, during their performances, walk ropes which are stretched through the house. When he returns from his initiation, small whistles, called ĕal.l'laxa, which imitate the voices of eagles, are heard outside of the houses. Then the Ölx enters in a state of ecstasy, scratching the people who assemble to hold him, and tearing their blankets. Finally the people succeed in placing a blanket over his head, and he begins to come to his senses. When he enters the house, the people beat time, then he teaches the chorus-leader a song. The mask worn by the Ölx is quite large, and characterized by a large nose (Plate XII, Fig. 9). He carries a dancing-club (Plate XII, Fig. 10), and rings made of red cedar-bark. He is accompanied by two assistants, who also wear masks.

VII.

We will now discuss the probable origin of the mythology described in the preceding pages. In order to do so, it is necessary to make a brief statement in regard to the social organization of the neighboring tribes. In another paper[1] I have fully discussed the considerable amount of borrowing that has taken place among the Coast tribes, and the relation of their

[1] Indianische Sagen von der nord-pazifischen Küste Amerikas, Berlin, 1895, pp. vi + 363.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

mythologies to those of the interior. It is unnecessary to revert to this subject here. The similarity of the Bella Coola legends to those of the other Coast tribes on the one hand, and to the traditions of the Athapascan tribes on the other, is evident. 114 177

It is, however, important to compare their social organization with that of the neighboring tribes, in order to gain a clearer understanding of the origin of their peculiar organization. As stated before, the Bella Coola are divided into village communities, which are organized on an endogamic basis. Each village community has its tradition, which is represented in certain ceremonies. The supernatural beings which play a part in these traditions are personified by certain dancers. Other Coast tribes have a much more complex organization. The Tlingit and Haida are divided into two clans, each of which is subdivided into a great many families, which, as it would seem, were originally village communities. This opinion is based on the fact that the names of many of the families must be translated as "inhabitants of such and such a place." The two clans are present in all the villages of the tribe, each family belonging to either one clan or the other. The Tsimshian have the same system, except that the number of clans is four instead of two. Each tribe is divided into families, which embrace the inhabitants of a certain region; but all the families of the whole tribe are classified according to the four clans. Among the Haida, Tlingit, and Tsimshian, descent is purely maternal; among the northern Kwakiutl tribes, conditions are somewhat different, according to observations made by Dr. Livingston Farrand. Here we have village communities which are subdivided according to four clans in the same way as those of the Tsimshian, but descent is not purely maternal. There is a strong preponderance of the latter form of descent, but parents are at liberty to place their children in either the paternal or maternal clan. The preponderance of maternal descent is, however, so strong, that from my previous occasional inquiries I drew the inference that descent was purely maternal. 621 171 [96] [176]

Among the southern Kwakiutl tribes the families constituting a village community are subdivided into a number of clans, but each clan is confined to one village. We do not find a limited number of clans pervading the whole tribe, as we do among the northern tribes. An analysis of the social organization of this tribe has shown that the present organization has evidently developed from a previous simpler state, in which the tribe was divided into single village communities. The present more complex organization resulted from the amalgamation of various villages. Owing to the influence of the totemism of the northern tribes, each village community adopted a crest, which in course of time became the totem of the clan.[1] The Kwakiutl have a peculiar organization, which may be considered a transitional stage between

[1] "Social Societies of the Kwakiutl Indians" (Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, p. 310). [113]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 . NE6 Bellacoola NE6

174 contradiction is inherent in all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast, 424 they nowhere reach such a degree as among the Bella Coola; and I presume 614 the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

The prayers of the Bella Coola directed to Senx or Ta'ata bear a 171 remarkable resemblance to the prayers of the Tsimshian addressed to Laxha, 782 the sky. In both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather, and man will be happy; consequently the prayer to [821] the deity "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from 177 the Coast tribes is the kn'siut ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism.
575 The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the 773 Kwakiutl are practically identical. I told above (p. 34) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another 796 tradition is told to explain the origin of this custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret societies were introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by three distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the
174 development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious incon-
773 sistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the word and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not co-ordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 60 ff.

[113]

EXPLANATION OF PLATE XI.

 Cross-hachure indicates black; vertical hachure, red; horizontal, blue; dots, orange; white, natural color of wood, except in cases where the whole mask is black.

531
796

Fig. 1.—Mask representing the thunder-bird (front and profile). Black, red. Height, 11½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 2.—Mask representing ALXULĀ'TENUM (front and profile). Ornamented with red cedar-bark. Orange, blue. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 3.—Mask representing the rabbit. Set with mountain-goat skin. Natural color, black. Height, 13 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 4.—Mask representing the owl. Black, red. Height, 12 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing LŌ'QOIS (the mountain). Natural color, black. Height, 19½ inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 6.—Mask representing the raindrop. On top of the mask is a long switch set with feathers, only the lower part of which is shown. Natural color, black. Height, 10 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

[796] Fig. 7.—Bird-shaped implement worn by a companion of the thunder-bird. It is filled with eagle-down. During the dance it is shaken, and the down flies out of the holes in the lower part of the implement and from the back. Length, 18 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 8.—Mask representing the sea-monster K'Ī'lx'ta. Red, blue, black. Height, 19 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 9.—Mask representing the spirit LATAIĀ'IL. Black, orange, set with bear-skin. Height, 9 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

Fig. 10.—Mask representing the hermaphrodite (front and profile). Natural color, red, black. Height, 11 inches. Cat. No. $\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{1}$.

[facing End Plate XI]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca.1890)1900 NEÁ Bellacoola NEÁ

532
776

[796]

Masks and Carving of the Bella Coola Indians.

[End Plate XI]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he rises properly. The first six of these deities are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the kū'siut these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xē'mtsioa and Xēmxēmalà'oLa wear the design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Xē'mtsioa by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xēmxēmalà'oLa has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Aiumkī'lik·a and Aiumalà'oLa wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The fifth Q'ōmq'ōmkī'lik·a and Q'ō'mtsioa have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qula'xawa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next in order, Kulē'lias (who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, Aī'amā'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called L'ētsā'aplēLāna (the eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. She figures in several legends as stealing provisions and pursued by the people whom she has robbed.

556 773 776 532 575 776

The sisau'k·, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of the clans, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who had gone out hunting met the sisau'k· and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he consented to enter. Then he danced the sisau'k· and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bī'lxula dance the sisau'k·. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each clan its secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the sisau'k· only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are the sacred possessions of each clan. All clans, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the clan to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisau'k·. A person can not take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'ēlu'sta, the Indian, to whom I

575 773 776 796 614 424 532 [592] [534] 424 532 556 614 [567] [848] [115]

8:Bons E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

515
688
754
756
515
532
796
000

the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender, he will fall sick. Blood is believed to collect in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the kā'nut are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklace of red cedar bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others, the thunder bird and his servant, ALEXĀ'TSEXUM (who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and carries a staff with red and blue spiral lines), appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Xō'mtsica and his brothers and his sisters; Mamamala'nix and his fellows, the raven and the nuxnō'mta, and many others.[1]

Fig. 301.
MASQUERADER OF GIAGA'.
Haida.
Cat. No. 6000, U. S. N. M. Collected by J. G. Swan.

THE TSIMSHIAN, NĪSQA', HAIDA, AND TLINGIT.

The tribes of this group learned the ceremonial avowedly from the HO'iltsaq. Although I have not witnessed any part of their ceremonials, the descriptions which I received bring out with sufficient clearness its similarities to the winter ceremonial of the Kwakiutl. The ceremonials seem to be almost identical among all these tribes. It is most complete among the southwestern Tsimshian tribes, particularly the G-itxsā'la, but has been adopted by all the tribes of the coast. It is said that it reached the Haida not more than a hundred years ago.

I will tell here what I learned from the Nisqa'. They have six societies, which rank in the following order: The sumkalai'l, mōila', hēlā'ma, ōiala', nanōtō'l, hēnana'l, the last being the highest. The sumkalai'l is really not confined to the winter ceremonial, but is obtained when a person acquires the first guardian spirit of his clan and performs the ceremony belonging to this event. The tradition of the origin of these ceremonies localizes the events at Bellabella, and it was not carefully observed. Those wishing to dig took turns with the tools; there was no supervision, and no orders given. When the grave was ready, Jim Pollard asked Judas to perform the rite with the spruce bough, which he did with a branch brought by one of the youths. The young men lowered the coffin into the grave while the band continued to play. The missionary then read the Christian burial service, after which he withdrew. Some of the young men brought planks from old houses near-by, sawed them to the size of the grave and laid them over the coffin as a cover. At this juncture Judas, one of the oldest and most conservative of the Bella Coola, rose to speak. First he offered consolation to the mourning relatives by pointing out that all must travel the same road. Then he spoke to Jessie, telling her not to linger, but to travel back the path of her ancestors from generation to generation until she reached the place where they first came down from above, and thence to ascend to Nazmái·a. It was impossible to obtain a literal translation of the speech, which was punctuated by calls of "Ye·" from the male Bella Coola. The next speaker was Jim Pollard, the most influential Kimaquit and a personal friend, though not a relative, of Captain Schooner's.

[1] See "Indianische Sagen von der Nord-Pacifischen Küste Amerikas," page 341, by F. Boas.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 159 [533] [747] 764 159 537

"Go," he said to the dead woman, "Go to the localities from which came your first forefathers in the beginning of time. There you will find your most valuable ancestral possessions. Go at once, do not linger and lose yourself on the road from generation to generation."

Turning to George Nelson, he went on, "Do not be downhearted, all of us must travel the same road. It was made by no man, it is the work of Alqunsim."

Looking back once more to the grave, he said, "In Qomqo·ts are buried many illustrious relatives of yours. You will be among friends, whereas we are left to lament your departure."

It was impossible to write down the words at the time and the above record is not literally correct, although it expresses the gist of the speech. [126]

Captain Schooner whispered to Robert Hood, another of the 764 159 203 769 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The explanation of these manifestations of the supernormal, 787 *
for such they are considered to be, lies in the conviction that 811
every activity of the mind is due to supernatural causation, [828]
the functioning of the spirit. In the round of daily life there [774] are always good and bad incidents; the person who wakes expecting to meet one or other before nightfall recognizes the fulfilment of his premonition in some small occurrence, and narrates it to his fellows as proof of what he had told them in the morning. In case of some major event, such as death or disaster, the Bella Coola assume that some previous indication must have been given. Looking back after the event, a man easily persuades himself that he "felt" a warning, and is more [774] than ever convinced that his spirit, the cause of his thoughts,
has supernatural ability.

Conviction in the near presence of the supernatural has had 177
somewhat surprising results with regard to Christian Bella 787 *
Coola. A man converted in middle life carries all the fervour 781 and realism of the old religion with him to the new, and feels 797 ● thoroughly familiar with the atmosphere of the Old Testament.
Visitations, such as therein described, are similar to those experienced by his fathers and himself, and he scorns the white man who questions their literal accuracy. He continues to hear the voices of supernatural beings, and to interpret mental [828] pictures as visions, but he ascribes them to the beings of the white man's religion. The following is a rather striking illustration of this point:

A number of years ago a devout Christian, who may be 159 designated X, was a patient in the hospital at Bella Bella. In 177
the same ward was a young Bella Bella lad whose sickness 787 * refused to yield to treatment. X, becoming interested in his 781 neighbour, began to ponder about his condition, until presently 797
he felt convinced that the sufferer would be better by seven o'clock the following morning, and told him so. A marked improvement was noticeable by the time predicted, but the white doctor foolishly (according to X) gave his patient some

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

159
177 more medicine and he became worse. The same thing happened
* 787 on the following day. The sick boy grew steadily worse until, nine days later, he felt that he was dying and asked X to help 781 him.

● 797 "No," replied X, "I am no doctor. But you will be all right. I see Holy Ghost, Holy Spirit, Baptism, and Believe-it [Faith?] by your bed. Repent and you will be saved."

X added that the Bella Bella saw and repented before his death so that he has undoubtedly been saved.

X is a friend of the writer's and a man with whom he worked for a number of months and whom he feels that he knows intimately. He is almost invariably truthful, and any falsehoods he uses are clumsy and easily detected. In this case there is no doubt but that he believes he saw these four figures as four white human beings. He was in an emotional condition at the time, hoping and expecting to see something of the kind. In earlier days he would have seen supernatural beings of the Bella Coola pantheon with equal conviction. On quite another occasion, when he was preaching, the same man felt what seemed to be a heavy drop of water fall on his head. He was in the open at the time and, looking up, was surprised to find nothing from which it could have fallen. He realized that it must have been power which had come to him, and forthwith he began to preach as he had never preached before. He expected supernatural assistance, and the belief that it had been granted to him undoubtedly strengthened his efforts.

* 787 All Bella Coola are not equally liable to visions and mental 781 visitations. Some, such as X, are constantly experiencing 159 them, whereas others of more stolid disposition do not feel the presence of the supernatural to the same extent. None the less, beings of the other world are constantly around them and, before the introduction of Christianity, it is unlikely that any individual passed through life without coming in contact with some manifestation of the supernatural. Consequently, stories
* 787 descriptive of this are intelligible to the Bella Coola, bizarre

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In his younger days X was somewhat wild, taking his full share in the frivolities of the village, and having a fondness for wine which he brewed himself. On one occasion he prepared a barrel of the mixture, half of which he promptly consumed with the aid of a few friends, then, semi-intoxicated, he fell asleep. He dreamt that there came to him what must have been a male being, although all that was visible was the lower half of his body, which was gleaming white. The apparition seized X by the nape of the neck, lifted him from the floor, and carried him across the house to the barrel of wine, revolving sunwise on himself the while. 159 787* [273]

"You made this fearful stuff," said his supernatural visitor. "It will make your life dirty, as dirty as this."

Still turning sunwise on himself, with these words he carried X to the doorstep and held him suspended, face downwards over it. Everyone who enters must tread there, so that it is recognized as being the dirtiest part of the house, and X had no doubt about the meaning of the apparition's remark. This experience was so vivid and impressive that X asserted he immediately became a Christian and abandoned his evil ways. At the present time he is one of the few Bella Coola not addicted to home-brew. [797] [273]

A few years later the same being came a second time. X had been ill for a number of months with a sickness caused, so he believed, by a sorcerer. His friends had carried him to bathe in the Hot Springs and the treatment helped his condition considerably, but a little later he suffered a relapse, and was so wretched that he told his mother he would die presently. The same night he was visited by his apparition, but this time he could see the whole body; it was a man with large, powerful frame and a face so white that he could not bear to look at it. The figure was clad in undyed cedar-bark, and X immediately realized that he would recover, though he knew he would not be granted the same power as if the clothing had been of dyed cedar-bark such as is worn by supernatural shamans. The dream-man told X that he had come to him because of the clean condition he had attained by washing in the Hot Springs, followed by continence, and warned him that he must continue this for a year from the time of his immersion or he would die, but that if he obeyed this injunction he would recover. His visitor, who was, of course, a supernatural being, took X under one arm and carried him far to the south, where he washed him in a hot spring at the base of a steep mountain. Then he vanished; X arose and prepared to make his way home, but, lo, he was there already. Rationalizing later, X concluded that his body must have remained in his house, and that it was either his spirit or his life that had been carried away. [755]

As X lay asleep the next night, the same being came to him and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ling X, the monster carried away the girl. X watched and knew that it must have taken her life; so it transpired, for in the morning she was found dead. The black being did not reappear the following night. 159 787 *

X soon became fat and well, to the surprise of all, and many of the chiefs asked him to give a shaman's dance. He declined, not having received name, instructions, song, or tangible object from the white, supernatural being who had befriended him. He did not even know his benefactor's name. [756]

At intervals during his life-time, X has seen the white supernatural being and, more rarely, the black one in his dreams. The most vivid occasion was when he heard a sound in the attic of his house and climbed up outside to investigate. The ladder broke, precipitating him through an unglazed window into the loft with a broken leg. All night he lay there in agony, and it was not until the next day that his friends were able to lower him in a sling and take him to Ḷomqo·ts en route to the hospital at Bella Bella. Their departure was delayed by a storm and as X lay suffering he told his wife that it would have been better if he had broken his neck instead of his leg. That night, while half-asleep, the world again became open to him and he saw the black creature come bounding along the trail towards him; it entered the house, jumped around him, and finally leapt into his body. He called to his wife to burn dried salmon beneath his bed to expel the evil monster; this had the desired effect though he did not see its actual departure. The next night the white apparition came to him, telling him that he had erred seriously in wishing for death, that one should accept what was in store for one and not oppose Ălqunăm's wishes. The being went on to say that it was wicked to prepare too far in advance, and intimated that X's misfortune was the result of having made ready tools for clearing an unnecessary tract of land.[19] [755]

The white being has even appeared during his waking hours. On one occasion he felt it coming when he was in the mission-house, where the missionary was writing a letter for him. Although still invisible, X knew what was approaching and tried to close the door but he was helpless. In came the apparition, at sight of whom X swayed so violently that the missionary asked what was the matter. It went away again in a moment, leaving X shaken and bathed in perspiration. [797]

The experiences just described lie on the border-line between dream and vision. X has frequently seen the apparition

[19]This occurred during the first war, and X remembered having heard that the Germans had laid up stores of munitions. He concluded that this must be evil and that they would fail accordingly. He repeated this statement on many occasions and claims to have foretold the result of the war from his vision.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific supernatural power. He realizes that he could increase the prob-
* 787 ability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes [785] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and lay fasting for some time. Another means would be to con-[797] centrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either unreservedly. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected.
They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the informa-
* 787 tion received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [828] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly, [821] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other [773] times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform [777] him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as Ałquntäm enters Nusmät-a, wise men separate from their wives [785] and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another [821] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-[224] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 members, and delegated the task to a man who was known to be skilled in such matters. The latter stole some shreds of the offender's clothing, placed them in a human skull which he fastened to a long rope and threw into a swift stretch of the river. As the rapids tossed the skull to and fro, the person whose clothing was within began to feel uneasy; first he experienced a jumping pain in his head, but as the wild movements continued, he became light-headed and finally delirious. At this juncture, it was decided to pull back the skull, but the rope broke and it was carried away downstream. Nothing could save the man and he died within a few hours. This particular incident occurred among the Bella Bella, but it is agreed that it might have happened in Bella Coola.

[554] The mingled fear of, and aversion to, a person who knows some such secret method of killing, fades into insignificance compared to the extreme loathing of every Bella Coola for sorcerers. Their methods of killing may be similar to the ones just described, but they are evil creatures who practise secretly, working entirely to gratify their own personal desires. Not [683] only is the murder of a sorcerer a virtuous act, but the relatives of one should be put to death without mercy. There is no single factor which has caused so much hatred, bitterness, and suspicion as belief in the activities of sorcerers. Conversion to [797] Christianity has scarcely altered it, and men who have been members of the church for ten to twenty years remain fully convinced that some of their associates have loathsome abilities as sorcerers. In many parts of the world, belief in black magic and witchcraft is one of the last native convictions to pass away, and it seems probable that this will be the case in Bella Coola although, of course, it will become increasingly difficult to obtain information about the subject.

The actual methods used by different sorcerers vary, although most of them require an article which has been in contact with their intended victim. Consequently, they seek pieces of soiled clothing, nail parings, hair clippings, spittle, and other objects of the same type which are usually concealed

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

SYMPATHETIC MAGIC AND WITCHCRAFT AMONG THE BELLACOOLA

By HARLAN I. SMITH

177 754 789 [797] [658] [464] MANY OF the Bellacoola Indians today believe in sympathetic magic and witchcraft, after over a hundred years of contact with white men. Most of them live within hearing of the bells of the mission church, and the government school. Not a few of the men take logging contracts; some of them build and operate motor boats; many of them join the fishing fleets of the salmon canneries; most of the women work in the canneries; and all deal at the white men's stores.

101 131 [161] The Bellacoola lived at the heads of the long inlets half way up the Pacific Coast of Canada and in the tributary Bella Coola valley. Now, numbering perhaps two hundred and fifty, they, with the exception of a few families, are concentrated on one reservation at the mouth of the Bella Coola river. The Bella Coola valley has been called the Norway of Canada. This was where Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first white man to cross Canada overland, reached the sea.

105 Aboriginally, the Bellacoola were of the North Pacific Coast culture of America, which is characterized by the extensive use of red cedar and sea products, particularly salmon, the making of graceful, sea-going canoes, each hewn from a single cedar, the erection of large rectangular houses made of cedar planks, with carved house posts and totem poles, lack of pottery, and expertness in carpenter work, carving, and painting. This culture belongs to the barefoot area, but the Bellacoolas wore moccasins to a certain extent. The art of the area was that best known from the paintings and carvings of the totem poles, largely of conventionalized animal forms. The life centred around a very highly developed social organization, an extensive and powerful financial system, and property rights to names, rituals and honors. The Bellacoola language is one of the Salish linguistic stock. They pose should remain continent for several nights to increase his generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[34] is to observe continence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[35] as pos-

[34]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.

[35]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of different ancestral families to which the deceased belonged, 533 irrespective of whether or not he had used a name from one. 556*
Being a member of the group, its songs can legally be used in 769 his honour. Elements from different myths are often combined into one composition, corresponding to the different localities and characters which the dead person has visited in travelling back the path of his multiple ancestors to the beginning of time. If one person only is being commemorated, four songs are prepared; if several, two are used for each. Three [801] for any individual is unlucky. Two types, skwanät and änultınänk, are in common usage, and the singers, after conversation with the donor of the ceremony, decide which shall be employed. The former describes in some detail features from one or more of the deceased's ancestral myths, mentions the journey which he has taken to visit the individuals and scenes referred to, and calls on him to assume the form of his first forefather. A common theme is to state the origin of his name, and how he loved it so greatly that he left the earth to follow it back through time and space. The following is an abbreviated version of such a song, based on the origin myth of Käliäkıs:

"We have been unable to satisfy you here. Go whither Käliäkıs came, and become a raven. Go to the east and get abalone-shell; go to the west and get copper. They will satisfy you."

Another skwanät of the same type is:

"Your first ancestor circled the world with the aid of an abalone-shell paddle. Do you likewise. That will gratify you as nothing on earth could do."

On the other hand, an änultınänk seldom refers to the ancestral history of the deceased, but to his actions during life. It records the number of slaves, canoes, and other valuables given away at potlatches,[26] and alludes to other praiseworthy actions. This type of mourning song, though usually used [622]

[26]An analogous method of making known a man's distribution of wealth is by a written sign over his door (see Plate 24).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

553 without special places, X calls upon some eloquent friend to direct the distribution of the money. This speaker orates how
* 556 X is carrying out the rites incumbent on his noble and exalted 575 station, how all honour him for so doing, and how all should [537] strive to follow his example. He then says that to give strength to the name Qwaqwasila, for example, X will give away, say $100. He further announces who have contributed this amount: perhaps $50 from X, and the other half from various relatives of Y. If the sum in question be large it is always mentioned from whom, and how the donor has obtained the money. Thus every financial transaction becomes publicly known, and the more prominently a man figures, the greater is his prestige. Next, the amount to be used for the second initiate's name is announced, with the same details, and in like fashion the sums decided upon for each successive initiate.

Then the total amount is distributed among the guests by the heralds, under X's supervision. He usually gives everyone the same amount; men sometimes receive more than [562] women, but in every case members of the same sex receive an equal sum. The Bella Coola are not expert mathematicians, • [803] so that faulty division is the rule. If X, for example, decides to give $1.50 to each person present, it is a time of considerable anxiety while the stack of bills is being reduced, to watch whether or not there will be the exact amount. If X finds out [426] he is short he will hastily borrow some money, as it would be an insult to omit anyone. If the amount be too great, he will [578] use the surplus in making presents to the more influential guests.

With the exception of this possible surplus, the money distributed is regarded as an outright present; "it has flowed away to make good the boys' names" is the Bella Coola expression. A chief will remember how much he has received, and if he wishes to uphold or to increase his own dignity, he will make a point of returning at least an equivalent to X on some future occasion. But though in effect he may make return, such is never said to be the case. "The money has flowed away."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 whom, moreover, he made a shaman. The boys were able to make some return present to Nuskiaxak, whose wife had eyed the skin cloak covetously; this they presented to her. In the course of a few days the boys expressed a desire to go home.

"That is easy," said Nuskiaxak. "Your land is not far away, just a mä·łqi"[59]

Nuskiaxak showed them their home, and indeed it appeared to them as if it were less than an inch away. When he sent them off he warned them not to open their eyes, otherwise the journey would be a long one, but that if they kept their eyes closed they would reach their destination almost immediately. The boys did not know what kind of canoe they were in, and it was not till later that they found they were with Nodkynim, the bringer of the salmon. The wanderers sensed the proximity of their own land, and opened their eyes to find themselves in front of their own village. They had been absent a whole year.

THE BOYS WHO DRIFTED TO SEA
(Second Version)

Once upon a time, long, long ago, when a number of lads were bathing on the tide-flats at the head of North Bentinck Arm, one of them, a boy of fifteen or sixteen years, swam out to a huge log which was floating a short distance from the shore. He clambered on to it and, finding it comfortable, called out to his companions to join him. Three younger boys did so. It was early in the afternoon of a warm sunny day and the four soon fell asleep, stretched on their stomachs, and lulled by the gentle movement of the water. Late in the afternoon the other bathers went home, without disturbing the four sleepers. The sun had set before the eldest of the boys awoke to find that the log had drifted so far out to sea that not even the peaks of the mountains were in sight. Dismayed, he roused his sleeping companions, who, realizing their plight, cowered together in fear. It began to grow cold. One of the boys discovered that their craft was hollow, with an entrance at the end from which roots had grown. The four crawled inside, where it was warmer, and spent an uncomfortable night with their craft pitching and tossing on the waves of the open sea.

The next morning when the eldest boy, who was the first to awaken, crawled to the entrance of the log he saw, projecting down from above, the tail of a bird which must have been perching on the very end of the shell. With a quick motion he seized the tail, by which he dragged a [59] A mä·łqi is a measure of distance equal to the width of the thumb and one finger.

[804]

*192

Łululimut: Kusiut name of a Nusdalst man.
Łulul'nimut: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[824] łuqal: Inner bark of cedar.
łutsälemsk, "A Stripping Off": The giving, on demand, by a marriage dancer of his clothing to a herald.
'Łuxwoqsälaix: Supernatural name of Raven.
[828] łxwaix, "Frenzied": Term applied to Cannibals and other destructive łukusiut when in a state of madness.
łqwum: Occasional exclusion of all but the singers from a house where a shaman is performing.
Łxwumxwumlaix: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
Łxwuntnam: Kusiut name, probably of Kwakiutl origin.

M

Ma'cilsa: Female dancer mentioned in a Raven story.
Malasiut: Kusiut name of a Łemqo-ts man.
[601] mämä, vocative, mämao: Mother, term used by children.
Mämaiyu: Celebrated Xixais hunter.
[825] mäm-aiyu: Butterfly.
mäm-äika: Measuring worm.
[824] mäm-ıc: Fly, insect.
ma'mnica: Swamp gooseberry.
[601] män: 1—Father, common term in indirect address.
2—Occasional designation for the supreme deity.
mändimut: Stepfather.
[614] mänmänuks: Elderly male relatives of same ancestral family.
Mäsong^{w}: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuliax in the beginning of time.
2—Form of the name Dudusong^{w} when used by a male child.
Mäsong^{w}an-a: Form of the name Dudusong^{w} when used by a female child.
Matlakälitcak: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
Mälapexwak: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[804] mä-łqi: Measure of distance equal to the breadth of one thumb plus one finger.
[825] mä-tsq': Toad.
mätsqus: Supernatural giant toad.
mälsta: Salmon eggs.
ma-wofu: Old male sea-lion.
[825] mä-xotäkka: Water ouzel.
Maqwänts: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Masaxilian, "Long Neck": One of the supernatural names of Great Blue Heron.
maxsai-s: Co-husband in a polyandrous household.
[824] ma'xwal-i: One of the parsleys.
mefol: Berry, black in colour.
Masmasältmx: Generic term for the four supernatural Carpenters.
mexwihelp: Spruce.
Miał'stila: One of the first men to settle at Sälia in the beginning of time.
Miähawa: Land of salmon.
[224] Mi'als: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mil-a: Stick carried by hunters when penetrating into the mountains.
[824] milix^{w}: Red bearberry.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

from the moon and stated that there were mountains and snow on it. It is commonly stated that the marks on the moon represent a man carrying a bucket. 821 [756]

The stars figure but slightly either in Bella Coola mythology or thought; it is not even known who made them. Two in the Great Bear constellation are called respectively Tpiksta and Xinpinas, "Little Girls." A lone star in the same part of the sky, named A'lax, is said to be following the girls to the forest for illicit intercourse. [773]

Moon, stars, and above all the sun, were, and still are to a certain extent, used by the Bella Coola in computing the passage of time. There are no individuals with the definite prerogative of keeping count of time, but formerly wise old men used to do so.[4] Differences of opinion were the rule rather than the exception, a condition which often led to bitter disputes concerning the proper date for starting the winter ceremonials. Boas (p. 41) has recorded the Bella Coola calendar in greater detail than the present writer has been able to do. The making of calendrical observations is a lost art, and the following list of the months was all that could be learnt. It will be noted that these agree with Boas in regard to the months in the early part of the year, but not in those between the summer and winter solstices; no explanation is offered for this disparity. 805 821 [554] [578] [796] [114] [178] [114]

First moon after the summer solstice: Sikālamtak, which has the significance, "The Time for Sockeye Salmon to Ascend the River."

Second moon after the summer solstice: Sī'islilil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon."

Third moon after the summer solstice: Sī'iwai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon."

Fourth moon after the summer solstice: Siqālyam, "The Time for Gathering Fern Root," or Sidakaas di Ane'lkwulxaix,

[4] A Kimsquit informant stated that there were professional calendrical experts in his home, when he was a young lad although members of the hamat society (II, chap. i) sometimes attended to this matter. [575] [463]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

805 "The Coming of Anɛ'likwɛlsaix."[1]

821 Fifth moon after the summer solstice: ʌxsiol, "The Time for Kusiut Dances,"[2] or Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings."

Sixth moon after the summer solstice: Siust, "Sits Down," that is, when the sun reaches the solstice.

First moon after the winter solstice: Sxwelmgwam, "What Sweeps Away Food," or Sxlikl, "Angry Moon."

Second moon after the winter solstice: Alcanxdimut, "Facing in Both Directions," that is, half the month belongs to winter and half to summer, or Łamolis di Nuxăxkămy, "The Potlatch of the Nuxăxkămy" (I, p. 289).

Third moon after the winter solstice: Siwiyam, "When Herrings Spawn." These fish are said to have arrived on the same day of this moon as the winter solstice in the December one.

[825]

Fourth moon after the winter solstice: Siłuly, "Time for Making Salmon Weirs."

Fifth moon after the winter solstice: Sinomwak, "Time for Making Hand-Nets for Olachen."

Sixth moon after the winter solstice: Sisămł, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon." It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs.

The chief difficulty experienced by the Bella Coola in computing time rests on the fact that each month is judged by the moon, whereas the main periods of the year depend upon the solstices. One old man, from whom much of this information was obtained, stated that trouble always came at the winter solstice when the month was divided into two sections. The above list is obviously incomplete and incoherent, but it was the best available.

Supernatural Beings

128 771 In any primitive community the social, religious, political, and economic aspects of life are so interwoven that they

[1] See vol. II, p. 1 for a description of this mythical being.
[2] See vol. II, chap. i, for a description of these dances.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 snatches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the *796 same compositions from year to year, and recently some of [533] these, both tunes and foreign words, have been adopted by [177] the Bella Coola. Long ago the marshals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

As the time draws near for Noākgnim to start his voyage, [805] X anxiously consults any of the elder kukusiut who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Noākgnim is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fixedly towards the west, and calls out:

[987] "Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Noākgnim must round four points before [773] reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

Some of the marshals are always in readiness and one of *[203] them tells a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to notify the kukusiut of what is about to take place. The mes-
*575 senger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated
*796 behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed 533 during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his patron having sent to him the super-[776] natural being, Nuālsmtnam, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a [292] head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances

salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Imimáitsais, "The Mourer," is a supernatural child who stays with the Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Nuákynum's craft. Dukdukinmow is sent by Smaiso-a, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Nuákynum, and with him come Smaiso-a's son, Ástilmétsum,* to assist Nuákynum in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are patrons for different kukuciat. The Resident is also known as Amáilli.

The kukuciat assemble in X's house as on the previous occasions; according to some informants two songs are used on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way upstream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Nemáilum has brought a call to him. The woman and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kuciat whistles sound from within. Nemáilum is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Nuákynum for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days more had to elapse, in which it was said that Nuákynum was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent settlements on the same night, but the kuciat season is two or three days shorter in Sisaa and the upper villages than in Kemp-a. Exact information on this point was unavailable. As already described, Nuákynum travels to Smaiso-a, whence he leaps to Nuapalmaiste and places his pole within the house. All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for Ásquatsin, but as soon as the latter enters, Nuákynum seizes his

*Some informants state that there are four of these beings.

2: McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Cannibal Dance]

society have recovered from the shock of X's disappearance. Thereafter the kwiat dances continue night after night, but the Cannibal remains hidden. Sometimes he is carried to a dance, concealed within a drum; more often he remains within the back-room of his own house or hides in some lonely part of the mountains. Throughout this period he eats little or nothing, and formerly used to devour a brew of roots that produced emaciation. The length of concealment depends entirely on X. If he desires to impress the uninitiated with the dangers which he has survived, he remains hidden for a long time; consequently, the period varies from a week to two months or even more. On every occasion that a marshal addresses the kakaiat he warns them to watch for X's return, and garbled accounts of this reach the uninitiated.

When X's relatives and the marshals have decided that the Cannibal has been long enough absent, they make arrangements for him to reappear. The time selected is always the night of a nakaum, and after the departure of the uninitiated on the preceding evening the marshals discuss arrangements with the kakaiat and elliot tasks to various individuals. Several kakaiat shave X's head, except a small patch above the forehead, to support the story which he will tell of the high winds prevailing in the land above, which blew the hair from his head.*

After the dismissal of the uninitiated on the following night of nakaum, the kakaiat make their final arrangements. When they judge from the passage of the stars or the state of the tide that dawn is at hand, several members of the society climb to the roof of the previously selected house. First they sound a whistle, then thump on the roof with their feet, and call out:

Xwe, xwe, xwe: this is a cry used by Cannibals returned from above which is supposed to indicate a longing for meat.

The kakaiat sleeping within, knowing that their house has been selected, are ready as soon as they are awakened. The

*One old man mentioned that in his youth this was done with a decorated piece of wood; he was unable to state what was used in earlier times.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

out that he wants someone to tie up his neck, and, after the usual delay, an uninitiated lad is brought forward for the purpose. The carpenters help him to manipulate the rope, and in reality do the actual tying although they disguise the fact. Then four or five kukuriat seize either end and begin to tug; X cries out as if in pain, the whistles sound, and the women drone. It is most impressive. Finally the head is pulled from the body and falls to the floor, while the apparently headless and lifeless body of X sinks down in the direction taken by the head. Blood and raw flesh are in evidence and the weeping of the women readily convinces non-members that they have watched the decapitation of the dancer. Sometimes the uninitiated themselves are allowed to pull the rope.

The ritual throughout the night is identical with that already described for the Stomach-Cutting dance. The spies guard the doors, refusing egress to all, the mourning women sing their songs, the puppets ascend to the land above and are inserted into X on their return. At intervals groups of the uninitiated are told to come forward; they circle the fire sunwise and see that X's head is lying apart from his body, with the blood and flesh and the severed neck visible. Towards dawn[*] hidden strings are fastened to the head and it is drawn slightly towards the body. One of the marshals calls out:

"It moves! It moves! Do you see it?" and a herald answers:

"We see it move."

The slow movement is continued until the uninitiated, who make periodic inspections, are able to say that it has almost rejoined the trunk. As the first glimmer of light appears in the east, one of the carpenters bends over X and takes the opportunity, while he conceals the dancer's body with his own, to hide the false head beneath his blanket; at the same time X stretches his own head up from under his blanket. The subterfuge is not evident to the uninitiated.

[*] The passage of time or night is judged in villages on the coast by the height of the tide, or the movements of stars; the latter is also practised in the inland settlements. If the stars are hidden, an estimate is made by the number of the high hours (through three months).

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

[The Dance of Winwina]

424 Another kwiat derived the prerogative of having Wiwuina
719 as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After 776 Raven had seen Nuákynow and obtained him for Ellémuá- lasaix, he flew down the fiord once more, observed Wiwuina, and made him patron for Omqumkilda.

575 The ritual of the dance of Wiwuina does not vary, irre-796 spective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository
[424] is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

[184] Wiwuina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the January moon is full;* accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kwiat dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kukwiat happen to be present on the evening of this day, X mounts to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Wiwuina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X [292] wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kukwiat who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning,

[205] *Owing to faulty astronomical observations the exact date is seldom found.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 newly composed whenever required, though in recent years *[575] old ones have occasionally been re-used owing to lack of ability on the part of the singers. The following songs have been *[796] arranged in the same order as the descriptions of the kusiut dances at which they were employed.

Song Used for Anuipunm-aix, a Kimsqult Man(a)

A Sewuklamsiyālwuals Everything(b)	wastlqwātsaiyālwas shook slightly(c)	ālāsqmstkwliwadjudals when he came(d)

ālawālqwqlqwals to the first point.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ālawālqālālwals Have made up their minds	ālālmnsqālwasiyaiwals the calendrical experts(e);
ālawqlwālwālwālwal they have curtailed	ānuilyālālusqwals through their greed(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Nawqlwālqlwaiyālqo Community rabble	yao dīnuqalaānhsidai water(g)	yao diamomālāhas the dishes

dīnuqlīyamnqalai which elevate him(h).

(a) Recorded on wax VII D 46a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been used about 1870.
(b) This is a reference to Sonq[w].
(c) This is a grandiloquent expression, such as are common in kusiut songs.
(d) Referring to Nekymm, the dancer's patron.
(e) That is: The calendrical experts have come to an agreement.
(f) That is: They have abbreviated the period of waiting owing to their greed. This song was used by the kukusiut at one of their gatherings during Nekymm's approach. As Kimsquit no uninitiated were present on such occasions so it was possible to indulge in comments without betraying the secrets of the society. The significance here is that the experts were so greedy to share in the food that they agreed to say that Nekymm had arrived before his proper time.
(g) That is: Water constantly re-fills. By water is meant food and mountain goat grease.
(h) That is: The dish of which the contents, when distributed, increase his status.

*[805]

[556]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Alalkmktmm: Supernatural being sent by Smaien·a to meet Noakymm.

alaiqo·xi, "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to start him on the path to social importance though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously at every feast. [556]

Ālhlxān·i: Abalone-shell covered stick used by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

Alhlxān·istliax: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·is in the beginning of time.

aldinnkī: Word of uncertain meaning often appended to Inxtāmem as complete term for the first night of a kusiut dance. [575]

aliknlxmm, "A Dragging Across" (as one does with a heavy log): The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being repurchased. [425] [553]

aljkwis: Toasted food of any kind. [262]

Ālilirwumax: Ancestral name of a Stax man.

alilq': Perforated, adjective. [252]

alilmusnām: Those who perform to assist marriage dancers.

Ālimalwalaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Al·imlxaix: One of the first men to settle at Tāl·is in the beginning of time. [585] alipāstits, "Weapons of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and hers prior to entering her house. [431]

alipoakm: Gifts given in secret, soon after betrothal, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride. [584] alipotlam: Marshal.

Ālipmāw·i: Immoral supernatural woman; synonym for Sximusimdt.

Alinmstusaix: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tenisi in the beginning of time.

Ālilikul: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Stax in the beginning of time.

alkkul: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516]

ally: Susak song in fast time. [533]

alul: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [535]

Ālul·gmāw·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Sātlis in the beginning of time.

almpus: Kusiut dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.

alnalla: Synonym for Inumdjut; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] alnalla: 1—Night-time.

2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.

alq: Come, imperative singular.

Ālmxa: 1—One of Smaeax's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Nuxalit in the beginning of time.

ālul·lāis: Central seat behind the fire.

ālldjalos: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-nets. [412]

Ālkhamlakm: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola.

ālkhamtakm: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun. [805]

Ālmx·lgumm, "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

uxzhit, "The Time for Kusiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] uyuyuyut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Alqalxl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.
uhtlulak: One of the supernatural carpenters.
ulsamamimum: The repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] uxaiak': Synonym for xpuxdjut, a present for which a return is not expected. [431] uxusmxdjut: Hereditary tendency.
uxem: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [827] uxiax: Red rock cod. The difference between this and Itakulk is problematical.
uxlqolam: One of the first men to settle at Xemqo-ts in the beginning of time. [825] uxliwatem'xiamut-al-at': The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage. [583] uyu-ahlewadjutlaix: Sterile supernatural visitation. [787] uxkaxa: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up. [556]
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position.
uxlathmkq, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
uxlawan-i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
uxlokwaladjut: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
uxlqotlamqwandjinas: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tal-is in the beginning of time.
uxwukwulaix, "The Track of the Sun": A'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
uxwuthamlaix: Supernatural name of uxiuk.
uxqustam, "Commander": 1—Said to be the word from which Alqustam is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
uxlikmoxaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaaux in the beginning of time.
uxuqhatadjut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as thief.
uxwl-a: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
uxwimaxix: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
ux-wuxaix: 1—One of the first men to settle at Xemqo-ts in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
uxyhlqutaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaaux in the beginning of time.
uxyokam, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Snuleli and Tal-is.

K

kai: 1—Snow. [821]
2—Unidentified berry. [824]
Kaiwalitx: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kakamit: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
kaka: Crow. [825]
Kakaka: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

ł̓ałiaxsa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
ł̓ałaml: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Sisux story of the beginning of time.
ł̓ałłaliamdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.
ł̓ałoxmēx·a: Smaxan's son in the beginning of time.
łałar·i: Small portable canoe.
łałstam: Desertion of a spouse. [586] ł̓axsmai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.
łahmtmakywas: Imitation potlatch carried out by nuxałkamy.
ł̓aknus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.
ł̓ilixwnimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smaxan for his son in the beginning of time.
łima: To loot.
ł̓ixłixhka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.
łixwnimut: Person of placid disposition.
łkdła: Bull-roarer.
łłt: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, łm, is supposedly derived from this. [556]
łm: Potlatch.
łmkmłł: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.
łmołim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821] łmołis di Nuxałkamy, "The Potlatch of the nuxałkamy": Second moon after winter solstice. [805] łhamłła, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nułłi in the beginning of time.
łłałwadjut: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756] łłumłłxta: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.
łmanłmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556] łmaxsimtim: The turning over of a mountain.
łn'ya: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
łpmłłxta: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Qwiyai in the beginning of time. [765] łpła: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]
'łhamdimut: Cannibal kusiut name used by the first settlers at Sułłu in the beginning of time.
łłqwam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola apple Scratcher.
łułłał: Aversion.
łułmała: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsimsil man.
2—Shamanistic power.
łułłhmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787] łułqwar·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time. łułłmałłmm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Tłmsp-łłłar·a, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nuxutcqynam: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ane'liłwolsaix and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer.

[787] nuxulisiu: Omen of death.

Nuxutmmlxmem, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tłitsplitsa-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuxuxmlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Łemaqua's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuxupim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuxuxmnap: Kusiut name assumed by a Stuax woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuxuyaxum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qałanm is obscure.

Na'axuałhmnaix, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nuhazikl-em: Synonym for hazatnm: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuphałhikłn, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuhar-exts: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqałałm-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymsi, "Place of Much Ławmsi": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqrqtmis: Nuxmal name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqilaqałhx-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuqmxmx-tl ne xmy"als: One year.

[828] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqpik, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuqsłjut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuqwly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqsłitsa: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqwaxsi: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiutem and other important kusiut rites.

[777] nuq"xuxsłkłm: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwhmlaix: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwdlax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqwłkłs: The upper heaven.

nuqxma: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwxałqłsta-i: A Stuax repository.

Nuxłiqwxłmsta, "Where Łiqwxłw Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nuxłmqwa-nap: Cottonwood buds.

Nuxtqwsi'ata, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Stuaxa in the beginning of time.

nuxłłmp: Canoe-maker.

Nuxłłam: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqłalit.

[535] [869] nuxłxłmp: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiuf: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saignas: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] sałaini: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173] se-ikalamum: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
se-ipste: Cannibalistic incubus. [257] se-ipstmum: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sełekłdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] sełelwałs: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463] semł: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Senałpmałkłs Alpuntum: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Senwaxmałais: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Senwłhum or Senwłhmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nasłałit as chief.
Senwimaxs, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Sisaa man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sełx; vocative, sełił; vocative plural, sełxwa-ła: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
se-ła: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sełła: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sełłyuxts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Se-łma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] sełułs: Whatcoms, archais.
Se-ułł': 1—Kimsquit River. [412]
2—Village near the mouth of the river.
Se-ułsamp: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley. [101] sełwałs: Raft.
Se-łwanta-i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sexm: Pillow. [573]
sexmłjłut, "Pillowcase": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sexł, vocative, sexłaxs: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Sexłaxs: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
sła-kam: Bracken. [824]
sławaxs: Tide flats. [823]
słełjułs: Heart.
Słełałxaxw: That part of Sway" which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Słełłułł: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Słełłułła-i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sexwałłłłmut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'xtum, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is [805] connected with this.
sełwałałxw: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa·qwa·t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmän·a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekiläxt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
[822] sekima siälamkek: River net for salmon.
Setsalänl: Echo.
Sexsexkälaix: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexsexqualxlaos'aix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Ṫlitcaplilän·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Siälxelätx: Ancestral name created on earth by a Qomqo·ts man.
[825] Siaqam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sidäxsu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
Sidakaos di Ano°likwolsaix, "The Coming of Ano°likwolsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siexla: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'islalitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'itlliukek: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of marriage is broached.
[431] si'iqikum, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Sisämt, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Sisämt, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sisälamtak, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] siki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and sisaok rites.
Sikiliktmm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siquly, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikwalxwlekx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikwäldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
Siknm: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
[226] Siliax: Celebrated composer.
silmaq: Salmon-weir.
[827] sinaqqma'ax: Sisaok head-dress.
sinänitx: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si·nipodjexstmax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Simpäcux: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinawuak, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinelkwätl, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinawäklätm: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sinuxutl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximatl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Stunx repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio'msta: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424]

siṗalṗalostuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] siṗkim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Siqālyam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnam: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxmaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626]

siqwsk: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage. [425]

sisasts: Departure to a new locality.

sisi, vocative, sisal: Father's brother or mother's brother. [601]

sisut: Paddle.

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Sillumsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778]

siut, vocative, siaot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."
2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo-ts, the large sisook whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan-i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutumkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnâlos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal-os, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djeldāmix chief living in the last century.

sinlikum: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Siyman-a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

siszan-imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sisiṗutmam: Synonym for Mislakila, the supernatural being connected with sisook rites.

siwsimag: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, tsāmusix, for the user's protégé on earth.

siwuṗkutmak: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

siwuti: Unmarried mother. [848] siyutla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word siutla may be connected with this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[825] Sulukst: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
sustu-ul'tskuu-kuu: One of the river sculpins.
susuhmis: To gather cedar-bark.
Sximâna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sustil: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sulkolo, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutskmg: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Suxwalk: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swatku: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swalg: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swaltxumdimut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swalsta: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swa'xwa: Mud.
swaläx: Person or object which is taboo.
Sxaiaxwax: Evil supernatural being.
Sxaiskwa, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon. sxäkmem pdi mänx: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
sxäksia: Sorcerer's box.
Sxa-hutsmäx-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxän: Female lover, especially a paramour.
sxänm: Male lover.
Sxaje-ti: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sxem: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sxetsta: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sxetstadjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sxetstanai: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sxek: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kasiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sxekädjuttä-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxim: Cedar-bark cord.
Sximäna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Sximsximuk: Immoral supernatural woman.
sx'ä': Afterbirth.
Sxiyuttä-a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sxnts: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
[761] 2—Man who performs woman's work.
sxnemänets kit': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sxä'kat, South Wind: A supernatural being.
Sxäkä, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sxlo-ul': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
sxlanuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Syqymastax: Supernatural children guarded by the hermaphrodite in the land above.
Sysut: Name taken by a Stuax man in the beginning of time.
sxtsugmalt: Place in stream or river where a salmon has just jumped.
sxwanti-a: Name created upon earth. [825] sxwapanit: Deer.
sxwat: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a mountain goat. [415] Sxwokmymem, "What Sweeps Away the Food": First moon after the winter solstice. [805] syuomaqs, "Tears": Preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch. [431] sxw"lāmkis, "Short-lived": Rhetorical term used with reference to the death of a young chief. [195] syyawi: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of womanhood.

T

tahāsis: Cave.
lai: 1—Son, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for lada unrelated to the speaker. [601]
2—Masculine suffix.
Taiahwala: 1—One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snaile-ā in the beginning of time.
taiamtmak: Desertion of husband by his wife. [586] lain: Dorsal fin of a fish. [825] taitsing: Heavy kind of copper. [628] taitsman: Tournament between rival villages. [101]
Tāl-ia: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
Talahāw-a: Nuxqual name embodied in a Snaleli origin myth.
Tamtmalp-pas, "The Breather": One of Thiexplāw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Tamokaa: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
tapamamum: The issuing abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
lāqāx: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees. [824] lāqul: Blood-stained cedar-bark pad.
ta-a: 1—Bird arrow.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills its prey.
Tāt, mostly, Tātas: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer. [601]
2—Father, term used by child. [824]
lakāmdp: Water-lily.
Ta-ga-at: Land inhabited by the Kwakiutl.
Tāskwam: Leading chief of Alpāsta and reputed founder of the village.
Taypkwam: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
takas: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical.
tambal-i: 1—White-fronted goose. [825]
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird. [601]
lamat: Husband (di tamamtlai: My husband).
tamow': River.
Tamomtlā: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellecoola NE6

Smayt'sn, that is considered a human being. It is said that his children make the canoe go up Bella Coola River with the rising tide, A'xxmk'ln. The canoe travels the distance from the mouth of the river to the mountain Smayt'sn in a single tide. The canoe "Ni'ak'xxm" stays for four months. Then the canoe "Kunkunu'qstuLs" returns from the country of the Salmon, while "Ni'ak'xxm" leaves again. It is said that all the gods of the House of Myths come to the villages of the Bella Coola in the canoe "Ni'ak'xxm." 773 [776]

The arrival and the departure of these canoes are strictly regulated according to the calendar of the Bella Coola, which for this reason should be explained in connection with their beliefs. The Bella Coola divide the year into two parts, which are separated by the winter and summer solstices. The solstices are periods of indefinite length, between which five months are counted. Each solstice is reckoned, therefore, as approximately six weeks. The names of the months are as follows:— 773 805 821

[illegible] (winter solstice)	[illegible] (summer solstice)
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Sna'xm	[illegible]
[illegible]	Tsi'sick'ln [illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

The canoe "Ni'ak'xxm" arrives, and "Kunkunu'qstuLs" leaves, in the month Sisnx'lt'hcmxxm. The canoe "Ni'ak'xxm" leaves, and "Kunkunu'qstuLs" returns, in the month Sxnle'mx'xxm.

At the moment when the canoe "Ni'ak'xxm" arrives, a deity called Aoxtlkun'a'x (Plate XII, Figs. 1 and 2), who is believed to live in a cave, opens the door of her abode. There is one deity of this name to each village. Her cave is called Nankcoit'nxa. It is said that one Aoxtlkun'a'x lives on the mountain tops. Her house is described as a large hollow boulder suspended from the top of the mountain by means of a rope. Each Aoxtlkun'a'x has an older sister who is called Nanu'xxmm. When the canoe "Ni'ak'xxm" appears, and she opens her door, she steps outside and stands in front of her house, dancing, with trembling hands. When a person sees her, he faints. His soul is taken into her house, and is initiated into the secrets of the ka'xint. 773 776 [575]

A particular Nankcoit'nxa is believed to be at the foot of the creek Aoi'ck', on the northern side of North Bentinck Arm, near the mouth of Bella Coola River. A woman called Nanxmxnlt'xxm, lives there. She is described as emaciated, of black skin, and as wearing a black blanket. A certain chief who lived long ago was the first to see her. He was initiated by her, and after his return he performed a dance, and told what he had seen. Then he died.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 song'. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of song' as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the spaces between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola characteristic. This flat land is called dāsonx'dā or masong' mamth-Hoqosil. It is illumined by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying canoe through the space between the world and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are personal possessions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

[811] [821] [538] [424]

772 773 [776] The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind that it is the underside of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, but after a considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Salwalosam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

772 821 As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that seen by mortals is attached to the land above, so is this upper

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

178 versions of the myth given (vol. I, pp. 313-19) is a case in point.
773 The first was told as a smaiasta by a woman who claimed to be a descendant of the people figuring in it; the second, as a story, sumsma, by a man. In view of the reliability of both informants, it seems highly probable that this is a story, partly converted to a myth. In other examples there are incidents resembling the supernatural tales given in vol. I, chap. IX, and here too it appears probable that sumsma have been assimilated into smaiasta. It is complimentary to the truthfulness
[577] of the Bella Coola, and to the respect they show for intangible [424] property, that none of the myths recorded were smaiasta owned by others. Repeatedly an informant would say that he knew one, but would not tell it since it belonged to some other family.

128 After collecting a few myths, in each of which it was stated
773 that the first settlers at village X were A, B, and C, with their sisters, P and Q, it seemed as if it would have been possible, before the culture of the Bella Coola had fallen into its present decay, to make a census of those whom they believe to have been first settlers of this earth, and that such a list would have had few contradictions. This was soon found to be false. Two myths may give different people as the first occupants of a certain village, nor does such contradiction trouble the Bella Coola. Each man, convinced of the authenticity of his own family account, is quite willing to believe that the one belonging [811] to someone else is equally correct. This characteristic lack of logical consistency has already been mentioned in other connections. Boas (p. 61) likewise gives an instance of uncertainty as to the first occupants of a village, though, on the whole, he found Bella Coola mythology to be more codified than the present writer has done. In view of their lack of systematization in other matters, it would have been surprising if they had evolved a census of their first ancestors, accepted by all as accurate.

Another matter to be considered at this point is the simi-[178] larity of detail in many myths. In part this can be explained

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

539 [551] potlatches,* at which he validated names for his children. One of these was Ts-qinum, the designation he had applied to his salmon-weir; it has been used by his descendants as a child's name ever since. As time went on, when his children grew into manhood, he obtained for them seats in the house and also procured wives for them. His eldest son, whose mother was Ximsiu, had the names Ikhowste-a, the meaning of which is unknown, and Ahcowste-ain, "The Most Important of All Chiefs' Sons." Smanu had arranged marriages for this young man with four women, but Ikhowste-a was so ugly that only one of his wives, as ugly as himself, would have anything to do with him. His only real friend was a younger brother, Ahkua, aged about twelve years, who was his constant companion.

One day Ikhowste-a became so embittered and disgusted at his own ugliness that he went away, determined never to return, and not caring whither he went. As provisions he carried only a goat bladder filled with goat marrow. This prevents hunger and is said never to become exhausted, no matter how long the hunter may be absent. Ahkua saw his elder brother depart, and decided to accompany him. Ikhowste-a allowed him to come with him for about ten miles, up the valley of the Kimsquit River, where he shot some mergansers which he asked Ahkua to take back as a present to his parents. The younger boy was unwilling, nor could he be dissuaded from following, even when Ikhowste-a told him he was going off to die.

So the two camped for the night, and next morning continued their journey up the valley of the Kimsquit River, a region then unknown. Ikhowste-a was very sad at the thought of the hardships which his younger brother would have to endure, but he could see no way in which to persuade him to return. On and on they passed, camping at night, their only food being the goat marrow which Ikhowste-a carried. Far up the river they followed an affluent from the left, and from its valley climbed the bare mountain which, though they knew it not, is the watershed between the Kimsquit and Kitlope rivers. Here, above the treeline, they met a wolf. It lowered its ears, hunched, walked a few paces along a path, stopped, and looked back, as if it wished to guide the two wanderers. They decided to follow the animal which, once assured that [511] *Although the Bella Coola are sufficiently logical to demand an explanation for everything, once a belief has been formulated they cease to inquire whether it is possible. Thus, in all these accounts of the first people, the reader wonders how there were enough people in the world at one time in sufficient to make population possible. Who were the ancestors? Who formed the bulk of the guests? Such questions do not strike the Bella Coola as obvious; the stories have been handed down as facts, and they believe that anything was possible in those early days before man had lost his supernatural power.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The explanation of these manifestations of the supernormal, 787 *
for such they are considered to be, lies in the conviction that 811 ●
every activity of the mind is due to supernatural causation, [828]
the functioning of the spirit. In the round of daily life there are always good and bad incidents; the person who wakes [774] expecting to meet one or other before nightfall recognizes the fulfilment of his premonition in some small occurrence, and narrates it to his fellows as proof of what he had told them in the morning. In case of some major event, such as death or disaster, the Bella Coola assume that some previous indication must have been given. Looking back after the event, a man easily persuades himself that he "felt" a warning, and is more than ever convinced that his spirit, the cause of his thoughts, [774] has supernatural ability.

Conviction in the near presence of the supernatural has had 177
somewhat surprising results with regard to Christian Bella 787 *
Coola. A man converted in middle life carries all the fervour and realism of the old religion with him to the new, and feels 781 thoroughly familiar with the atmosphere of the Old Testament. 797 Visitations, such as therein described, are similar to those experienced by his fathers and himself, and he scorns the white man who questions their literal accuracy. He continues to hear the voices of supernatural beings, and to interpret mental [828] pictures as visions, but he ascribes them to the beings of the white man's religion. The following is a rather striking illustration of this point:

A number of years ago a devout Christian, who may be 159 designated X, was a patient in the hospital at Bella Bella. In 177
the same ward was a young Bella Bella lad whose sickness refused to yield to treatment. X, becoming interested in his 787 * neighbour, began to ponder about his condition, until presently 781
he felt convinced that the sufferer would be better by seven 797 o'clock the following morning, and told him so. A marked improvement was noticeable by the time predicted, but the white doctor foolishly (according to X) gave his patient some

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

occupants of the canoe, heard a roaring noise and saw a fish-weir, similar to those used by the Bella Coola, stretching across Burke Channel, which is about a mile and a half wide at this point. They went close to the beach and a brave man cut a passage through the obstacle. A similar trap was once seen stretching across South Bentinck Arm. 787 * 539

An unusual apparition may be regarded as an omen of death. For example, not many years ago a young half-breed saw a motor-boat moored to the bank of North Bentinck Arm with an eagle seated in the stern. He ran his own motor-boat towards it, but as he approached the eagle became a man. Then as he drew still nearer, never taking his eyes off the other boat, it, with its occupant, sank beneath the water, without leaving so much as a ripple. On relating the incident to his father, the latter recognized it as an omen of death. Six months later the half-breed's sister died, thus confirming her father's prognostication. 787 * 763 [811]

Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate

Experiences such as have been cited in the last section are regarded as of possible, and not infrequent occurrence at the present time. On the other hand, supernatural aid granted to those in misfortune, though it is the theme of many stories, is not considered as likely to happen now. The Bella Coola believe the narratives to be chronicles of actual events, and base their conceptions of many supernatural beings on their characteristics as therein described. There is no ceremonial significance attached to any of these stories; they may be, and are told by anyone, frequently for entertainment. Unquestionably, there is a feeling that the moral brought out in such tales is of value in educating the young people, though this point is never emphasized. 787 * 538 [869]

Supernatural aid granted to an unfortunate person is termed wlokwaladjut. Power so obtained cannot be transmitted by the recipient, although memory of the experience is 787 * [575] [535]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEa

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
* 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one [124] of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he owns [785] a portion of a mitqas or a ninel, through failure to observe ceremonial chastity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mitqas and the ninel are the same animal, which can assume these two forms; others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-
[173] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[184] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

* 787 The different types of appearances, and the different types ●811 of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 182 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the sum total of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mitqas, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory modes of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that [illegible] would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

777 According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mitqas was
* 787 brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own [173] ancestors, Omqemkikla. It is to this fact that he attributes his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is fre-

Our analysis shows that this system cannot be considered as an importation, but that it probably developed among the Bella Coola themselves. After they removed to their new home, a store of foreign ideas had come into their possession through contact with their new neighbors. While these new ideas were being consolidated and systematized, they stimulated the minds of the people, so of a few members of the tribe, who were thus led to the formation of an elaborate concept of the world. The concept which they have developed agrees in all its main features with those current in most of other areas and of other races. The mind of the Bella Coola philosopher, operating with the class of knowledge common to the native minds of cultures, has reached conclusions similar to those that have been formed in most the world over, when operating with the same class of knowledge. On the other hand, the Bella Coola has also adopted ready-made the thoughts of his neighbors, and has adapted them to his environment. These two results of our inquiry emphasize the close relation between the comparative and the historic methods of ethnology, which are so often held to be antagonistic. Each is a check upon such conclusions that might be attained by the application of one alone. It is just as unwilled to see, in an analogy of a single trait of culture that occurs in two distinct regions, undoubted proof of early historical connection as to reject the possibility of such connection because sometimes the same ideas develop independently in the human mind. Ethnology is equally conjecturing the evidence to accept superficial evidence as proof of historical connection; but the comparative ethnologist is hardly beginning to see that he has as right to scoff at the historical method. Our inquiry shows that sub conclusions can be derived only by a careful analysis of individuals culture. The growth of the myths of the Bella Coola can be understood only when we consider the culture of the tribe as a whole. And so it is with other phenomena. All traits of culture can be fully understood only in connection with the whole culture of a tribe. Where we confine ourselves to comparing isolated traits of culture, we open the door to misinterpretations without number.

If, then, the demand to make the a more critical method in the comparative study of ethnology than it has generally been accorded, it does not imply a depreciation of the results of the method. Where the human mind evolves an idea, or when it borrows the same idea, we may assume that it has been evolved or accepted because it conforms with the organization of the human mind; that it would not be evolved or accepted. The order the distribution of an idea, original or borrowed, the chief cause lie in conformity with the laws governing the activities of the human mind. Historical methods will furnish the data pertaining to the growth of civilizations among different peoples; and comparison of the phenomena of their growth will give us knowledge of the laws which govern the evolution and selection of ideas.

Bibliotheca Sinica (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*sang*ʷ. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of *sang*ʷ as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the space between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola characteristic. This flat land is called dźxnaʷdź or wasangʷ nemźźźqaźźl. It is illuminated by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying object through the space between the world and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are preserved on occasions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind that it is the analogue of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, [illegible] considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Sźźwkwam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that sun by morning is attached to the land above, so is this upper sun attached to another land above the one of which our sky is the underside. Boas (p. 28) has described this upper land in some detail. A number of Bella Coola were questioned on this subject, but for some time no one could be found with knowledge of its existence. At length one of the older people remembered that a man who had died some thirty years ago had a personal story connected with it, and later a Kimsquit man was able to furnish definite information. He explained that in his family there was a myth dealing with this matter; others might have heard this myth, but since it was not their property, of course they would not be able to impart the facts contained in it, nor would they necessarily believe it. Consequently, an upper land, superimposed above that which is immediately over the earth, cannot be described as a Bella Coola belief; it is shared, so far as could be ascertained, by only two families.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The chief feature of this uppermost world is its distance and unapproachableness. To the supernatural beings living in the intermediate land it is a far-off place; in fact, their attitude towards it corresponds to that with which mortals regard the land above their own. The supernatural ones can, when they wish, visit this upper world, which is called Nuqui-ldli. A sun shines there, but it is a different kind of sun from that known to mortals. On the whole it appears that this upper sky-land does not differ materially from either the earth or the land immediately above. No human being has ever reached this distant land, so what little is known about it was brought down in the beginning of time by the first people.

In addition to these two upper worlds, the Bella Coola know of one, or perhaps two, below. One of these is inhabited by ghosts.[1] It somewhat resembles the earth, but is unsubstantial and ethereal. It is considered to be immediately

[1] At the present time the Bella Coola are in a state of transition between the old beliefs and the new. This concept is held only by the older people, so it might be more accurate to describe it as one which they, the tribe as a whole, used to have. It has been thought advisable to use the present tense throughout in recording customs and beliefs which are now rapidly passing away.

1:36:Howitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

beneath the Bella Coola valley, and the land of the living forms a dome over it corresponding to that of the sky over this world. But everything is reversed. A river flows in the land of ghosts, but it rises in the west instead of the east; when it is warm on this earth it is cold in the land below; when it is sunrise here, it is sunset there. Shamans are believed to have penetrated frequently to this land, and on information from them the Bella Coola base their beliefs.

There is another land beneath the ocean. In this live the fish and sea mammals in human form, as well as other beings to be described in the next section of this chapter. Like all other worlds it has a sun above it,[9] and conditions are said to be similar to those existing on this earth. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether this undersea world is at the same level as the land of ghosts, and whether or not it extends beneath the rivers.

Although Bella Coola concepts regarding the sun and other heavenly bodies will require further consideration, it will be convenient at this point to describe them in outline. The sun is regarded as a heat-radiating ball of such intensity that a human being cannot approach it. Its path, as it crosses the land above, varies from day to day until it reaches its limits at the solstices. As it travels, it is accompanied by the drones of two Ahilitsa, supernatural feminine beings who remain continually, one in the east and one in the west. According to most informants, the ends of the sun's course, though fixed and invariable from year to year, are not marked by any visible means. Others state that at each limit there is the mouth of a cranq, a mythological animal of enormous size.

The moon is thought likewise to travel[9] each day but is said to be very cold. Few stories are current concerning it, although the Bella Coola say that long ago a man tried to reach it, only to be driven back by the intense cold. A shaman who died not many years ago claimed to have received power [9] The informant stated that sun was served that purpose.

[9] The Ahilitsa drone as it travels, as they do for the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

from the moon and stated that there were mountains and snow on it. It is commonly stated that the marks on the moon represent a man carrying a bucket.

The stars figure but slightly either in Bella Coola mythology or thought; it is not even known who made them. Two in the Great Bear constellation are called respectively Tpikste and Xwpuwz, "Little Girls." A lone star in the same part of the sky, named A'lex, is said to be following the girls to the forest for illicit intercourse.

Moon, stars, and above all the sun, were, and still are to a certain extent, used by the Bella Coola in computing the passage of time. There are no individuals with the definite prerogative of keeping count of time, but formerly wise old men used to do so.[9] Differences of opinion were the rule rather than the exception, a condition which often led to bitter disputes concerning the proper date for starting the winter ceremonials. Boas (p. 41) has recorded the Bella Coola calendar in greater detail than the present writer has been able to do. The making of calendrical observations is a lost art, and the following list of the months was all that could be learnt. It will be noted that these agree with Boas in regard to the months in the early part of the year, but not in those between the summer and winter solstices; no explanation is offered for this disparity.

First moon after the summer solstice: Sldlhwtnt, which has the significance, "The Time for Sockeye Salmon to Ascend the River."

Second moon after the summer solstice: Sl'ichdlil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon."

Third moon after the summer solstice: Sl'iwnt cil, "The Time for F'ating Coho Salmon."

Fourth moon after the summer solstice: Sipilpum, "The Time for Gathering Fern Root," or Sldahnz Sl Xwr'ilwnlnnis, [9] Elsewhere informants stated that there were professional calendrical experts in the honoy, when he was a young lad although members of the feather society did, deep, of consultions attended to this matter.

Ishkellewalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

"The Coming of Ăwĕkhwalnis."[1]

Fifth moon after the summer solstice: uxwiel, "The Time for Kuxiut Dances,"[2] or Sipalwaxis di Sist, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings."

Sixth moon after the summer solstice: Sisnu, "Sits Down," that is, when the sun reaches the solstice.

First moon after the winter solstice: Sowulmpwum, "What Sweeps Away Food," or Sulkl, "Angry Moon."

Second moon after the winter solstice: Sinsadimut, "Facing in Both Directions," that is, half the month belongs to winter and half to summer, or Lowalis di Nuxkkdmp, "The Potlatch of the Nuxkkdmp" (I, p. 182).

Third moon after the winter solstice: Sisapum, "When Herrings Spawn." These fish are said to have arrived on the same day of this moon as the winter solstice in the December one.

Fourth moon after the winter solstice: Sipaly, "Time for Making Salmon Weirs."

Fifth moon after the winter solstice: Sinowend, "Time for Making Hand-Nets for Olachen."

Sixth moon after the winter solstice: Sisdwel, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon." It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs.

The chief difficulty experienced by the Bella Coola in comparing time rests on the fact that each month is judged by the moon, whereas the main periods of the year depend upon the solstices. One old man, from whom much of this information was obtained, stated that trouble always came at the winter solstice when the month was divided into two sections. The above list is obviously incomplete and inconsistent, but it was the best available.

Supernatural Beings

In any primitive community the social, religious, political, and economic aspects of life are so interwoven that they

[1] See vol. II, p. 1 for a description of this mythical being.
[2] See vol. II, chap. v, for a description of these dances.

1:Mc:Swraith E-3 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NE6

rate most of them, are carefully used in accordance with the 776* functions of this supreme deity. As a Bella Coola has many [551] names, corresponding to his membership in various societies,
his professional prerogatives, his ancestral myths, and mere nicknames, so has Hpawáw, who is a superman, many names, according to his special functions. It would be unthinkable [782] for a Bella Coola to pray to Hpawáw, yet it is common for him to pray to Mesakais or Tsiá, other names for the same being. The multiplicity of functions and designations approaches the point of obscuring the unity of Hpawáw, which is fact, some Bella Coola even deny. They state that Sxnéi-ítsis, Mesakais, Sxnaiskáis, and Nuqulmáisis are one, but that Hpawáw, Sxnaiskáis, and Nuqulmáisis are three distinct supernatural beings. This seeming confusion presents [424]
no difficulties to the Indian, since each family has its own [184] myths in which such facts are recorded. He believes these, [771] without questioning those of his neighbour, and it is even possible for an individual to believe two contradictory statements, if he happens to become the owner of two contradictory myths.
Evidence collected in the field does not make clear whether the beliefs of the Bella Coola illustrate an incomplete transformation of a single deity into a number of minor ones, or whether they represent the almost complete fusion of a number of beings into one. Following the practice of the great majority of the Bella Coola, the supreme deity will hereafter be referred to as Hpawáw.

The most obvious attribute of Hpawáw is connected with 776* the sun. He can move it and use it as if it were his cane. In 821 form he resembles a man, and when he takes charge of the sun it appears as if the latter were a large, self-propelling radiant disc with windows through which he looks forth. It is said that long ago he allowed mink to take charge of the sun, but the malicious animal ran it so close to earth that the intense heat killed almost all living creatures. When Hpawáw enters [825] the sun he wears a cloak, on the lining of which are salmon; reversing this causes the rivers on earth to teem with salmon.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*776 Alqantăm is occasionally, but inaccurately, called Sunx, the [821] Sun.

Though Alqantăm often sojourns in the sun, his home is 772 in the flat land above the sky, a huge house which figures
*776 prominently both in Bella Coola mythology and present-day thought. The name of the house is Nuxmăt·a. "It resembles those constructed on this earth, but is boundless in size. Like [552] the houses of human beings, its name is changed according to what is taking place within. Every autumn the supernatural beings gather there to await the coming of Alqantăm at the winter solstice; while waiting they pass the time by performing the equivalent of the earthly kuxiut dances (II, chap. 1). This assemblage is termed qulxwaix, and the house, during this period, Nuxqulxwaixta.

The following names of the house, with meanings, were obtained:

Nuxmăt·a, "The Place of Myths."

Nuxqwatnaixta, "Where Everything Was Begun."

Nuxkăläxnuxta, "The Place Whence Came the Falling Down."

Nuxlămnăxnuxta, "The Place Where Mankind was Made."

Nuxăläqantăxnuxta, "The Place Where Alqantăm Speaks."

Nuxqulxwaixta, "The Place of the Qulxwaix."

Nuxkăxnuxta, "The Place of Meeting," or "The Council House."

Nuhuxmăl. The meaning of this word is unknown.

Ăxuxwulxăxmăl, "The Moving House." The significance of this last name rests on an ancient myth in which the house is described as travelling from place to place.

773 To grasp the significance of these designations it is neces-
*776 sary to understand the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the creation. Their mythology contains no account of the origin or birth of Alqantăm himself, nor of the making of this world; in the beginning of time no living creature, either animal or vegetable, existed with the exception of Alqantăm. He, therefore, decided to alter and populate the world and what is probably a moosehide, with salmon painted on it, symbolic of his guardianship of fish for the benefit of mankind. In other respects Nuxmāt-a has no peculiarities. Behind the house is an enormous tree, Tpuxpu-iapim, in the branches of which live innumerable owls.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

After this description of Nuxmāt-a, it is logical to return to its master, Alqunūm. Guiding the sun is his most spectacular occupation, but he also governs the movements of moon and tides. Powerful though he is, he continues to take an interest in the doings of mankind whom he created. Prayers are commonly addressed to him, and a certain type of shaman is believed to receive power direct from him. Other supernatural beings may work weal or woe to a Bella Coola, but he feels it is done with the sanction of Alqunūm. At every winter solstice he enters Nuxmāt-a, where supernatural beings from all parts of the universe have gathered to greet him. This assembly is called qulemaix, and Nuxmāt-a is termed Nuxpulxuaixta[1] for its duration. While waiting, the guests perform kwiut dances, similar to those carried out by members of the kwiut society on earth (see vol. II, chap. 1). At Alqunūm's entry the heat becomes so intense that the occupants rush forth precipitately, some falling and being trampled upon in the crush. Only three[2] advisers, including Sexuxālaix (I, p. 41), remain to confer with him. They arrange the fate of human beings during the coming year; who shall be made a kwiut, who shall be born, who shall die. In each case the decision rests with Alqunūm, though he is influenced by his counsellors. Human beings can often learn in dreams what is being decided for them.

Alqunūm, in spite of his strength, shares the limitations of any other chief, and is not invariably successful. The Bella Coola delight in telling stories of how supernatural beings, especially the Raven, outwitted and defeated him. Even [1] Often pronounced Nuxpulxuaixta.

[2] The exact number is uncertain.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dancers. Swinia differs from most supernatural beings in having his residence in this world instead of in the land above. 776*

Among the beings dwelling in the upper region are a number of Xemaemtum, whose function it is to ask the sun to appear every day. It travels without their assistance, but if they neglected to arouse it, darkness would prevail all day. The only knowledge of these beings is derived from information given by the first people; they have not been seen by mortals since early days and do not act as patrons for kwiat dancers. [821]

Heat and Cold are regarded by the Bella Coola as anthropomorphic beings, but their beliefs concerning them have not become crystallized, perhaps because of their non-appearance as patrons of kwiat dancers. The following story is told of the annual meeting of Heat and Cold. 776* 821 539

Every spring Cold, Swaskstu, meets Heat, Sqwikliua, in some undefined locality and says:

"You will not be welcome in the place to which you are going [the earth]. I have just come from there. People like to get up on cool mornings to start work, they won't pay any attention to you."

But Sqwikliua replies: "No. They will welcome me. Everyone prefers to spend a few extra minutes in bed in the mornings. It is pleasant to do so when it is warm, hence I shall be welcome in spite of the eagerness of mankind for work."

In spite of its apparent definiteness, this account is regarded merely as a story, and it is doubtful if any historical accuracy is attached to it. The Bella Coola laugh when it is told, and the irony of the conversation is not lost on them.

S'pi', the Cold Wind, is another anthropomorphized being belonging to the realm of stories rather than to that of everyday life and profound belief. His wife is Alkla, and their child is Ice. On a cold morning, if a Bella Coola finds ice on liquid left in a bucket or other container, he warms it at a fire until he can lift off the sheet, and throws it out of the door, saying as he does so: "Alkla-,* your child has become cold." 776* 821

Both the North Wind and his wife, sakwmu-i, whose home [773]

*The vocative form of this word.

b McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

is in the upper Bella Coola valley near Firvale, cause cold breezes by blowing them through their noses. ishmum i especially is a prominent figure in mythology (I, p. 670), but she has not appeared for many generations and her actions belong to legend rather than to either religion or social practices. It is said that she has four sons who once wanted to break a large number of grass stalks. Finding it difficult to do so on account of their toughness, they asked their mother to freeze them; she did this and destroyed every other plant at the same time.

Another anthropomorphic being is Ielilist, the supernatural South Wind of winter who brings storm and snow. The Carriers affirm that every icicle which grows down until its end is in the snow is his walking-stick, and that to break one causes famine. Some Bella Coola have adopted this belief and carefully refrain from destroying such icicles.

Supernatural beings experience the same difficulty as mortals in reckoning the passage of time. A number of calendrical experts live in the land above, whose duty it is to record both months and years. They are called Almmokilleuqmic or Almmokilleum. They have been seen occasionally, and are shown, as masked figures, at nusut (I, p. 181), but not at tsaiat dances. Two of these beings always appear, and they argue about their observations after the fashion of humans.

Another daimon of Nuxmit-a of slight importance in the social life of the Bella Coola is Xowcomdiletic, a friend and messenger of Alquntim. He acts as patron of tsaiat dances, and in this manner is brought to the notice of mortals. In the land above his function is to cherish Tlipmd-ic, a being resembling a diminutive man, created by Alquntim as a child to all supernatural beings. Xowcomdiletic is its guardian or nurse; and for safety he usually keeps his charge in the far distant upper land above Nuxmit-a, where Alquntim frequently visits the two. In some mysterious manner, Tlipmd-ic has been known to reach this earth, giving good fortune to the lucky finder. He is in many cases spoken of as "The Cherished

1:Mc:Dowalth E-5 (1922-1924)1945
NEh Bella-coola NEh

Bujo have been heard as recently as 1914 according to popular belief. In January of that year a number of young Bella Coola were returning home in a motor-boat from Ocean Falls. They camped for the night on Burke Channel, and were alarmed to hear a crashing of bushes and a beating on tree-trunks. Thoroughly frightened, they directed the beams of several electric torches in the direction of the sounds without avail and at last started the engine of their motor-boat, the noise of which frightened the bujo away.

An animal somewhat similar to the bujo is the ddibwis. The Bella Coola state that long, long ago, there lived as human beings near Port John on Evans Arm, King Island. They were a strange people, with peculiar rites including the worship of fire. Their neighbours, the Bella Bella, from whom they differed entirely, determined to destroy the ddibwis. A massacre took place, and only a few survivors escaped to an island in one of the lakes in the interior of King Island. There, in course of generations, they grew hairy and lost their human characteristics; it is said that a few paintings made by them are still visible there. Not many years ago some Bella Coola saw what may have been the last surviving ddibwis. Two hairy creatures were observed fishing from a skin boat on Burke Channel. As soon as they realized that they were observed they dashed ashore, broke up the framework of their canoe, and plunged into the forest carrying its skin covering. Nothing more seems to be known concerning them, nor do they appear ever to have granted supernatural assistance to anyone.

Another supernatural creature is the hilwod. It somewhat resembles a cow, although its legs are shorter and its body, which is white and bulbous, is heavier. In spite of its awkward build, this animal can move as rapidly as an earth bird and extends with its tongue, which can be shot forth to a tremendous length. Various incidents are related concerning hilwod. One of its characteristics is that it causes gales. The country where one lives is invariably denuded of underbrush and even pebbles; everything movable is blown away, leaving only trees human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a swanp, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings.* 776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind. 776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Hiyuwáw created man and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural 776* 825 773

*This matter will be described more fully in connexion with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xv.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

The most spectacular of Raven's exploits was the theft of the sun in order to provide light for the world (I, p. 198). In this case, a valuable object was acquired for mankind, but often Raven interfered with the kindly aims of Alquntám, a point illustrated in the following account of the origin of death:*

539
796
961
[821]

In the beginning of time, before people had really become human, Raven made a boy from his own body, gave him life, and called him Owistémat. His creation was Raven's chief joy. The youth was beautiful; his feet and hands were especially small and light-coloured, and Raven gloried in what he had been able to do without the assistance of his friend Tsáltémat, the Carpenter. All went well until Owistémat was about fifteen years of age when Alquntám wanted to find out about this being which Raven had created. Accordingly, he sent to earth one of his Sisúlkstáls to carry off Owistémat. At that time there were four Sisúlkstáls in Nacwátc-a, huge, eagle-like, supernatural birds under the special care of Alquntám himself. Down swooped one of these creatures and carried the youth aloft to Nacwátc-a, where he was treated as a guest by Alquntám.

Raven, ignorant of the reason for his loss, was heart-broken. He pulled out his hair and for four days sat and pondered. Then he decided to wage war on the Sisúlkstáls, not knowing that the latter had been acting by command of Alquntám. Raven went to Tsáltémat and asked him to make a huge whale. The carpenter was surprised and enquired about the purpose, whereupon Raven told him of the loss of Owistémat, and how he hoped that the Sisúlkstáls would be lured into swooping down to fight the dummy and would be vanquished. Tsáltémat agreed to help him and worked for four days on a gigantic cedar, chiselling it out like a canoe, but in the shape of an enormous whale. Then for four days he gathered gum and covered the wooden monster with a layer about an inch thick; finally he painted the outer surface to resemble a whale. It was a very fine piece of work. That night Raven asked Tsáltémat to launch it. The stomach had been weighted so that it could [illegible] "Two whale acted according to specification, diving and rising easily, moving to right or left according to the wishes of the helmsman. Raven was delighted.

Early next morning Tsáltémat again launched the craft at Raven's request, and it wallowed around near the shore like a real whale. Alquntám

*Submitted by Jim Pollard.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously* either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.* As he scours himself, he asks Menakais to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Alquntám actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [719]

Menakais has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [721]

"Please clean your face, Menakais," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Menakais," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers were always made before the departure of a hunting or war [824 823 785 515 296 823 825]

*Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance. Indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently.

*The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-smoothed river pebble.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each member of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Mesakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

Although Alquntim, under the name of Mesakais, is the one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than man to intercede with Mesakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qoas. In cold winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, now."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:Mc:Hwatlh E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemálstela. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Ásya Xemxemálstela,"	nuqwikdi	ilsk	di xuy"nuda
Hail, Xemxemálstela,	upon	the loftiest	of your heaven
ckáyuxuwda	dji ckuwuiqwu		tsim nuwdja.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemálstela is the being who takes care of Tlúqmá ás in the upper skyland. It is said that this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather. [776]

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [824] [715]

*The vocative form.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [261] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire titbits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"W'ai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Mesatche Noos, [133]
[756]

242 whiskers over which is scattered eagle down. From the back 535 of the head-dress hang weasel skins. In Bella Bella it is said to be customary for a skin to be added on every occasion when a * 556 nusuk is confined to the back-room. This may happen as many 575 as fifteen times to the child of wealthy parents, and a few Bella Coola have adopted the practice of marking each with a skin.
[237] Usually, some six or nine are hung in two tiers, without consideration of the number of times the wearer has been in seclusion. The central figure of the forehead mask is a head with [532] a hooked nose, the recurved hook being joined to the face itself. This figure does not vary with the wearer's ancestral myth, and no one knows what it represents. This design is [177] said to have been introduced to Bella Coola from the north a few generations ago; before that time the head-dress consisted [237] of a circular band of dyed cedar-bark, decorated with the tail [824] feathers of one of the large woodpeckers. The Bella Coola call it simply, "forehead mask." Each initiate carries a hollow [532] rattle, carved in the shape of a bird, which he holds in his right [534] hand, belly uppermost. Long, long ago, when a dancer failed to do so, the rattle became alive and the bird flew away; hence, this rule has been obeyed ever since.

535 Each initiate takes up his station in some part of the house behind the fire and dances to the beating of the sticks. The
* 556 left hand of each is clasped behind his back and in his right he 575 holds the rattle and keeps it in constant motion by shaking his wrist. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a good dancer.
Keeping the body stiff and the legs close together, he rises with slight jumps, barely altering his position on the floor. Sometimes he slowly turns around sunwise* in his series of jumps, at other times he does not alter his position. The head is bent from side to side and downwards at each jump, causing the eagle down to fly in all directions. Nusuk assistants blow more of the material on to the head-dress at intervals (see Plate 16).!

[821] *The Bella Coola believe that the sun moves from east to south to west to [796] north. Many ceremonial movements follow this direction, which will henceforth be described as sunwise.

! [See cut 116, facing p 219 - ANALYST]

539 to climb up to visit his grandfather. Ba'ameu did not discourage him, so his son began the ascent and soon disappeared from sight. In course of time he reached the last shore and made his way to his grandfather, Ajaxaiha, who was delighted to see him. He told his visitor that he was weary of constantly carrying the sun's light, and asked him to relieve him of the duty for a time. He mentioned that on previous occasions when his wife had acted as his substitute, she, being a woman, had been shy and had hidden herself behind clouds. The boy was willing to undertake the task and listened to his grandfather's instructions; in the morning he was to use only one fire stick, a little later, two, then three, and, finally, four at midday. In the afternoon he was to decrease the number in a manner corresponding to the morning's increase.[a]

[821] Next day Ajaxaiha went away for a holiday after entrusting his grandson with the previous fire sticks. As soon as he was alone, the ambitious youth began to pile one after another on the fire, until people in the world far below were scorched or drawn by the suffocating warmth. Ba'ameu's son threw on log after log, each increasing the heat below. The earth began to sizzle, and finally burst into flames, and the water boiled in the rivers and seas. Ioxuma a bird realized what must be the matter as soon as she felt the great heat, so she went outside and rubbed her hand over the plants on her house. Thus protected, these within survived, although all other human beings perished. Most of the animals escaped by hiding, though the wound failed to conceal the tip of its tail which was burnt black, a characteristic inherited by all wounds ever since. Ajaxaiha felt the heat and hurried home.

[825] "You have done great harm to mortals," he burst out angrily. "Therefore you shall live on earth as a stick."

Ajaxaiha seized his grandson and cast him to earth in this guise.

539 The survivors of the conflagration multiplied until the whole world was repeopled from the single household. Each of them took an o'ali stem from the burning, and these have been transmitted from one to 551 another of the descendants of each until this day. One of them, a 575 warped stem, is Sulipkowa, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks"; another, a Sulipkiam, condemnatory, "The Track of the Sun"; a third, Skaul, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log."

539 The following Kimsquit story[b] describes the obtaining of 575 an o'ali propagative in the distant past.

[a] For another version of this tale, see Boas, p. 95.
[b] Related by Jim Pelaxit.

Libraries R-S (922-924)948
NEA Bellevue NEA

534.0
[05]
B

gained brothers and sisters united to get rid of her; she became petrified in the valley which still bears her name, and which still has an evil reputation as the robber place in the vicinity of Bella Coola. Thence came the cold winds.

Ayaxtin instructed his carpenters to construct Sang[a]. They set about their work, but failed to use any supporting posts so that when all was completed, except a small section in the east, it fell. When the carpenters recommenced their work, they took care to erect uprights to bear the weight, and thus were able to construct the sky as it is today. When it was finished, the supports were removed. Only those living at Nalkun witnessed this disaster, and from it they took their name. Kwaitang[a] was the name of the first Sang[a] that fell.

According to another informant the first settler at Nalkun was Dakwang[a], who had also the name Kwaxalain. He came to earth in the form of a heron, bringing a salmon-weir as means of obtaining sustenance.

PEOPLE OF AN ORIGIN MYTH AT Nalkun[b]

Among the first people who came down to earth at Tunne was a crow man, who brought with him a crowl as a present from the supreme deity. As a result of this gift the Tunne were constantly practising the art of war, and always ready to seek hostilities; their settlement was a hotbed of conflict. One of these people, Lilamlik by name, wearied of constant strife, determined to set out and find a new home for himself. After considerable travelling he reached Nalkun where he settled down among the inhabitants of that village. He had brought with him a young boy who in time married a woman from Ilaila, and became the father of many children.

ORIGIN MYTH AT Dzaxi[b]

In the beginning Wiaqai came to earth as a man on Mount Nayu, near Dzaxi. He seated himself on the mountain top and slid down to the valley, showing a smooth track as he went, which is still here like the peak of a landslide. He was all alone and built for himself a house of evergreen boughs, Ismit, to which he gave the name Kwaxlaxi. After sojourning there for some time he decided to marry, so he set off up the valley to find out if there were any people living above him. He travelled [a] Related by Jakwalin, a past informant.

[b] Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

[illegible]
[illegible]

make a salmon-weir. In accordance with Aguanim's instruction, Omaum planned to make a circuit of the world making a suitable place to settle. He moved northward, in eagle form, scattering eagle down, wherever this material has ever since been highly regarded and is used as a symbol of peace. Owing, moreover, to the eagle down scattered on the mountains, there has always been much snow in that region.*

Sometimes he travelled he assumed the form of the sun, for he was so powerful that nothing was impossible to him. For in the north Omaum obtained an enormous copper, which he carried back to Kitsumpt without completing his original plan of circling the world. He perched on a tree near his brother's almost completed salmon-weir.

"Why don't you change yourself to a human being?" Gwagwilkilla inquired.

"I am waiting until our food is more plentiful," Omaum replied. "Besides I have been to the far north where I obtained an enormous copper."

When the weir was completed and Gwagwilkilla was catching many salmon, his brother at last decided to become a man. But instead of sending his cloak back where he acquired it, he an eagle. Omaum now became an active fisherman and was much annoyed by the darts made by the bird, though he himself was responsible for it not having returned to Nanaimo. After about a year he suggested to Gwagwilkilla that they should kill it, but the latter demurred, since it was the gulls which Aguanim had given Omaum. The latter said nothing, but the next time he saw the eagle stealing his fish he killed the bird, without consulting his brother. He meant had he done this then he felt sorry, but it was too late, he could not restore the eagle to life.

Owing to the salmon given them by Aguanim the two brothers now were very prosperous, and Omaum began to think of marriage. One day he noticed some ships floating down the Dean River, so he judged that people must be living on that stream. He set out to investigate, and Fisher, and married his sister Ishmiln, so he has described to a Dean River myth. To celebrate this event the two brothers prepared to invite people from far and near. Then they lengthened their house to accommodate a large number, in one of the type known as wilmadzi, though it could not expand without human agency. Then they painted their spaces with designs of the mihagan, since they had brought their ancestors with them from above. Now everything was ready and they announced their guests. When all had assembled, Omaum gave a feast[illegible]

*The cloak which has over Omaum takes a new coat on all which "Omaum's cloak," in memory of his journey. The myth fails to explain how Omaum was responsible for these phenomena.

U.S. Geo. Surv. Bull. 1 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

On the following day another adventure befell the same party when they were almost home. Passing the site of the present cannery, on the south side of North Bentinck Arm, about half a mile from its head, they went among some old stumps which at high tide resembled basking seals. When in the midst of them, they all seemed to come to life, crashing into the water in all directions, raising billows which drenched the paddlers with foam and nearly wrecked the canoe. The travellers considered themselves fortunate in reaching Bella Coola alive.

987 * 539

Apparitions have appeared several times near Mosache Point, the point between South Bentinck Arm and Labouchere Channel, a place noted for storms. On one occasion the father of a Bella Coola, in 1911, sixty years of age, was near there when he suddenly saw lights on two mountains diagonally opposite each other on either side of the fiord, at a distance of about six miles. The lights grew bigger and bigger, approached each other and receded, until finally they merged; it became bright as day, although it was midnight at the time, and there was only a new moon. The lights separated after a little, until each gradually withdrew to its mountain and disappeared.

Near the same spot some travellers once saw an enormous mountain goat walking on the surface of the water. Almost immediately a storm arose which swamped the canoe, and drowned all but one of its occupants. As soon as the craft was submerged, the gale subsided, as is always the case after people have been drowned. [921]

During 1914, while a young Bella Coola was proceeding down South Bentinck Arm in his motor-boat, a storm arose and the waves poured into his boat until it almost foundered. In the midst of the gale he saw two pillars of water shoot up from the surface of the fiord to a great height, then gradually fade away as if they had been smoke. The storm ultimately subsided. No one could tell which supernatural being had 159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific supernatural power. He realizes that he could increase the prob-

* 987 ability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes [985] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and [997] lay fasting for some time. Another means would be to concentrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either unreservedly. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected. They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

* 987 Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the information received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [928] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly,
● [921] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring
[773] at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other
[777] times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events
[786] for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as Ayaxwim enters Nawaki'a, wise men separate from their wives and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another
[921] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer
[224] solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-[786] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such

#530
#787

by the bear. This happened a third time, but on the fourth attempt the mouse succeeded in cutting the string, whereupon the sun went hooting away.

The orphan walked along a good road until he came to a house from inside which he could hear women's voices and the sound of bark-beating. Peering in, he saw a number of women preparing soft bark coverings for an infant who was lying in a cradle-box; they were the supernatural cedar-bark beaters who live in the land above. When Djuskp walked in, they asked him whence he had come; he replied by inquiring why they were making bark cloths, and they answered that they were for a cradle. They told him to lie down in it, saying that it was so comfortable that he would soon fall asleep. Though Djuskp suspected that they were plotting against him, he felt so secure in his great power that he did as they asked. As soon as he had lost consciousness, the box crashed so hard that he was projected through the floor itself, down into the region between the upper land and this earth. After falling a short distance, Djuskp changed to eagle form and floated back up to the house, where he reappeared to the women in human form once more. They were amazed at seeing him again, but once more he obligingly went to sleep. Again the box crashed so case him down below, and again he became eagle form and floated up. When this had happened four times, Djuskp became angry.

"I am a shaman," he said to the women, "and will kill you if you are not careful."

The supernatural bark beaters advised him to go back to his sister, telling him to return by the way he had come. He decided to follow their counsel, found the vine still in position and climbed down, the vine growing shorter as he descended. In this way he reached home in safety.

In a third version, collected from another informant, the hero is named Tsalkmqs. He is described as a lad who supported his sister on small game, while dreaming of the time when he would be a real hunter. He decided that a low-crying of public hair was necessary, and obtained the wherewithal to make one from his sister, after refusing to use any other kind of hair. The story relates how he crawl lodged in a tree-top, where he overlooked an elk-lick after it, ultimately reaching the land above. Parallel game tells toward this territory, in one of which he set his bow-string on a stump and in this way scared the sun. After a mouse had released the captive Tsalkmqs returned to earth.

[521] The manner some that such parallel tell was the track of the sun

Schl.Derwith. E-5 (522.2524)948
NEA Reference NES

on a successive day and that after being captured the sun crossed its course. This is said to be the origin of the solstices.

There are many other versions of this tale current in Bulle Conte, in some of which the bore is said to have been a resident of Green Bay.

530.9
787.9
[821]

THE BOY WHO WAS REVENGED BY GREEN BEAR

The people of a certain village were very fond of wrestling, spending most of their time in bouts. Proud of their strength, they used to unite to bully one of their fellows, a wealthy youngster quite unable to hold his own among his more vigorous companions; they not only mocked his lack of strength, but, when wrestling, threw him around as if he were a plaything. For a long time the lad remained passive under the taunts and ill-usage of his companions, then determined to seek supernatural aid. Adorning himself with eagle down, dyed cedar-bark and unfolded cedar-bark, he made his way to a small pool up the valley, where he knew that grizzly bears were in the habit of wrestling. For four days he lay down by the water, without sleeping or eating. At last he saw a bear approaching, but, strengthened by his fast, he showed no sign of fear.

"You have come to obtain power from me," said Grizzly Bear.

"Yes," answered the boy.

"Very well."

Grizzly Bear washed the lad in the pool, and as the creature passed his hands over him, the youth felt an increase in strength. There was a large boulder near the edge of the pool, one which the bears used to use yearly when playing.

"Throw me that rock," said the bear, wishing to see how strong the lad had become.

But the bear, though strong enough to throw it, determined to plead weakness with the intention of obtaining greater strength by more washings. In this he succeeded. When he pretended to try to lift the stone, but failed to do so, Grizzly Bear again washed him, and again he felt increasing vigour.

"Try now," said Grizzly Bear.

A second time the boy pretended that it was too heavy for him.

"Pshaw!" said Grizzly Bear. "If you had any natural courage you would be able to throw it as I do."

So he said this he raised the boulder a considerable distance as though it had been a pebble.

Nevertheless he consented to wash the youth a third time and even, when again he failed to lift the stone, a fourth time. Now the lad decided that he had obtained as much strength as he could, so he picked up the

L56/Cornell B-1 (1922-1924)148
NEA Bellecrete NEA

"I am very glad. I have you to thank, because I understand that you buried my son merely as a thoughtless prank. The place to which you are bound is very bad. No ordinary traveller ever returns from it, but I am going to make you shamans."*

So saying, she took her pump and put it in a sack, which she gave to the four brothers, who continued their journey. Soon they came to a house, Pawaiu, though they knew it not. Peering through the cracks they saw within a man, Ilgamim, who invited them to enter, saying that he knew they had come because they did not get on well with their father. He ahamam-i had warned them, he invited them to sit down in a certain place in the house, while he went out. He came back arrayed in his dance regalia, and as he performed, the house began to move up. He again withdrew, to return with other dance clothing, and as he danced in it the house descended. Ilgamim repeated this procedure four times, the house was so stifling that the brothers could hardly breathe, until one of them reached the pump given to them by ahamam-i. Almost immediately they felt relief. Ilgamim continued his dance, and a great conflict ensue between the wild and the hunt until finally the latter was vanquished. Ilgamim was driven by the wild into a corner where he admitted his defeat, saying:

"You are the first that ever overcame me. Take whatever you desire of my goods or of my power."

Freed by their experience, the four brothers returned to Sulu Coda. Owing to the successful conflict with Ilgamim, the four and wild of women usually return to vanquish the hunt of summer, which otherwise would destroy all life.

THE MAN WHO BECAMES WOMAN EVERY TIME THE MOON*

Long, long ago a certain man, Ichamam-a on black brothers hunting for four days, knowing it would make him susceptible to visitations from the supernatural. He received every night in his father's house to sleep, and on the fourth night he made a small hole in his blanket, so that when he pulled it over his head he was able to see, though he appeared to be asleep. As he watched he saw a woman approaching, and said to it:

"Don't hide. I see you."

The woman then became a woman and carried Ichamam-a in a canoe to the house of the Moon, whence she had come. The Moon rubbed his hands over the face of Ichamam-a, thus making him a shaman, he then gave his guest a small whistle, which had the power of calling the eagles

*This story was obtained from a man in his image. On was shown various as an Ichamam and the following must be regarded mainly as an outline.

[illegible] B-5 [illegible]
NES Bulletin NES

It is said that one man accidentally swallowed when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its source could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dried and analyzed entire herb.

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

789
825
886

To Cause Obesity

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten.

789
826
622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an amamai (varied thrush?) alive and put it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying:

"Sing like a singer like you."

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

533
789
825

To Cause Ability in Hunting

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained.

824
789
824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Place the penis of a mountain goat or beaver on a fire.

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the water or a river, saying:

789
86 821
825

1:McIlwraith K-3 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

789 "Please, may it be so it was when you held intercourse."
821 The basis of these medicines is that mountain goats and 825 beaver mate in November when it is cold, and deer in October when it is rainy.

An old Kimsquit man mentioned that one winter he had been driven ashore by continuous cold winds and was on the verge of starving. He slew a buck and by using the medicine just described was able to bring rain with consequent lessening of wind so that he could continue his journey.

MALEVOLENT MEDICINES

754 To Destroy the Benefits of Another's Ceremonial Charity
825 Place pieces of flesh from any recently skinned animal within a coffin from which the skeleton of an enemy has been removed, uttering at the same time the name of the person to be injured. This destroys the "cleansing" acquired by the observance of ceremonial chastity.*

To Cause Insanity in a Woman

Catch a squirrel alive and tie one of the woman's hairs around its stomach; then release the animal. As it runs violently through the forest, sometimes head upwards, sometimes head downwards, so will the brain of the person whose hair it is carrying begin to churn violently till madness ensues.

To Cause Ferocity in Grizzly Bears

Throw the body of a recently killed muskrat against a man's back. The next grizzly bear he encounters will be ferocious, and may kill him. Knowledge of this medicine was learnt by noticing that a number of men who had been struck in play with muskrats, were killed by grizzly bears. The potency of the act has since been recognized.

754 To Cause Disease in a Malefactor
727 A number of years ago, when three Bella Coola were killed

*This medicine was learnt from a native constitutionally informed and was not confirmed by others.

salmon are properly looked after, in fact, he is practically the supernatural archetype of the River Guardian. Imimitlmain, "The Mover," is a supernatural child who crays with the Resident, and whose sole function appears to be the mooring of Nuklymm's craft. Dakdakimum is sent by Imaim a, who in this connection appears to have human intelligence, to greet Nuklymm, and with him come Imaim a's son, Mallmkimum,[20] to assist Nuklymm in poling his craft up the river. All these beings are persons for different kukwiut. The Resident is also known as Amitlis.

The kukwiut assemble in X's house as on the previous occasions; according to some informants two songs are used on this day, others say only one. The people proceed in the usual manner to the lowest house, and make their way upstream. When about half through the village, however, X shrieks out that Nemitlem has brought a call to him. The women and the heralds cry out loudly, X hastily returns to his own house, from which the uninitiated are at once expelled, and the kwiut whistles sound from within. Nemitlem is one of the supernatural beings who has travelled with Nuklymm for the sole purpose of bringing a call to X. If the calendrical experts have been successful in their reckonings, the November moon will first be visible on the night of this day. Several of the older men admitted that errors were common, and that sometimes four days were had to elapse, in which it was said that Nuklymm was poling up the river. As he passes, his dancers in the different villages receive their calls on successive nights. It is assumed that he can go by several adjacent settlements on the same night, but the kwiut assent is two or three days shorter in Imat and the upper villages than in Semqa-n. Exact information on this point was unavailable. As already described, Nuklymm travels to Imaim a, whence he leaps to Nuqulmmim and places his pole within the house. All the supernatural beings crowd in after him to wait for Sqamtim, but as soon as the latter enters, Nuklymm seizes his elaborate myths dealing with the origin of the hamatsa dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Alpanaw and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Oulewakwa of Kimsquit, and the prerogative of giving hamatsa dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.* The following account are of the dances performed by a certain Oulewakwa whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repertories, one for each section of his dance.

[20] These informants were then shown six four of these beings.

As with all other hamatsa prerogatives, the impetus to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural person, the being Kulkulwaqlar in the case of all hamatsa dances. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for hamatsa dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are rushing out of the house above on the story of the son at the winter solstice. Thus hamatsa dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Stomach-Cutting Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his hamatsa friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other hamatsa, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time drawn near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a preliminary out that he wants someone to tie up his neck, and, after the usual delay, an uninitiated lad is brought forward for the purpose. The carpenters help him to manipulate the rope, and to reality do the actual tying although they disguise the fact. Then four or five kokwitsi seize either end and begin to tug; X cries out as if in pain, the whistles sound, and the women drone. It is most impressive. Finally the head is pulled from the body and falls to the floor, while the apparently headless and lifeless body of X sinks down in the direction taken by the head. Blood and raw flesh are in evidence and the weeping of the women readily convinces non-members that they have witched the decapitation of the dancer. Sometimes the uninitiated themselves are allowed to pull the rope.

*There are other hamatsa dances in Bella Coola.

575 *
786 *

The ritual throughout the night is identical with that already described for the Beaverch-Cutting dance. The spirit guard the doors, refusing egress to all, the mourning women sing their songs, the puppets second to the head above and are lowered into X on their return. At intervals groups of the uninitiated are told to come forward; they circle the fire sunwise and see that X's head is lying apart from his body, with the blood and flesh and the severed neck visible. Towards dawn[*] hidden strings are fastened to the head and it is drawn slightly towards the body. One of the moccasin calls out:

"Is moving! Is moving! Do you see it?" and a herald answers: "We see it move."

The slow movement is continued until the uninitiated, who make periodic inspections, are able to say that it has almost rejoined the trunk. As the first glimmer of light appears in the east, one of the carpenters bends over X and takes the opportunity, while he conceals the dancer's body with his coat, to hide the false head beneath his blanket, at the same time X stretches his own head up from under his blanket. The substitute is not evident to the uninitiated.

[*] The passage of time at night is judged by changes in the moon by the height of the tide, or the movements of stars; the latter is also practised in the winter ceremonies. If the stars are hidden, an estimate is made by the number of the logs burnt through their season.

[illegible]

[The Fungus Dance]

from a distance. When one of the participants has spotted the object, it is drawn to shore and carried into the house. The unwitnessed are then called in and seven, often covering their heads with blankets to prevent their spirits being drawn from them. None of the Bella Coola appears to know what governed, in the old days, the choice between these two performances.

The Fungus dance differs considerably from typical dance circuits already described. In part this is certainly due to decay of custom. When the writer witnessed the dance in the winter of 1923-4 it was carried out very crudely by Snuulelk'ko, who, unwilling to admit this, was sensitive about the proper ritual. Consequently, the performance of the dance was more of a hindrance than a help to the investigator. But even when full weight is given to this circumstance, it is clear that the Fungus dance is peculiar, particularly in the omission of masked figures on reflexum.

The circuit on that occasion was further complicated by the fact that Snuulelk'ko has also the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of either the sun or the moon, and instead on this fact being brought out in connection with her songs. Four of these were composed instead of the usual two, and the supernatural beings described in them were:

Sparrow: under the name of Snuulelk.

The Moon.

Swan: This was introduced on account of being the place from which the Salmon-Bringer leaps to the sun. A mask representing this place of parallel power is always painted with salmon designs and the blanket of the wearer is decorated in the same way.

The Swing mentioned that set so poses at the ends of the sun's course.

Mole: A supernatural being dwelling under the river who is able to see a fungus in a dance held there. Detailed information about this creature could not be obtained.

At any eclipse, no matter what the season of the year or

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

time of day, X must sing. The heralds call everyone to his house where the singers at once compose a new song, describing sun or moon as the case may be. They then sing it while X dances. Other kukuxiut have the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of the sun, and still others at an eclipse of the moon, but X claims to be the only one entitled to dance at both.

575* 746* 821 [339] [424]

THE MYSTERY DANCE

Mystery is the key-note of all kuxiut dances, but in the one termed Ałwatxówł that element is brought home so forcibly to the uninitiated that it may aptly be called the Dance of Mystery. The Bella Coola explain that the word Ałwatxówł means ałqaw, "What Is Hidden." The essence of the rite, as explained to non-members, is that the supernatural power which has come to the dancer is embodied in three supernatural beings or in manifestations of them. Unless someone guesses its locations, the performer will die. The Mystery dance is one of the most lengthy Bella Coola rituals and necessitates such a lavish expenditure of food that only a rich man can undertake it.

575* 746* [556]

Accounts were obtained of the ritual as carried out by Sqwalin i of Tsmaxt and Saiqwás of Kimsquit, both of whom have the necessary prerogative. The details differ so slightly in the two localities that only one description need be given, and the dancer can be spoken of as X. The patron of most Mystery dancers is Sánałłqwałałz Ałqawám, but that of Saiqwás is Kokoxlum, a supernatural being remarkable for his wild and erratic behaviour.

[424] [579]

When X has stored up as much food as he thinks necessary, he calls the marshals together to tell them of his desire to dance. In case of consent, they admonish him not to hurry matters but to perform the rite slowly and properly. Preliminary arrangements include the choosing of four kukuxiut gifted with good memories to store up in their minds the guesses made by the uninitiated. If many kukuxiut are anxious to dance, X usually asks permission on the night of a

2:16:Twenth E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Mystery Dance]

what are to be the correct answers? The marshals decide on these, but their judgment really depends on the four remembrancers who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Saipuk performed, the answers chosen were: 575* 796*

Simalua, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural ones. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity. [821] [796]

Nacpaste Smaintikla, "The Eagle Down Smaintikla." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Smaintikla" since eagle down is a symbol of peace. [825]

Kitwanimum, "The Yawning Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches. [777]

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whoever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a Sanist. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager parent can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness to assist in binding the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care. [756]

[The Dance of Thunder]

575
796
776
[123]
[981]

with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming furiously. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1922-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the kukwiat were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers. Another being who often appears at a dance of Thunder is Rainwater-Dripping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ant'ikwulaxis explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the planking. The Clowns are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Ant'ikwulaxis. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

[522]

575
796

Dancers whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patron occurs. If [474]

[821]

Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too hastily up aloft. Xwo ...."

[789]

The call of xwo ... is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any kukwiat women present at once dress, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

Z:Mc:Gwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Thunder]

the uninitiated are expelled. If several ḱukuciut in the same village are prestigis of Thunder, each makes a circuit independently, but they agree to meet afterwards in the house of one of their number. Here all members of the society assemble for a meal provided hurriedly by X, or to a number of meals if several have Thunder as patron; in this case there is no pooling of food. The marshals take the opportunity of giving their customary admonitions, as if it were midwinter. Next the singers combine their ideas and beat out a new song of which the theme is Thunder who never rests; it is worded as if X were speaking and describing what his patron is doing. This song is sung and resung until all present have learnt both tune and words. If there are several ḱukuciut with Thunder as patron, a song is made for each and practised in the same manner. 575* 796* [533] [533]

When all is ready, one of the heralds calls in the uninitiated. Each song is sung to the accompaniment of beating sticks while a dancer performs. Instead of X, this is an old man or woman who has not had a call for many years. Often the ḱuciut selected is so old that he or she can dance only with the support of a stick; no reason could be learnt for this surprising deviation from the usual practice. If several songs have been composed, a new dancer performs to each. After the last dance the uninitiated are expelled and the ḱukuciut soon follow. Since no call has come, it follows that it is of a ceremonial, though not of a sacred nature, and does not take the regular course of winter dances. It is said to "make good the path of Thunder," the term employed being identical with that used for the dance on sakcum after the burning of the masks. [787]

Nothing more need be said about the Thunder dance, except to give the following origin myth: 575* 796*

Long ago, long before the white man came to this land, but still longer after its first settlement, four brothers left Kimsquit to hunt mountain goats on Mount Tsuquiko', near the Kimsquit River.* It was September, 539 827

*This mountain is also known as Sheep-back Salmon Mountain, its shape resembles the fish in question and it is said that long ago, in the very beginning of time, a salmon became petrified there. [109]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

$ 575
x 796
539
821

the goats were plentiful, fat, and unsuspicious, so that before nightfall they had killed four. Well satisfied, they lay down in a cave to sleep for the night. At that time no one knew what supernatural being caused thunder; the earliest inhabitants of the world had possessed that knowledge but it had been forgotten in the intervening generations. Towards midnight the hunters were awakened by a loud boom and wondered what could have caused it. Presently they saw approaching a figure resembling a man, with a weird non-human face, who carried in each hand a huge rock crystal.* He raised and lowered his arms as if pounding; at each movement the crystals struck each other, producing the booming sound and also emitting a flash of light. The eldest brother, Saiks, told the others to cover their faces with their blankets and to keep their eyes closed, because some evil and powerful creature was drawing near. But the second brother, who had caught a glimpse of the two crystals and greatly desired them, watched cautiously, hoping for an opportunity to steal them. Thunder, for it was none other, ranged around; at intervals he passed across to the other side of the intervening valley on a sidewalk which grew before his feet to form a bridge for him, and on it, too, he was able to retrace his steps. Several times Thunder crossed and recrossed, accompanied by reverberating peals. He came near the four brothers and danced; then lay down while fire emerged from his nostrils. The second brother began to feel scorched, gradually the heat increased, but he was powerless to move; before dawn, when Thunder vanished, he had been roasted to death.

The three survivors buried the dead man in a hastily made grave in the floor of the cave and went home, abandoning the mountain goats which they had killed. Saiks, though grieved at the loss of his brother, felt that the latter's death was his own fault for peeking when he had been warned not to do so. Not long afterwards the two younger brothers died. Then the sole survivor told a carpenter to make him a mask secretly, according to a design which he would describe. In this way the face of Thunder was portrayed in wood. When the mask was ready, Saiks wore it and gave an imitation of the actions of his patron; no one had ever seen anything like it and the people were amazed.

$ 575
x 796
539
424
777

No great antiquity is ascribed to this myth and it gives no explanation of questions which at once arise in the investigator's mind. The type is fairly common in Bella Coola; in fact, the only unusual part of it is that the visionary received a tsaiat prerogative rather than one of the forms of good for-

*This is said to have been equivalent to the fire-cattle of a Thunder dancer.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 but a proud and energetic dancer sometimes repeats a cere-[424] mony three or four times.

THE SUN DANCE[94]

[776] One of the forms in which Ałquntäm appears is that of the [821] Sun, and in that case he is referred to as Sunxälotla. Considering the importance of this deity, it is rather surprising that the kusiut dance of which he is patron is not more impressive. Efforts were made to obtain full details of the ceremonial from several informants, but only a number of incidents and a bare [124] outline could be obtained. In part this was due to the fact that none of the informants[95] were themselves protégés of Ałquntäm, but this is not in itself sufficient to explain the comparative unimportance of the dance, since full accounts were obtained of other rituals from those who did not own them.

Nothing was learnt of the origin of any of the Sun dance [424] prerogatives, except that ancestors of the owners obtained them
[551] from Ałquntäm. It is a common right, and kukusiut having Ałquntäm as patron are found in every village, among them being Qoxolän·i of Tcmotl, and Nexnextiwalaix of Nusqalst. As far as could be ascertained, the ritual of various Sun dance performances is identical, so one account will suffice and the dancer can be termed X.

Like other kusiut dancers, X can perform at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the approval of the marshals. The call comes to him in the normal manner, the uninitiated are expelled, and the kukusiut gather in his house to practise [533] the songs which the singers have just composed. The theme [776] is of Ałquntäm, describing his manifold functions, and particularly that of guiding the Sun. The following day a second song with similar theme is composed, and in the evening the tasks are allotted for the manufacture of masks. Four are re-[532] quired; a large one representing Ałquntäm himself, one of [171]

[94]Needless to say, no connection or similarity is implied with the dance of the same name in other areas.

[95]Except one man who had forgotten all details since his conversion to Christianity many years before.

[The Sun Dance]

Ano'likwulsaix, and two of the supernatural Clowns. In addition a white disk, about four feet in diameter, is ordered with a human face in the centre; this represents the Sun with Alquntäm. No detailed description is required until the night of nakusam. 575* 796* [582]

The kukusiut gather in the dusk and summon the uninitiated as soon as all is in readiness. On entering, they see the huge and imposing figure of Alquntäm standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, flanked by a number of the most important kukusiut as if to pay respect to him. X stands immediately behind, repeatedly throwing one arm over Alquntäm's head and crying hoip to soothe the visitor. The two Clowns move to and fro, all over the house, making what remarks they like as if they were spoilt children. Ano'likwulsaix stands on one side, explaining the meaning of it all, and giving the names of the supernatural beings represented. Suddenly the white disk appears against the back wall near the roof, slowly passes sunwise across the house, and disappears. The uninitiated recognize that it is not the Sun, but to them it seems miraculous that this body can move as it does, and they easily accept Ano'likwulsaix's explanation that this is the way Alquntäm crosses the heavens. They do not know that for the last two days the carpenters have been exercising their ingenuity in arranging cords so that the object can be drawn across smoothly and steadily. Again the sun "rises," and crosses the back wall, only to disappear from sight. This is repeated twice more, making four times in all. It is said that sometimes the Sun is made to spin just before it "sets," but the method could not be learnt. At this juncture the uninitiated are sent home and the proceedings conclude as usual. [522] [821]

In addition to performing in the customary manner, X is required to dance on other definite occasions, without the coming of a call. According to some informants, X must sing of his patron at the beginning of the ceremonial season, coincidently with the protégé of Nookynum. This is probably correct but details were unobtainable. In any case, when the [424]

[The Sun Dance]

*575 dance of Nuitcum is omitted owing to the large expenditure
*796 required, X must sing, without a call, in conjunction with the *Wi-a dancer. In this case also the details are lacking.

[824] Likewise at the winter solstice, when the tarrying Alpomim [821] at last enters Nuapalcumaiste to greet the waiting supernatural kulusiut, it is incumbent on his protégé to perform in his honour below. The singers are always ready with a new song for the occasion, and in the evening his fellows assemble in his house to learn it. X wears the usual ceremonial collar, but he lacks the awe-inspiring qualities of a kulusiut who has had a call.
When the song has been sufficiently practised, the uninitiated are brought in to listen to it and to watch the dancing of X. At the conclusion of the performance they are given a little food, provided by X, which they carry away while the kulusiut remain to eat at their ease and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. It is probable that the ritual carried out at the beginning of the ceremonial season is identical with the above.
[821] One old man stated that long ago it was customary to dance in the same manner at the summer solstice; this might be expected, but confirmation was unobtainable.

*575 Like the protégé of Thunder, X is sometimes called upon *796 to perform during the non-ceremonial season. But whereas a 821 Thunder dancer acts when his patron is apparent by peals of sound, X must do so when his patron is invisible through an eclipse. The ritual is almost identical with that already described for a Thunder dancer so nothing but additional details need be inserted. X visits every house shaking a rattle, which is not the case with Thunder dancers. After his circuit of the village, the kulusiut gather in his house where the singers are [533] composing a new song describing the phenomenon. The words explain that Eclipse, the supernatural being Nuqtsly', has blocked or destroyed the path of the Sun, and add how disastrous it would be if the Sun could not recover its way. Later on, the uninitiated are called in to watch X's dance which, like [776] The Bella Coola term both for "eclipse" and the being responsible is Nuqtsly' [792] which also means "A Fire That Has Died Out."

the one that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the path" of the patron. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and reiterated that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law. 575* 796* 821 688 177

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to kwiat dancers, the Moon also has many human protégés. Among them is Nakwimás, "The Moon When It Is Uncovered," of Tsmsil, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X. 776 355 424

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the kwiat presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Ásiatáwm: A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water. 575* 796*

The two Ásipuiaat: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse. 821 776

The two Sóitmáwat: These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who come to earth to assist stricken kwiat.

The song also describes how no supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that obeyed by uninitiated with regard to passing outside a house where a kwiat ceremony is taking place. 784

*Ásiatáwm is the usual term for ghost; no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the women living in the moon. 775 192

There is difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

but the natives all understand that later performances by those with the same name are only possible with the assistance of carpenters. This dance has not been carried out for so many years that the details have been forgotten.

THE DANCE OF THE BIRDS

The Bella Coola notice that in autumn many of the birds disappear, to be seen no more until spring. Ignorant of a warmer climate to the south and of the causes of migration, they explain the phenomenon by saying that Alquntăm collects the birds in some mysterious place for the winter and releases them in the spring. It is believed that he does the same with supernatural birds in the land above. The setting free of the birds, which is in effect a scattering, is known as nuqwekuil and is personified; he is the patron of a kusiut named Qiete. For the ceremony of this man's dance a huge circular cage containing wooden birds is constructed. By means of a regular maze of hidden strings they are made to "fly," to the extreme amusement of the uninitiated. This is one of the most complicated kusiut rites. Contrary to the usual practice, no eagle down is used for fear that it might settle on the strings and betray their existence to the spectators.

THE DANCE OF DARKNESS AND SLEEP

The patron of this dance is a being who has the power of bringing nightfall, and later, sleep. In accordance with his double function, a dual personality is attributed to him. In fact, he is almost two beings; as Sunqlominit, "Darkness," he causes night to come once every twenty-four hours, whereupon as Sniłoma, he brings sleep. His kusiut protégé displays on ceremonial figures with black painted masks, representing both phases of his patron.

THE DANCE OF THE WHIRLWIND

Whirlwinds, though of rare occurrence in British Columbia, are known to the Bella Coola who believe that they are caused by the being Swaltiarmanem. Like all supernatural creatures,

Whirlwind usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a kusiut who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary.

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the group of Snivia. This being is patron for certain kulusiut and whenever a tremor occurs, his protégés call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is identical with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The theme of the song is of the manner in which Snivia performs his function of holding the world. A call from Snivia may also come in the normal manner to one of his protégés during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Snivia is patron to a kusiut named Allhalkulais.

THE DANCE OF TIDE-MEASURER

The height to which the tides shall rise is decided by a male supernatural being, Mustlato sum, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a kusiut named Tsil, whose repository is near Sälia. One of Tsil's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used at the dance describe how Tide-Measurer uses a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of nuluzum the uninitiated are told to go to their houses but, by peering round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the ocean, and thrust down to the bottom a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BULL-HEAD

Since any supernatural being can act as patron to kusiut dancers, and since all mammals and birds are, in a sense, super-

*575 natural, any of them can act in this capacity, though it is *796 usually added that the animal in question is the one resident 776 in the land above. One patron of this type is the ordinary 825 river bull-head. It is said that long ago this fish wanted to [778] follow his friends, the salmon, to the ocean, but was persuaded to remain in the river to act as nurse to their children in his house, the river bottom. Early in the world's history he objected to people exposing his dwelling, that is, pulling up the [821] stones from the river-bed where he was wont to lie, and showed [224] his resentment by sending a very cold wind. Ever since that time boys are not allowed to fish for bull-heads in winter. As far as could be learnt, this dance has no special features.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL HERRING-HEAD

One of the supernatural beings living in the land above who is patron for a certain kusiut is the head of a female herring.
Little is known of this being, even her appearance is subject to [532] doubt. For the nuhcum of her protégé, a number of masks representing herring, as well as human-like beings, are prepared. When the uninitiated are present, one of the disguised figures calls to his fellows to bring their nets and capture the fish.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL DOG SALMON

Another fish dwelling in the land above is Dukdukāwas, the supernatural dog salmon. He is patron of some kusiut but the ritual of the dance, known as ornāwanais, was not obtained.
The similarity between Dukdukāwas and Dukdukāwsem, those who await Nuākpsum, appears merely to be an accidental re-[192] semblance in terminology, dependent upon a stem meaning "to come," or "coming." The significance of this in connection with the supernatural dog salmon could not be ascertained.

*575
*796 776
184
[755]

THE DANCE OF Almoqhaikila

In Kimsquit it is believed that Ano'likwelsais has a hus-776 band, Almoqhaikila, who is patron for several kusiut dancers.
His function is to restore to life any uninitiated who chance to 575*

776*
776
184
[766]
[532]

mounds upon a repository and are swallow down by his wife. Like a shaman, he does this by blowing violently upon the back of the victim's neck and calling out, hoip. From constant repetition his mouth has become large and round. When displayed on nalaxam, the mask representing Atmaqhulala is painted black and has bulging, blown-out cheeks, and a round protruding mouth as if in the act of blowing. Neither the dance nor belief in this figure appear to occur in Bella Coola itself.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BARK-PEELER

In the land above there lives a supernatural woman who spends all her time in pounding cedar-bark such as is used, either dyed or undyed, for ceremonial objects of different kinds. Her name is Spiqhtnum di Xwalhala and she is patron for various hakaiat. On the nalaxam of her Kimsquit prodigie, she appears as a masked figure engaged in her usual occupation and makes a circuit of the house while a salmon is displayed. The relationship between this being and the salmon is problematical, and it is uncertain whether or not the same rite is practised in Bella Coola.

[532]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL AWAKENER

575*
776*
776
[532]

Every morning in Nuxqulwaiste the woman Spaiqhaynamde-a goes around waking up the supernatural beings. She is patron for several hakiat dancers. On the nalaxam of her prodigi, a masked figure representing the Awakener goes to every house in the village and pounds on the doors, but does not enter, to the relief of the uninitiated who have sought refuge within the bed-rooms.

THE DANCE OF DAWN

Not only must the supernatural beings be aroused in the morning, but every day the Sun himself must be requested to appear; this is done by the beings known as Xemaxmtnum, who are patrons for several hakaiat. On nalaxam they appear and Ana'Skwalnair explains to the uninitiated who they are and 424 Qwaiwaite-i moved to and fro among the chiefs as they were busying themselves in preparations for hunting, and knew so herself the spirit of every one of the party. As they pushed off from the shore, she put them on a board which she set down behind them. It vanished in the free rapids, increasing the various spirits, and presently the canoes were upset and their occupants all drowned. The six orphans continued to live at Sinaa where they intermarried with the poor people and in time the village increased in population and fully equalled in old importance.

[821]

This myth has many points of resemblance with those described in vol. I, chap. xv. Each of the six orphans, and especially Qwaiwaite-i, received the boon of supernatural good fortune, but the powers given to the five took the form of a tsaxiet prerogative. The names so received are either in use at the present time or have but recently become dormant. Nanin was used by the father's brother of the woman who related the story; Zong was belongs to her son, a boy about eight years old; Nanow is the property of another youth, related to the family; nanw has been lent to a friend, subject to recall at any time, and Qwaiwaite-i is used by a girl relative about twenty years of age. Each of these has the prerogative of carrying out the dance given to their ancestor at Sinaa, long ago.

ORIGIN MYTH OF THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CARPENTERS[90]

In the beginning Alpaxim went down to a point on the upper reaches of the Clearwater four brothers, Nimlumbsis, Wainaum, Alpaxim, and Sisi-k-tsis with several sisters whose names have been forgotten. They thought they were the first to reach this earth but presently, to their sorrow, saw Tidzumbis, a man who had preceded them, and the women cried bitterly in their mortification. Alpaxim had given Nimlumbsis shamanistic power which he now used as he rubbed his hands over his sisters' faces to carry away their tears.

"Become fog," he said, as he held the palms of his tear-stained hands towards the land of the Ta-ga-al people.

[221] That is why there are thick fogs in the vicinity of Alert Bay to the present day.

Nimlumbsis and his relatives moved a short distance down the valley [115] [90]Related by Susanhoot Annie.

533*

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], everywhere, [illegible] of	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

(a) The first four parts of this song were recorded on song [illegible] in the National Museum of Canada images, Jim Pilbeck. It is said to have been composed [illegible] in a chief whose son had been drowned. It was later sung for a wedding of [illegible], and will henceforth be employed only by members of that family. [424]

(b) Then to: Why has my son died?

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of such substrings.

(d) Referring to the dead son.

(e) Then to: The supernatural being, the chief, has taken him. The witness to the deceased's close friend, a mimetic [illegible] device is sung.

(f) The ancestor of the deceased said one of the four corners of the world. He came from to Kwam Lake.

(g) Pakanskie is said to have existed, or even to have made, the principal river of Kwam Lake. [778]

(h) Pakanskie came to the form of a raven.

(i) Referring to Qamam.

(j) It was impossible to obtain translations of these two substrings. Qamam, the dead, will be irremovably connected with the woman of his first ancestor.

(k) Meaning Kwam.

(l) The mother of Qamam who had died several years earlier.

(m) The theme now changes as if Qam were addressing Qamam.

(n) Referring to Qamam.

(o) Refers to the supernatural beings who cause the sun and moon and thus create their light to shine on earth. Mention is made of them in Qamam's origin myth. [776] [821]

(p) The theme changes again from direct address to Qamam to a description of what he will be doing owing to his ancestral heritage.

(q) Then to: He will be in the form of one of the guardians of light when his life departs, or a mythical patriarch, in Kwam Lake.

(r) Then to: Then was when Wanko brought. Wanko, another of Qamam's first ancestors, could not find a suitable place to settle in the beginning of [illegible] After fruitless wandering, a whale emerged, vomited violently, and was changed to stone. The animal then became a Green Island, and its vomit the rugged rocks on the coast. Wanko settled on that island. [773] [823]

(s) This song has three chief parts.

(t) Then to: The four people, with their shamans-like powers, had just appeared.

(u) Referring to [illegible], another of Qamam's first ancestors, who also [illegible] to earth on Kwam Lake.

(v) At that time the ocean between different settlements had not been a dis-[illegible].

(w) More specifically, the ocean, long known [illegible].

(x) [illegible] used a supernatural canoe which frequently changed to magic [illegible]. [773]

(y) Refers to Sea-Lion Island where he and his descendants used to hunt.

(z) Refers to the Sulu Rule; several of Qamam's relatives had married members of that tribe.

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA DeGarmeia NEA

#583
756

(a) Recorded as song VII D 45b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) That is: The supernatural one held me in his carefully cupped hands. The shaman is recorded as if the shaman were speaking and describing the way he was carried away to some far-off spot for treatment.

Fragment of a Song Used by Ähuriyamm, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Ähuriyämmähuhlikly Laughed	sisyamsisyu sqᵂulx Sisqᵂ(b)	dimsqwisimulin when they(c) heard	dilhaclaulai my rite as shamans(d).

[remainder omitted]

Kaimyhwin
See how wrinkled I am(e).

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 43a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Lame Charlie.

(b) That is: The sky laughed. Shamans often use grandiloquent expressions such as this.

(c) Refers to supernatural beings in general.

(d) It is not known how this woman received her power except that it was from a salmon.

(e) The singer entered fully into the spirit of this song, and ended his singing by calling out these words and chattering his teeth as shamans are wont to do.

Fragment of a Song Used by Kuziyat, a Bella Coola Woman(a)

Sunwskila The sun(b),	Sunwskila the sun,	dimänxlwdai is our father	ooooi (c)!

The rest of this song has been forgotten(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

[821]
[776]
[788]

(b) This is the sun's name as chief.

(c) The meaning of this word is unknown. When the song was sung, the people used to follow the shaman to the river and throw water over themselves four times, accompanied by the crying out of this word.

(d) It seems highly probable that incoherent songs such as this were commonly used by shamans. Kuziyat herself is supposed to have derived her power from Thlaplitsw-a, but no explanation could be learnt for the rite of washing.

The most fragmentary of all shaman songs are those used by snäxom.. Although the last survivor of this type of visionary died many years ago, all the older Bella Coola state

Fourth Song Used for Sneldi'ku, a Bella Coola Pungas Dancer(s) 533*

A Dzemkhqumqumqumqum	yau wihaxtalhai	ainqumkuimachiach
Has now recovered	the hactat woman(d),	when they(c) expand mamilhamichich

the heavy burden(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Tlaxiqa xilhamichiche	dimachiach wmalmalmai	dithlqiwmqumqumlai
There is light on the edge(e),	looks down	the much revered

mihlmhichichai
Moon(f).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Wachilhalai xqulmaix	dilhachiwmwmwmch	dachqumkuimx ailchai
They(g) become frightened	of that hactat(h)	whenever he displays

dzqqulmqumlaix his blackened face(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10, National Museum of Canada, 1911, Pat'ic Charlie, Reuben Schooner, and Steamboat Annie. This song, composed by Nelmelmwmqum, was used during the hactat season of 1923-4.

(d) That is: The hactat woman, the dancer, has now recovered. The implication is that she was grievously stricken when the power first came, before she knew what was expected of her.

(e) Referring to the supernatural beings.

(f) Referring to the Pungas.

(e) Referring to the edge of Sang'ai".

(f) That is: The much revered Moon looks down. The Moon is one of the dancer's patrons and the song asserts that he looked down on her when he heard that she was in trouble. "Much revered" refers to the attitude with which she regards her patron. [776]

(g) Referring to all hahaiai, human as well as supernatural.

(h) Referring to Moon.

(i) That is: Whenever he blackens his face. At an eclipse the face of the moon is said to become blackened, and the song implies that this is done deliberately by Moon in order to perform a hactat dance. [776] [821]

Song Used for Saiyaai, a Kimsquit Mystery(a) Dancer(b)

A Sinichimtsawit	yaihmtsatalhm	alikspelimtsap'
Stand firm and be brave,	mortals(c),	when you guess(d)

Ilkhalai'mmilai its place of concealment(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

(a) This is addressed to the ministered, one of whom has passed recently.
(b) The assumption is that this has been done with the aid of Snaqnaxnaxum.
(c) Referring to the supernatural beings above.
(d) That is: To arise for supernatural dancing any.
(e) The reference is to Sisi'ulaxlu Hayamum, the dancer's power. The meaning of the whole passage is obscure but seems to be as follows: Sisi'ulaxlu Hayamum was perturbed at the coming of the call to his protégé and, to help then follow, the other supernatural beings called upon Sisiwanx to dance. This sound has a healing effect and would, therefore, enable human beings to arise the sooner. The phraseology is consciously obscure.

Song Used for Willie Jakeman(a), a Bella Coola Thunder Dancer(b)

A [illegible] I have just heard	[illegible] (the) coming down,	[illegible] it changes its voice

[illegible]
above our heads(c).

[illegible]

B [illegible] They sound plainly	[illegible] the Sisiwanx(d)	[illegible] to lead the funeral hearing of sicks(f)

[illegible]
at the gathering of the supernatural beings in the lead above.

[illegible]

C [illegible] Too many to be seen	[illegible] are those called(g);	[illegible] when they increased

[illegible]
the water(h).

(a) The Bella Coola name of the dancer was unfortunately omitted.
(b) Recorded as song VII D 57, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, encourager and prompter, assisted by Tsi'a Charlie and Steamboat Annie. This song was composed for, and used during the Sisiwanx season of 1923-4.
(c) Referring to the call.
(d) It is doubtful whether this statement is more than a rhetorical device to impress the ministered.
(e) Referring to Thunder.
(f) Thunder, one of the most powerful of the supernatural Sisiwanx, has the prerogative of leading the orchestra of sick hosters to "cure" a fellow-dancer. The song states that his fellows requested him to perform this function.
(g) That is: So many are in attendance that they cannot be recognized. The reference is to Thunder's dance in the lead above, for which the supernatural Sisiwanx assemble from all directions.
(h) The allusion is to the rain which follows Thunder's dance.

Song Used for [illegible], a Bella Coola Thunder(a) Dancer(b)

*599 A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]

I cannot tell whence comes what(c) I have, I cannot tell where it is, there is nothing but fog above, I am to wonder(d).

[WOMAN'S SONG]

B [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]

The hands of everyone helped Tsilcmas(e) in the wonderful works he was doing for himself; all wanted him to do the same for them(f).

[WOMAN'S SONG]

C [illegible] In moving again | [illegible] the fire-holder(g), | [illegible] it is being shaken by [illegible]

Thunder (h).

[776] (a) Hamats has two patrons, Thunder and Tsilcmas. During the winter of 1923-4 he was initiated into the hamat society as a Thunder dancer, in the following
*575 song, reference is made to both his patrons, but he would have to be introduced *796 once more, with a second name, before he could dance with respect to Tsilcmas.

(b) Recorded on song VII D 11, National Museum of Canada; quarter, Reuben Johnson, leader, Jim Pollard, announcer and grunter, assisted by Tal'a Charlie and Sneadquat Acum. This song, composed by Tal'a Charlie, was used during the hamat season of 1923-4.

(c) Referring to the call.

(d) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

(e) One of the dancer's patrons.

(f) It was impossible to obtain an individual translation for each of these subdivisions.

[776] (g) That is: The fire-holder is moving again. The reference is to the article
● [821] shaken by Thunder which causes lightning. In dances, this is shown as a hollow
*575 cycle containing smouldering cedar-bark of which fragments are scattered in all *796 directions.

(h) The dancer's second patron.

Fragment of a Song Used for [illegible], a Bella Coola Ghost Dancer(a)

A [illegible] | [illegible]

Why is there no name(b)? | Each(c) speaks proudly of himself(d);

[illegible] they use as house posts(e) | [illegible] their chin-bones.

[WOMAN'S SONG]

The rest of this song has been forgotten.

[illegible]

B [illegible]
I was not good enough(a) | [illegible]
where come to me, | [illegible]
my parents, 593*

[illegible]
I said him so.

[illegible]

C [illegible]
He was passed outside his house(b) | [illegible]
within sight | [illegible]
where blackened his face

[illegible]
Shem(f).

(a) This song, composed by Rosiku Sakonam, was sung during the burial season of 1923-4.

(b) It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these three subdivisions.

(c) The reference is to the soil. The meaning of this whole first part is highly problematical, the references are conventionally obscure to impress the uninitiated.

(d) That is: I did not have sufficient goods to distribute for a ceremony.

(e) The theme here changes from a description of the dancer's experiences to an account of his parent's actions to the land shem.

(f) That is: When Shem, the dancer's parents, blackened his face, we was passed over within sight of his house. As uninitiated are forbidden to pass in front of a dwelling in which a burial dance is taking place, an supernatural beings avoid the vicinity of Shem's house where he is performing. The blackening of the face refers to an eclipse, but has no added significance since it is an introduction of a dance. [996] [784] [821]

As already described (II, p. 119), the Otter dance differs from 593* most burial rites and the songs are likewise peculiar. They do not vary from year to year and the following example, used [575] during the season of 1913-4, contains many points of an unusual [796] nature, not even understood by the participants themselves.
It has only two parts, each with a different tune, and the per- [535] former carried out her rite by dancing in two distinct ways.
In the first part, she raised and lowered her fore-arms as is customary, but followed this with a smoothing motion, as if she were levelling upturned earth. The significance of this seems to have been forgotten entirely.

Song Used for Kaudaw-i, a Female Kimquit Otter Dancer(a)

A Shiawahqudu | yau dsiiyanyaudu | sawitqalitsaudu
It has always been so, | is(b) has no shame(c), | all see it

2:Mellwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

533*
177

A Song in Mixed Carrier(a)-Bella Coola(b)

cohawaw-i	cohawaw-i	[illegible]	[illegible]
cohawaw-i(c),	cohawaw-i,	?(d)	?

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
?	?	?

nafuna	cohawaw-i
the very hairy pudenda	cohawaw-i(e).

(a) It is uncertain whether this song was derived from the Carrier or the Chilkotin.

(b) Recorded as song VII D 10b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) The anthropomorphized supernatural cold wind, resident in the upper Bella Coola. The old trail from the interior passed through the valley and the word must have been familiar to the Indians of the interior.

[776
821]

(d) The words marked with queries are all in Carrier (or Chilkotin).

(e) This third part of the song is called forth loudly, not sung, and always gives rise to laughter. It means: cohawaw-i has hairy pudenda, a reference to the luxuriant growth of bushes and grass in the valley where she is localized.

A Carrier Song(a)

This song is said to have been used at some ceremonial at Ulkatcho, in the Carrier country. The rite is spoken of as a potlatch, although the Bella Coola state that it differed entirely from one of their own potlatches, and that every guest brought his own song. The words are:

atlt	tsawala
Knife,	none at all.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

The Bella Coola have no idea of the meaning of this song.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

1 534

"Cut him in pieces," she said, "as you would with salmon preparatory to smoking."

Mink was in the canoe and heard her injunction. He willed that the captain should steer a course near the shore, and when the canoe was rounding a point he jumped overboard and succeeded in reaching the land, where he sought refuge. The raiders chased him on shore so hotly that Mink was finally forced to hide in a small hole under the rocks, but on entering it he took with him some shell-fish. One of the pursuers, seeing the hole, thrust his spear down into it, but Mink smeared on this the entrails of the shell-fish. When the raiders saw the gore on the spear they concluded they had killed him and went off.

As soon as his enemies had gone away, Mink sneaked out and grabbed the old woman by the back of the neck, yelling in her ear:

"What did you call out to the raiders?"

"I told them to take good care of you," she replied, "that you were like a son to me."

"Did you indeed?" said Mink, who had heard perfectly what she said.

First he bit off her legs, then chewed to pieces the rest of her body, shredding it into scraps which he threw into the water, telling them to become crabs.

This is the origin of crabs.

THE FIRE

About three generations after the first people had come to this earth, Mink went up to Nasmāt·a and asked Ālqumtsm to lend him his robe, so that he might take his place as sun. The request was granted, but, once [821] given control of the sun, Mink guided the canoe-like luminary so close to earth that the rivers and oceans boiled, and it was only in the glaciers that the people were able to exist. At Kimsquit a man and his dog were turned to stone; it is said that they can still be seen in this form.[24]

Animals as well as men suffered from Mink's wickedness. Grizzly Bear's coat was singed to its present rusty colour; Weasel tried to hide himself but failed to draw in the end of his tail which was burnt black, a mark still carried by all his descendants; Clam closed his shell for protection and so was blackened only at its orifice; all the other creatures suffered in various ways.

---

[171] [24] A similar belief is said to be shared by the Cowichan people of Vancouver Island. About 1900, a considerable amount of charred wood was found four feet beneath the surface of the ground, on the mountain west of the Nechetsconnay River. The Bella Coola consider this to be proof of the disaster.

2;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

replaced it with stones. Finally they put the feet back into their original position and fastened down the lid. Before leaving, they put some morsels of meat on the teeth of Jay, who was lying with his mouth open. 539*

When the fire had died down, Jay awoke and said to his anus:

"Jay, I think the food must be ready. The fire has burnt low."

He went to the pot and grasped one leg, which came away easily; then did the same with several birds.

"Yes," he said, "the legs come away easily; the food must be ready."

But when he lifted the cover he found nothing but stones. Great was his surprise, especially since there was a taste of food in his mouth. Thoughtfully he picked his teeth.

"I must have had a meal after all," he said.

Then he felt his stomach.

"No, I can't have eaten."

Again as he picked his teeth his perplexity increased.

"I must have eaten," he muttered.

But his empty stomach drove him to the conclusion that he had not.

Deciding that his anus must have played a practical joke on him, he determined to punish it severely. He built a blazing fire, then turned his back to it and began to toast his rump. Alas! As the culprit suffered, so did Jay himself.

When he could bear the pain no longer he fled.

HERRING AND OLACHEN

Long ago, Herring had a small dorsal fin near his tail, as do olachen, trout, and salmon at the present time. At that period Olachen had no fin, but on his head a large mass of unruly hair which defied his efforts to brush it. The two agreed to trade, Olachen giving some of his grease for Herring's fin. That is why, today, Herring has no fin on his back, as Olachen has, and why the head alone of the former is greasy.

THE DEFEAT OF COLD WIND

Soon after the first people had come down to this earth, while they were still semi-human, many were killed by Cold Wind, who destroyed all the berries and green things, so that both men and animals were in dire straits for food. A meeting was held at which it was unanimously decided to attack Cold Wind, an enormous black-skinned man, living far to the north. A war-party set out but though some members of it penetrated nearly to his house, they were driven back by the severe cold. 539* 821

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539
●821

On their return they asked Halibut for his help, and he agreed to join a second expedition. This set off, many thousands strong, all the men and all the animals. Warned by previous experience, they wore heavy clothing, but in spite of it, many of them froze to death as they drew near Cold Wind's house. Those that finally reached it saw their enemy lying on his back and blowing a cold current from his anus. The young and brave men rushed in and pinioned their enemy on his back before he was aware of their approach. Halibut took up his position outside the door.

"What do you mean by killing mortals?" he said. "I am going to kill you for your evil deeds."

Cold Wind suddenly exerted his strength, threw off the puny men who were trying to hold him down, and rushed out of his house. But he did not notice Halibut, who was lying down just outside, and stepped on him, so that, slipping, he fell with a crash. This time everyone seized him so securely that he could not escape.

A general cry was raised, "Kill him quickly!"

"Please don't do that," said Cold Wind. "I will promise to blow for only one month in the year."

"No! No! Let us kill him immediately," cried his captors.

"I'll blow only for twenty days," offered Cold Wind.

"No! He must be killed," said the warriors. "We don't want to talk."

Cold Wind, terrified, offered in succession to blow for only ten days, four days, two days, and one day, but each proposal was greeted with howls for his instant death. At last when Cold Wind offered to blow gently in the mornings of one month, his captors agreed to release him.

That is why tsinindzwi, the cold wind of the early morning, blows in March.

THE DEFEAT OF COLD WIND
(Second Version)

Long, long ago there was no summer and nothing grew in the land. All living creatures suffered from the perpetual ice, so they decided to attack Cold Wind who was responsible for this state of affairs. A raiding party set out, comprising all the plants, all the mammals, all the fish, all the birds, and all the men. They travelled to the north, where the cold grew so intense that the party suffered severely from it. Near Cold Wind's house, Halibut spoke to his comrades:

"I can deal with him more easily than anyone else. When he comes out of his house, make a noise to distract his attention, while I wriggle on my back towards him, to trip him up."

This plan was agreed upon. When they reached their destination, Cold Wind came running down a ladder from his house to send more frost

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and cold to destroy the reckless creatures who had dared to oppose him. While he was climbing down, the attackers called out, attracting his attention, so that Halibut was able to wriggle, unobserved, to a place at the bottom of the ladder. As Cold Wind trpd upon him, Halibut moved, and his antagonist fell to the ground. He was seized by his enemies before he could rise to release more cold. 539* 821●

"What have you against me?" he asked them. "I visit you only twelve months in the year."

"That is too often," his captors replied, as they stretched him out on the ground to kill him.

"If you spare me I will visit you for nine months only," Cold Wind made offer.

Again he was told that was too much, and he must be killed. Cold Wind, terrified, proposed coming for shorter and shorter periods, six months, four months, two months, and finally for a single month, but each offer was refused, and followed by threats of instant death. At length the captors accepted his agreement to come only in the early morning.

That is why, to this day, the cold wind comes only in the early morning.

Smmq Stories

538
776

Of the supernatural animals which the Bella Coola believe inhabit the wild glens and mountains of British Columbia, that which figures most prominently in their mythology is the smmq. There are four slightly different varieties of this monster. The most common is regarded as being about the size of a large grizzly bear, but with long front legs and short hind ones, on which it can run in upright position when it so desires. Its legs terminate in large talons resembling those of an eagle, with the thumb set opposite to the fingers; its pelt, long and fleecy, is of a grayish-blue colour. The monster is able to roll its eye-balls completely over, and, when the reverse side is exposed, there shoot forth dazzling beams of light which strike senseless anyone on whom they fall. It uses its eyes for hunting. The most peculiar feature of the smmq, however, is that it carries on its back a basket provided with spikes inclined inwards and downwards at such an angle that any living creature thrust within is unable to escape. The basket

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

on her, until, when she was just before him, she threw down the whetstone; it became a massive stone rampart entirely hiding her. 534*

She continued her journey and presently came to a house, through a crack in the wall of which she saw a man. It was Ăpunstm, but she was not aware of this. He sensed her presence and greeted the girl:

"I have known for some time that you would come, for you have fled from your home in trouble. I have been waiting for you, you shall be my wife. Don't be afraid; come in."

The girl slowly entered though almost driven back by the great heat. Ăpunstm rubbed his hands over her face and at once she ceased to feel it. The two sat down and had supper together very happily. Presently Stump appeared.

"Have you seen my wife?" he roared through the doorway.

"Perhaps this is she," replied Ăpunstm. "Come in and see."

Stump's head was so big that he could not get through the door, but, by craning his neck, he could see that it was his lost wife inside, and he called out that she was there. Ăpunstm wrapped his blankets around himself and went to the door, then suddenly threw them open, whereupon the heat was so great that Stump's branching head caught fire. He was consumed entirely, not even ashes were left.

The girl lived happily with Ăpunstm, soon giving birth to a son. The infant grew with such remarkable speed that when he was the size and had the appearance of a child of three, he had the intelligence of a man. Realizing that his mother was lonely and sometimes wished to see her parents, he told his father of this; Ăpunstm was grateful for the suggestion.

"Don't fret," he said to his wife. "Your mother is not far away."

The woman looked down and saw her home as if it were just beneath her feet.

"If you want to visit your mother," continued her husband, "you can do so on my eye-lashes."

By "eye-lashes" he meant the beams of the sun on which the thoughts of mortals penetrate to Ăpunstm. [821]

Next morning the woman took her child, descended on Ăpunstm's eye-lashes and soon landed at the door of her father's house. Her mother was weeping, as indeed she had done incessantly since the loss of her daughter. The girl did not enter at once, but rapped with a stick on the wall near where her mother was sitting. The woman thought that someone was being mischievous and sent a little girl of six to investigate.

"It is my sister, with a baby," she called out as she came running back.

"Don't lie to me," the mother answered. "It is impossible, your sister has been dead for more than a year."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 into a mist which so utterly blinded and confused Lake-Swallower that he was forced to abandon the pursuit. Without further difficulty the four sisters reached home, where they were received with great rejoicing, especially when their friends heard of the dangers through which they had passed.

THE SUN'S CAPTOR

*539 821 Long, long ago, a woman was sitting on the ground with her back to the sun, who noticed her. He came down and rubbed his hand over her back, causing her to become pregnant, then went back to his station above. The child grew so rapidly that the woman bore a son before the usual period had elapsed. This little boy grew with phenomenal rapidity. One day he asked his mother if he might go up to see his father, and when she consented, he built a long ladder up which he climbed until he reached the land above. When the sun drew near, his son spoke to him, saying that his mother had allowed him to come up to see him, and suggesting that he bring her on a later visit. The father agreed and the boy descended to his mother on earth.

A few days later, when the lad and his mother climbed above, the sun disregarded them entirely, and continued his course without seeming to be aware of their presence. Angry at his father's callousness, the lad asked his mother to give him a pubic hair with which to make a noose to catch the sun.

"Don't be silly," she answered. "The great heat will burn it."

Her son persisted until she finally gave him a single hair from between her legs. This he rolled into a rope with a noose at the end, and hung it from a stick in the course of his father. When the sun came along he was fairly caught in the noose. Thus restrained, he could no longer shine on the earth; the people were filled with wonder, though they were rather thankful, as heretofore there had been perpetual summer.

"It is your son who has caught you," said the boy to his captive father. "You thought yourself too strong. The people down below do not want you to shine all the time; if I release you, you must hide yourself at regular intervals."

The sun agreed to do this. Then the lad untied the noose and the captive went off in his wonted path. To regulate his father's movements, [823] and to ensure his remaining at a safe distance during the winter, the lad raised high mountains at Kimsquit, Ulkatcho, and Leguc, which still limit the sun's course.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*
821

THE SUN'S CHILD

Very long ago there lived at Stuix a chief whose daughter, Copper, was a source of perpetual worry to him. The girl was restless and disobedient, always wandering off by herself and being on too friendly terms with men. At last the father, losing his patience, told Copper to go her own way, that he would have nothing more to do with her. She wandered about, aimlessly, from place to place until she came to a road leading up to a large house within which was a man; it was the dwelling of the supreme deity, but the girl did not know this. Älquntäm asked her to come in, surprised her by calling her by name, and talked to her about the trouble she had had with her father. In this way Copper discovered the identity of her host. She stayed with him that night, and in the morning he told her to go home.

"How?" she asked.

"On the power of my eye," replied Älquntäm.

With that he opened a hole in the side of his house and sent her sliding down to her father's upon one of his eye-lashes, a sunbeam. Though Copper had spent but a single night with Älquntäm, it was equivalent to a year upon the earth and in that time she had conceived, passed through the period of pregnancy and given birth to a male child of whom Älquntäm was the father. Copper carried the infant with her on returning to her own home, outside of which she waited until a younger sister chanced to see her. The little girl rushed to her mother saying:

"Copper has come back!"

The old woman did not believe her and was angry. When another of Copper's sisters had confirmed the news, the mother believed it and was glad. Copper told them to spread clean sand on the floor for herself and her child, then, removing a board from the roof, she entered the house from above.

As time went on Copper's son throve and grew big enough to play with other little boys. But he had inherited from his father some of the heat-giving power of the sun so that he burnt his playmates who were naturally angry and showed their resentment by calling him a bastard. Mortified at this insult, the child told his mother, who instructed him to prepare a bow and a large number of arrows. When he had done so, she told him to shoot upwards. His first arrow went so high it stuck in the floor of *Song*w' itself. He sent up arrow after arrow and each lodged at the base of its predecessor, until a ladder was formed to the land above. Up this the boy climbed, each arrow falling to the ground as soon as he had transferred his weight to the one immediately above. On reaching the upper regions, the lad proceeded to the house of his father and told *539 him how unhappy he was, because people on earth called him a bastard.

"Never mind, my son," said Ālqunitām. "Presently, I will let you do ●821 my work and then you will be more powerful than anyone on earth."

Next morning the father sent the lad off to act as sun, giving him the usual supply of heat. But the boy was so angry with the people on earth that he increased this supply, hoping to burn up the whole of them. Seeing some children at play, he swooped down to slay them; it became so hot that water boiled in the lakes and rivers and the whole race of mankind was roasted to death. Most of the animals escaped by hiding in bur-[825] rows, but not the black bear, who at that time had a white coat. It was burnt black and has remained that colour ever since, while the grizzly was scorched to his present rustiness. The deer and the weasel failed to hide their tails, both of which were burnt; that is why each has a black tip to this day.

Ālqunitām, angry at his son for killing everybody, restored all to life, [825] and broke the malicious child into countless pieces which he threw down to earth in the form of mosquitoes.

Catastrophic Stories

538 Disasters which occurred in the distant past provide themes for stories of a non-ceremonial nature.

THE FAMINE

*539 Kā'kān·a was a Kimsquit man who made a practice of watching the sun; from its movements he was able to foretell the solstices and other coming events. One winter, long ago, the sun, instead of stopping at its usual place, continued far beyond its proper course. Kā'kān·a was much worried and prophesied strange changes, with famine; he called on the young men to weep, but instead they merely laughed at him. Next summer, when there was plenty of fish, berries, and other foods, the people jeered at the prophet. For four years there was the same plentiful hunting and collecting, but in the fifth came a great change. It failed to become warm in April; the berries flowered, but the constant cold wind prevented their fruit from ripening. Few fish entered the river, and even they could not be caught because the water remained so clear. The same conditions prevailed for four years until the people were starving; their only food was porcupine and mountain goat, with a few trout caught on hook and line. About this time a Kimsquit man, Tsaislil, went goat-hunting behind his village, and one night after setting his snares, lay down in a cave. He could not sleep, and presently heard the

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 [426] akwukum: Excess of amount returned over that previously received as an investment present.

Aiamkikla: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Aiklano: 1—Supernatural beings who drone as the sun moves.
2—Voice of the supernatural woman, Snitsmân·a; the term is occasionally applied to the being herself. The sound is produced by kusiut whistles.

Aimâlotla: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Aimalua: "The Coming of Foul Weather," in the language of supernatural beings: The phenomenon is semi-anthropomorphized.

Aimâ·ti: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2—Ancient chief from whom the village is supposedly named.

Aiqualamlain: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.

[821] Aiqwaiust: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the moon at eclipses.

Ailamka: 1—One of the first women to settle at Tal·ia in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of an ustmq chief mentioned in an ancient story.

Aiutla: 1—One of the designations of Kâmai·ti, the mysterious supernatural woman.
2—Ferocious, awe-inspiring, adjective.

[526] akaixyu: Swing consisting of two long ropes with cross-seat.

[824] akpadultsix: Spruce leaves.

Akumtci: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

alipotnam: Lehal.

Alkalalis: 1—One of the first men to settle at Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwlst in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Aimâ·ti in the beginning of time.

alodjalos: Stake supporting olachen net.

[796] alusxpiamm: Ritual repeated at intervals between the allotment of tasks for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being to the first nusak initiate.

alw", plural, walk"ati: Herald.

Alokanam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

[533] alus: Third part of song.

'alos: Pleasure expedition of boys and girls to the forest.

[517] Ælus: Name of an isolated star.

[821] Alqotlos: Supernatural man-eater, patron of Cannibals.

Alqualos: Stick decorated with abalone-shell used by one of the settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.

Ælqwulus: Supernatural female berry-picker resident in the land of the dead.

alpoia: Announcer.

Alukwlaksi·ti: Bay of the Thousand Islands near Namu.

Alushnain: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

alwotla: Cannibal.

[587] alwualam: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife; the word is undoubtedly connected with the verb, to bequeath.

Ælskwis: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.

Ajala: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Ice.

Alalali: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.

[425] [553] [584] alal·tlem: The transference of a name, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Ālka: [illegible] village.

Ālkwsyā, "He of the Tied-up Penis": Name given to a lad whose sex was disguised in infancy.

[426] ālkhmandyt: Refusal to lend to an outsider a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dancers.

[574] ālkuqulsnam: Meal served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.

Ālkuiyuxum: Name of a female shaman.

Ālkwi, "The Opening of the Sky":
1—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuie in the beginning of time.
3—Name of a Snuiletet chief.

Ālkhalāxlsix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ālkhmothosix: One of the first men to settle at Slokāt in the beginning of time.

[575] ālimusnam: Sisest having the ability to enter the back-room and treat initiates concealed there. The function probably antedates the employment of hai-shkila.

Ālliqaios: Holders, supernatural beings who restrain supernatural Cannibals.

[583] ālliexnm: Frenzied beating of sticks.

Ālmomnom: Wife of Tualalin, the supernatural hunter.

Ālmnskitnm: Supernatural calendrical experts.

Ālmoqhaikila: Husband of Ano'likmelsix; he is known only in Kimsquit.

[575] ālmutsāmk: Kusiut dance of mystery.

[574] ālnaiwutsnm: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony.

ālnaiwutsmmap: Call used by heralds when summoning to a mourning ceremony.

[425] [583] ālnāramlsix: The "Dragging Across" of a name, crest, or other intangible prerogative from wife to husband either at marriage or later at a repurchasing of the wife.

ālnāsnm: To drag a heavy burden.

[262] ālnexlew-ēn: Cranberries mixed with olachen grease.

ālnuxsim: Visit to his repository by a kusiut initiate.

[821] Ālnunsdimut, "Facing Both Ways": Second moon after the winter solstice.

ālolipsnmy, "The Actionless Time": Hushed assemblage of the kukusiut after departure of a Cannibal.

[597] ālonkiokem: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.

Ālpalpulsix: 1—Supernatural being who revives mortals.
2—Name received by a shaman from this being.

ālps: Food.

[425] ālpsnm, "Food Supplies": The term applied to the giving of the use of land at marriage.

Ālqālsul, "Stockaded": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

[756] ālqtnēs: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in alternate strands.

[882] ālqusik: Guarded, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence.

[825] Ālqusiyen-a: Supernatural name of olachen, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time.

Ālqaqē'djut, "A Glance Downwards": Name given to an Ālqālsul man in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Ăxyaū: Locality near Stuax where berries are plentiful.
A'yaoq: Chief living at Tăl-io in the beginning of time.

A

am'hl'a: One of the a'alt dances.
ana: I, first person singular.
[262] 'ar: Herring eggs when brought into house ready for preparation as food.[1] bakat': Supernatural animal.

B

Balăk': One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ba-pka: To guess, as done by the uninitiated at a Mystery dance.
Băxăxquaiwa or Băxăxquanăkwa: Kwakiutl supernatural being.
[825] bikĕ': Lamprey.
Bilkwa: Kaxiut name of a Sălis man.
bkwa'i: Abalone-shell.
Bkwaaka: Influential Kwatna woman who died about 1870.
[292] bqat: Ball-topped hat worn by chiefs.
[622] Bla-qwa: A Kimsquit composer.
Ba'astom: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
bafa: Supernatural, man-like creature.

D

[821] [772] dă xang'''da or xang''': The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
Dakdak-alaia: 1—"The Comet," synonym for Noakymm.
2—The kaxiut prerogative of seeing Noakymm.
Dakdakan, "The Ever-Comer": Synonym for Noakymm.
Dakdakăxmatm: Supernatural being who awaits Noakymm.
Dakdakănwa: Supernatural dog salmon resident in the land above.
[601] di kakamata di emta: Niece's husband.
di kakamata tri aakam: Aunt's husband.
Diqam'aat: One of the first men to settle at Ăłqălaxl in the beginning of time.
dirtia: Archaic term for kaxiut Breaker.[2] [824] dadik: Frayed cedar-wood, as used for tinder.
[372] djatlakai, plural, djaldjalakam: Son; term used in direct address for an adult.
Djaka: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Djĭ Sinăxitl, "The Slave Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kamai-to.
[101] Djaldama: Collective term applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking peoples of the mainland.
Djadja-sa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Dadaang''': Chief of abalone-shell people on the lower Fraser in the beginning of time.
Dadaang''': One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Dadaipax: One of the first women to settle at Tăl-io in the beginning of time.

[1] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.
[2] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 istutmap, "Come and eat": Invitation to the kukusiut to assemble in a performer's house.
isulta: House beams.
isut·sta: Messenger bearing invitation to a potlatch.
[752] iclikstas: Massage.
[585] [431] iiskalemjk: 1—Presents, regarded as clothing, etc., given by the groom's relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter visit his house on the wedding day.
2—Other presents given by the husband's relatives to the wife's kinsmen prior to her repurchase.
[583] iixwaxdjut, "The Throwing Off of a Heavy Burden from the Shoulders": Said of the repayment by a wife's relatives of presents received from her husband's kinsmen. itxwoltsta: 1—Battering-ram.
2—The destruction of the house of a chief who is about to give a potlatch.
Ixlıotlam: One of the names of the supreme god.
[201] iqlhmaxtom: Notification, by pressure on the foot, to a chief to go to the meeting-place.
[533] ixlxanm: The employment of frenzied stick-beating.
Ixpcmam: Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm.
ixstcätcpämmus, "The Hearing": Synonym for släätmam, q.v.; this is a Kimsquit term only.
i·xtimul: Kusiotem rite in which the performer appears to be burnt to death.
i·gwatmam: The casting of kusiut masks on the fire.
Ixwnk, "Far from the River": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
[847] ixwotl: Abortion.
i·xwsila, "Disappointed": said of the supernatural beings called by a ulä dancer who arrive too late for the potlatch.

ilkas: Slave from the lower Fraser owned in Kimsquit during the last century.
[101] ilqwlänmy: Bella Coola term for the Bella Bella.
[601] ilqwlastnälostmax: Half-brother or half-sister.
imlk: 1—Man.
2—Son; term used by old person in direct address to adult.
3—Husband.
[614] imlkästa: Male relative of same ancestral family.
imlklima: Woman who performs man's work.
[601] imlkyästa: Single brother in a family with several sisters.
[431] immlki, plural, immlkoksi: Small boy, especially son; term used in indirect address.
[584] iqlalik", "Working Clothes": Presents given by the relatives of the future bride to the kinsmen of the future bridegroom at the first announcement of the engagement. The implication is that they will have to labour industriously to obtain the wealth necessary for the marriage.
[821] iminäxul: Cold wind of the mornings, semi-anthropomorphized.
istoity: Bella Bella term for the istämy.
[563] istämy: Bella Coola term for the people of mixed Bella Bella-Kimsquit stock who inhabited the shores of Dean Channel.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

uxsist, "The Time for Kusiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] uyuyuyut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ālqālaxl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
uhululāk: One of the supernatural carpenters.
ulsāmāmmimm: The repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] uaiak': Synonym for spuxdjut, a present for which a return is not expected. [431] uāxmxdjut: Hereditary tendency.
ugem: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [827] uxiux: Red rock cod. The difference between this and llakwlk is problematical.
unlālam: One of the first men to settle at Lomqo·ts in the beginning of time. [825] upliwatem'xiamet·al·at': The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage. [583] upu·abālawadjutlaix: Sterile supernatural visitation.
uxkuta: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up. [787]
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position. [556] uxāthuhq, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
uxuwan·i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
uxlokwaladjut: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
uxlqotlamsqwandjinas: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
uxnukwalxaix, "The Track of the Sun": A'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
uxnutlxāmlaix: Supernatural name of sisiutl.
uxqunsām, "Commander": 1—Said to be the word from which Ālqunsām is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
uxlikwasaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smooan in the beginning of time.
uxwappāsdjut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
uxwal·a: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
uxwimxāla: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
ux·wunaisa: 1—One of the first men to settle at Lomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
uxyālyotxaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smooan in the beginning of time.
uxyokam, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Snulxli and Tāl·io.

K

kai: 1—Snow. [821]
2—Unidentified berry. [824]
Kaiusdiās: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kakamitl: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
kakās: Crow. [825]
Kakothn: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

ł̄aliaxsa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
ł̄ahaml: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Stuax story of the beginning of time.
ł̄allaliamdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Smuiali in the beginning of time.
ł̄aloxmālla: Smaoan's son in the beginning of time.
łalax-i: Small portable canoe.
łalstam: Desertion of a spouse. [586] ł̄axormai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.
łahmmakywao: Imitation potlatch carried out by nusāxkamy.
ł̄aknus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.
ł̄ilixwnimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Smaoan for his son in the beginning of time.
łima: To loot.
ł̄ixłiskłka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.
łixwnimut: Person of placid disposition.
łłłła: Bull-roarer.
łłt: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, łm, is supposedly derived from this. [556]
łm: Potlatch.
łmkmitl: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.
ł̄mołim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821] ł̄mołis di Nusāxkamy, "The Potlatch of the nusāxkamy": Second moon after winter solstice. [805] ł̄hamkila, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nukils in the beginning of time.
łkłwādjut: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756] łkumkstła: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.
łmłnkmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556] łmanzimtim: The turning over of a mountain.
łe'yo: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
łqomkstła: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
łqła: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [765]
'łhmdimut: Cannibal kusiut name used by the first settlers at Sałła in the beginning of time. [302] łłiqwam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher.
łuklai: Aversion.
łukwala: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsmoil man.
2—Shamanistic power.
łullulmut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787] łulqwan-i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.
łulukwahmm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Tłitsaplilax-a, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nixokàsta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [424]

Nixpi: Expert supernatural dancer; to his associates he is a yearling mountain goat.

nmnly or nmnlyàmut: First complete dance given by a kusiut initiate.

nmmmk: Mammal, any kind. [825]

Nniwanaix: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

Nsàkila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuisli in the beginning of time.

Nsàkymm: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nsamàsnaik: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Siskiut in the beginning of time.

nsàkista: Kusiut prerogative as a Breaker; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

nslyàkta: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kimsquit, kusiut masks are hung.

nsmmk: The making and use of hand nets for olachen.

Nsmodjamàsem: 1—"The Adviser": One of the names of the supreme god. [622]
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; virtually, "The Sages."

ns'ansàlim: 1—Ceremony at which nsook names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796]

ns'ondjut: Assemblage of the kukusiut to practise difficult rites.

Ns'ipma, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Tlsiyàkam name given to a deserting wife.

Nsnakila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nsmkilàlam: Sentence of death passed by the kukusiut on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [688]

nsnàyas: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [426]

Nsàlàsmm: Synonym for Nsàkymm, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Ns'aos, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nsàpàsàla: Toilet-hole.

nsasàs: Birth.

Nsàlcàpas: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [821]

nsàsà-as: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead. [769]

nsàsà-as du àmsta: 1—High tide. [823]
2—Long life.

nsàjàpsta: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold olachen-net post steady while being driven.

Ns'ansàj, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nsàk": 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing through head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nsàkàmàlsaix: Synonym for Sximsximàlt, an immoral supernatural woman.

nsàsàl: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nsàsàmàlsàxsàm: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the kusiut season. [535]

Nsàsàsa: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nuuuinxpnam: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ans'lkwulnais and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer.

[787] nuuulliuts: Omen of death.

Nuuutnumkmem, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tlitsqilaia's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuuuxmlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Xemsqua's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuuxpim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuuxmuxp: Kusiut name assumed by a Sisaa woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuuyaxum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qalaxum is obscure.

Nu'uxwuhumnais, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nuhtsziklem: Synonym for hituxum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuphanlikin, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqa-axts: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqtalim-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymsts, "Place of Much Qaymsts": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqsqamis: Nuxwal name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqiliqsilw-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuqmuxm-il ua xsnq"als: One year.

[828] nuqem: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqpik, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuqsdjut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuqsly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqsliqin: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqwaxts: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiutas and other important kusiut rites.

[777] nuq"antsikim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwihmlaix: Sisaa name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwilax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqwilik: The upper heaven.

nuqwna: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwuliqlstn-i: A Sisaa repository.

Nustlqantmsts, "Where Alqantem Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nustmqw-nay: Cottonwood buds.

Nustqmia'sts, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smooan in the beginning of time.

nustlkmp: Canoe-maker.

Nustlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqsalt.

[535] [869] nustskmp: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiutl: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saixnäs: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] sälälsi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173]
sä·lhälhmm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal. [257]
sä·lpsta: Cannibalistic incubus.
sä·lpstmm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sälliskädimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] sälukwälas: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
säml: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sänoltsmuhlts Älquntäm: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sänunusmmlaix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sänutlkm or Sänutlkmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusqalst as chief.
Sänuximäxots, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sätix; vocative, sätki; vocative plural, sätixwa·ks: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sä·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sätlia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sätlyenuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sä·lma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] sälolts: Whetstone, archaic.
Sä·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River. [412]
2—Village near the mouth of the river.
Sä·tskamy: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley. [101]
sätskwal·a: Raft.
Sä·tsmnän·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sewa: Pillow. [573]
sewadjut, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sexi, vocative, sexinso: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Sexinso: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
säxkam: Bracken. [824] säxwänos: Tide flats. [823]
sakdjulk: Heart.
Sahwalsam: That part of *Sonx*ᵐ which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Samhsil: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Samsiutän·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
samsamlkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mista, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sankwalsäm: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sinupetl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximätl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Stuax repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio'mstä: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] siḥälyälosuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death.

siḥkim: Regular beatings given to a male child. [861]

Siqälyam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnäm: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626]

siqwsek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage. [425]

sisasts: Departure to a new locality.

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother. [601]

sisut: Paddle.

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Siłhmsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778]

siut, vocative, siaot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."
2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large ssaok whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutmkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnälos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·os, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldäunx chief living in the last century.

sixdiktam: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Sigman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsän·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsixḥutnam: Synonym for Mulakila, the supernatural being connected with ssaok rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, änänuskx, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwoḥäxkmuk: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

sixwoot: Unmarried mother. [848]

siyeutla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sieatla may be connected with this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
sipa: Supernatural good luck.
[821] nkuots: Fog.
[825] nkn': Pack-rat.
nlk: Mind or mentality.
[828] nlqan: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
nlxstrâltua: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.
Sillslan-i: One of the first women to settle at Sattis in the beginning of time.
nmd: Mountain.
[825] nmlt or nmltats: Salmon, generic form.
nmqmnikdus: (Probably) viscera of an animal, arcbalc.
Smstutaâks: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[173] nmma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.
Smtus: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] Snk'hnam: Bella Coola chief.
[828] Snqlominit: Darkness, anthropomorphized. nnqus: Anger.
nnx: Sun.
Snxâkila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Alqâlxl in the beginning of time.
Snxâlotla: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—A'alk name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Susok name of a Kimsquit man.
Snxan-a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] nnxkt: Mucus.
Snxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
nqwlaitk: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] nsaok: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
nsiutl: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
Snnxakila: Shaman's name of a Snxl woman.
nskiek': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Thlexâplilan-a to the one favoured.
[601] nskam: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] nsmmlts: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] nsqo-si: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] nspnk': Western dock (plant).
[824] nsxwnawalp: Snowberry.
nxnqaitus: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[825] nxmmsta, "Food Supply": Synonym for sol'alam, ancestral hunting-ground.
skalk': Porcupine.
[824] skal-uts: Black huckleberry.
[821] skâlutslaix: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[765] skwanat: 1—Memorial potlatch.
2—Mourning song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Skwanat-ên-a, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

skwanattnkaxaix: Professional kaxiat prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Snitmdz-a during kaxiatem dances.

skwatsta: Name.

Skwo-ll: Kaxiat name of a Bella Coola woman.

[824] Sla-hl: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

slaa: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] slakpl'i: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

slakt: Many, adjective.

[554] slazmidjut, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla-: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] slali: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden loops and spears.

[578] slamz, vocative, slamzshais: Grandchild; the vocative indicates endearment.

slawaxix: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

sli-x: Gall bladder.

slqstsa: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a nasal whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mitlakila.

slsl': Olachen grease.

Slsalxwaily: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[778] 2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphized being responsible for power in this locality.

Slihm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

slkmsta: The voice.

[824] slkuul: Dried elderberries.

slskwala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Coola woman.

[821] slslym: Eclipse.

slwaxmlkw': 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.
[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist kaxiat or nasal dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaistkila: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaislatla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaiss-a: 1—Synonym for Slsalxwaily, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smgiusta: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smamtskauly: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smaoan, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smaoark: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

smdzung, vocative, smdz-ing: Friends.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

smt-ti: A place of petrified power, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered incapable of moving. [778] smtl ts stwatsis, "Petrified Name": Designation brought from above in the beginning of time.

sm-ki: 1—Mussel. [825]
2—Freshwater mussel.

smarmanals: One of the thrushes.

smastmatis: An animal, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.

Smbhit: Xstu-tu-i man mentioned in an ancient story.

smtnil': 1—Gum.
2—Name of son made by Raven in the beginning of time.

smtq: Slave.

Smqhhtlis: One of the first men to settle at Satlis in the beginning of time.

smtqom: Visionary receiving power direct from the supreme god.

smtmdmqs: Worm or larva living under the ocean.

Smtsilkwu-a: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.

Smtsis: Supernatural being who holds earth in position.

Smtsmts-a: Supernatural woman who restores those who suffer misfortune in the performance of kusiut rites.

Smtsla'lhs: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Tal-is in the beginning of time.

smtsq: 1—Mythical monster.
2—Man living at Kimsquit in early times.

smtsqas di smq'"dal: Posts of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices. [821] smtsqas ne smdlis: Variety of smtsq living above tree line.

Smtqmlmhsits: Stealer of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a potlatch by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being. [828]

Sno-ahhlts: Island south-west of Bella Bella.

Sno'ainds: Ainstow: Deer son of the supreme god.

Sno'anqmdy, "On the Point": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Snqmhqs: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

sno'aiyous: Ceremonial collar of hemlock-bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Nimqplitsw-a. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.

snqlsa'ol: Unidentified berry. [824] snskilmals: Top used by one of the sons of the supreme god.

Snskilmals: Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to curl up and come to him.

snskimtq: Part of house behind fire.

snskhlsis: Unidentified plant. [824]

snsklkumi: Piece of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a landslide.

Snskwmimatik: Chief of supernatural singers who accompany Nestkymm.

snskwmlit: Twin.

Snslqulqlis: 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in Kmsqus's house.

Snsnus-lma: Locality containing repository of name received from Death.

: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
WEA Ballacoola WEA

Snuqā·q': Affluent of the middle Bella Coola.
Snuqualx: Kimsquit woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Snuqnaxnālt: 1—Copper Raven that perched on house of first settlers at Alqālxl in the beginning of time.
2—Name given to the Raven design used by the first settlers at Stax in the beginning of time.
snusaiks: Skeleton. The word is obviously a derivative of saiks.
Snunlkālt: 1—"The Wise One": One of the more important supernatural beings.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsmoil man.
Snunmkālt: Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqālxl, probably a supernatural designation.
Snunmlkānk': Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqālxl, probably a supernatural designation.
[374] Snusikalts, Cold: A supernatural being.
Snuslaxwal, "The Mystery of Alquntām": The place where the supreme god puts what he wishes to conceal, such as the correct solution of the Mystery dance. The concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
snusp: Generic name for several supernatural animals.
snuspindjēn-a: Right front corner of a house on entering.
Snutari: Pronunciation of Snubli by a man with idiosyncratic r usage.
Snubli, "Place of Dog Salmon": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
[765] snutālnlin, "A Shoring Up": Term used to describe the functions of mourning songs.
Snultānāl, "Box": 1—One of the first women to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—Box in Xmayaw's house.
3—Name of a Tāl-io man derived from the last.
Snulle·tl, "Place of No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Snuthmx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Snutqomikaista: Point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
[821] snutsālatst: Race of dwarfs, presumably mythical.
Snulxiarwanxm: Whirlwind, anthropomorphized.
[778] Snulxltāls: Generic term for four supernatural, eagle-like creatures.
Snumāl: Place on South Bentinck Arm where curative power is localized.
snupaxlāmut, "Bring Light": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the lower Bella Coola valley.
snupar·ātk: One who seeks embers.
Snunmuthmān-a: One of the first women to settle at Tāl-io in the beginning of time.
Snurwualāl: Name of first settlers at Alqālxl in the beginning of time.
Snuyaulikuan-a: Rivers Inlet name used by a Bella Coola kusiut woman.
[484] sālis: Food carried for consumption on a journey; the term is also applied to the provender brought from above by the first people in the beginning of time.
sal'ākm: Hunting-ground owned by an ancestral family.
Som: Woman mentioned in a song.
sang'": see dā sonx'" dā.
Sonwaāk: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuātax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Sonwan-a: One of the first women to settle at Nuātax in the beginning of time.
[431] sonwadjat: Synonym for synomāj, the preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Sonq'mai: Kusiut name of a Stuie man.
Sopus: Kusiut name of a Tsimoil man.
sopoiazum: Scalp.
sopualskt': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot. [824]
Spaixpaxumsta: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spanhalhsaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
spaniusta: Temporary camping-place.
Spatcahlt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spalkl: Star.
sphahm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581] spepandeuts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] sphkphkmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
sphkta: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Sphkplinaw-i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spl'xnunsta: Island west of Namu. spka: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smmq with female organs. [824]
spsnhkua: Unidentified berry. [821] S'ks', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Spskunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Sempo-ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
sphs: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
spuqy: Oachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down. [431]
spuxdjut, "Eagle Down-nose": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected.
spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825]
Spuxpunhalsix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nuxpalt in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxyd'mpdimut: Sisaak name of Xusais origin.
Spuxpuxsta: Sisaak name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqal-a: Unidentified berry. [824] squalt: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqalpts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqall: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqalst or sqalmut: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nuxpalt. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
sqama: 1—Chest. [103]*
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Sqamk: Land of Ashes.
sqmauts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] sqnlz: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Sqatrch: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [823] sqoaz: Flood.

3: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[824] sqedilp: Cedar roots.
sqeil: Sling.
[578] sqeilqelem: To use a sling.
sqili: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
[821] sqimmas: Fleecy cloud.
sqiola: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary [412] food.
sqma: Wooden comb.
S'qa's'i: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Sqami.
sqo: Umbilical hernia.
[601] sqolxmas: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
sqoltlsdjat: Long phallus.
Sqomall: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sqosa: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
sqosalq: Food distributed for carrying away as sqosa.
[415] sqoli: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
sqpmexa: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
[431] sqtelp: Maple.
[824] squm: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
squpaitl: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
squal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
squakem: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] squalxwakem: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
[825] squal-ann: Large, unidentified bird.
Squlakua: Heat: A supernatural being.
[374] Squli: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[825] sqwo'nn: Loon.
stai-tl: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of [262] preventing hunger.
Stalqakum, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks": Ka'ik name obtained in the beginning of time.
statkmy; plural, statakmy; vocative plural, statakmy:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalzul in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Sunal in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smaoan for a grandson.
5—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] stan: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] standakiam: Bat.
standiwat: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation [601] older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
stantamants: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] stauk: Whetstone.
Staats: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Step': Mountain near Tal-ia.
stepam, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
stamants: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] stals: Cranberry.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[825] Sulukzl: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
susla-ā'tskwa-kwa: One of the river sculpins.
susuhumls: To gather cedar-bark.
Sximāna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sutal: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sulkulta, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutshmy: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Suxwlk: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swaāks: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swaky: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swalxumdimut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swalsta: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swa'xwa: Mud.
swaiāx: Person or object which is taboo.
Swaiaxwax: Evil supernatural being.
Sgaialxwa, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon.
swāksmem gdi mānx: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
sgāksta: Sorcerer's box.
Sxa-lutxmān-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sgān: Female lover, especially a paramour.
sgāxwa: Male lover.
Sgaga-il: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sgem: The bursting forth of light.
[785] swetsta: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] swetstadjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
swetstanai: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sgak: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sgakādjutān-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
swim: Cedar-bark cord.
Sximāna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swimsximuk: Immoral supernatural woman.
gx'ā': Afterbirth.
Sgiyutān-a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sgants: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
2—Man who performs woman's work.
[761] smamānats hāt': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sak'lāt, South Wind: A supernatural being.
Sklāl, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sula-ā': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
salamuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Tlaxamymil: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.
[825] tlekundlitil: Sardine.
Tlikmaxotakka, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water ouzel.
tlikmuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.
[825] tlima: Mountain goat sinew.
Ttisla: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nusqalst, when in human form at the beginning of time.
Ttitcaplilan·a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.
[825] tixin: Sea-lion.
Thmstadimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.
[821] tlok': 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.
[825] tloklx: Virulent skin disease.
tlopan·i: Cormorant.
Tlojo·il, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Tlopets, "Maligner" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.
tlpa: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.
[823] tlpanap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kusiut dances.
tlpapalam: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.
[415] tlulai·: Water-tight basket.
[824] tmiax: Water-washed stump with scoured, radiating roots.
Tniqo: Region on the upper Kitlobe River.
[482] tnixotl: Tump-line.
toba: Navel.
[825] Tokunkl: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.
toka: Mink.
tomidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.
[583] top·a: Synonym for tsamamamum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.
[825] topiwac: 1—Fawn.
2—Nustakamy name of a Kimsquit woman.
[821] Tpiksta: Star in the Great Bear.
tqanq: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.
Tqwantlos, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Tabio.
[291] tsaikotl: Hat with flat top and broad brim.
tsaix: Stonecrop.
Tsaintitl: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsa·kmai: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.
Tsalits: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsal: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Tsaulmem: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
tsetl: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.
[825] tsian: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Wat·a: Xixais woman living in the beginning of time.
wals: Dog. [825]
wawnit: Dog, archaic.
wa·xsia: Cape of yellow cedar-bark. [291] waxwaxtsia: Brother or sister of grandparent.
Wiakai: One of the first women to settle at Snuloli in the beginning of time. [601] Wiaqaii: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Wikwan·ekwla: Synonym for Kwla: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusqalst chief.
Wikwanutl: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
wina, wcatiw, winao: War-party.
Winās: Slave living at Nusqalst several generations ago.
winās di qulx, "War-Party of the Ocean," or winās di sā·ildjo·ts, "War-Party of the Tides": Supernatural being.
Winwina: Supernatural being who captured birds and fish for the benefit of mankind.
Winwinamak: Supernatural being, perhaps identified with one of the warm winds.
winxta: Assistance rendered by the inhabitants of a town to a neighbouring settlement being attacked. [628] [726] Wipitpawakas: Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
Wiumkilak: Smaoan's daughter-in-law in the beginning of time.
Wi'itlao: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Wilulks: Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.
Wixat: Man who travelled to the Skeena River in the beginning of time.
Wixon: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
wl·a: Kusiut dance in which the nine supernatural siblings are summoned to earth.
Wlq: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Wlx: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
wlq: Cripple.

X

Xaiāqalstl: Ancestral name of a Tāl·io man.
Xaiqts: Stream entering the Bella Coola from the north near Nuiltux. [821] Xai·utl: Continuous North Wind, anthropomorphized.
xak'loi·: Cry raised as each of the first spring salmon is brought ashore. [226] Xalaiya: Step-daughter of Raven in the beginning of time.
xaqants: Great blue heron.
Xāt: Designation of a tribe, probably a branch of the Carriers, dwelling far to the south-east of the Bella Coola. [825] xawaf': Canada goose.
xal·a: Root of qāxmāts, an unidentified plant.
Xekulus: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Xekwatsaw·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xelimai: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.
xem: The successive rising of the sun from day to day. This word, which is common in derivatives, appears usually to be pronounced xem after s. [821] Xemena: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Snuloli in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6/

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Ḷomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtmm: Kusiut name of a Sl̓iskisl man.
Xemxemälotla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Sisaok name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtmm: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqälaxl in the beginning of time.
[533] xe·tla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xedilkos: One of the first men to settle at Qetlnelos in the beginning of time.
Xelässu: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] ǵaxe: Marten.
[412] ǵils: Stone axe.
xlxel: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximoslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
[821] ǵuǵuäs·i, plural, ǵuǵuäsoksi: Little girl.
[517] Xiuǵues: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xixeis: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xiximan·a, "Right Foot": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xiǵis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xxmänoäs: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xläxtmm: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xlänl: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
[586] Xlikwals: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
xlokn·imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
[825] Xmaxots: Locality below Nusḵalst.
ǵmǵmatsl: Minnows.
[601] ǵnes: Woman, or wife in indirect address (Iei ǵneslaix: My wife).
[614] ǵnesäxts: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[423] ǵnesdäm or nuǵnesdäm: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
Xnutli: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
xokst: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xolaxwosem: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] xoldjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[831] Xomtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xomxomqa: Ancestral name of a Stuix man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xonǵotäm: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xoqotlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'ɛlu'sta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole [852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member [556] of the Kū'siūt, when it is given its Kū'siūt name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qē'mtsiœ name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [262] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His [431] friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisau'kɛ secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may corner of the house. He prevents those who are not initiated in the secrets of the kn'siut from approaching the house. The Snēnē'iq is a fabulous monster, the peculiarities of which are described in a number of traditions (see pp. 83 ff.). S'anōL.x·muLa'lt (Plate VII, Figs. 12 and 13) is a boy who performs kn'siut dances all the time. When the deities resolve to send a new dance down to our world, it is conveyed by S'anōL.x·muLa'lt. It is the office of another deity to sing, accompanying the kn'siut dances of the gods (Plate VII, Fig. 3). Anuqat'ō'tsEm is a deity in regard to whose functions I have not been able to obtain detailed information. It is said that he intervenes on behalf of man when SEnx and ALk'unta'm threaten to punish him. There are two goddesses in the house who also intervene in favor of man when the principal deities threaten him with death and sickness. Their names are Snitsma'na (Plate VII, Fig. 9) and AiaLila'axa (Plate VII, Figs. 10 and 11). They wake man after sleep. Without their help, nobody could wake from sleep. AiaLila'axa is at the same time the guardian of the moon. Every month she restores the moon to her full size, and she cleans her face after an eclipse. The moon is called A'nL'aLgila (Plate X, Fig. 10). The eclipse is produced by several deities called Aiq'oa'yosnEm, which means "painting the face black" (Plate X, Figs. 4–6). It is believed that at this time the moon performs one of the most sacred ceremonies of the kn'siut, which are thought to be very dangerous to the performer. The black paint with which her face is covered is supposed to be a protection against these dangers. AiaLila'axa cleans off the paint after the dance has been completed. According to Jacobsen,[1] the Indians say that during an eclipse the moon (En-kla-loi'-killa) paints her face black. The same deities are believed to paint and to clean the faces of human kn'siut dancers. Snitsma'na and AiaLila'axa also resuscitate those who are killed by the dangerous performances of the kn'siut. 575 776 575 776 821

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

While the functions of the beings enumerated here are mostly concerned with the kn'siut, others are more immediately concerned with the affairs of the world. Important among these is K·x·ēx·ēk·nē'm (Plate VII, Fig. 5). SEnx is the creator of man, but his work is supplemented by that of the god K·x·ēx·ēk·nē'm. When SEnx creates a new-born child, K·x·ēx·ēk·nē'm gives the child its individual features. Before children are born, the goddess named Nuēx·qEmalsai'x· or Sēmsēmg'ltstas SEnxalā'oLEla places them in a cradle and rocks them. After she ceases rocking them, the children are sent down to our world. She also rocks the young of all animals; and when she stops, SEnx sends them down to our world to be born. At the same time he ordains that their skins and their flesh shall serve for clothing and food for man. Nuēx·qEmalsai'x· might therefore be called the deity 776 842

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 112.

7;Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[776] [842] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is rocking the cradle, she sings, —

[539]

"xoēxxoēsmaix·nimōła nēkō'k·s ła nōēx·ł!ɛ'malsaix· au au au au.
Asyotsētsk'ōx·'ats six·'ixōłayā'mk'tēts'ats sxxmnxmk·'ā'łowasōats ayawa sōyōnxsōats au au au au."

Another deity living in the House of Myths is the mother of flowers, called Nonō'osqa (Plate X, Figs. 7 and 9), the daughter of Snukpa'nłłts. It seems that this last name means "going to the right." This evidently refers to the fact that the Sun is believed to move on his path towards the west, face forward, and consequently during the spring months ascends the sky [821] moving towards the right; so that Snukpa'nłłts, moving to the right, means at the same time the springtime, when the sun is moving up the sky. This is the time when flowers begin to sprout. Every spring Nonō'osqa gives birth to all the plants in the order in which they begin to appear. A shaman is called to her aid by two old women who assist her (Plate X, Figs. 8 and 11).

Every year, at the time of the winter solstice, the deities determine who shall die during the ensuing year. Two beings called Kakēstsai'ōł ōła xmā'noas are placed on the ends of a long plank, which is supported at its centre, and swings like a seesaw. Then all the men and all the animals [761] are called to stand near the ends of the plank. When one of the swinging beings falls down from the plank, the person standing near it will die sooner than the one standing at the opposite end. The deities have a messenger called Nutsxkoa'lsika (that means "long ear"), who carries all the news from our earth up to the House of Myths. Ałk'untā'm has two children, — the deer, who is called Snoō'łexxłts Ałk'untā'm, that is, "the foolish son of Ałk'untā'm" (Plate VII, Fig. 8), and łēxxonix·is Ałk'untā'm. I have not been able to learn any thing in regard to the functions of these two beings.

While Sexx and Ałk'untā'm are principally concerned with the fates of mankind, they do not personally interfere with the doings of man. Their thoughts are carried out by four brothers, who are called collectively Masmasala'nix or Ontsk·ē'mtexxm (Plate VIII, Figs. 1–4). These brothers are Małapa'litsēk· ("the one who finishes his work by chopping once"), Yula'-timot ("the one who finishes his work by rubbing once"), Małapē'exoēk· ("the one who finishes his work by cutting once"), and łł'łłu'lak·. They [772] have a sister called ł'a'qumēiks. These four brothers live in an elevated room in the rear of the House of Myths. They are engaged in carving and painting. It is said that they gave man his arts. They taught him to build canoes, to make boxes, to build houses, and to carve in wood and to suddenly a strong wind began to blow, which rolled them over the prairie until they reached the door of the house. Then suddenly the wind calmed down. They remained sitting on the ground near the doorway; and Qamá'its said, "Watch closely when the post of my house closes its eyes." They were sitting opposite each other, watching the post; and when it closed its eyes, they were transformed into two stones, but they soon regained human shape. Then Qamá'its asked them to enter. Now the woman took the youth's blanket, and gave him another one made of bear-skin set with fringes of red cedar-bark. She told him that this blanket was to keep him warm, and that it would direct his course. Next she fetched some water from the salt-water pond behind her house. She sprinkled it over the faces of her visitors, and told the youth to sing about his experiences in the upper heaven when performing the Cannibal dance. If she had not sprinkled the faces of her visitors with water, they would have died. She said to the youth, "Your country is not far away. Do not be afraid of the dangerous road that you have to pass. Later on there shall be many Cannibals like you. Do not be afraid to touch the food that another Cannibal may offer to you. You are strong because you have seen me." Then Qamá'its sent him back to the lower sky. Here the gods placed him on the back of a bird (Sqᵃxsɪɴ), which carried him down to the sea. As soon as the bird reached the water, it uttered its cry, and at the same time the young man uttered the cry of the Cannibal. The people heard it, and said to one another, "That must be the boy whom we lost some time ago." They connected many canoes by means of planks, and paddled out to the place where the bird was swimming about. They covered the canoes with red cedar-bark and eagle-down, and tried to capture the youth; but when they approached, the bird swam towards the village. They surrounded it with their canoes; but the bird flew up, and disappeared in the sky, and at the same time the youth flew towards the village. When the people landed, he attacked them, taking hold of their arms; and the snake, which was still in his body, tore pieces of flesh out of their arms. The people sang and beat time in order to appease him. 575 773 776

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In a second room in the rear of the House of Myths, next to that of the Cannibal, lives Kōkō'ɪʟxɪɴm, another son of the deities. His room is called Nus'o'lxsta. He initiates the Olx-dancer (see Chap. VI). 776 575

The path of the Sun is guarded by a number of deities. At sunrise is stationed the Bear of Heaven, Snanō's ti Sōnx t'aix (Plate X, Fig. 2). He is described as a fierce warrior, who protects the Sun against the attacks of his enemies, and he is the cause of the warlike spirit of man. His hair is tied up in a knot on top of his head. His mask is used in the sisau'k [772] [821]

776 ceremonial, and sometimes in the kō'siut. The following song belongs to 575 his mask and dance :—

[539] Nancmō'tstxult ti q'ōyaki'mtst'aix·. Nō'noq'ēxum ts'ɛn t'ayōɛlat'aix· ayati snanō's ti sōnx· t'aix·, wā, nān, ai!

("Cry now, as though you had left me! I shall tie up my hair, warriors, like the Bear of Heaven.")

776 At sunset stands an enormous post which is called Nutēexoa'axtatas ti 821 Sōnx· t'aix·. It supports the sky, and prevents the Sun from falling down into the lower world. The trail of the Sun is described as a bridge which was built by Masmasala'nix. The bridge is as broad as the distance between the winter solstice and the summer solstice. The Sun walks, his face turned towards the west. In summer he walks on the right-hand side of the bridge, in winter on the left-hand side of the bridge, which explains the varying heights of the sun in the course of the year. The extreme right and extreme left of the bridge are called Sē'ɛmt ("the place where he sits down," that is, the solstices). At each of these points a being is placed who is called Atk·x·ē'tɛnɛm (Plate X, Fig. 3). It is their duty to see that the Sun does not tarry too long at the solstice. If in summer or winter he should be inclined to stay too long or to return too soon, they regulate his course. When the Sun tarries too long at the winter solstice, the people say, "ēx tsēs pa'nia" ("salmon will be dried late this year"). If he leaves it without tarrying, they say, "ēk·!x· tsēs pa'nia" ("soon we shall dry salmon"). Three guardians named Naqumiqa'otsaix (Plate X, Fig. 1) accompany the Sun on his course, dancing around him all the time. The halo is called Itwu'xtsia ti Mānt t'aix· ("the cape of our father"). A sun-[731] dog that appears westward from the Sun is called Atqōt ti Mānt t'aix· ("the [753] painted face of our father"). The Bella Coola believe that when it drops down to our earth, it causes epidemics. During an eclipse the Sun is believed to lose his torch. The rays of the Sun are his eyelashes.

There are twenty-four guardians appointed to take care of the sky. They are called Nexolak·ai'x·. According to tradition, the sky must be continually fed with firewood. Once upon a time they put too much firewood into the sky and made it burst. All the pieces except one, called S'atwalō'sɛm, fell down to our earth. The fragments hit the faces of the twenty-four guardians, and distorted them. They tried to mend the sky, but did not know how to do it. They went down the river, and came to Masmasala'nix, whose assistance they asked. Masmasala'nix gathered up the broken pieces, and glued them together. Up to that time the Sun had staid in the east, but now he began to go on his daily course. At that time Masmasala'nix built the bridge over which the Sun travels every day. He placed a wedge in the opening of the sky, into which the Nexolak·ai'x·

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'awa'umsta, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Masmasalá'nix spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following kū'siut song refers to these deities: — 776 821 [539]

Aï'mats tā mnatsaï' tō·xts ti sō'nx·tsg·i t'aix.
Aiēɪ.x tā mnatsaï' ōɪ. ti S'aɪ.walō·sɛɪns ti Sōnx· t'aix.
Sk·a ya'lx·tox ti sī'lxnō tā mnatsaï.
Sk·a anōg·a wa ɛxɛmē·x ti K'awa'umstask· ti Sōnx· t'aix· tā mnatsaï.

("My child perished like the sky when it broke
Go to S'aɪ.walō·sɛm of the sky, my child!
Gladden my heart, my child!
Sit down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'nēkō'ōɪ. or Qɛnk·i'lst, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Aɪ.ēp!alaxtnaix·. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Snēnikʷpstak·imtōɪ.s," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [753]

In the ocean lives a being called Sēɪ.sāts, who twice every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the kū'siut ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (kōɪ.kʷɪ.ōlɛ'mx·). It is called Asiuta'nɛm. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [787]

Smaya'na, that is considered a human being. It is said that his children make the canoe go up Bella Coola River with the rising tide, A'nxamk·ila. The canoe travels the distance from the mouth of the river to the mountain Smaya'na in a single tide. The canoe "Nō'ak·nem" stays for four months. Then the canoe "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns from the country of the Salmon, while "Nō'ak·nem" leaves again. It is said that all the gods of the House of Myths come to the villages of the Bella Coola in the canoe "Nō'ak·nem." 773 [776]

The arrival and the departure of these canoes are strictly regulated according to the calendar of the Bella Coola, which for this reason should be explained in connection with their beliefs. The Bella Coola divide the year into two parts, which are separated by the winter and summer solstices. The solstices are periods of indefinite length, between which five months are counted. Each solstice is reckoned, therefore, as approximately six weeks. The names of the months are as follows: — 773 805 821

Sēr·mt (winter solstice)	Sēr·mt (summer solstice)
Sxōlē·mx·ēnem	Sī·uxum
[illegible]	Sevevc·mut
Siaq'n·m	Sinulā·lsemtēnem
Siqiō·lx·	Tsi·sitak·ā·ms tsēan Anaōlikuts'ai·x·
Sinō·moak·	lēmulē·m

The canoe "Nō'ak·nem" arrives, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" leaves, in the month Sinulā'lsemtēnem. The canoe "Nō'ak·nem" leaves, and "Kunkunu'qtstuls" returns, in the month Sxōlē'mx·ēnem.

At the moment when the canoe "Nō'ak·nem" arrives, a deity called Anaōlikuts'ai'x· (Plate XII, Figs. 1 and 2), who is believed to live in a cave, opens the door of her abode. There is one deity of this name to each village. Her cave is called Nuskēsiō'tsta. It is said that one Anaōlikuts'ai'x· lives on the mountain Sqtsi. Her house is described as a large hollow bowlder suspended from the top of the mountain by means of a rope. Each Anaōlikuts'ai'x· has an older sister who is called Nutsē'xēnem. When the canoe "Nō'ak·nem" appears, and she opens her door, she steps outside and stands in front of her house, dancing, with trembling hands. When a person sees her, he faints. His soul is taken into her house, and is initiated into the secrets of the kō'siut. 773 776 [575]

A particular Nuskēsiō'tsta is believed to be at the foot of the creek Anō'nk·, on the northern side of North Bentinck Arm, near the mouth of Bella Coola River. A woman called Nustsxoaxlō'stxnil lives there. She is described as emaciated, of black skin, and as wearing a black blanket. A certain chief who lived long ago was the first to see her. He was initiated by her, and after his return he performed a dance, and told what he had seen. Then he died.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They had hit a stone, and their points were broken. He staid there some time, and when it was nearly dark he returned home. Before he reached his house, he cut his own belly and took out some of the fat from his intestines. He cut it in five pieces, and replaced his intestines. He put the fat into his quiver. When he reached his house, he hung the quiver up outside, and entered. He imitated everything the Lynx had done. When it grew dark, he told his wife to fetch his quiver. She brought it, and he told her to open it and to feed his children. She took the fat out, placed it on a stick, and put it near the fire; and as soon as it grew warm, the Raven cried, "Tttt! Don't put it so near the fire. I feel sick when you do so." He jumped up, took hold of the fat, and put it back in his belly. The Lynx said, "Formerly I fed your children, but you were the first not to treat me properly. You did not give any food to my children." Then the Lynx took some fat, and flung one piece to each of the Raven's children. He cut some meat and gave it to them also. Then the Raven said, "I will give you one of my children, that it may grow up in company with yours." 539 776

It is said that the former spirit Toa'lai,[1] it was killed at one time by an Indian who took his place. This tale is recorded in Chap. IV. It belongs to the tribe of the village Nusxé'q!. A similar tradition is told of Astas,[1] by which name the Carriers call the Raven, their principal culture hero. Many traditions referring to Astas are common to the Carriers, the Bella Coola, and the Awi'k-'ênôx of Rivers Inlet. 773 776 [171]

The Bella Coola believe that a being called K^{u}tsôs is the father of all mountain-goats. When a hunter meets him, he thinks he sees a kid. Then he should close his eyes and open them again. If the animal is K^{u}tsôs, it will appear in its real shape as a buck of enormous size. The hunter should then ascend the mountain. If he should descend, he would fall and die. 776 825

The thunder-storm is produced by the Thunder-bird, who lives on the mountains, in the company of a number of spirits, who are considered his particular friends. The Thunder-bird himself is represented by a black mask with red nostrils. The nose is strongly curved, the forehead bulges forward, and the chin protrudes almost as far forward as the nose (Plate XI, Fig. 1). His herald is called Ai.xula'tgnum (Plate XI, Fig. 2). His face is painted with orange and blue stripes, and he carries a speaker's staff, which is painted with spirals of the same color. He watches the door of the Thunder-bird's house. In his house live the Rabbit (Plate XI, Fig. 3); the Owl, who is considered the rival of the Thunder-bird (Plate XI, Fig. 4); the Mountain, i.e'qots (Plate XI, Fig. 5); the Raindrop (Plate XI, Fig. 6). 776 [821] [532] [575]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 301.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 . NE6 Bellacoola NE6

174 contradiction is inherent in all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast, 424 they nowhere reach such a degree as among the Bella Coola; and I presume
614 the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

The prayers of the Bella Coola directed to Senx or Ta'sta bear a 171 remarkable resemblance to the prayers of the Tsimshian addressed to Laxha, 782 the sky. In both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather, and man will be happy; consequently the prayer to [821] the deity "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from 177 the Coast tribes is the kn'siut ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism.
575 The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the 773 Kwakiutl are practically identical. I told above (p. 34) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another 796 tradition is told to explain the origin of this custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Baxbakualanuxsi'wae, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret societies were introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by three distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the
174 development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious incon-
773 sistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the word and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not co-ordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. 560 ff.

[113]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

838 woman who dressed as a man and used to hunt successfully,
[171] though she was married. Such practices are said to have been not uncommon among the Haida. The women were considered bold and independent, but the Bella Coola of today know little *[776] about them, and are not even certain that Sgwts is responsible for a female assuming the actions of a male. It will be readily understood that he is not regarded with much awe, nor does he influence their daily lives.

*776 Another supernatural being, uninfluential though resident ● [822] upon earth, is Echo, Setsaläni, "The Voice Repeater." The Bella Coola regard him as a male being, in human form, and recognize his presence whenever sounds reverberate. He figures in mythology, occasionally appears as a masked figure at [575] kusiut or susaok dances, but has neither helped nor harmed human beings for so many generations that he is accordingly neglected.

*776 A supernatural being from whom many Bella Coola have 787 had unpleasant visitations is Sltlmsila, the cause of nightmares.
828 He is a man-like creature with black face and an enormous head which he constantly scratches. His home is in Nusmät·a, but he frequently descends to this world and frightens sleepers. If a person scratches his head while asleep it is because he has just seen Sltlmsila doing so, and if he walks in his sleep it is to escape this supernatural visitor. A sleep-walker is usually aroused by having a bucket of water thrown over him. A [751] person frequently troubled by Sltlmsila can avoid him by painting a black circle around each eye before going to sleep.

*776 With the exception of Älquntäm, the supernatural beings thus far described play little part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They believe in their existence, but do not expect to meet them, and do not believe that they exercise much influence on the course of their daily life. Supernatural beings of this ineffective type are exceptional. A man goes into remote parts of the 781 mountains, or even into little frequented areas around his
*776 village, with mingled fear lest he encounter an actively malicious being, and hope that he may meet a benevolent one. More-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa·qwa·t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmän·a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekiläxt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
[822] sekima siälamkek: River net for salmon.
Setsaläml: Echo.
Sexsexqälaix: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexsexqwalxalaslaix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Thitcäplilän·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Siälxelax: Ancestral name created on earth by a Qomqo·ts man.
Siaqam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[825] sidäxsu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
[805] Sidäkoos di Ano°likwolsaix, "The Coming of Ano°likwolsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siwala: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'iskalitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'itlliukek: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of marriage is broached.
[431] si'iqikm, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Siumt, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Siusml, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sikälamtak, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] siki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and sisook rites.
Sikiliktmm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siqulq, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikwalxwlelax: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikwäldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
Siksum: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
Silias: Celebrated composer.
[226] siltmaq: Salmon-weir.
sinaxgme'ax: Sisook head-dress.
[827] sinimits: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si·nipodjaxstumax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Simpteus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinomwak, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkemitl, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinunukalälum: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
sizs: Supernatural good luck.
[821] nkmoos: Fog.
[825] nkn': Pack-rat.
[828] nlk: Mind or mentality.
nlqsan: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
nlxetlēltus: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.
Sēlilān-i: One of the first women to settle at Sētlis in the beginning of time.
[825] nmd: Mountain.
nmlk or nmlkts: Salmon, generic form.
nmqmnikhs: (Probably) viscera of an animal, archaic.
Sumsiutaaks: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[173] nmsma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.
Sumqus: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] Sunk'lusam: Bella Coola chief.
[828] Sunlqominit: Darkness, anthropomorphized.
nnqus: Anger.
nnx: Sun.
Sunxākila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Alqālāsi in the beginning of time.
Sunxālotla: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—A'alk name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.
Sunxan-a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] nnxkt: Mucus.
Sunxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
nqwlsiak: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] nsook: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
nsiutl: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
Sunxakila: Shaman's name of a Sixsl woman.
nskiek': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tlitāplilān-a to the one favoured.
[601] nskum: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] nsmmuhs: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] nsqe-si: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] nsyunt': Western dock (plant).
[824] nsxwnwnulp: Snowberry.
nxnqelus: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[825] nxsmmsta, "Food Supply": Synonym for sol'ekum, ancestral hunting-ground.
shalk': Porcupine.
[824] shal-uts: Black huckleberry.
[821] skalutsletz: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [823] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the bones of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER II

RELIGION

The Universe—Supernatural Beings—Supernatural Elements in Human Beings—Means of Propitiation

The Universe

ONE of the subjects about which Bella Coola philosophers pondered in former times, and about which definite information has come down to the present generation, is the universe. The young people, who have absorbed a certain amount of education from the white man, are scornful of the beliefs of their fathers, but it was possible to obtain the following information from a few of the older men and women. 772 [177]

They say that the earth is circular and flat, like an island. What it rests upon is problematical, though the assumption is that it is water. The world is kept from capsizing by the supernatural being, Sninia, who lives amid the ice in the far north; he grasps a rope to which the earth is fastened, and he keeps it steady by maintaining a tension on the rope to hold the world against his feet. Long, long ago Sninia was seen by human beings, but in later years no one has penetrated to his distant home and the Bella Coola have little regard for him. It was in the distant past, also, that human beings discovered the earth to be round, after certain semi-supernatural men had made a circuit of it. The four corners of space have not the same importance to the Bella Coola as they have, for example, to the Indians of the Plains. It is only through questioning that the investigator learns that the East is regarded as the top of the world, the South is the sun at its zenith, the West is the bottom, and the North is nothing, merely the opposite to the south. These beliefs play little part in the lives of the people. [776] [823]

Above our earth stretches an inverted dome, its edges resting on those of the world. This dome, the sky, is called

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 the top. He concluded that this must be the home of the woman. Before the door of her house, wherever it may be, there are miniature totem-poles which open their painted mouths and speak in the voice of the animal or bird portrayed. The writer did not hear that her home was in the land above [114] Nusmāt·a, as Boas (p. 28) states. At the present time knowledge of Kāmai·ts is so scanty that failure to confirm the previous observation is not surprising.

One or two passing remarks of elderly informants imply that Kāmai·ts may once have been more important to Bella Coola belief than she is now. One old man, already in his [775] dotage, stated that long ago the dead used to dwell in her house. Another declared that long ago prayers were addressed [782] to her, which is never done now. The word kāmai·ts is commonly used by the Bella Coola in a manner difficult to trans- [192] late. It serves as equivalent for "please" or "thank you," but has an underlying significance of a supernatural benison or appeal. It is not a word to be used in casual conversation; it is reserved for important occasions or times of emotional stress. The comparative unimportance of Kāmai·ts probably rests on the fact that she belongs merely to the realm of ancient history and has no sociological significance, even as the patron of a kusiut dancer.

772 Another supernatural being so far removed from this world
* 776 that he enters but little into the lives of the Bella Coola, is Sninia. He is the male being whom Alqantām sent down from above in the beginning of time to hold the earth in position, and who has since performed this duty. He lives among the ice of the far north, and has not been seen by mortals for many generations. He holds a rope fastened to the earth; when he is afraid that it has slipped slightly he takes a new grip and pulls the rope taut, pressing the world against the soles of his feet as he sits with legs extended, as a man would do to hold tight a kicking salmon. It is the tightening of the rope which
● [823] causes an earthquake. If Sninia should lose his grip entirely 575 the earth would capsize. He is patron for several kusiut
* 776 dancers.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

cut the organ until one of them brought a salalberry leaf, whereupon the monster, dreading its razor-like edge, withdrew. 539 776 *

The following stories illustrate, better than any description, the attitude of the Bella Coola towards these animals.

Not many years ago a certain Qak'lis was encamped with his wife and child in the Bay of the Thousand Islands, Alnukwlâksv·s, about two miles above Namu, one of the haunts of boqs. He heard a number of the creatures in the forest behind him and seized his gun, at the same time calling out to them to go away. Instead, the breaking of branches and beating upon tree-trunks came nearer. Becoming alarmed, he called out once more: "Go away, or you shall feel my power." They still approached and Qak'lis fired in the direction of the sounds. There followed a wild commotion in the forest, roars, grunts, pounding, and the breaking of branches. The hunter, now thoroughly alarmed, told his wife and child to embark in the canoe while he covered their retreat with his gun. He followed them without molestation, and anchored his craft not far from shore. The boqs could be heard plainly as they rushed to and fro on the beach, but only the vague outlines of their forms were visible in the darkness. Presently, though there was no wind, the canoe began to roll as if in a heavy sea. Qak'lis decided to flee to Restoration Bay, but before he had gone far his paddle struck the bottom, although he was in mid-channel. Looking up, he saw that the mountains were higher than usual; the boqs had, by their supernatural power, raised the whole area so that the water had been almost entirely drained away. They are the only supernatural beings with this power. Qak'lis jumped overboard into water which reached only to his knees, and towed his canoe to Restoration Bay, the boqs following him along the shore.[10] [823]

This is not the only occasion on which boqs have appeared near Restoration Bay. Within the life-time of the father of an informant, a chief set out with some friends from Kwatna, bound for Namu. They travelled overland to Restoration Bay, thence by canoe, making the journey without incident. When returning, they decided to gather clams on the rocky point of the bay. As the craft shot around the tip of the promontory, they saw a boqs gathering shell-fish. The paddlers backed their canoe behind some rocks whence they could [10] One of the features which the Bella Coola consider most surprising about this incident is that he did not tread upon the fish which must have been driven into the shallows. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

men to see these transformed beings habitually, but even now, or at any rate until a few years ago, shamans were able to lift the intervening veil. From accounts given by those who have had such experience, the Bella Coola believe that Ałquntām gave to birds and animals, as well as to humans, the boon of fire, and it is only the unworthiness of men that makes them unable to see the smoke rising from the houses of different creatures. In former times, fortunate hunters were able to do so, and consequently had phenomenal success. The smoke that ascends from the fires of different animals corresponds in colour to that of its owner; a mountain goat's is white, a beaver's, black, a squirrel's, red, a wolf's, gray, and so on. When a goat stamps the earth on a mountain, it rings hollow, as indeed it is to those animals, for their home is within; and when a hunter loses his quarry entirely, it is because the latter has entered its house. Shamans are sometimes able to hear the gatherings of animals under the peaks. Like human beings, they dance to the accompaniment of music, and in all respects behave like them. They have their times of joy and sorrow, of success and failure. When ill they are cured by their own shamans, grizzly bear, sniniq, and wolverine; these three also dance to welcome the dead. All animals and birds are like brothers, able to converse with each other and living harmoniously together in that other part of their life which only shamans have seen. Porcupine is the oldest, and a hunter always tries to kill one before passing to more important prey. The animals know about the actions of human beings and show their aversion to certain habits by refusing to allow themselves to be seen by anyone practising them. For example, they do not like people to drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked, and no hunter would dream of partaking of that food. Bella Coola mythology is full of accounts of human beings who, with supernatural aid, were able to penetrate to the homes of animals. Tales of this type would be unintelligible without understanding the attitude of the people to the animal and bird kingdoms.

776* 825 [756] [773] [823] [756] [224] [784] [224] [773] [538]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and eagles whom he invites to devour it. In so doing, he does not address them by their usual names, but calls Wolf, Ālkn-i-ɣexnim, "The Devourer of Meat Which He Does Not Kill," that is, "The Biting Scavenger"; and Eagle, Asaikaiyuts-maxnim, "The Constant Eater," that is, "The One Who Eats before He Is Hungry." Next morning the flesh has been devoured and the hunter believes his guests have eaten it. Animals and birds, being supernatural, can hear the words of mortals and read their thoughts. The significance of these actions is that animals have the power to conceal themselves, so a hunter must gain their favour before he can hope to succeed. Belief in the efficacy of such customs as these is rapidly falling into decay and bear-meat is now often eaten, but the skull is carefully placed in an evergreen tree near where the animal is slain, so that it may come back to life.

Fish, likewise, are immortal. In autumn the streams are choked with dead and dying salmon, but the Bella Coola know that they are not really dead, they have merely shed their worthless blankets in accordance with Ālquntäm's decrees. At that season of the year he causes the rivers to rise so that they will sweep away these useless and outworn cloaks.

Although the salmon, from the kindness of their hearts, allow human beings to feast on their blankets, yet they have certain likes and dislikes which are carefully observed. From the time the first spring salmon appear (I, pp. 759-762) until the rising of the July moon, women are not allowed to eat them or to go near the river. Men may eat the flesh, but instead of throwing the bones to dogs, they carefully return them to the river saying:

"Please come back tomorrow."

If this is inconvenient, bones can be thrown into the woods with impunity.

Salmon, like men and animals, live a human-like existence in their homes far beneath the surface of the ocean. They lack and desire earthly objects, especially pounded cedar-bark (see Appendix A) to use as sponges for their children, so the Bella Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 of a woman, Sekakmän·a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a 825 meal, Raven lied to his hostess by telling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Sekakmän·a doubted the story and told one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful at his home, some of the scales would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth looked inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Sekakmän·a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and threw his spoil into the water as he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish increased so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

262 One of the foods regarded by the Bella Coola as a luxury
824 is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries
539 in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Sluxlekwaily, a mountain in the Carrier country above Burnt Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he wanted to keep these for food for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let him out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it in his flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Sluxlekwaily was very angry, but could do nothing.

773 Though Alquntäm created the world, he did not make it perfect nor equip it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and tremendous power, was always seeking ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate [778] himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of [823]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a friend. Raven determined to supply this want for the benefit of the Kimsquit people. Accordingly he used a natural stone depression near the village as his chamber-pot, and the liquid reflected faces clearly. Ever since, any liquid, even rain-water, placed in that depression acts as a reflector. The place is called Ănilxsaix, "Where People Go," and it has been used as a mirror by the Kimsquit people and their guests for many generations. In this way, the renown of Raven spread to foreigners visiting Kimsquit. Another survival of this construction is the name Nusqalät·a, "Chamber-Pot," commonly applied as a nickname to the small daughters of Kimsquit chiefs. 773 778 823 [551]

One of Raven's inventions was the making of nettle-fibre olachen nets, an art which he taught spiders as well as men. In the beginning of time, Raven told two men to make a net according to a pattern which he showed them, and gave them some fibre. It was not sufficient, and when the workers asked for more, Raven told them to draw it from their own intestines. This they did, and ever since spiders have had the same ability. Another story describes how Raven saw an olachen net being made in one of the distant villages which he visited during his travels, learnt the details of its manufacture, and taught the Bella Coola on his return home. 773 [227] [825]

Many of Raven's exploits are well known, although not embodied in elaborate myths. For example, it is believed that in the beginning of time the ocean was to the east of Bella Coola and the land to the west. Drownings were frequent, so Raven altered the relative positions of land and sea. Most ocean dwellers followed the sea to its new home, but a number of mussels remained near their human friends. They are still to be found in the upper valley of Bella Coola River. These shell-fish, which are probably freshwater mussels, are said to be identical with those of the ocean, and are called by the same name. This is always mentioned as proof of the former presence of salt water in the upper Bella Coola valley. The occurrence of the shell-fish may be the origin of this theory. It might also be mentioned that the Bella Coola believe that a few years 773 823 [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 ago the tide came further up the rivers than at present and did 823 not recede so far. This statement was made by an intelligent old man who said that the change had taken place during his own life-time.

773 One of Raven's most important alterations to Ăłquntăm's 833 intentions was with regard to the sexual act.

In the beginning of time, the organs of women were on the forehead, those of men on the palm of the hand, and intercourse was effected by a man rubbing his hand across a woman's brow. Raven feared that children would not result from this practice and accordingly altered the organs of both sexes to their present positions. In order to teach mankind the sexual act he then chose a woman and held intercourse with her, telling her that if the practice were carried out secretly and vigorously a child would be born. And nine months later the woman gave birth to an infant. Raven told the first inhabitants of the world that he wished them to have issue; they consequently held intercourse frequently and begat many children until their descendants filled the Bella Coola valley.

The attitude of the Bella Coola towards this story is identical with their beliefs concerning Raven as the cause of death. "Yes," they say, as they repeat the above story in answer to a question, "Raven taught our ancestors how to have children."

773 One side of their nature implicitly believes any story handed [183] down from the distant past, but few today are sufficiently naïve actually to credit it. The more sophisticated frankly disbelieve, or pretend to do so. Doubt also exists with regard to [829] Raven as originator of linguistic differences. The Bella Coola state that Ăłquntăm intended only one language for the whole world, but Raven thought that this would lead to trouble and used his power to teach the ancestors of every tribe their special speech.

Many inventions and beliefs are attributed to Raven without any accompanying myth. It is said that almost all geo-[103] graphical names are those bestowed by him on places reached in his travels. It was Raven who taught men how to bait [226] hooks on long lines to catch black cod; it was Raven who first

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

instructed people about the significance of death omens; it was Raven who showed them the use of slings; and it was Raven who constructed secluded caves and ledges to serve as meeting-places for chiefs. 773 [622 823]

In brief, the Bella Coola regard Raven as an explorer, teacher, and inventor, whose power, obtained from Ăłquntăm, enabled him to construct and outwit his maker, but not to create. Much of his work was for the good of mankind, but much was evil and malicious, an aspect which belongs to mythology. Essentially human, Raven could have been included among anthropomorphic, as well as among zoomorphic beings. He differs from most of the supernatural ones in belonging entirely to the past, as his descendants have none of the first Raven's power. It is doubtful whether he still exists, but in any case he has long since ceased to take any interest in the affairs of the Bella Coola, who consider him only as a figure of mythology and ancient history. 773 776 [825]

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS OF THE VEGETABLE AND MINERAL KINGDOMS

Bella Coola beliefs concerning anthropomorphic and zoomorphic beings are relatively clear and exact; their appearance is known, their powers and functions recognized. The supernatural attributes of trees and plants are less definite. Ăłquntăm created the former in the beginning of time, and they were consequently able to talk and act like human beings at that distant period. Owing to the degeneration of man, mortals are no longer able to converse with trees, although the latter can still understand our remarks. In a vague way, the Bella Coola continue to think of trees as having human personalities, but so little is known of their powers, and they enter so seldom into contact or conflict with mortals, that they are practically ignored. 776 824

In an equally vague manner, Nature is regarded as a Mother, giving birth to the trees and plants. One of the kusiut dances portrays this birth of the flowers every spring (II, p. 196). [535 575]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 824 (II, p. 196). In this way the belief is kept before the eyes of the Bella Coola, but it is not a matter of prime importance in their lives. Rather contradictory is the concept that though each plant lack individual life, there is a supernatural mother of each species, corresponding in general terms to the Mother of Snakes described in the last section. As one informant expressed it:

"If there is no mother, how can a plant grow?"

These mothers are assumed to live beneath the ground. Occasionally, one of them has been discovered. Not many years ago, a number of women were collecting bracken roots when one which had been gathered began to turn into a snake. The women were alarmed and puzzled at this strange phenomenon. As they stood watching, the ground in front of them fell away as if there had been an earthquake, and they realized that the snake-root had been the mother of the plant. Without further fear they cooked and ate it.

776 823 Stones, too, and mountains were made by Ätquntäm; consequently they have supernatural abilities and can understand the words and actions of mortals. When a wise man passes close beneath a precipitous mountain he always says to it:

"Please make yourself firm."

Most mountains, when requested politely, refrain from sliding and killing those passing beneath.

539 776 823 In former days mountains in many cases rose to meet hunters, and sometimes turned completely over. The Bella Coola are not sure whether this was caused by the mountain itself, or by a smuiq within. Wise hunters carry ropes with them when they penetrate into deep valleys, and when they feel the first tipping of a mountain they leap for a convenient tree, grasp it with their legs, heads downwards, and tie themselves in that position. Slowly the mountain rises and turns over, but, if the ropes do not break, the hunters suffer no ill effects. After a varying interval the mountain returns to its [789] normal position. This reversal can be hastened if a man bites

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 539 776 823

his left cheek until the blood flows, takes also a mouthful of his own urine, and spits out the mixture.

The following instance of this belief was recorded. [789]

A Bella Coola chief and a number of followers were once at Kwatna where they had been gambling for stakes of mountain goat grease. Two of the men had lost their supply, so they went into the mountains between Kwatna and Restoration Bay to replenish it. They saw two goats, killed them, and at once two more appeared in the same place; these they also slew. When a fifth and sixth goat appeared and were likewise dispatched, one of the hunters tried to restrain his comrade, saying that such phenomenal success must be due to supernatural power which they should not abuse. They stopped firing, cut the grease from their quarry, and started on the return journey. Presently the mountain began to tilt upwards before their feet. They had no ropes, and almost in despair concealed themselves in a small rock shelter. Their dogs too felt the movement and barked in terror. Fortunately, the mountain did not rise more than a few feet and soon subsided, so that the men escaped. [525]

The attitude of the Bella Coola to supernatural powers of all kinds may be termed a doctrine of Opportunism. Supernatural beings abound and constantly play a part in the affairs of mortals. An alert and bold man can take advantage of these opportunities and obtain assistance, but he who hesitates is indeed lost. Certain types of assistance are most commonly granted to orphans and other unfortunates; accounts of these belong to the realm of mythology and will be described in a later chapter. On the whole the supernatural ones do not show discrimination in conferring boons, and the man who is quick to take advantage of them is the one to whom success comes. 776 [736]

Supernatural Elements in Human Beings

The Bella Coola believe that in the human body itself there are certain supernatural elements. Neither sticks nor stones can move, because they lack these attributes possessed by men and animals. Considering the firm belief of the Bella Coola in the omnipresence of the supernatural, it is not surprising that they should ascribe the phenomena of health and sickness, 774

1:McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuskelusta, wash-basin. In the land above, Ăłquntäm has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Ăłquntäm who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Ăłquntäm, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed äskelusam, a word connected with nuskelusta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.[80]

[80] This may be a mere rationalization.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 Shamans achieve much of their success through their ability 777 to put their wash-basins, both tangible (I, p. 560) and imma-
823 terial, in tune with Ałquntäm's in the land above. One method
756 of treating a patient is by washing, with the idea that the water [755] and vessel used have potency through association with those in the upper world. It is believed that in the distant past, shamans were even able to carry their patients to the land above and wash them in Ałquntäm's own basin. Such feats [551] are perpetuated in certain shamans' names, such as Ałpälxe-loslaix.

773 It may be said in conclusion that although the Bella Coola 777 have indefinite ideas concerning the exact form and functions of this last element, there is a firm belief that an individual's fortune in life depends upon the activity of spirit, tally post, and wash-basin. With regard to supernatural elements as a whole, it is clear that in spite of somewhat conflicting beliefs concerning the precise functions of each, they play an important part in the life of every Bella Coola.

Means of Propitiation

782 Some of the methods employed by the Bella Coola to gain the favour of the supernatural have already been mentioned, but the subject is sufficiently important to warrant a separate section. In view of the omnipresence of supernatural beings and powers, and their influence on the lives of mortals, it is not surprising that the propitiation of them is a vital factor in human life. The chief means are prayer, sacrifice, and the observance of ceremonial chastity.

Prayer

[776] Prayers are regularly addressed to Ałquntäm who, in this connection, is known as Munakais or Tätä, both meaning, "Father." A wise man or woman desiring success in hunting, in love affairs, in the acquisition of wealth, or in any activity whatsoever, is accustomed to ask Munakais to grant his desire. No ritual is required. The petitioner merely seeks a lonely

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously[21] either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.[22] As he scours himself, he asks Mınakais to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Ālquntäm actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Mınakais has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Mınakais," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Mınakais," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [224] [726] [785]

[21]Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance; indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently. [515]

[22]The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-smoothed river pebble. [296] [823] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

before their birth. When the mother of the twin described in the last paragraph was awaiting delivery in a temporary shelter in the woods, its roof fell, cutting her head. The old woman who mentioned this occurrence stated that both her grandmother, the Sockeye Salmon, and her sister, a Spring Salmon, though still unborn, were aware of the accident and remembered the comments of the midwife. 845

On account of their uncanny power, twins are considered weaklings and usually die young in spite of the care lavished upon them and the taboos observed by their parents.[2] A dead twin, instead of being buried, is put in a box which is placed in a tree far away from the village. Every year the river changes its course, eating into its banks in order to reach the tree containing the body, and this continues until it reaches its goal and sweeps away tree and coffin. 766 [823]

Childhood Instruction

When working in the field, an anthropologist almost inevitably concentrates upon ceremonials and other epochs in an individual's life, to the detriment of the daily routine which in Bella Coola, as everywhere else, is fundamentally important although it defies description on account of its intangibility. A child grows up in a large house, occupied by several families, in which there is little privacy. The parents provide food and clothing, but more distant relatives take a greater share of responsibility for this than do white people. When food is being given out, a child soon learns that he will be given some of it, and that he will have his portion in any distribution of presents. Furniture, bedding, and other necessities are reduced to a minimum, but a boy or girl is welcome to sleep with relatives should his own parents wish to go hunting or fishing. The sense of power possessed by a Bella Coola with many relations is largely intangible, but it has practical applications as 114 855 [867] [867]

[2] It is probable that the arduous life led by a twin and its parents during the first year after birth lessens its chances of survival. Needless to say, this explanation does not find favour with the Bella Coola.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

described, at death the shadow, the body, and a portion of the life, descend to the land below where existence is continued as a ghost. These wraiths are usually termed, Kołkw"łmx, "The Earthy Ones," though they prefer the name Asiutänem, "They Who Have Become Supernatural." They enter into the lives and actions of the Bella Coola in a way entirely different from that of the elements which go aloft at death. 775

The land of ghosts, immediately beneath the earth, is similar to it. There are trees and bushes, stones, grass, everything as on the surface of the world. There is a river, too, but it rises in the west and flows eastward, contrary to the course of the Bella Coola. The sun that shines below is green and unnatural, giving an ethereal light like that of the moon which, indeed, it is sometimes said to be. The seasons are the reverse of those on earth; when mortals are in midsummer, it is wintertime for ghosts. The fluff which human beings see falling from cottonwood trees reaches the land of ghosts as snow. All earthly springs rise from the river in the land below; they never freeze in winter because they come from a warm region, and the coldness of spring water in summer is the result of coming from a land where it is winter. With the exception of the peculiar light, the only essential difference between the land of ghosts and this world is that food is very scarce in the former; berries grow below, and it is supposed that there must be fish and animals there, but it is common knowledge that residents there are always hungry. 772 775 [823]

The life led by ghosts is similar to that of human beings. They occupy the same type of house as before death, dwell in the same kind of villages on the river bank, wear similar clothes, have similar likes and dislikes, require similar food, and even enjoy the same kind of dances. One old Bella Coola even stated that the ghosts are able to summon supernatural beings from Nusmät-a to their kusiut rites. It is generally believed that no work is done below, although several of the older people denied this. According to these individuals, a ghost can perform more rapidly and easily whatever tasks he had been 775

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Supernatural good fortune has also been obtained from the "Mothers" of certain plants. 777

Among the roots that are sought for when a man intends to give a potlatch are those of clover and of okäl, a grass which grows on flats near the sea. Once the aunt of an elderly (in 1923) Bella Coola woman dug up the Mother of Okäl, a root, thick as her thumb, but shaped like a woman. Perhaps the reason that she found it was because she was digging in the darkness, after the setting of the sun. The woman, ignorant of the proper procedure, did nothing, with the result that her hands became painfully swollen. If she had wrapped the root in a portion of her used clothing and kept it hidden for one year, without saying anything about her find, it would have brought her supernatural good luck. 824 [556] [753]

Another woman found an elderberry as large as a baseball, and shaped like the mask worn above the forehead by a member of the sisaok society. Her father, an old man skilled in such matters, wrapped the berry in his daughter's soiled clothing and kept it carefully hidden in her box. It brought her supernatural good luck because, no matter how much or how often she gave away presents, goods always came to her.

SUPERNATURAL GOOD LUCK FROM STONES

Stones are among the objects from which supernatural good luck can be obtained. A person who has long observed ceremonial chastity may be fortunate enough to hear what seems to be the weeping of a new-born infant, as he passes in his canoe beneath some steep ocean cliff. Then, if he watches, he will see a stone being born from a larger one at the level of the sea. If the observer takes the infant-stone, wraps it in his soiled clothing and stores it among his possessions, it will act as other bringers of supernatural good fortune by luring all kinds of valuables to the owner. In fact, such a stone is said to be so potent that if left in an empty box for some time, it will attract enough skins to fill the receptacle. 777 787* 823 [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 The last appearance of such a stone was in Dean Channel,
* 787 to the father of an elderly Bella Coola, who was too amazed 823 to take advantage of it. As far as could be ascertained, in 1922 there was only one stone which was regarded by the owner as having brought him good fortune. It had been obtained by one of his elderly relatives who died about 1906. This man had been walking beside the Bella Coola River one spring day when he happened to notice a woodpecker perched on one of the posts supporting an olachen net. Without taking his eyes from it, he idly stooped down and threw a pebble at the bird which flew to the bank, lit on a pile of stones, and became one of them. Realizing that here might be the means of obtaining supernatural good fortune, if properly handled, the man watched for some time, then went forward, picked up the stone, covered it with evergreen boughs and wrapped the whole in a strip torn from the white-man's shirt he was wearing. With the axe he was carrying he cut a recess in a tree, put the object in it and covered the hiding place with the original bark. He said nothing about it, but the stone brought him such good luck that he obtained large quantities of everything desirable.

777 In later years the man, after replacing the stone in the hole 823 of the tree, went away to Victoria; when he returned, years later, it was still there. By placing it in his box he again prospered in all his ventures. When an old man the owner presented the stone to a relative who still treasures it. It is red, about a foot in length, shaped somewhat like a human figure without arms or legs, but with a prominent navel opening. See Fig. 2. The owner has kept it for years, hiding it even from his wife and allowing no white man to see it. He had been perfectly willing to have photographs taken of most of his ceremonial objects, but declined to permit this to be done with his valued stone, and carefully hid it in a box after showing it. When he wished to use the transformed bird, it was wrapped in his old shirt, together with a small amount of money or what-

[123]

Fig. 2
Lucky Stone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ever object was desired, and then set in a window of his house so that the sun could fall on one uncovered end. The owner firmly believes that this stone has brought him money on various occasions, and will do so again, though whether he expects the coins to be found inside of the wrapping, or merely to come to him in the course of trade is questionable. According to Bella Coola belief, they ought to appear beside the stone, but as this man attributes any good fortune to it, he never has any difficulty in proving its powers. 777 823

This stone is also used as a means of increasing the efficacy of prayer. When its owner washes ceremonially in the river before eating in the morning, he rubs it over his body as if it were soap and requests it to make him strong, make him well, grant him his desires, and so forth. [515] [789]

Shamanism

More important to the Bella Coola than any other manifestation of the supernatural is that power which makes an individual either an ālukwala or an āskankots. The former is a person who, owing to ability granted him by a supernatural being, is able to perform miraculous feats, especially in curing the sick; the latter is one with similar powers obtained from a ghost.[9] It is impossible to translate either of these terms accurately; the designation "shaman" is accordingly used in this monograph to describe both types of supernaturally enlowed individuals. The most common and most important method of obtaining such power is from a living supernatural being; a person receiving the boon in this manner will be termed "shaman," and one empowered by a ghost will be known as "shaman from the dead." 104 756* [787]* [788]

The Bella Coola believe that long ago men were so much more powerful than at present, and so close to the supernatural, that all were virtually shamans. The prowess and adventures 756* 773 538

[9]Ghosts are, of course, supernatural, but as the Bella Coola distinguish between shamans whose powers are derived from these two sources, it is accurate to follow their example.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

778 539 latch, and the only vacant spot was the central seat behind the fire. Retainer after retainer was sent after someone, until finally the wondering human heard a steady thump, thump, approaching. It was the Mesatche Nose snusx, travelling on his single arm, like a looper caterpillar, his head balanced precariously on top while the thump came every time that he brought his fist to the floor. On his entry, the paintings of fish and marine animals, with which the walls and boxes were covered, came to life and cavorted around as if mad, but when the chief took his seat behind the fire they returned to their pictorial form. From this experience the Bella Bella man obtained a sisaok name and myth.

778 (3) The Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel where the mysterious power is that of a snake.

(4) A ledge of rock projecting over the water at a point on the west side of Dean Channel about nine miles below Kimsquit.

(5) Q̓apdxs: On the south side of Burke Channel, a few miles above Kwatna Inlet.

(6) Snuwals: On South Bentinck Arm, at a spot where the water penetrates far under a ledge of rock.

(7) Nukilā-xta: On the east side of South Bentinck Arm, where an enormous spider has been changed to stone. The many colours of its body can be plainly seen amid the numerous holes in the vicinity.

(8) The Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm.

778 539 823 103 (9) Mount Nusqalst, the highest mountain in the Bella Coola valley, belongs to the same category, since in the beginning of time it was a man.

He, Nānalskwitl, (which means "Too Heavy" in the sense of "so important") came to earth from above at Cape Mudge and decided to visit Bella Coola. He stalked through the land to the site of the present Mount Nusqalst, wearing a high hat around which crawled two snakes whose heads often crossed. From where he stood, he saw the lofty mountain Xpis in the Carrier country, and resolved to visit it. At that distant period this peak was a human being and from him Nānalskwitl obtained two wives, the name of one being Ṫlisla. He returned to Bella Coola with them.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nänalskwitl knew that presently he was fated to become immobile, a seat of petrified power. Since he was able to select where this was to be, he chose the site of Mount Nusqalst, midway in the Bella Coola valley, as a convenient place to overlook the doings of men. Before he transformed himself into this mountain, he determined that he would have people visit him; accordingly he changed his axe, Nuskmiḑuste, which he carried concealed beneath his blanket, into sqalst, a stone much used for axes and adzes. Until the introduction of white man's tools his wish was gratified; people came from far and near to obtain the necessary material.

The human origin of the mountain is still remembered, since it is often spoken of by its chiefly names, Nänalskwitl and Ṫlisla, relics of its existence as a man. This story is regarded as an origin myth, and as such might have been included in vol. I, chap. vi.

This mountain is regarded with awe by the Bella Coola on account of its great height, but it seems to lack most of the characteristics ascribed to other places where power has been petrified.

(10) On one of the mountains above Cascade Inlet there used to be a stone eagle with outstretched wings which came to this earth with the first people, but was petrified one day when drying its wings after fishing. About 1860 part of its beak fell away. A change in the condition of any of these places had long been regarded as an omen of misfortune, so the epidemic of smallpox that soon after ravaged the coast was not unexpected.

(11) Ällsmost. An unidentified spot where a snuaq of the mountain was petrified. At this place there is a small pool which is the repository (II, p. 8) of a certain kusiut dancer.

(12) ᵊxpkam, "The Walker," the name both of a supernatural being and the spot where it is localized. This is not far from the glacier that lies near the junction of the trails from Snuhli and Tällio; it is the largest one in the vicinity of Bella Coola and is said to move its position. The being is in some way connected with it, hence the name.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
787
777

Bella Bella man was fishing when a salmon jumped into his canoe and died at once, without the usual flopping and struggling. The fisherman took it home and ate it, though his wife refused to touch it, as being uncanny. Presently the man's lower jaw became diseased and he lost his teeth. The salmon must have been a sutaut.[14]

The mere sight of a sutaut does not bring the misfortune which follows the killing of one by faulty means. On the other hand, if slain in the proper manner great good fortune will result. One method is to put a stick near it in the water, whereupon the fish will jump ashore and flop around, shedding its scales. The hunter should then kill it and, crouching down, say:

"I wish I had a salmberry leaf, or a piece of dead alder."

Both of these boys shown contrary signs. [illegible] hand behind him, whichever he has asked for will be there, though no one knows how it comes. Then he must cut the fish lengthwise into two parts, throw away the right half and the head, wrap the left in his cape,[15] and run from the spot, taking care to go neither up nor down hill. Soon a landslide will take place, sweeping away the ground on which he has stood, even though it be level. He must hide the half sutaut in a hole in a cedar tree for one year without saying anything about his treasure. During this period he must not hunt or embark on any other important enterprise.

When the year has elapsed he may tell the people of his experience and sell tiny fragments of the sutaut for large sums. The purchasers wrap these fragments in cedar-bark and with them dash fish-weirs and traps, thus attracting animals and fish. A man obtaining a sutaut in this way can show his children where it is concealed, and so transmit his power to them.

THE CATCHING OF A SUTAUT

Not many years ago, a certain Oulstw-i constructed an ocean salmon-trap below Kimsquit. One moonlight night he saw in it a white, gleaming salmon and at once jumped to the conclusion that it was a sutaut. Being a wild, reckless fellow, he determined to try to obtain supernatural good fortune from his prey, though he was ignorant of the proper procedure. Waiting until the receding tide had almost laid bare the floor of his pen, he leapt down from the weir and clubbed the salmon to death, heedless of the scales which it was shedding in all directions. Then Oulstw-i cut it [14] It appears that the fisherman was a victim of pyorrhea, in consequence of which his teeth were extracted by a dentist, but the patient is convinced that his misfortunes are due to the salmon which entered his canoe.

[15] The left of anything is said to be more valuable than the right because when a man dreams it is the left side which is nearer the sun.

[164]
[123]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539 * 756 * 787

sons. At the Moon's invitation, Xɛ̂mɛstaw-a built his own fire in the house and settled there, never returning to earth.

On one occasion Xɛ̂mɛstaw-a attacked Kɛ̂mai-ti, the supernatural woman to whom all mortals are as slaves. She lived in some distant, uncertain part of the upper regions, or perhaps on this earth. He defeated her and pulled off her ears, but when he threw them into the water they caused it to boil and seethe so that his canoe was almost swamped. He threw out his supernatural salmon to quiet the waves and thus escaped. At that time the dead lived in Kɛ̂mai-ti's house, and Xɛ̂mɛstaw-a rescued his deceased mother from near Kɛ̂mai-ti's gigantic hat. Then he set fire to the woman's house and sent her down to this earth, where she was turned into stone.

THE WOMAN WHO MARRIED A BEAR[77]

Long, long ago, but after the first people had come to this earth, a woman who was out gathering berries lay down and slept on the ground. When she awoke she found that she had been lying on bear droppings and in her annoyance she cursed the one responsible for them. But bears have extraordinary powers of hearing, and the offender heard her remark and was angry. He assumed the form of a man and went to her, asking, with many profane expressions:

"What do you mean by swearing at my droppings? Defecate and I am certain you will find mine the better."

The woman did as she was bidden, while the bear-man watched her. Determined to outdo him, she managed to substitute some goat's grease for her own excrement without his observing her. When he saw it he admitted that he was out-matched and said:

"Come home with me."

[823] This she agreed to do. As mountains are really hollow, he lead the woman inside one, where she realized for the first time what her lover was, for he introduced her to his bear-wife. The two received the woman in a kindly fashion and prepared what they said was spring salmon, though in reality it was skunk cabbage. To the chagrin of her host, the guest refused it, whereupon he inquired what she would like. Looking around she saw some coho salmon which, at her request, was roasted for her; on this she made a hearty meal. That night she slept with the bear-man.

Meanwhile the woman's family was greatly alarmed at her long absence and searched the woods in vain for her. Her four brothers in particular sought diligently, but at length even they gave up in despair, concluding that she was dead. The morning following her introduction [77] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 111.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out that he wants someone to tie up his neck, and, after the usual delay, an uninitiated lad is brought forward for the purpose. The carpenters help him to manipulate the rope, and in reality do the actual tying although they disguise the fact. Then four or five kukusiut seize either end and begin to tug; X cries out as if in pain, the whistles sound, and the women drone. It is most impressive. Finally the head is pulled from the body and falls to the floor, while the apparently headless and lifeless body of X sinks down in the direction taken by the head. Blood and raw flesh are in evidence and the weeping of the women readily convinces non-members that they have watched the decapitation of the dancer. Sometimes the uninitiated themselves are allowed to pull the rope.

The ritual throughout the night is identical with that already described for the Stomach-Cutting dance. The spies guard the doors, refusing egress to all, the mourning women sing their songs, the puppets ascend to the land above and are inserted into X on their return. At intervals groups of the uninitiated are told to come forward; they circle the fire sunwise and see that X's head is lying apart from his body, with the blood and flesh and the severed neck visible. Towards dawn[11] hidden strings are fastened to the head and it is drawn slightly towards the body. One of the marshals calls out:

"It moves! It moves! Do you see it?" and a herald answers: "We see it move."

The slow movement is continued until the uninitiated, who make periodic inspections, are able to say that it has almost rejoined the trunk. As the first glimmer of light appears in the east, one of the carpenters bends over X and takes the opportunity, while he conceals the dancer's body with his own, to hide the false head beneath his blanket; at the same time X stretches his own head up from under his blanket. The subterfuge is not evident to the uninitiated.

[11] The passage of time at night is judged in villages on the coast by the height of the tide, or the movements of stars; the latter is also practised in the inland settlements. If the stars are hidden, an estimate is made by the number of fir logs burnt through during sunset.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Whirlwind usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a kusiut who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary. 575* 796* 776 [821] [532]

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the grasp of Sninia. This being is patron for certain kukusiut and whenever a tremor occurs, his protégés call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is identical with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The theme of the song is of the manner in which Sninia performs his function of holding the world. A call from Sninia may also come in the normal manner to one of his protégés during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Sninia is patron to a kusiut named Ätlibaläxlaix. [823] [533] [551]

THE DANCE OF TIDE-MEASURER

The height to which the tides shall rise is decided by a male supernatural being, Mintlato·snim, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a kusiut named Ṫsäl, whose repository is near Sätlia. One of Ṫsäl's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used at the dance describe how Tide-Measurer uses a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of nebusam the uninitiated are told to go to their houses but, by peering round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the ocean, and thrust down to the bottom a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day. [823] [551] [778] [533]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BULL-HEAD

Since any supernatural being can act as patron to kusiut dancers, and since all mammals and birds are, in a sense, super- [825]

533*

sialḱiyukiemisandax	Tlaowika'lis	Ṫixilqilsumälsandax
all, everywhere, know of	Tlaowika'lis(ee).	They(ff) crossed repeatedly yas aldutewätsudax to Tsewat(gg).

(a) The first four parts of this song were recorded as song VII D 7a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. It is said to have been composed about 1870 for a chief whose son had been drowned. It was later used for a nephew of Qowi, and will henceforth be employed only by members of that family. [424]

(b) That is: Why has my son died?

(c) It was impossible to obtain translations of each subdivision.

(d) Referring to the dead son.

(e) That is: The supernatural being, the chief, has taken him. The reference is to the deceased's crest animal, a common rhetorical device in songs.

(f) An ancestor of the deceased and one of the first settlers of the world. He came down to Rivers Inlet.

(g) Tlakwakila is said to have widened, or even to have made, the principal river at Rivers Inlet. [773]

(h) Tlakwakila came in the form of a raven.

(i) Referring to Qwinao.

(j) It was impossible to obtain translations of these two subdivisions. Qwinao, now dead, will be irremovably connected with the scenes of his first ancestor.

(k) Meaning Raven.

(l) The mother of Qwinao who had died several years earlier.

(m) The theme now changes as if Qowi were addressing Qwinao.

(n) Referring to Qwinao.

(o) Refers to the supernatural beings who rouse the sun and moon and thus cause their light to shine on earth. Mention is made of these in Qwinao's origin myth. [776] [821]

(p) The theme changes again from direct address to Qwinao to a description of what he will be doing owing to his ancestral history.

(q) That is: He will be in the form of one of the guardians of light when his life descends, at a memorial potlatch, to Rivers Inlet.

(r) That is: That was what Waäkis brought. Waäkis, another of Qwinao's first ancestors, could not find a suitable place to settle in the beginning of time. After fruitless wandering, a whale emerged, vomited violently, and was changed to stone. The animal thus became Goose Island, and its vomit the rugged rocks at one end. Waäkis settled on that island. [773] [823]

(s) This song has three third parts.

(t) That is: The first people, with their shaman-like power, had just appeared.

(u) Referring to ts-wnaisa, another of Qwinao's first ancestors, who also came to earth at Rivers Inlet.

(v) At that time the routes between different settlements had not been discovered.

(w) More specifically, the coarse, long breast feathers.

(x) ts-wnaisa used a supernatural canoe which frequently changed to eagle feathers. [773]

(y) Refers to Sea-lion Island where he and his descendants used to hunt.

(z) Refers to the Bella Bella; several of Qwinao's relatives had married members of that tribe.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(h) That is: I incorporate myself into.

(i) The reference is to another of Sinuxetl's myths dealing with the coming to earth of Hamcat near Kimsquit. Nunuǵsmāls was the name of his house. 533*

(j) Referring to Goose Island once more.

(k) That is: Goose Island where our relatives, the Bella Bella, get their food, had just emerged and become visible. It was impossible to obtain a separate translation of these two subdivisions.

(l) Referring again to Goose Island. This small piece of land is shaped like a whale, and, as already described, it was originally one. Ālquntām bade the animal come to the surface to be changed to stone; then Wāāks settled there as soon as the water had dried from what had been its back. [773] [823]

(m) The literal translation of each subsection may be inaccurate.

Song Used for Yeālos of Kimsquit(a)

A Yenseōsandax	wakwalsndatl	sāhxwaixisndai	disonx̄ʷsudai
It is good(b);	our(c)?	has lifted	the sky(d).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B Ḵāqwaxqwisandai(e)	disiutsudai	skāaiyaldumdai
He was Raven(f),	the supernatural one	when he descended dinulhwiktāsdai

the post(g).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

C Snuqwla·xlisndai	distālhmxdai	yeyālosdai	sālipliisdai
He is bright(h),	the chief	Yeālos;	he carries siāsxwilākleixs	dilāliās·udai

a unique	copper(i).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 47a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been composed over one hundred years ago and since used repeatedly.

(b) With the significance of: It is highly satisfactory.

(c) The meaning of this word is obscure. It refers to the crest of Yeālos with the added implication of a memorial. It applies to the memorial rite being given. [765] [152]

(d) When a chief dies, it is said that the people in their grief feel as if the sky were pressing them down. A memorial rite lessens their sorrow and lifts the burden.

(e) When this word was being sung for the phonograph, the singer erred and replaced it by part of the first word of the third part.

(f) That is: He was in the form of a raven. The reference is to one of the first ancestors of Yeālos.

(g) Meaning one of the posts which stretched between earth and sky in the beginning of time. [773]

(h) This refers to Yeālos. He was formerly weighed down with grief, but by giving a memorial rite he is like the sun as it shines out brilliantly from behind the clouds.

(i) A reference to a special kind of copper mentioned in the chief's origin myth.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 into a mist which so utterly blinded and confused Lake-Swallower that he was forced to abandon the pursuit. Without further difficulty the four sisters reached home, where they were received with great rejoicing, especially when their friends heard of the dangers through which they had passed.

THE SUN'S CAPTOR

*539 821 Long, long ago, a woman was sitting on the ground with her back to the sun, who noticed her. He came down and rubbed his hand over her back, causing her to become pregnant, then went back to his station above. The child grew so rapidly that the woman bore a son before the usual period had elapsed. This little boy grew with phenomenal rapidity. One day he asked his mother if he might go up to see his father, and when she consented, he built a long ladder up which he climbed until he reached the land above. When the sun drew near, his son spoke to him, saying that his mother had allowed him to come up to see him, and suggesting that he bring her on a later visit. The father agreed and the boy descended to his mother on earth.

A few days later, when the lad and his mother climbed above, the sun disregarded them entirely, and continued his course without seeming to be aware of their presence. Angry at his father's callousness, the lad asked his mother to give him a pubic hair with which to make a noose to catch the sun.

"Don't be silly," she answered. "The great heat will burn it."

Her son persisted until she finally gave him a single hair from between her legs. This he rolled into a rope with a noose at the end, and hung it from a stick in the course of his father. When the sun came along he was fairly caught in the noose. Thus restrained, he could no longer shine on the earth; the people were filled with wonder, though they were rather thankful, as heretofore there had been perpetual summer.

"It is your son who has caught you," said the boy to his captive father. "You thought yourself too strong. The people down below do not want you to shine all the time; if I release you, you must hide yourself at regular intervals."

The sun agreed to do this. Then the lad untied the noose and the captive went off in his wonted path. To regulate his father's movements, [823] and to ensure his remaining at a safe distance during the winter, the lad raised high mountains at Kimsquit, Ulkatcho, and Leguc, which still limit the sun's course.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Ältimän·a, "Left Foot": Snux repository named from part of a supernatural creatur[illegible]

Ältimlaix: Kimsquit hunter living in the last century.

[825] älxmutl: Dentalium-shell.

älxwale'ax, "Not Finished": Said concerning a kusiut who dies between initiation and his first complete dance.

[292] [881] älxwam: Skull cap of grass and dentalium-shells worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.

älxwola: Guest, especially from afar, to a kusiut dance.

Älxwolämum: 1—Supernatural herald.
2—Assemblage of the people for ceremonies of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and guessing competitions in connection with the Mystery dance.
3—Kimsquit term for the first night of a kusiut dance.

älxwpaix, "A Surpassing": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than they have received in return.

[576] ämät: Place of concealment of a Mystery dancer's power.

[601] ä'määlaykt: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for indirect address.

ämätax: Rightful location, especially the validated position of a chief in a house.

[415] ämätuts: Dishes carved with ancestral crest.

ämkpis: 1—Mouse.
2—Daughter of the first settlers at Sätlia.

[825] äml: Spring salmon.

ämlia: Spring salmon house.

Ämläklis: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.

Ämläklis: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

ämläämkum: 1—The allotment of work to kukusiut in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.
2—Hence, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a kusiut dance.

Änäbsullänämlaix, "The Resident Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Snuisli.

[575] änänuikx or siänuikx: That which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a kusiut ritual.

änätsituti: Second night of a potlatch.

[226] änäxwolait: Artificial, pier-like structure built into a river for use in hand-net fishing.

Änilxsaix, "Where People Go": A reflecting pool created by Raven at Kimsquit.

Änokokwäls: Cave near Dean Channel.

Änolpundimut, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Ttitcäplilän·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Äpo'likwolsaix: Supernatural woman who guards repositories.

Änotäkmots: 1—"The Open-Mouthed" (in the sense of open to suck forth sickness): One of Ttitcäplilän·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

[756] [823] anuxom: Swift running water.

anlhmstnänäm: 1—Ranks of ordinary inidividuals; this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the nusak society.
2—Something supernatural seen when awake.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Anudakanuts: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
ănukăldimut, "This Is to Make Straight Your Road": Said when a call is returned, or food thrown upon a fire for the dead.
Ănukao·lst, "Place of Big Stones in the River": Village at Kwatna.
Anukululsiaix: Woman immolated in a repository and hence become supernatural.
ayukiluk'a: Rainbow-coloured nose-ring worn by Death.
Anukiqaksaix: Supernatural name of Hawk. [825] ayukitsuk': Short cord by which the fungus is held during the kănăn·i dance.
Anukkălsnam: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anukpmaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers": Supernatural name of hump-back salmon.
anulkutl: Nose-ring. [301]
ănulunănk: Mourning song composed for a chief and, apparently, the singing of one. [533]
Ănulxwam: Place on the north-west side of Dean Channel, about nine miles from its head, where curative power is petrified. [778] Anumnuiskmm: Supernatural beings who remind the supreme god of his kusiut duties.
Ănunitsektnum: Supernatural being who restores those killed by the receipt of too much power from Ťlitcăplilan·a.
ănunuqwn: Meeting of chiefs, archaic.
anuonai: Person who catches early olachen in a hand-net. [226] anupospsam: Buoyant stones such as are found in a lake near the headwaters of the Bella Coola. [823] Anuputsdilk: Supernatural being who regulates the height of tides in rivers.
ayuqpatlnum: To await, especially a supernatural being.
Apudpumlaix: Son of the first settlers at Sătlia.
Anudplalaix, "What Fills People": Name created by Smooan in the beginning of time with reference to his stores of salmon.
ayuqunusam: Silent waiting in darkness before a kusiotem dance.
Apudwutnikmm: Supernatural being who gives inspiration.
Anusaiksiutslaix: 1—Supernatural name of susiutl.
2—Method of killing practised by susiutl.
Anusaiksaixsaix·als: Name of a Bella Coola shaman.
Anu·sbuxăllnum: Name of a Kimsquit woman.
anunka'alxăkmu: The rare prerogative of changing from kusiut to susook rites on alternate nights. [424] Ănuskiskmm, "The Saviour": One of Ťlitcăplilan·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Ănuskumthm: One of the first men to settle at Tăl·io in the beginning of time.
ănuskuămnuy: Peculiar cry uttered by a kusiut scratcher.
Anuspunu·alx: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Anusg: Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.
anuspalwtsaix, "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts: Identical with sxlanink, q.v. [198] Apuzyalsix: One of the first women to settle at Sĭskitl in the beginning of time.
Anutcklămdimut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
ănutxu: 1—Excavated house furnished with stepped platforms for guests.
2—Village at Kwatna. [342]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

192*

Asklu: Village at Salmon House, on the upper Dean River.
ăskma: Position between two fires.
ăs·iatl: 1—Raised bed behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural.
2—Waterfall.[1] [823]
ăs·maius: To teach.
ăs·maiusămkit': Hereditary lore handed down secretly in a family. [424] Ăsqămks: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
ăsqwxma: Sisaok song in slow time. [533]
ăstăkăn: 1—Box, archaic; hence, seat.
2—One of the nights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representation of the deceased appears.
ăstas: Rocky Mountain jay. [825] ăshxwatl: Carved house post.
Ăstalnexkl: Wife of Swaky; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
ăsutcăxunk: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Ăswinwinaiuts: Expedition of the supernatural being Winwina against berries and fish.
Ăs·gănam: Smaoan's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the name has since been used by his descendants, ăszmsăxts: Only sister in a family of several brothers. [601]
ăszʷ: Seals. [825]
ăsxwaltom: Steeping in medicinal smoke as a curative measure.
ăltăqulp: Fir. [755]
Ăltăt·iaitl: Evil male supernatural being.
ă·ima: 1—Death, not anthropomorphized. [824]
2—Dead.
ăimăkʷ: Kingfisher. [825]
ălsi: Fish-hook.
Ălthăm, "They of the Huge Jaws": Supernatural beings resident in the land above. [227] ătskmos: Kusiut spy.
ătsqutl: plural, ănătsqutl; vocative plural, ănătsqtaotl:
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Ăthk: ustămy village.
Ăpă: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
ăpa·hendjut, "He Urinates Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indication of misfortune, hence the word really means omen. It is the Kimsquit variant of ă·wendjut. [787] ă·wendjut: Omen of death.
Ăpat·i, "Occupied Mound": 1—Village at Kwatna.
2—Artificial mound at Tăl·ia.
3—Village on the Kimsquit River.
4—Island near Ocean Falls.
Ăpat·i nao Wawalnuks, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Ocean Falls where the dogs came to earth in the beginning of time.
apawa·i: Varied thrush. [825]

[1] The latter is a favourite place for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

APPENDIX D

kulkamut: Generic term for presents given to a future bridegroom by the father of the future bride. [431] Kulslkakmidjut: Supernatural being whose stomach is cut in the land above. [584] kumai·t: Good-bye. [576] Kunkunälpstus, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Wiwina.
kusiotem: Designation for a series of difficult and spectacular kusiut dances.
kusio·tem: Said to be identical with sälukwalas, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactor. [756] kusiut: plural, kukusiut; vocative, kusioot; vocative plural, kukusioot:
1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season. [575]
2—Member of the society.
3—"The Learned One": Designation occasionally applied to a supernatural being, especially a petrified one, or to a person having power to cure the sick. [756]
Kusiyot: Kimsquit female shaman living in the last century.
kuskao: Beloved one, especially a child; this is the vocative form of the word.
kusqiyum: Orphan.
Kwai'hila'yokwa: Woman dwelling at Fort Rupert in the beginning of time.
Kwa·sla: Smith Inlet.
Kwakwak'la: Supernatural name of Cormorant.
kwa·kwao·s: Merganser. [825]
Kwakwaosloti: Merganser canoe acquired by the first settlers at Stux.
kwakwa: Unidentified bird of which the note is an omen of death. [763] Kwalais: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Kwalakmis: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Kwale·tstmut: Kusiut name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.
kwal·i·l: Smooth greenstone, "jadeite," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands. [823]
kwals: Evergreen bough. [824] Kwalsänl: Famous Bella Coola warrior.
kwaqwai: One of the sculpins.
Kwasta: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kwat·iwal·a, "The Big One": Lustful male supernatural being.
Kwathnustia: Man who came to earth near Stux in the beginning of time.
Kwe·tsua: Kimsquit woman.
Kwilais: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kwitnoa: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Kwinoa: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.
Kwilaxlalx, "One Who Sits without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
Kwla: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusqalst chief; the word is a synonym for Wikwen·ekwla.
Kwllias Nuskämpta: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
kulwälsikän·aix: Lullaby. [533] kwoi·yaix: Archaic expression used in a string figure.
kulix: 1—Pen or trap in the ocean for salmon. [226]
2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

L

[825] Lāklāklis: Kimsquit man mentioned in ancient story.
lā·kts: Squirrel.
Laqwomais: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ḷomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[463] Laxaiyao·k': Name of a professional warrior; the word is said to have originated in Kitkatla but has remained for many generations in Kimsquit.
La'qix: Atnarko River, northern fork of the Bella Coola.
Lalāmsk: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Lalaimkila, "The Brusher Off [of Goats]": Professional name of one of the first settlers at Snuiəli in the beginning of time. This may be the same word as Lalemkila.
Lalemkila: Another name for Twalālit, the supernatural hunter. This may be the same word as Lalaimkila.
[825] Lilitwumlaix: 1—"The Beautifier": Supernatural name of Otter.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
[886] lipdjuditls: Return in old age to the thoughts and actions of infancy, senile decay.
[426] lisdjut: To repay indebtedness of any kind, especially presents received at potlatches.
[583] listiwadjut, "A Paying": An arrangement by which a man's sons-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative by way of repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters.
listomax: Wrestling or shoving.
lilstom: Abbreviated Cannibal rite.
Lo·qwa·t: 1—Famous Bella Bella chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
lulusta: Mask.
luta: Tool for making vertical incisions in the bark of cedar trees.

Ł

Łākwakila: Tcawat man living in the beginning of time.
Łālaiuks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[823] łalia: 1—Copper.
2—Unidentified town on the outer coast, mentioned in a story of the beginning of time.
3—Chief of this town.
Łāliaaiuts: Daughter of chief of the town of Copper.
Łāliaelotl: Copper canoe acquired by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Łāliāhs: Man's name, created by the first settlers at Sātlia, in the beginning of time.
Łāliākdja: Name taken for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Łāliāks: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Łāliāmx: Sisaok name assumed by one of the first settlers at Ālqālāxl in the beginning of time.
Łāliāxas, "The Copper One": One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

192*

nixobäxta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [424]

Nixpi: Expert supernatural dancer; to his associates he is a yearling mountain goat.

nmulg or nmulgämut: First complete dance given by a kusiut initiate.

nmmmk: Mammal, any kind. [825]

Nnixwanaix: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

Noäkila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuisli in the beginning of time.

Noäkynm: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Noamtäxaik: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Siskiut in the beginning of time.

nolcista: Kusiut prerogative as a Breaker; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

nolgäkta: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kimsquit, kusiut masks are hung.

nommak: The making and use of hand nets for olachen.

Nonodjonöitem: 1—"The Adviser": One of the names of the supreme god. [622]
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; virtually, "The Sages."

no'onätlim: 1—Ceremony at which ksaok names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796]

no'ondjut: Assemblage of the kukusiut to practise difficult rites.

No-qwna, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Tlaiyäkum name given to a deserting wife.

Nowakila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nowlxikultum: Sentence of death passed by the kukusiut on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [688]

nuaiyao: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [426]

Nuäluimm: Synonym for Noäkynm, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nu'oos, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nuäpsulta: Toilet-hole.

nuaska: Birth.

Nuculcäqos: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [821]

nudak-an: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead. [769]

nudak-an du ilumsta: 1—High tide.
2—Long life. [823]

nudjiqosta: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold olachen-net post steady while being driven.

Nu'eymäj, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nuk": 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nuxkmälsaix: Synonym for Sximsximlt, an immoral supernatural woman.

nupal: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nuhämliwäxnum: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the kusiut season. [535]

Nukaoxa: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 nulwinuts: Synonym for qomo·ts, the large cone-shaped nsask whistle.
[534] Nuixa·ktl: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nuixa·kwl: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nuiyytskwan·e, "Nearest River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Necleetsconnay.
nu'xqulaix: Stone supernaturally born from another at sea level.
[823] Nuwaisa·x: ustāmq village.
Nuwāisalt, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nuxālk: Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nuxālkmq: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
Nuxem: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
Nuxem: Name of a female composer.
Nuxkmālaix, "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
nuxux: Light.
Nuxim: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nuximātlaix: Qi'aqa name of a Kimsquit man.
Nuxmalmmān·a, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.
[825] nuxsānk: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nuxstimut, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kukusiut after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nuxtnutsta: Cross-piece which holds open mouth of olachen net.
Nuxwlst: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] [425] nuxwolānkmm: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for resultant children. This is combined with an oration of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is automatic.
[828] Nuya: Mountain near Stuix.
nuyālxikāmut: Person who wanders away from home in despondency.
Nuyel·alaix: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·ia in the beginning of time.
Nu'yen·ixim: Land of salmon.

O

o'alpum: Kimsquit term for a'alk, archaic.
'O·f': Kwatna lad mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] okāl: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Okāomqs: Valley pre-empted by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Olālimut: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
oly: 1—The kusiut peerogative of scratching.
2—Bad, adjective.
Olrān·i: Kusiut name of a Stuxi man.
Olliyaiya, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Oloālamut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] 'omātulā': Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiutl: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saiynăz: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] salalsi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173] sa·lkăltmm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal. [257]
sa·lpsta: Cannibalistic incubus.
sa·lpstmm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585]
sălskekdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] salukwalas: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
saml: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sănoltymuhls Alquntem: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sanunumulsix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sănutlăm or Sănutlămdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusfalst as chief.
Sănuximăxuts, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
săhx; vocative, sătăi; vocative plural, săhxmu·ks: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sa·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sătlia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sătlyenuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sa·lma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] salsits: Whetstone, archaic. [412]
Sa·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river. [101]
Sa·tshamg: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
satskwal·a: Raft.
Sa·shamăn·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sawa: Pillow. [573]
sawadjut, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sayi, vocative, sayinas: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Sayinas: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
sazham: Bracken. [824]
sazwănas: Tide flats. [823]
sakdjulk: Heart.
Salnulnam: That part of Sens' which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Samhall: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Samsiutăn·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sannumlkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mtata, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sankwalatem: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa·qwa·t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmän·a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekilaxt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
sekima siälamkek: River net for salmon.
[822] Setsalänl: Echo.
Sexsexqälaix: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexsexqwalxelaoslaix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of of Ttitcäplilän·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Siälxeläx: Ancestral name created on earth by a Qomqo·ts man.
[825] Siaqam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sidäxsu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
Sidakaos di Ano°likwolsaix, "The Coming of Ano°likwolsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siusla: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'islalitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'itlliukek: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of mar-[431] riage is broached.
si'iqikim, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Sinmt, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Sisämi, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sikälamtak, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] siki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and susook rites.
Sikiliktmm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siqulq, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikwalxwlekx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikwäldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
Siknm: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
Silias: Celebrated composer.
[226] siltmaq: Salmon-weir.
sinaxyme'ax: Susook head-dress.
[827] sininits: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si·nipodjoxstmax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Simpicus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinemwak, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkemitl, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinunuktälätm: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Senq'mai: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
Sepios: Kusiut name of a Tsimoil man.
sołołcázmm: Scalp. [824]
soqwalakł': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot.
Spaixłaxymmán·a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spanhzilnaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
spániesta: Temporary camping-place.
Spatcahłt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spałki: Star.
sphum, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
spepandouts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] sphłkłkmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
sphłkts: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Sphłsinán·i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spl'nnunsta: Island west of Namu. spłx: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smmq with female organs. [824]
spoxáhcua: Unidentified berry. [821] S'łs', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Słskunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Łomqo·ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
sphła: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputy: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spuxdjut, "Eagle Down-ness": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825]
Spuxpuxhełłaix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nuxłalst in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxyá'mpdimut: Sisook name of Xisais origin.
Spuxspuxta: Sisook name of a Kimsquit woman.
spił·a: Unidentified berry. [824] spoult: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqałts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqali: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqałst or sqałstust: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nuxłalst. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
squma: 1—Chest. [103]*
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Squml: Land of Ashes.
sqaxusts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] sqels: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Squtsds: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [823] sqenm: Flood.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

skaqalitw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Sxē-tizem: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
sxnqē': That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Sxtisma: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [579]
2—Sleep, intangible hasiat prerogative.
sxiusnăm: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Sxqwasthstkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] sx-pē: Shadow. sxtqowsa: Hammer, archaic. [412]
sxkso: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601] sxlamalqs: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
sxlsa: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
sxip: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] sxlks: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
sxnem: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] sxnsk: Caribou.
sxhm: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Sxhmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sxhmsa or sxhmstnăls: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sxhmstaliktsa: Body.
sxhmstnăltsm: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sxwaxwkinstu-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sxwaxwkanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] sxka: Mountain goat grease. [824] sxkăltya: Castor.
Sxlsiai, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Sxlsla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
sxmăz: Octopus. [825]
Sxnakăles: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
sxqwarma: Red rock paint. [386]
sxla: Singer's baton.
sxalt: Text.
sxlo-pazz: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823] sxnin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased.
Sxsa: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [764]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
sxtsam: Dried dog salmon soaked in water. [262]
sxumsxlk: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sxlwalt: Black raspberry.
sxlstw: Ocean. [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Thqumqumit: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.

[825] tlukuhlhut: Sardine.

Tlitmoutshla, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water monsel.

Tlitmuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.

[825] tlma: Mountain goat sinew.

Tlola: 1—One of the first men to settle at Snux in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nuqhlit, when in human form at the beginning of time.

Tlnuqhlitte-a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to them in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.

[825] tlnuts: Sea-lion.

Tlmutadimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.

[821] tlul: 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.

[825] tlululp: Virulent skin disease.

tlupte-i: Cormorant.

Tlupe-ai, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tluputs, "Malignant" or "Deformed": A supernatural being.

tlpe: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.

tlpamp: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kuxlut dances.

[823] tlpapalum: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.

[415] tlulut: Water-tight basket.

[824] tmiua: Water-washed stump with smoured, radiating roots.

Tnlqa: Region on the upper Kitlope River.

[482] tnlcut: Tump-line.

tuka: Navel.

[825] Tuhuhl: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.

tuja: Mink.

tumidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.

[583] tup-a: Synonym for dimdmumum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.

[825] tupinu: 1—Fawn.
2—Nuxlukamp name of a Kimsquit woman.

Tpikuts: Star in the Great Bear.

[821] tsaqh: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.

Tsemutlu, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Talin.

[291] tsuhuh: Hat with flat top and broad brim.

tsuiu: Stonecrop.

Tsuiulah: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsu-kuut: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.

Tsulin: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsul: Kuxlut name of a Bella Coola man.

Tsumkum: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.

tu-ut: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.

[825] tulu: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are burnt. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by so many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be. 764 [301] [323] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is burnt. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones. 765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or olachen. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person. [262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the house of the deceased.' 765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

772 who die a second death sink to the lowest world, from which there is no [775] return.

The upper heaven is called Ata'xtl., or Sauxu'xak'a'la ti Sinx'(ais), or Sinxaus. Omq'o'mkilk'a. The deity ruling there is a woman who is called [774] Qmu'ln, or Tsi'sinxaxts. ("our women"), or Ek'lyak'tsinx.a'n. ("afraid of nothing").

772 This heaven is described as a prairie without any trees. It is said that 776 in order to reach it one must go up the river from the house of the gods in the lower heaven. In another tradition it is said that in travelling from the lower heaven to the upper heaven one has to pass the rent in the sky which is called Tsi.ne'xtsa ti Sinx'(ais). The house of the supreme deity stands in the far east, and a gale is continually blowing over the open country, driving every thing towards the entrance of her house. Near the house, however, it is calm. In front of the house stands a post in the shape of a large winged monster, and its mouth is the entrance to the house. In front of the house-door there is gravel of three colors,—blue, black, and white. Behind the house is a salt-water pond in which the goddess bathes. In this pond lives the a'nax or xlaalaak'sam. This being sometimes descends to our world. Wherever it moves, the rocks burst, and slide down the sides of the mountains. It is described as a snake or a fish (see pp. 45, 66).

773 In the beginning of the world the mountains were of great height.
823 They were human beings who made the world uninhabitable. Qmu'ln made war upon the mountains. She vanquished them, and made them smaller than they used to be. During this fight she broke off the nose of the mountain Yelyula'ms., which is situated near Nu.l'a'l. Its face may be recognized even now; and the Indians say that when its name is called, it answers. There are two mountains near the head-waters of Bella Coola River. The one is called Sta.xa'ksal'i.; the other one, Ne'xts. The former had a fire, called Sxaxal'xinxts, burning in his house. This fire warned him of the approach of enemies. When Qmu'ln made war upon the mountains, the fire warned its master. Qmu'ln was coming down the river in her canoe, which is named "T'lkas." When she approached, he broke her canoe, and she returned to heaven. The canoe has been transformed into stone, and may be seen to this day at the foot of the mountain Sta.xa'ksal'i. It is said that Qmu'ln visits the earth every now and then. Her visits cause sickness and death. She is described as a great warrior.

772 In the centre of the lower heaven, which is called Sinx', stands the 776 house of the gods. This house is named Nsinx'a (the House of Myths), or Nuxl'ustaxal'xwa ("where man was created"), or Nuxl'xalaa'xwa ("the house from which people come down"), or Nsaqlaxal'xwa ("the house to which people go"). In front of the house stands a post called Nsaxal'xwa. It is painted with representations of all kinds of birds. A have to put the firewood. This opening is called K'wa'ómots, that is, "mouth kept open by means of a wedge." Mamamalit'ela spoke: "The sky shall not burst again. This wedge shall keep its mouth open." The following ka'ómat song refers to these deities: — 776 821 [831]

> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible]
>
> ("My child, pushed like the sky when it broke
> On its K'wa'ómots of the sky, my child!
> Children are born, my child!
> On down in the mouth of the sky, my child!")

Our world is called A'ulkl'ts, or Qaulk'ts, that is, "the land below." It is an island swimming in the boundless ocean. In the far east a giant is sitting with legs apart, who is called Ax'ap'ilkomots. He holds a long stone bar in his outstretched hands. The earth is fastened to this stone bar by means of two stone ropes. Sometimes he gets tired, and moves his hands to take better hold of the stone bar. Then we have an earthquake; and the Bella Coola say, "Sawik'yaik'mots," that is, "he takes hold of our world." When he moves our earth westward, we have epidemics. When he moves it eastward, all sickness disappears. 772 776 823 [731] [755]

In the ocean lives a being called Sisaxa, who drinks every day swallows the water of the sea and gives it forth again. This is the cause of the tides. A mask representing this being appears in the ka'ómat ceremonial. He is represented as a human being, the face of which is painted with white stripes, which symbolize the various levels of the sea.

The world below us is the country of the ghosts (Ts'ek'a'ula'ma'). It is called Aiaxl'ómots. Descriptions of the ghosts' country are principally obtained from shamans who believe they have visited that country during a trance. According to the statement of an old woman who believed that as a little girl she had visited the country of the ghosts during a trance, the entrance to the country of the ghosts is through a hole situated in each house, between the doorway and the fireplace. The country of the ghosts stretches along the sandy banks of a large river. There is a hill behind their village, the base of which is covered with sharp stones. When it is summer here, it is winter there. When it is night here, it is day there. The ghosts do not walk on their feet, but on their heads. Their language is different from the one spoken on earth. The souls, on reaching the lower world, receive new names. The village of the ghosts is said to be surrounded by a fence. They have a dancing-house, in which they perform 772 775 [756] [762]

772 775 their kā'ima. It is just below the hearth-place of each village. The dancing-house is very large and long. It has four doors. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed to the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Ānsa'ksmā'ti. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enter life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his sleep. He saw two trails,—one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 41).

773 825 [illegible] The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the salmon, which is called Ma'lem. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world:—

Once upon a time a man named Wī'wel'ne lived at Qī'ūmqēn. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Wī'wel'ne entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made use upon the salmon, that he had completed them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Ma'lem. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I completed the fish. Let us make use upon them. I shall certainly take some shrew, and we will place them in the river." Mink answered, "I am glad that you are speaking,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers. 223 [136] [262]

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and coho salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,* allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance. 226 262 [251] [252] [263] [237] [735] [556]

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed 262 [241] [251] [178] 124 322

*See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

their houses. Dishes, benches, cooking-boxes, cradles, totem-poles, canoes, all were carved from this wood. The bark was woven into baskets, and when dyed formed the most common ceremonial decoration.

Even within the forty miles of the river valley formerly occupied by the Bella Coola there are considerable variations in climate. At the mouth of the river the typical Pacific coast type is found, without great extremes of temperature and with much rain, especially in winter time. During winter, the moisture is precipitated as snow a few hundred feet above the valley, and the limit of the snow can be watched on the mountain slopes, rising or falling a few feet from day to day. Farther up the valley, the winters are colder and in many cases snow lies for weeks on the ground, and in the upper part of the Bella Coola area the winters are severe, although much more moderate than on the upper regions immediately to the east.

What has been the history of the inhabitants of this land? They believe that long, long ago, Ālquntäm, the supreme god, caused their first ancestors to be created in his house, Nusmät·a, in the land above, and sent them down to populate the Bella Coola valley. These first people came in groups of two or three, brothers and sisters, or occasionally man and wife, each group descending, in many cases in animal form, on a certain mountain and then making their home at its foot. They brought with them animals and fish, tools and houses, also the knowledge of ceremonial dances. In fact, they differed from the Bella Coola of the recent past only in having greater supernatural power. These first people increased with extraordinary rapidity, until each group grew into a village, bound together by a knowledge of their first ancestor. In course of time the occupants of certain villages combined, as some increased more rapidly than others, but on the whole each settlement maintained its character of being the descendants of one group of the first settlers of this world.

This mythological belief is a fair picture of Bella Coola life as it was when the first white man visited the valley. Mac-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a snuuq, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings."

776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind.

776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Ałquntăm created men and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural

776* 825 773

"This matter will be described more fully in connection with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xi.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 of a woman, Sekakmān·a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a 825 meal, Raven lied to his hostess by telling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Sekakmān·a doubted the story and told one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful at his home, some of the scales would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth looked inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Sekakmān·a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and threw his spoil into the water as he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish increased so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

262 One of the foods regarded by the Bella Coola as a luxury
824 is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries
539 in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Sluilekwaily, a mountain in the Carrier country above Burnt Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he wanted to keep these for food for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let him out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it in his flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Sluilekwaily was very angry, but could do nothing.

773 Though Alquntām created the world, he did not make it perfect nor equip it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and tremendous power, was always seeking ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate [778] himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of [823]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

instructed people about the significance of death omens; it was Raven who showed them the use of slings; and it was Raven who constructed secluded caves and ledges to serve as meeting-places for chiefs. 773 [622] [823]

In brief, the Bella Coola regard Raven as an explorer, teacher, and inventor, whose power, obtained from Ałquntām, enabled him to construct and outwit his maker, but not to create. Much of his work was for the good of mankind, but much was evil and malicious, an aspect which belongs to mythology. Essentially human, Raven could have been included among anthropomorphic, as well as among zoomorphic beings. He differs from most of the supernatural ones in belonging entirely to the past, as his descendants have none of the first Raven's power. It is doubtful whether he still exists, but in any case he has long since ceased to take any interest in the affairs of the Bella Coola, who consider him only as a figure of mythology and ancient history. 773 776 [825]

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS OF THE VEGETABLE AND MINERAL KINGDOMS

Bella Coola beliefs concerning anthropomorphic and zoomorphic beings are relatively clear and exact; their appearance is known, their powers and functions recognized. The supernatural attributes of trees and plants are less definite. Ałquntām created the former in the beginning of time, and they were consequently able to talk and act like human beings at that distant period. Owing to the degeneration of man, mortals are no longer able to converse with trees, although the latter can still understand our remarks. In a vague way, the Bella Coola continue to think of trees as having human personalities, but so little is known of their powers, and they enter so seldom into contact or conflict with mortals, that they are practically ignored. 776 824

In an equally vague manner, Nature is regarded as a Mother, giving birth to the trees and plants. One of the kusiut dances portrays this birth of the flowers every spring (II, p. 46). [535] [575]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 824 (II, p. 196). In this way the belief is kept before the eyes of the Bella Coola, but it is not a matter of prime importance in their lives. Rather contradictory is the concept that though each plant lack individual life, there is a supernatural mother of each species, corresponding in general terms to the Mother of Snakes described in the last section. As one informant expressed it:

"If there is no mother, how can a plant grow?"

These mothers are assumed to live beneath the ground. Occasionally, one of them has been discovered. Not many years ago, a number of women were collecting bracken roots when one which had been gathered began to turn into a snake. The women were alarmed and puzzled at this strange phenomenon. As they stood watching, the ground in front of them fell away as if there had been an earthquake, and they realized that the snake-root had been the mother of the plant. Without further fear they cooked and ate it.

776 823 Stones, too, and mountains were made by Ālquntām; consequently they have supernatural abilities and can understand the words and actions of mortals. When a wise man passes close beneath a precipitous mountain he always says to it:

"Please make yourself firm."

Most mountains, when requested politely, refrain from sliding and killing those passing beneath.

539 776 823 In former days mountains in many cases rose to meet hunters, and sometimes turned completely over. The Bella Coola are not sure whether this was caused by the mountain itself, or by a snuuq within. Wise hunters carry ropes with them when they penetrate into deep valleys, and when they feel the first tipping of a mountain they leap for a convenient tree, grasp it with their legs, heads downwards, and tie themselves in that position. Slowly the mountain rises and turns over, but, if the ropes do not break, the hunters suffer no ill effects. After a varying interval the mountain returns to its [789] normal position. This reversal can be hastened if a man bites

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemālotła. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Aiye Xemxemālotłaq,[10]	naqwidit	łłok	di sonqʷnudix
Hail, Xemxemālotła,	open	the loftiest	of your heaven
shāxyuxamdu	dji tlexwniqnu		tcim nānudjix.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemālotła is the being who takes care of Tłāqmā·ks in the upper skyland. It is said that this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather. [776]

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [824] [785]

[10] The vocative form.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

[824] If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [825] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [261] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire titbits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"Wai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

[502] Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [133] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Mesatche Nose, [756]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the point between Labouchere Channel and Bentinck Arm, there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain. 782 [133] [502] [756]

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is Ṫlitcāplilān·a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, Ṫlitcāplilān·a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Ṫlitcāplilān·a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Ṫlitcāplilān·a. [776] [224] [773]

Mınakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayers in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on any journey by canoe, the captain is careful to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Ālqunām, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity. [776] [484] [824] [825]

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on presents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw 775 782

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pose should remain continent for several nights to increase his generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[24] is to observe continence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[25] as poi-

[24]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.
[25]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 785 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals [278] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the [783] river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, e-m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjat which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

292 whiskers over which is scattered eagle down. From the back 535 of the head-dress hang weasel skins. In Bella Bella it is said to
* 556 be customary for a skin to be added on every occasion when a 575 nusek is confined to the back-room. This may happen as many as fifteen times to the child of wealthy parents, and a few Bella Coola have adopted the practice of marking each with a skin.
[237] Usually, some six or nine are hung in two tiers, without consideration of the number of times the wearer has been in seclusion. The central figure of the forehead mask is a head with [532] a hooked nose, the recurved hook being joined to the face itself. This figure does not vary with the wearer's ancestral myth, and no one knows what it represents. This design is
[177] said to have been introduced to Bella Coola from the north a [237] few generations ago; before that time the head-dress consisted of a circular band of dyed cedar-bark, decorated with the tail [824] feathers of one of the large woodpeckers. The Bella Coola call it simply, "forehead mask." Each initiate carries a hollow
[532] rattle, carved in the shape of a bird, which he holds in his right [534] hand, belly uppermost. Long, long ago, when a dancer failed to do so, the rattle became alive and the bird flew away; hence, this rule has been obeyed ever since.

535 Each initiate takes up his station in some part of the house
* 556 behind the fire and dances to the beating of the sticks. The 575 left hand of each is clasped behind his back and in his right he holds the rattle and keeps it in constant motion by shaking his wrist. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a good dancer. Keeping the body stiff and the legs close together, he rises with slight jumps, barely altering his position on the floor. Sometimes he slowly turns around sunwise[17] in his series of jumps, at other times he does not alter his position. The head is bent from side to side and downwards at each jump, causing the eagle down to fly in all directions. Nusek assistants blow more of the material on to the head-dress at intervals (see Plate 16).[1]

[521] [17]The Bella Coola believe that the sun moves from east to south to west to [796] north. Many ceremonial movements follow this direction, which will henceforth be described as sunwise.

[1] [See cut 116, facing p 219 - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

use his own discretion as to the design. At the top he always 211 places the bird or animal cloak in which his first ancestor, 556 traced patrilineally, came to this earth. Beneath this is the cloak of his mother's first ancestor if it differs from his father's. 778
There are no fixed rules for other representations. Sometimes 532 a man wishes to display the cloaks of the first ancestors of his [773] wife, or wives; more often, the designs are of creatures with which his own ancestors came in contact after reaching this earth.[4] One of the first settlers, Smaoan (I, p. 332), married a Bella Bella woman from whom he obtained a ceremony connected with a whale, an animal which has often been used on the totem-poles of his descendants. The lower figures on totem-poles often represent creatures from which a recent ancestor of the chief obtained supernatural assistance. Consequently, the number of designs which may be used is legion, and the order of portrayal is immaterial. Moreover, Bella Coola art is not sufficiently realistic for designs to be easily recognized, nor is there standard conventionalization of little used animals; so it follows that the designs on totem-poles are often unidentifiable.[5] This is of little consequence, since their value rests neither upon the artistic skill exhibited, nor even upon their significance in connection with the owner's ancestral myth, but upon the goods expended to validate the display.

All Bella Coola totem-poles are carved from the trunks of [824] huge cedars, with the wood cut away so that the designs stand out in high relief. The carvers are allowed great latitude both [184] in choice of form and colouring, hence there is wide variation

---

[4]Ainaxmlaix is the term applied to animals with which ancestors came in contact, other than their cloaks. [825]

[5]This statement represents the layman's point of view, that is, of the Bella Coola who was not himself a carpenter-sculptor. It is probable that an expert would have greater facility in recognizing the conventionalized forms used by his associates, although the whole pattern of Bella Coola culture was opposed to extreme standardization. Unfortunately, wood-carving, in fact art work of every kind, had degenerated to such an extent that only one man with any recognized skill in that respect was still living when this study was made. He was both unreliable and uncooperative, so that it was impossible even to collect examples of his work, still less to record his interpretations of the designs of masks or other objects carved by his predecessors. [184] [182] [115]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

cedars that flourish on that part of the coast. Thanks to their supernatural power they were able to carry these easily. 529 A Returned to Smaiin-a they built a dug-out canoe of birch(?), the outside of which, and also the paddles, they decorated with abalone-shells. The effect was very beautiful, and they named the canoe, Ki'laislotl. In this craft the six set out down the Bella Coola River. When still above Stuix they stopped to investigate a beating sound and found that it came from the house of Oḑsmai. The latter invited them to come in, using *Dudusong*ʷ's name, which he knew in some mysterious manner. When they entered they found that the beating sound was caused by their host's daughter, Kānuslāliām, who was sitting in the back-room, thumping a copper which she was holding as if it had been an infant. Oḑsmai was much impressed with his guests' canoe, and they with his. A trade was mutually agreeable, as a result of which the travellers obtained a copper canoe named Ełłiaslotl, fitted with copper paddles. *Dudusong*ʷ married Kānuslāliām, who embarked with him and his brothers and sisters. They had not gone far when they were hailed by the chief of a village, who also knew *Dudusong*ʷ's name.

"*Dudusong*ʷ," he called out, "your canoe is not much good; it has to be paddled or poled. Let us trade. You take my canoe, Kwakwasslotl,[31] it travels with its own power."

*Dudusong*ʷ was unwilling to part with Ełłiaslotl, but at last agreed. The seven now travelled rapidly in their merganser canoe to the coast, not stopping at the villages which they saw on the way. At the mouth of the Bella Coola River, *Dudusong*ʷ cast into the water one of the fish which Ałqunātm had given him; it became the progenitor of all the Bella Coola olachen. The travellers went thence to the head of South Bentinck Arm where *Dudusong*ʷ threw out another olachen, the forefather of all that now frequent this place. He repeated this at Rivers Inlet, at Smith Inlet, and at every fiord on the coast, wherefore olachen are plentiful in British Columbia at the present day. At Ełłhsmł, a town of which the location is uncertain, *Dudusong*ʷ was received as a benefactor and given the name Ttłkwakila. After visiting all the rivers on the coast Łłtwi and his party returned to Bella Coola, where they finally settled at Stuix. [825]

Throughout their travels they had carried the cedar trees with them, and they now planted them at Stuix. That is why fine cedars have flourished there since that date. The four brothers built a comfortable house and also constructed a salmon-weir in the river, which made them so prosperous that people came from far and near to pledge their daughters to the fishermen. They were able to give numerous potlatches and so display a totem-pole, the design of which Ałqunātm had shown to Łłtwi [824] [532]

[31] Kwakwasslotl is a merganser.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VIII

DEATH

Death Rites—Memorial Rites—Fate of the Dead

Death Rites

DEATH is marked by even more complicated and prolonged rites than marriage. Like so many primitive peoples, the Bella Coola not only carry out elaborate rituals soon after the actual decease, but hold lengthy commemorative and mourning ceremonials in later years. As these require the co-operation of a large number of people, the death of an individual affects a wider circle than his own relatives, and the celebrations have, therefore, an important social as well as religious significance. 76 796 [182]

Omens of Death

It is not surprising that the Bella Coola, believing in the omnipresence of the supernatural, should consider various peculiar occurrences to be omens of death. One of the simplest of these is to hear the falling of a tree when there is neither wind nor other reason to account for it. Such a fall is audible only to the person whom it warns of approaching death, either to himself or to one of his relatives. A number of men may be in the forest together, when one of them hears the crash of a tree and notices that his companions are unaware of it; he realizes that this is an omen and protects himself by calling out: 763

"Let this evil react against whoever has been plotting evil against me."

The basis of this custom is the belief that someone has been practising black magic against the hearer, who, by this answer, is able to cause the sorcery to recoil upon the malefactor. Even more dangerous than to hear a falling tree, is to have one crash [954] [824]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

963 to earth close by. In the winter of 1921-2 three Bella Coola
[824] were almost crushed in this manner; within a year the deaths took place of the wife of one, the mother of the second, and the daughter of the third. This was considered definite confirmation of their belief.

963 When a chief dies, a supernatural woman, Sk̓wanit-ăn-ă, 776 "The Weeper," comes to earth to lament the loss. Crying piteously, she walks to and fro in the woods near the village where the death has taken place, but can be heard or seen only by a person in whose family there will soon be a fatality. This
[789] can be counteracted by going boldly to her and collecting some of the clotted mucus that drips from her nose as she weeps. If this is wrapped in the finder's clothing and stored for a year, it brings him good fortune and probably deflects the impending death, but to see "The Weeper" without knowledge of the proper procedure is to court disaster. A prominent Bella Coola woman died in June, 1922, and her son believed that he heard the lamentation of the supernatural visitor about six the next morning in the woods behind the missionary's house. He rushed forth to find her, but was unsuccessful. Within a few days, one of his nieces died, as was to be expected.

963 A comparatively common bird in Bella Coola is the 825 k̓nakwaz, which is about the size of a robin and dark, greenish brown.[1] Its whistle is frequently heard and no significance is attached to it, but it is an omen of death if a k̓nakwaz comes close to a house and chirps out, "Ini-i." On the night of February 20, 1924, one called beneath the window of a man who was about to start on a journey in his motor-boat. Next morning, although the bird lay dead beside his house, he insisted on starting. He camped at Restoration Bay where he was awakened by a voice calling his name, but could see no one. This was probably an owl, a bird which often foretells disaster by calling the name of the person to whom it will occur. Even this did not deter him and within twenty-four hours his

[1] The bird could not be identified, although it belongs to fact, not mythology.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

put his granddaughter into the ground beside her grandmother but it may all be for the best."[18] 764 537

There is no doubt that condolences of this nature assist the mourning relatives to bear up under their grief. This fact was emphasized by several Bella Coola, and in addition the writer was able to observe it on several occasions. They readily respond to suggestions of any kind and undoubtedly derive comfort from the laudatory comments of influential chiefs.

Speeches of this general nature are always delivered as the grave is being filled in. Sometimes this work is finished before all who wish to do so have expressed themselves, sometimes the remarks are so short that they are ended before all the earth has been thrown back. When the hole has been filled to ground level, it is stamped down and the surplus earth scattered out of sight among the bushes, no mound being thrown up. 764

Great care is always taken to prevent the return of the ghost. In addition to the weighting with stones already described, other methods are used before the funeral party leaves the cemetery. Heavy boards are usually laid flat over the grave and rocks piled on these bar the way up from below. A further precaution is the setting upright of four stakes, one at each corner of the hole, and fastening ropes of cedar-bark between them along the east and west sides of the grave. The significance of this is not fully understood, except that the ghost cannot pass the strands. Four spruce saplings are cut and placed either between the grave and the village, or one on each side of the hole; their sharp needles form an effective barrier. 764 775 [824]

While these precautions are being taken, any clothing and utensils brought to the grave and not already consumed are thrown on the fire and allowed to blaze brightly. The ashes 764

[18] It was impossible to record these speeches verbatim at the time of their delivery. The writer was able to make notes, which were amplified by each speaker later telling him what he had said. Although lacking literal accuracy, the above may be considered essentially correct. [126]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

insane, a calamity unquestionably due to his recklessness in handling the earth where a supernatural one had trod. 777 787*

This point illustrates the danger of near approach to a mätsqus, a theme well exemplified in the stories in the next chapter. Such perils must be counteracted in diverse ways according to the traditions of different ancestral families. One common method is to seek a lonely spot in the woods and there hollow out a shelter beneath an overhanging rock or fallen tree-trunk where the person who has been exposed to danger must remain for four days, eating nothing and at intervals scrubbing his body with branches of devil's club, spruce, and other rough plants. These protect him from the evil effects of the monster. [761] 783 [824]

Similar in function to the mätsqus, and equally dangerous to the unwary, is the susiutl. The latter is supposed to have been created on this earth, at Bella Bella, in the beginning of time by Yulätimut. It was at first the canoe made by this carpenter, and then turned loose by him to range the mountains and fiords, as it has ever since, equally at home on land and in water, and in various forms. The following is a typical description of the manner in which a susiutl appeared in the past. 777 787* [773] [776] 539 777 787*

Long ago a man was hunting in the mountains when he saw a salmon, which changed in an instant to a fish-like monstrosity with two heads but no tail. He lunged at it with his stick, and in so doing started a slide which carried the salmon down the mountain. As this was taking place, the hunter said:

"Go down the mountain, salmon; I will get you at the bottom."

When he reached the foot of the new slide he saw the fish lying clear on the stones. He cut it up and slung it on a cedar-bark rope. Now this salmon was a susiutl, the first that had ever been seen, and the hunter obtained supernatural good luck from his experience. He also took the name of Susiutl, a designation which has been handed down until recently.

After this adventure many people hunted for the susiutl, and with fair success in early days, but now it cannot be found, 777 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

owing to the failure of hunters to observe ceremonial chastity. When obtained, a sutaif was cut into small pieces, one of which worn upon the person would make the flesh so hard that an arrow could not penetrate.

Sometimes the sutaif assumes the form of either a spring or a coho salmon. Not long ago a Bella Bella man, travelling in a canoe, ate one of these. Once devoured, it enlarged itself, made its way out by consuming the man's lower jaw, then jumped overboard and was lost.

The mere appearance of a sutaif does not necessarily bring misfortune to the beholder, even if he has not the necessary knowledge, or courage, to take advantage of it. The following is an instance.

On one occasion the father's father of a middle-aged Bella Coola was going upstream at the time the salmon were jumping, when, unknown to him, one leaped into the canoe behind him. His first knowledge of anything untoward came to him when the bow rose out of the water, and, looking around, he saw that this was caused by the weight of a green-covered stone lying in the bottom of his canoe; the salmon had vanished. The man threw overboard his fore-board with the stone on it. When he told his friends afterwards of his experience, they informed him that he had missed an opportunity for obtaining supernatural good fortune, as the "salmon" must have been a sutaif.

The sutaif can also be used as a charm. If a man, while in a pure condition through the observance of ceremonial chastity, eats a small portion of the flesh, it renders him proof against bullet or arrow. An intelligent Bella Coola stated that his father's brother had done so on one occasion, with the result that a bullet, fired by his wife's mother's father, fell harmless at his feet after striking him.

Medicine can also be obtained indirectly from a sutaif. When one of these fish-like creatures swims through a pond, wriggling as it goes, it frequently sheds some of its scales.

Sc McDermott E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NES

These become lilies (of the species known as lilikinaly or [illegible], "The mouth powers of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting outward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a ceremonial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a nulmaut or a nuiatl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the gokin i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wilmamil, who was also called O'mitil, was erecting memorial posts on Mount Pugwidal when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the cry of a gokin i.

Supernatural good fortune has also been obtained from the "Mother" of certain plants.

Among the roots that are sought for when a man intends to give a potlatch are those of clover and of ohil, a grass which grows on flats near the sea. Once the root of an elderly (in 1923) Bella Coola woman dug up the Mother of Ohil, a root, thick as her thumb, but shaped like a woman. Perhaps the reason that she found it was because she was digging in the darkness, after the setting of the sun. The woman, ignorant of the proper procedure, did nothing, with the result that her hands became painfully swollen. If she had wrapped the root in a portion of her used clothing and kept it hidden for one year, without saying anything about her find, it would have brought her supernatural good luck.

Another woman found an elderberry as large as a baseball, and shaped like the mask worn above the forehead by a member of the nuxalk society. Her father, an old man skilled in such matters, wrapped the berry in his daughter's soiled clothing and kept it carefully hidden in her box. It brought her supernatural good luck because, no matter how much or how often she gave away presents, goods always came to her.

SUPERNATURAL GOOD LUCK FROM STONES

Stones are among the objects from which supernatural good luck can be obtained. A person who has long observed ceremonial chastity may be fortunate enough to hear what seems to be the weeping of a new-born infant, as he passes in his canoe beneath some steep stone cliff. Then, if he watches, he will see a strange thing. Down drops a dripping stone on the shore of the sea. If the observer takes the infant-stone, wraps it in his soiled clothing and stores it among his possessions, it will act as other bringers of supernatural good fortune by luring all kinds of valuables to the owner. In fact, such a stone is said to be so potent that if left in an empty box for some time, it will answer enough skins to fill the receptacle.

Schoolcraft K-5 (1822-1824)948
NEA Bellecrete NEA

them that might escape. It is the sickness! The din increases; the leader works himself into a frenzy with his rapid gyrations, then he stills the noise as the shaman goes to the door. In dead silence, the more striking in contrast to the previous tumult, he partly opens his hands and puffs against them, as if blowing something out of the door, at the same time calling out, hoip. Again the beating of sticks breaks out, again it is stilled, and again the shaman blows forth the sickness. This is done four times. The shaman uses his own discretion whether to send the sickness through the door or the smoke-vent.

A variant of this method is for the functioning shaman to dance during the beating of sticks, before throwing himself on the patient. With chattering teeth and shaking rattle, he revolves meanwhile, his free arm bent at the elbow so that his wrist, which he shakes freely, is close to his chin; at intervals he calls out, ewaiiwa. It is a serious and important proceeding to the Bella Coola, and the effects are considered nullified if a dog barks during the stick-beating.

(c) Some powerful shamans cure by the use of dried and undried cedar-bark. A roll made of these two substances is placed among glowing embers until it is itself alive, when the shaman puts it in his mouth. After dancing for some time to the accompaniment of frenzied stick-beating, he heals forth the bark, still burning, and again puts it in the fire. This is done four times. Then he thrusts the burning bark into the patient's mouth, and leaves it there for some time before pulling it forth. This, too, is repeated four times. When finally drawn forth, it has extracted the sickness, which can then be thrown away by the throwing away of the bark. It seems clear that this cure is done by conjuring, but the writer was unable to learn the method employed, and was repeatedly assured that no sleight was used.

(d) One illness is caused by a person carelessly stepping on a dead salmon, such as dot the banks of the rivers in the summer. The fish, indignant, injects a sickness into the offender.

Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

Causative Medicines

MEDICINES OF INFANCY

To Cause Tallness

As soon as the umbilical cord is cut, blow upon it and pull out; the infant will grow up to be tall and big.

The following medicines are applied four days after birth:

The infant is washed, formerly in a circular cedar or cottonwood basin, and the remedy pressed against its body while crying. Some families prefer to wait until the child is able to crawl.

To Cause Strength (three means)

(1) Collect four pieces of bark, each from a different tree where a grizzly bear has scratched. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over his body. This ensures him the strength of a grizzly bear.

(2) Collect four water-smoothed, green stones from the river. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over the body. After four days, return the stones to the river.

(3) Warm the body of an octopus, beaver, or wolverine in the smoke of a fire and gently press the carcass against an infant's body, saying:

"Please, may he be like you."

This provides the child with the strength of the animal called.

To Cause Long Life

Collect four pieces of wood which have been rolled hard and smooth in a landslide. Boil them in the infant's wash-bowl, cool, then re-warm them at a fire and rub them over the body. This makes him strong and healthy, able to endure all dangers and weaknesses even those caused by a sorcerer. The principle is that the child will be as hardy as the wood proved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

itself to be by withstanding the crushing weight of stone and 789 earth. An old Kimsquit man expressed the firm conviction 856 that his great age was the result of this treatment soon after 816 birth. [824]

To Cause Imperviousness to Cold

Kill a water ouzel, warm it at a fire, then press it against 789 every part of the infant's body. This makes him as heedless 825 of cold water as the bird. A merganser may be used in the 856 same way, or the foot of one be placed in the child's hand and patted as his fingers clutch it.

To Cause a Quarrelsome Disposition

Burn the nest of wasps and rub the ashes on the infant's face.
He will become as bellicose and quick to resent injury as the [155] insects. One old man who habitually beats his wife explains that this is involuntary, since he was treated in this way when a child. Fighting is no longer allowed, so the only person on whom he can exercise his martial ardour is his wife. The woman regards this treatment as a matter of course and the reason is accepted as valid by her associates.

To Cause Success in Thieving

Kill a pack-rat, warm it at a fire, and rub the carcass lightly over the infant's body. This will make him as successful a thief as the animal. Other methods are to cut off a foot and put this as the infant clutches it in his fingers, or to rub its hands with the ashes of a burnt rat.

To Cause Success in Singing

Catch a live robin or smamaxaxis (probably one of the 533 thrushes), warm it at a fire, and rub it lightly against the in- 789 fant's throat, saying: 825
"May he be a singer like you." 856
Then release the bird, and the child will grow up a songster.
The following story is told of the power of the smamaxaxis's [539]
song:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856 [825]

To Cause Left-handedness

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Hakwilt (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [533]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that one man accidentally sucked when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its master could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dyed and undyed cedar-bark. 789 825 886

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

To Cause Obesity 789

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten. 826 622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an squaw-i (varied thrush?) alive and pat it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying: 583 789

"May she be a singer like you." 825

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

To Cause Ability in Hunting 224

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained. 789 824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Heat the penis of a mountain goat or beaver at a fire. 789 821

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the ocean or a river, saying: 825

2:McIlwraith E-. (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

uninitiated are expelled, with the exception of the nusuk to whom, as guests, a meal is served. Then they too leave and the kukuxiut eat together. Finally, the singers strike up one of the dancer's songs, and he dances to it to end the evening's rites. 575* 796

The fourth day is nakuam, "That Which Is Opened." During the day the carpenters work to complete the masks, and towards dusk the house is again put in order. The kukuxiut are summoned again to practise the songs, if necessary, and always to arrange who shall wear the masks, a matter left to the marshals and the carpenters. Then the uninitiated are called in to see the masked figures and watch any dramatic representation. After their exclusion, the masks are burnt. Then the kukuxiut gather outside the dancer's house where his song is sung once more to send his call back above. Frequently another kuxiut now receives a call, so that the nakuam of one dancer is likewise the kuxinow for another. The kukuxiut assemble in the latter's house, but the uninitiated are not allowed to return to that from which they have been ejected until the platform-enclosure has been destroyed at the end of the season. [104] [532] [533] [532]

A word might be said about kuxiut paraphernalia, although much of this will have to be described in detail for special dances. Boas gives illustrations of a large number of kuxiut masks and gives such an admirable description of them that little need be added. They are carved from the solid wood, the larger of beech, the smaller of alder, and each carpenter endeavours to make a striking effigy of the being portrayed. Kuxtlemalaic is present at every dance and has become so well standardized that she can always be recognized. This is true, also, for Thunder, Echo, the kaskas, the Laughter, the Hermaphrodite, and a few other supernatural beings, but so much variation occurs in others that even a kuxiut of much experience cannot always tell what being is represented. The masks are painted, and sometimes the designs indicate the being, even though the carving fails to do so; variamilitude is 575* 796 532 [114] [124] [176]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 746 be noted, kwiat masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to [171] avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated. The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).
746 The large, cone-shaped form used in sisaok ceremonial is re-534 placed in kwiat dances by smaller type consisting of portions [237] of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kwiat can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to [429] anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 746 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One [534] old man described a pipe formerly used at Tāl'is, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[124] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole. Little could be learned of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his crest and displayed much pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
609 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers
746 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire [241] of the kwiatsi to impress their uninitiated tribesmen, they [123] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

[See category 16, p84(B) ANALYCT]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

It is said that, in former times, the kukusiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukusiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

General Observations about the Dances

A detailed description of various kusiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nuxqalxwaista. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

The Dance of Nuxkwaqa[10]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Nuxkwaqa, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[10] Cf. Boas, p. 60.

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien-a, whence its captain leaps to Nuqulwaista to await the coming of Alquntăm. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nalwam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noăkynum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [715 times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[891 eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787 that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [620 this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776 patron was Noăkynum, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noăkynum
575 is patron for several kukuiat, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river 796 the kuiat dances begin.
[184

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [424 slight variations, if any. In Tsumsit the kuiat who has the
[55 [illegible]

Kimsquit, Alaxiwnaxam,* and in Sisiutl, Xemtsum. Although, [115

[426
[578

*Details of this dance were learned from the father of [illegible], who intimated that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman referred to the handing of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to secure it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

*Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his person, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kuiat names have significances of this type.

[The Cannibal Dance]

*575 in banning the rite if they do not think the dancer will be able *796 to carry it out properly. When the call comes, the uninitiated are at once expelled from the Cannibal's house; later he rushes [424] to the graveyard and exhumes one of the meat-filled frames previously buried. Non-members watch with horror as he sinks his teeth in the "flesh." Closely guarded, he is then taken to every house where, if they are bold, the uninitiated peer forth from their bedrooms and watch his performance.
He carries part of the corpse in his arms and periodically sinks his teeth in the repulsive mass. As usual, apparent attempts are made to tie him to this earth, but in spite of them he escapes to the upper regions where he remains for an unusually long period. Great efforts are made to reduce him to a state of [824] emaciation, for which purpose he drinks large amounts of water in which cedar-wood has been boiled. When the Cannibal ultimately returns to earth, the cannibalistic incubus is expelled and he at length becomes normal. When dancing, a [535] corpse-eater constantly bends both hands towards the floor in front of him and upwards, as though raising some heavy object towards his face. Then his head sinks towards this, only to be thrown quickly upwards and to one side, with a wild expression in his eyes. The uninitiated are told that this represents the manner in which he lifts a corpse towards his mouth and bites, only to be revolted by its putrescence. He has, they hear, no actual liking for human flesh, but his incubus fills him with an irresistible craving for it. Frequently [532] he wears on his blanket wooden representations of skulls (see Plate 71), symbolic of the corpses devoured.

*575 Rarely, a corpse-eating Cannibal kills a slave and commands
*796 to devour his body as a means of impressing the uninitiated,[1] but usually this is done only under the driving force of revenge 567 or jealousy. If a man hears that a near relative, slave of a 648 foreign tribe, has been killed, he often determines to wipe out blood with blood. He consults a corpse-eating Cannibal, and [1] Eating of corpses has long ceased among the Bella Coola; the present venue is used merely for convenience.

[See category 116, p 164(A) - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*595 *796 realm above. The method of escape and the rites that occur during his absence do not differ from those previously described for other Cannibals, and the means taken to capture him on his return are likewise similar. But soon after dusk a rite occurs which has not been previously recorded. The kukuxtat assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house, each carrying a torch made of resinous wood, liberally smeared with gum and rendered more inflammable with frayed cedar-bark. X himself, well guarded, is escorted to the middle of the group, while a herald calls out that he is going to make what he has consumed fly upward. In his arms he carries what appears to the uninitiated, watching from a distance, to be a dead dog; in reality, it is a dog skin, stuffed with eagle down. Four times he turns around, uttering his cry of ewe, ewe, ewe, while his men call out i..... and the women drone. Then, in some way, the down-filled dog-skin is thrown upwards and disappears. One informant had seen this done in his youth, but was unaware of the method employed. The group then disperses and X is taken back to his own house.

[816] [124]

About midnight a herald goes to every house, summoning the kukuxtat, and especially the singers, to X's. They practise a new song for the Cannibal, and towards dawn it is sung as the "running song" previously described, accompanied by the weird ewe, ewe, ewe. At day-break, a kuxtat, chosen for the purpose because he is a fleet runner, pounds at the door of every house, and calls out:

"Come to eat dried salmon," and dashes on to the next.

Thus invited, the kukuxtat daily assemble in X's house for a meal.

For four days X remains crouched on his platform, except when, aroused to fury, he makes a tour of the village; and except when making his nightly circuit, during which the frightened uninitiated cover their heads with blankets, fearing that he will smell their breath and devour them. On the fourth day X is carried to the river and washed, in spite of his struggles. While this is taking place a number of kukuxtat visit

2;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has retired from sight. Awi'kwalaxis gives her customary dance, her head bent as if she constantly wished to rest it on someone's shoulder, and her opposite arm waving violently. After one circuit of the fire she withdraws from sight behind the matting. Then the marshals call the uninitiated to withdraw, and the growling Cannibals hurry them forth. The evening's ceremonials conclude in the usual way, except that the masks are not burnt.

575* 796* [776] [532]

The length of time required for the figures to appear and perform is so great that sakaxaw can seldom be completed on a single night. When the marshals decide that it is too late for further drawn, they can call a postponement at any time; the uninitiated are told to withdraw and the Sakaxiw disperse shortly afterwards. The following evening they are recalled and the ritual is carried on from the point where the break was made. In this account it has been assumed that it is possible to complete the display without postponement.

Four nights later everyone is called back once again. The Sakaxiw first take their places, and then the uninitiated are summoned. The ritual on this occasion is identical with that just described for sakaxaw with the same promenade of supernatural beings and the same explanations by Awi'kwalaxis. After the uninitiated depart the masks are burnt, two at a time, in the manner previously described, this being the last event in the Mystery Dance.

[532]

THE DANCE OF W'ewaxa

Nadlqwaxa is not, according to Bella Coola mythology, the only bringer of salmon to the river, nor is he the only one whose action has been dramatized as a Sakaxiw dance. A similar purveyor of fish is *W'ewaxa who comes every year to Bella Coola. Boas (p. 58) has recorded the origin myth connected with the rite, and states that the movements of the dancers influence the duration of the Sakaxiw season; this observation was not confirmed. W'ewaxa is supposed to return from the

575* 796* 776 825 184 824

*Also called Kwakwakwaxa, "Who Brings Our Food."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 776 825 184 824 793 824 825 539

land of the salmon early in January, and it is owing to his successful raid that there is a plentiful supply of fish the following year. The fact that the Bella Coola attribute the same function to Nuákynum provides no difficulties to native philosophers.

"Different individuals have different stories," they say, and the fact that the two are contradictory is a matter of no consequence.

The incidents described in the following myth are always spoken of as having taken place long ago, and yet the coming of Wiwaina is an annual event, a confusion disconcerting to the investigator though not to the Bella Coola themselves.

Wiwaina[*] once led a raiding party against the salmon, whose home is far to the west, and against the herrin who live in a flat and warm country beyond even the land of salmon. His crew consisted of birds who are spoken of in the myth by unusual designations, said to be either their supernatural or their kwáxa names. One informant spoke of these beings as individuals, and only added that they were birds as an afterthought, while another emphasized their avian rather than their human characteristics. This is not surprising, considering that the story belongs to the distant past when birds and human beings were not as clearly differentiated as they now are. Wiwaina's crew consisted of:

The Bald Eagle, Tsáxwak;

The Hawk (?) species, Ínuhipakxnix;

The Raven, 'Ínawaqtlaix, "He Who Talks at Dawn and Wakens Everyone";

The Water Ouzel, Thlémaxwtlíkha, "The Walking One";

The Great Blue Heron, Mnaxwtlíkn, "Long Neck";

The Hermaphrodite, Ale'yas;

The Cormorant, Kwakwá'la, who joined the expedition at Bella Bella as a passenger;

Four lazy supernatural beings, Kmaitlíl.

The expedition was under the special protection of Kulana, a female supernatural shaman, who guided the canoe in which the raiders travelled by the force of her incantations as if it had been a compass. After a lengthy journey, the party reached the land of the salmon where the clouds obligingly dabbed low in the heavens so that the fish could not see their

[192]

*A word etymologically connected with wáwa, the Bella Coola terms for raid.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of Winwina]

fore. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 773

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Ohuldimut, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nuxuthentum, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 534

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Awatpamais, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Spaiulus, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the coho salmon, Kwayumtumilsin, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Gulpas, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola Ankuciut have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Wiwuina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Alquntiw placed the name Nuxuxkumai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Ep, near Stuie. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Wiwuina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nuxuxkumai has had the hereat prerogative of seeing Wiwuina. 424 773 778 [776]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Winwina]

be. Once the first answer has been given, it is only a matter of a few minutes before some alert young man gives the successful reply. 575r 746r 825

"Yes," says the ḋaxiat holding the salmon. "It is a spring salmon, called Oteddimat by the supernatural beings. Tsāḋmat captured it."

The bearer goes once around the fire, still holding the salmon, while the ḋaxiat women drone and the sticks are pounded furiously. Four times during his circuit he tosses the fish in his arms as if it were jumping, and all the ḋaxiat call out ya····· ha·····, as they do when a salmon jumps in the river. He finally throws the fish on the central fire and the beating of sticks stops with almost startling suddenness. The same ḋaxiat next picks up the wooden representation of a sockeye salmon and the same procedure is carried out; it too is thrown on the fire when its species has been ascertained. In succession, imitations of hump-back, dog, and coho salmon are displayed and cast in the flames. It is seldom that the uninitiated realize that the fish are being shown in the order of their coming in the spring, and their consequent failure to answer promptly is a source of considerable secret amusement to the ḋaxiat. The Bella Bella dog salmon, held with its head downstream, is the last fish shown. The representation is always made long and lean, to the annoyance of the Bella Bella, and when the holder makes it jump, the people call out nothing but ha·····.

Soon after the last salmon has been burnt the displayer holds up the first bunch of "berries" and calls on the young uninitiated women to guess what kind is represented. 575r 746r

"If you guess right, you will find plenty of them next summer," he says. 824

Somewhat shyly the girls register their guesses, but the choice of berries is so great and the workmanship so poor that a considerable time often elapses before the correct answer is given. As soon as this is done, the exhibitor carries the fruit around the fire and throws them on the flames in the same way as with the salmon, except that the jumping is omitted. The order of display is according to the time of ripening for each, but there is so much difference of opinion about this that no rigid order is maintained. The first shown is always the cow-parsnip, but after that there is no definite sequence. The following "berries" were shown at a dance not many years ago: cow-parsnip; Ribes lacifloram; wild gooseberry; tall bilberry; thin-leaved bilberry; blueberry; black huckleberry; red elderberry; dwarf bilberry; Ribes leucoteum; salalberry; Canadian buffalo berry; wild red raspberry; blackberry, Rubus spectabilis Pursh.; salmon-berry; black hawthorn; flowering juneberry; bunchberry; wild rose; red bearberry.

J: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of Winwine]

The informant was not certain that the above was the exact order in which the berries were shown on the occasion described. It is probable that it is approximately correct, however, since he added that the wild strawberry had also been shown, but as he could not remember its correct place he had omitted it. Other old men stated that the following food plants had been used at other Winwine dances: ilk, one of the Fritillaria, species undetermined; perennial clover; black raspberry; crabapple; cranberry; fern root; bracken root. Foods introduced by the white man were shown at a recent dance, including: potato, carrot, turnip, and a miniature can of preserved peaches, such as are commonly used in the manufacture of native wine.

Sometimes no one is able to guess the object represented, and when all have grown discouraged the exhibitor puts his ear against X's mouth. The uninitiated assume, of course, that the dancer's supernatural power makes it easy for him to tell the answer and that he is transmitting the information to the hearer who promptly gives it. If an uninitiated person should guess the correct response rapidly, it is taken for granted that she has found favour with the supernatural beings. When the last berry has been thrown on the fire, a kwiat stands up and starts a song describing the Hermaphrodite and his actions in the land above. The singer provides his own time by beating

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 They dispute in this manner concerning the capture of every kind of salmon and even about the berries. Ano'likwo-lsaic keeps up a running stream of comments to the uninitiated.

"Listen to the stupid Kāmālālkl. That is what they did when they went with W'inwina. They spent most of their time sleeping, and the rest of it arguing. Don't you be such silly fools as they are. Watch what you are doing, and you may be fortunate enough to see me in the woods and become a kusiut."

As soon as the uninitiated have watched these beings for a time, they are expelled and the ritual ends in the usual manner.

763 776 In conclusion, a word may be said regarding the attitude of the Bella Coola to W'inwina and his canoe. Like all other supernatural manifestations it is capable of bringing good or evil to the beholder. An ancestor of every W'inwina dancer must have seen it and obtained it as patron, but it is a dangerous visitor none the less. Sometimes, at night, a hunter encamped on one of the fiords hears a grunting sound accompanied by short paddle strokes; if he calls out "yaol" loudly, no harm will come to him, but if he omits to do so he will soon die. One informant affirmed that within his lifetime a party of Kimsquit hunters were waiting for high tide when they heard the grunting. They failed to hail the craft and presently a sound reached them as if a number of paddles had been placed in the water to check the course of a canoe; in fact, the ripples splashed on the shore at their feet. In a few years they were all dead.

THE DANCE OF MOTHER-NATURE

*575 *796 *824 [184] [776] One of the most interesting of the Bella Coola dances is that portraying Nuaaska, who is virtually Mother-Nature, giving birth to the flowers and trees in the spring. The following account is of the manner in which Kalāw-i, a Kimsquit man, performed the rite. The ritual appears to be identical in Bella Coola, so only one account need be given, and the performer may be spoken of as X.

This dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Mother-Nature]

season, subject to the usual consent of the marshals. No description need be given of the coming of the call and of the ritual of lnxtāmem. A large amount of wood is required, and on the night of nusiutālsap the many carpentry tasks are allotted. A large masked wooden figure is made to represent Mother-Nature herself, two more of the elderly women who attend her, and one of the inevitable Ano'likwoksaix. Besides, masks must be made of almost all the flowers and the trees, their number only limited by X's willingness to reward the carpenters. It is said that formerly as many as three hundred masks were sometimes ordered. 575* 796* 824 [532]

No detailed description is required for qothm, but the ritual on nekusam differs from that of all other dances. Early in the morning a number of kukusuit gather in X's house where the carpenters decide on two old women to wear masks representing hags of great age and ugliness. A number of kukusiut accompany them to the bottom house of the village where they call out: [532]

"We are in great trouble. Our daughter's child is long overdue. If you know of any good medicines, will you not give them to us for her?"

The kukusiut drone when they see and hear these supernatural visitors, and many of them give medicines to the old women to increase the realistic effect. This is repeated in every house of the village.

That night when all is ready, the uninitiated are called in and take their places in the two corners near the door. They see in the central position behind the fire a large wooden figure wearing the mask of a woman in the pangs of labour with enormously distended stomach. She is Nawuska, Mother-Nature, though the uninitiated do not know this as yet. She lies on some raised planking; slightly below her are two old women carrying sponges of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as if they were midwives prepared to wash a new-born infant. Two matting enclosures have been constructed, one in each of the rear corners of the house, large enough to hide the per- [532] [844]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

*575 *796 *824 [532] [844]

formers who are chosen for their small stature. Ant'ikwulnaix stands up ready to explain as usual. One of the actors now comes forth from beneath Mother-Nature's stomach, as if born of her, wearing a mask surmounted by a carved stick representing the leaves of the willow. The actors handle the performer, as if washing a new-born child, and announce:

"It is a boy, Willow Leaves," just as a midwife might state the sex of an infant.

Willow Leaves dances around the fire, at intervals saying, "I am Willow Leaves."

Ant'ikwulnaix adds her comments: "Yes. There is Willow Leaves, see him."

The masked figure goes into the matting enclosure out of sight. The next plant to be born is Gooseberry, for whom the same procedure is carried out, before he, too, disappears. In succession, a few minutes apart, come Nettle, all kinds of Grass, and Western Skunk Cabbage. Each is washed and the sex announced; then the figure dances and Ant'ikwulnaix comments as before. A good dancer is always chosen for the next figure, Black Cottonwood, who is "born" in the same way, but instead of vanishing into the enclosure remains dancing to and fro on the upper, upstream, side of the house. After him comes "The Dancing Tree," the American Aspen. An agile man is likewise chosen for this part and he remains dancing back and forth on the lower, downstream, side. Ant'ikwulnaix announces, amid breathless interest: "The South Wind is coming."

*575 *796 824 532

This figure enters the house by the front door, wearing the mask of a handsome young man. He goes to Nawaxaka like a doctor called in to assist, and when he stands up, her face appears like that of a happy woman who has just given birth. The uninitiated do not realize that a new mask has been put on Mother-Nature while her face was hidden from their sight. The South Wind then retires to the lower side of the house, where he dances to and fro near Aspen, at intervals going up to his patient. In rushes the North Wind, but he is too late to assem-

2:McDermott E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NER McDermott NER

plish his design of destroying Mother-Nature in the act of delivery, and he remains dancing to and fro on the upper side of the house, not far from Black Cottonwood. The advent of the South Wind has helped Mother-Nature, so in close succession there follow masked figures, representing the plants, trees, and shrubs known to the Bella Coola. These first to appear, prior to the coming of the South Wind, have been early ones in the order of their showing signs of green; afterwards there is no fixed sequence, except to follow as closely as possible that of their appearance in the spring. When Black Hawthorn is being born there is great difficulty; he kicks, squirms, and cries, requiring the assistance of both attendants and the South Wind. As soon as his name is announced the meaning of the trouble becomes plain; it is because the fruit is bitter and causes griping in the stomach. The performance is a lengthy one; the same masks appear repeatedly, but the painted stick representing the flower or leaves is changed. Through the long period of their birth, the Willow, Aspen, North and South Winds continue their dancing, the North Wind trying at intervals to reach Mother-Nature, but always repulsed by the watchful South Wind. To the uninitiated it appears wonderful, perhaps miraculous, that so many beings can be hidden in so small an enclosure; in reality, no more than fifteen actors are used, they simply change their masks and reappear. The last masked figure represents After-birth, a man which does not appear until late in the season after all the other plants have come to life. Instead of going around the fire, this figure hides quickly by lying down out of sight.

The uninitiated are sometimes sent away at this point, at other times they are allowed to wait to hear the running of the whole ceremonial. X asks to stay hidden to act as crier. This man explains that we would have no food if the South Wind had not been able to drive away the North Wind because he hurt Mother-Nature as she gave birth to the plants, which form an important a part of the food supply. If not already repulsed, the uninitiated are sent out at this point and the he took a sip of water, followed by another piece of dried fish, chewed it four times, and washed it down as before. This was four times repeated so that the provender consumed consisted of four morsels of salmon, each chewed four times, and four sips of water; it was most important that no more should be taken into the mouth than could be swallowed at a single gulp. Having eaten, the bow-man passed the food which he had taken from the store to the paddler behind him who ate and drank in the same manner, except that he chewed with the other side of his mouth, corresponding to the fact that he paddled on the other side of the canoe from the man in the bow. So the food and drink was passed down to the captain. If possible, he was required to eat whatever was left, though if there was too much, he threw the remains over his shoulder into the water. He was also expected to swallow whatever water was passed to him, but if there was too much he would lie back, his head projecting over the stern, and pour it out over his face so that it fell into the canoe. As the food and drink were completely consumed, so it was believed the enemy would be annihilated. If the bow-man had failed to take out enough salmon and water, the captain received none of it, since no second portion could be served.

Each captain took with him a supply of dyed and undyed cedar-bark which was stored in the bow of the canoe. During the course of the day, the party would land and the chief decide upon some decoration made by combining strands of the two colours of bark to serve as a distinguishing mark for members of the same canoe. He took out as much bark as he thought would suffice, and the bow-man was the first to don the symbol. The second paddler followed, and each in turn did the same in order of his position in the canoe. If too much had been taken, the captain had to wear collars of whatever was left over; if too little, he had to do without. Having thus arrayed themselves, the party continued until nightfall when a secluded spot was chosen for camping. Wood was collected and fires laid, but no light was ever struck and the warriors lay around the

but the Bulla Coolu do not consider this aspect and the children grow up in an atmosphere entirely lacking in reverence of speech. Some stories such a moral know, but they are recounted merely for entertainment. In the present time, no one knows who invented the stories; they have been handed down from dim antiquity and alterations or embellishments are considered improper, while the composition of new tales appears to be unknown.

Another pastime is smoking. Among some Indian tribes the practice has a definite religious significance, but this appears to be lacking among the Bulla Coolu. Most of the men enjoy either a pipe or cigarettes, and some of the women also indulge, but few carry the habit to excess. All the older people affirmed that their ancestors had smoked for generations. Tobacco was not grown, but kinnikinik, mikie[illegible], was used, and also a plant known as bain[illegible]. Another smoking mixture was bark of kowanky, roasted before a fire until dried and brown, and then crumbled between the hands. These materials have given place entirely to imported tobacco, and the white man's pipe has replaced the native one. The latter consisted of a gooseberry cane from which the pith had been extracted; sometimes a small bowl of elderberry wood was added, but often the mixture to be smoked was simply placed within the end of the hollow cane.

Adults, especially the men, are addicted to gambling. They are fond of placing stakes on a race or other trial of strength, and enjoy all kinds of games of chance. Some of the younger men have mastered a few of the simpler games of cards on which they spend a certain amount of time and money. The favourite gambling game, however, is one found in all parts of the coast, which is played with a pack of fifty-four unmarked sycamore sticks. The rules are complicated and no effort was made to learn more than the general principles. The pieces are divided among the eight or ten participants and concealed; then one player guesses in whose hand a certain marked stick is hidden. If he is successful, the others pay him a forfeit; if fain, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long covering which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large tree by means of many vertical incisions.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, ispal, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width.

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as crushers, kiplin, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two heavier sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower heavier, ipsaq, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper heavier, ejelim, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragments of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper heavier falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but no outside strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with dawiqa to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ilw'.

Ilw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then named mal'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood scraped, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder

2: McDowalls E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

APPENDIX C

GLOSSARY OF FLORA AND FAUNA

924
925
928

THIS glossary does not give the scientific names of all the flora and fauna known to the Bella Coola, or even of all mentioned in this monograph, but only those of which the usual designations are ambiguous. In cases of the common mammals, no scientific terminology has been attempted, since the multiplicity of sub-species renders identification almost impossible, and the popular name is sufficient for general purposes. In regard to plants, a difficulty lies in the fact that Bella Coola nomenclature is not always entirely nonsense botanically. Two or more distinct forms, for example, may be grouped together on account of their similar use as food, and one name applied to them indiscriminately. Conversely, different names are sometimes given to various parts of the same tree, the roots, the bark, the leaves, and so on. These factors combine to complicate the study of either ethno-botany or ethno-zoology, and necessitate the collection of a large number of specimens. The late Mr. H. I. Smith has done so, and this glossary could not have been compiled without his assistance, though the writer is responsible for any errors in it.

924
925

Alder	Alnus rubra Bong.
Aspen, American	Populus tremuloides Michx.
Blackberry, Red	Rubus spectabilis (Pursh) Spreng.
Bilberry, Dwarf	Vaccinium myrtillus Michx.
Bilberry, Tall	Vaccinium ovalifolium Smith.
Bilberry, Thin leaved	Vaccinium membranaceum Dougl.
Birch	Betula sp.
Blackberry	Rubus spectabilis Pursh.
Blackfish—the Killer Whale.
Blueberry	Vaccinium parvifolium Smith
Bracken	Pteris aquilina (L.) var. lanuginosa Bong.
Buffleberry, Canadian	Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.
Bunch-berry	Cornus canadensis, L.
Camas, Red	Triglochin palustre Nutt.
Camas, Yellow	Chamaerapsis ovalis var. maximus (Lindl.) Spreh.
Cherry, Pennsylvania	Prunus pensylvanica Linn.
Cod, Black	Anoplopoma fimbria Pallas.
Cod, Red Rock	Sebastodes ruberrimus Cramer.
Cottonwood	Populus sp.
Cottonwood, Black	Populus trichocarpa T. and G.
Cow Parsnip	Heracleum lanatum Michx.
Cutthroat	Salmo clarkii Bong.
Cranberry	Vaccinium oxycoccus Ref.

2:McDowalth R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellevoela NEB

E24
E25

Cow	Carex rostrata
Current	Ribes hudsonia Fernald
Devil's Club	Fatsia horrida (Ten.) B. and H.
Duck, Western	Anas acuta-tzitzihoa Wyeth
Dogbane, Spreading	Apocynum androsaemifolium, L.
Dog fish	Squalus suckii Girard
Duck, Harlequin	Histrionicus histrionicus
Duck, Mallard	Anas platyrhynchos
Eagle, Bald	Haliaeetus leucocephalus
Eagle, Golden	Aquila chrysaetos
Elderberry, Red	Sambucus racemosa, L.
Fern, sp	Fruit. Aspidium spinulosum Sw.
Fir	Pseudotsuga mucronata Rul.
Fir, White	Abies grandis Lindl.
Fungus, Shelf	Polyporus officinalis Fries
Goose, Canada	Branta canadensis canadensis
Goose, White-fronted	Anser albifrons
Gooseberry	Ribes divaricatum Dougl.
Gooseberry, Swamp	Ribes lacustre (Pers.) Poir.
Gooseberry, Wild	Ribes divaricatum Dougl.
Grouse, Blue	Dendragapus obscurus
Grouse, Spruce	Canachites canadensis
Gull	Larus sp.
Halibut	Hippoglossus hippoglossus Linn.
Hawthorn, Black	Crataegus douglasii, C. Douglas Lindl.
Hellebore, False	Veratrum viride Ait.
Hemlock	Tsuga mertensiana (Bong.) Sarg.
Heron, Great Blue	Ardea herodias
Herring	Clupea pallasii C. and V.
Huckleberry, Black	Vaccinium ovatum
Huckleberry, Rubies	Gaylussacia ruby
Insect	Pontiliaria sp.
Jay, Steller Mountain	Perisoreus canadensis capitalis
Jay, Steller	Cyanocitta stelleri
Juneberry, Flowering	Amelanchier florida Lindl.
Killer Whale	Orca gladiator
Kingfisher, Belted	Ceryle alcyon
Lark	Otocoris sp.
Magpie, Rocky Mountain	Pica pica hudsonia Sab.
Mallard	Anas platyrhynchos
Mallard, Red-headed	Anas ruber
Mosquito	Culicidae sp.
Mouse, Pack-rat	Neotoma cinerea-rufescens
Myrtle	Vinca Lindl. Wyeth
Oolichan	Thaleichthys pacificus Richardson
Owl, Horned	Bubo virginianus
Parsley	Sanicula sp.

For the distribution of this species the author is indebted to the late Judge Lundstedt, of the Oregon Supreme Court.

Fox	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Fuller	[illegible]
Raspberry, Black	[illegible]
Raspberry, Wild Red	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], Wild	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

*[192]
[422] Alnachuk: Name of amount received over that previously received as an honorarium payment.
Anaklikim: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Ainkiam: 1.—Supernatural beings who dress as the sun serves.
2.—Name of the supernatural woman, Ainkiam-a, the sun is ceremonially applied to the living herself. The sound is produced by hacks whistles.
Anaklalu: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Anaklam: "The Coming of Fast Wonder," in the language of supernatural beings. The phenomena is semi-anthropomorphized.
Ainaxa: 1.—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2.—Ancient chief from whom the village is supposedly owned.
Aqaxcqamkim: Earlier name of a Bella Coola dance, the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[801] Aqamkim: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the sun or eclipse.
Aikamlu: 1.—One of the first women to settle on Dean's in the beginning of time.
2.—Daughter of an ancient chief mentioned in an ancient story.
Aualu: 1.—One of the designations of Kimsaqa, the supernatural supreme.
2.—Something, some inspiring influence.
[824] Ahkaqa: Being consisting of two long ropes with cross-sticks.
[824] Ahnaklalu: Seven horses.
Ahnaxa: Earlier name of a Bella Coola dance.
Ahnamaxa: Label.
Ahkalu: 1.—One of the first men to settle on Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2.—One of the first men to settle on Pocomb in the beginning of time.
3.—One of the first men to settle on Ahnaxa in the beginning of time.
Ahkalaxa: Bella Coola supporting chieftain cult.
[796] Ahkalaxamu: Ritual connected or associate between the ahkamam of males for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being on the first sunset (ahkalu qa?), plants, sand? fun. (Spirit).
Ahkalamu: Earlier name of a Bella Coola dance.
[399] Ahm: Third part of song.
Ahm: Phonetic equivalent of boys and girls in the forest.
[577] Ah'ln: Name of an imbecil man.
[72] Ahnalaxa: Supernatural man-eater, partner of Cannibalu.
Ahpaxlu: Drink decorated with shellfish shell used by one of the brothers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
Ahnaxlu: Supernatural female fairy-fisher resident in the land of the dead, spirit. Synonymy.
Ahnaklalu: One of the Thousand Islands near Vancouver.
Ahnamaxa: Earlier name of a Bella Coola dance.
Ahnalu: Cannibal.
[277] Ahnalaxa: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife, the word is ceremonially associated with the verb, a kaqamk.
Ahnaxa: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.
Ahlu: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Sun.
Ahnalu: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
[803] Ahnalaxa: The amalgamation of a name, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.
[579]
[579]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Anahlik. Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Anahulim. Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anaiyum with "Lakeside". Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anaiyulim. Name obtained by an Ilpalikl man in the beginning of time.
Anaqulmum, "Spreading Up and For". One of Tlitqayilim-s's canoes and hence a transportation group in chieftainship.
Anaxilulim. Master name of a Bella Coola man.
Anaxlaim-s: 1.—Master name of a Bella Coola woman.
2.—"Left Hand". Name expulsatory named from part of a supernatural [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

2:Mc:Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

APPENDIX D

Alpha: Village at Salmon House, on the upper Dean River.
ashes: Position between two fires.
a-tsit: 1—Raised bed behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural. [P28]
2—Wrenfish.[1]
a-tsitsi: To touch.
a-tsitsitsid[1]: Hereditary law handed down secretly in a family. [424] Aqutsuka: One of Raven's Crow stones.
aqtqatsa: Sound sung in slow time. [588] awalsa: 1—Sun, symbol, house, seat.
2—One of the nights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representation of the deceased appears.
awas: Rocky Mountain jay. [P25] ayawatl: Carved house post.
Ababtsatl: Wife of Sandy; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
awatsatl: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Awatsatsatsis: Expedition of the supernatural being Winatsa against herrin and fish.
A-ytsinsis: Sawaw's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the name has since been used by his descendants.
aqwatsatsa: Only sister in a family of several brothers. [401]
aq'i: Seals. [P25]
aqwalsa: Swaying in mechanical motion as a conative measure.
alqaqsis: Fir. [P95]
Alta-tsatl: Evil male supernatural being. [P24] a-lasa: 1—Death, not contemporaneous. [P25]
2—Dead. [P27]
alsatl[1]: Kingfisher.
ala: Fish-hook.
Alkasa, "Story of the Hugs Juan": Supernatural beings resident in the land above.
ankasa: Rocky spy.
anqlsat: plural, dualqalsat, neutro plural, anqalqsat.
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kitamaat woman.
Ahta: among village.
Ain: Bear man mentioned in an ancient story.
ayu-tsaqlat, "He Untwists Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indecent action of prostitutes, hence the word really means anus. It is the Kitamaat version of a comedian. [P27] a-qualsa: Cause of death.
Ayu-i, "Occupied Island": 1—Village at Kowitsa.
2—Artificial mound at Falls.
3—Village on the Kitamaat River.
4—Island near Grass Falls.
Ayu-i near Wanalsatsis, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Grass Falls where the dogs came to earth in the beginning of time.
ayuwa-i: Varied decals. [P25]

[1] The latter is a formulaic phase for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

J: McDowell: R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA BeClacoola NEA

[illegible]

[illegible]: Lowlifey were Snow where herring are plentiful.
[illegible]: Chief living at Tal'a in the beginning of time.

[illegible]

[illegible]: One of the [illegible] dances.
[illegible]: 1, four person singular.
[illegible]: Dancing eggs when brought into house ready for preparation as food.*

[illegible]

[illegible]: Supernatural animal.
[illegible]: One of the first women were Snow west of Kwaxna in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: To guess, as done by the constituent as a Mystery dance.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Kwakiutl supernatural being.
[illegible]: Lamprey.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl name of a Salish man.
[illegible]: Abalone shell.
[illegible]: Influential Kwaxna woman who died about 1870.
[illegible]: Bell-capped hair worn by chiefs.
[illegible]: A Klamath company.
[illegible]: Snow was mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Supernatural, man-like creatures.

[illegible]

[illegible] ts'ang'ts'ts'ang'ts': The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
[illegible] shaw: 1.—"The Canoe," synonym for Nadleyum.
2.—The Sacred paraphrase of saying Nadleyum.
[illegible], "The Ever-Canoe": Synonym for Nadleyum.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who creates Nadleyum.
[illegible]: Supernatural dog salmon resident in the land above.
[illegible] of [illegible]: Niam's husband.
[illegible] of [illegible]: Kent's husband.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Bqaqlqal in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl name for Sacred Brother.*
[illegible]: Twined cedar-wood, as used for visiors.
[illegible], [illegible], [illegible]: Sun, term used in direct address for sun which.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible], "The Sun Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kwaxna.
[illegible]: Collectives were applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking peoples of the mainland.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Chief of abalone-shell people on the lower Cross in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Snow in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Tal'a in the beginning of time.

---

*This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an s sound.
*This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an s sound.

APPENDIX D

B

[272]

[401]

C

D

[425]

E

[224]

[256]
[251]

[236]

[236]
[234]

[234]

APPENDIX D

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[F24] [illegible]: Tree, probably birch.
[illegible]: One of the five men to settle on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the five men to settle on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Bella Bella remote mountains to an eastern city.

[illegible]: Kitamaat town.
[illegible]: Eastern name of a Bella Coola town.
[illegible]: The gathering of five men for food.
[illegible]: Three mentioned on their canoe by the [illegible] settlers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Kitamaat town mentioned in an eastern story.

[illegible]: Public section, previous to marriage, of a bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[illegible]: Ritual on the day before a marriage, initially the recital of myths by the bride's relatives, the dressing of embrace, the singing of songs of all kinds.

[illegible]: 1.—Mythical supernatural women.
2.—"Whale," an "Heads Tree," a cruel mythic brother.
[illegible]: 1.—One of the five men to settle on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2.—One of the five men to settle on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
3.—Name of the five men who fell in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Two supernatural beings who accompanied [illegible].
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an origin myth of [illegible].
[illegible]: Eastern name of a Kitamaat town.
[illegible]: Whom brought to earth by five settlers: [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Kelp.
[illegible]: Fish hook.
[illegible]: Transformation.
[illegible]: 1.—Shell fungus.
2.—Eastern [illegible] in which a shell fungus is tied.
[illegible]: One of the five women to settle on [illegible] in beginning of time.
[illegible]: Ceremonial [illegible].
[illegible]: Mouth of a [illegible] shell in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Tree.
[illegible]: 1.—Daughter of the five settlers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2.—Daughter of [illegible], one of the [illegible] in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
[illegible]: One of the five men to settle on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Supernatural horse-picket resident in the land of ghosts.
[illegible]: 1.—Stone-hook [illegible].
2.—Eastern numerous [illegible] and coral beads.
3.—Mountain on the [illegible] River.
[illegible]: Small name of a Kitamaat man.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story of [illegible].
[illegible]: The ending for shaman's power for a bell.
[illegible]: Golden eagle.
[illegible]: Dog, etc.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*
[825]
[824]

Atsaxa: Tail.
Atsakiil: Arm.
Ax: Black bowlers.
Xaixa-i: Xaixai name of a Kwakiutl man.
Xaxalikw: Ancestral name of the wife of Tsaxly who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
Axalil: Rapids.
Xapatakiut: Kitlala chief living in the beginning of time.
Axatly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.

[586]

Xawaiia-i: Xaiai name of a Kwakiutl woman.*
Ixlai: Bark basket for holding liquids.

[415]

Ixlawalajai: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
Ixlawalawaw: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
Ixlaxin: Back room in which sacred initiation and others are concealed.
Ixlim: Women during ceremonies.
Ixlulu, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first ancestors in the beginning of time.
Ixmayaix: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones.
Ixlawalajai ala Iwanxiyaix: Kaxlaxa rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.

[420]
[421]
[424]
[812]

Ixl-ala ne Ixl-ala, "The Guiser": One who has been initiated as a member of the Ixalai society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through conventional knowledge or through successful participation in either a Xaxalaxa or a Mamaxa dance.

[575]

Ixlulu, "Hundred Incapable of Removing": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Ixlulaqa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ixmiaw: The dancer waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
Ixlu, ixwalin, Ixlaqa: Grandmother.
Ixlu-iaxa-iw-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ixlunalal: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Xaxa in the beginning of time.
Ixlulaxamaxa, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Ixmalkim: One of the first women to settle at Alqichal in the beginning of time.
Ixmala: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ixmaw: 1—Cyst.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.

[756]
[601]
[825]

Ixpalas: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
Ixpi: Red elderberry.
Ixpim: Wooden implement used in the pounding of cedar bark.
Ixt: Underwhelmed place.
Ixtaw: To cause dried salmon.
Ixtamaxtlin: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Ixtapaxi: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Xaxalli.
Ixtaw: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[824]
[413]
[252]

*This name appears to be an entirely different word from Xaixa-i.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Kilhaustmaw: The chosen that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
Kimin: Fire ceremonial discharge.
Kitlo'o: enemy village.
Kitsin: Supernatural creature dwelling in the ocean.
[852] Kitsilakmut: Shaman who received power from ghosts.
Kmchmalkwaw: Bella Coola hunter.
Kmqhani, "Coyote": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the [108] mythical Kimsquit has been derived.
Kmskut: Nass River.
Kmlkut: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[825] Kmx: 1—Whale.
2—Accented name of a Tsi'is woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.
Kmx*nmx: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Kwaqa'a chief, who died about 1900.
[825] Kmx^m: Muskrat.
[824] kn: White fir (?).
Kmnx'o: Flowing.
Kmnxlut: Perception of biting smell.
Kmxm: Dried salmon.
Kmxmlut: Synonym for shadin: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of symbol representations of the deceased. The word is derived from kmxm.
[825] Kmxhlkim: Porpoise.
[845] Kolmkmaw: Supernatural being who believes in no erotic morals.
[824] Ko'lo: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.
Ko'lmmx: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kolulmx: Unidentified berry (strawberry?).
Kulmx: Supernatural female shaman who guided K'ymsiu.
Kul'mymkmy: Kaster name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Kulu'lmx, "Earthy Ones": Ghosts.
Kululmx: Land, region, earth.
[539] Kululo'o: Free part of song.
Kumil': Timber mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.
[825] Kmqmxmxulkin, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of salmon.
[765] Kwanmx: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.
[578] Kwanmx: Insult offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their manners or food.
[601] Kwmkwmlo or kwmkwmlo: Synonym for kilmkwmlo, [illegible] present.[1] [42] Kwmxwmkmut: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] kulqul, mmlkn, kulqul: Grandfather.
Kulmkmulo: Kaster ceremonial at which foreigners are present.
Kulo: The construction of salmon weirs.

[1] This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an idiosyncratic r sound.

APPENDIX D

192*

Ambiwat: Gaselin term for presents given to a future bridegroom by the father of the future bride. [431]

Kaskilakwilpa: Supernatural being whose stomach is cut in the head show. [584]

Kemo'o: Good-bye.

Kimkwantlutsa, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Wi'ooma. [576]

Sacalatsa: Designation for a series of difficult and spectacular Kwakiutl dances.

Sacla-ma: Said to be identical with sakalamaka, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactor. [192]

Sayiqa: plural, Sakiqa; neuter, Sacaqa; neuter plural, Sakaqa:

1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season. [375]

2—Member of the society.

3—"The Learned One": Designation occasionally applied to a supernatural being, especially a petrified one, or to a person having power to cure the sick. [192]

Sayiqa: Kitamaat female shaman living in the last century.

Sedjem: Beloved son, especially a child; this is the vocative form of the word.

Sedjemm: Orphan.

Sewi'lala'yakwa: Woman dwelling at Fort Rupert in the beginning of time.

Sewyala: Smith Inlet.

Sisaiaxid la: Supernatural name of Cormorant.

Sisa-ksa-a: Mungaman.

Sisaksaxalid: Mungaman name acquired by the Sisa section at Dawn. [825]

Sisaksaxa: Unidentified bird of which the sons is an omen of death. [763] Sisalala: Xaxlat name of a Bella Coola man.

Sisalalaxa: Xaxlat name of a Bella Coola man.

Sisala-xamat: Xaxlat name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.

Sisal la-d: Smooth pyramidal, "pebble," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands. [823]

Sisalk: Evergreen bough. [824]

Sisalxalid: Famous Bella Coola warrior.

Sisaqmat: One of the sculpins.

Sisaxa: Xaxlat name of a Kitamaat man.

Sisaxa-mal a, "The Big One": Lawful male supernatural being.

Sisaxlaxalas: Man who came to earth near Dawn in the beginning of time.

Sisa-xaxa: Kitamaat woman.

Sisilala: Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.

Sisilaxa: One of the four men to settle at Sebassort Point in the beginning of time.

Sisilaxa: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Sisilalala, "One Who Has without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Sisala: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nootkan chief; the word is a synonym for Wi'ooma ceremonial.

Sisiklas Sisiklamplas: One of the nine supernatural siblings. [533]

Sisiqwalaxa-ala: Lullaby.

Sisal yaxa: Aesthetic expression used in a swing figure.

Sisala: 1—Pole or trap in the stream for salmon. [226]

2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

#192

Kaiskinuc: Kwakiutl name of a Haisla man.
Kaiyl'xinuc: Kwakiutl name of a Bella Coola man.
[124] kaqil: Inner bark of cedar.
Kaisskinuch, "A Stripping Off": The giving, on demand, by a marriage dancer of his clothing to a herald.
Kcumaqilaic: Supernatural name of Raven.
[128] kemaix, "Frenzied": Term applied to Cannibals and other destructive Bakwisi when in a state of madness.
kepcum: Occasional exclusion of all but the singers from a house where a shaman is performing.
Kemcumcumkim: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kemcumsum: Kwakiutl name, probably of Kwakiutl origin.

M

Mis'ulus: Female dancer mentioned in a Raven story.
Mislaxin: Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] mama, mamim, mamam: Mother, term used by children.
Mamqum: Celebrated Xenaxi hunter.
[125] mam-aqa: Butterfly.
mam-ulus: Measuring worm.
[124] mam-ut: Fly, insect.
ma'mamim: Swamp gooseberry.
[601] mim: 1—Father, common term in indirect address.
2—Occasional designation for the supreme deity.
[614] mimalmuc: Simplicities.
mimmimulc: Elderly male relatives of same secondary family.
Mimmy*: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nalhas in the beginning of time.
2—Form of the name *Dudzamy when used by a male child.
Mimmy*'ses: Form of the name *Dudzamy when used by a female child.
Mishkishlaxuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
Mishkqumuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[104] mi'kit: Measure of distance equal to the breadth of one thumb plus one finger.
[125] mi-ray': Toad.
mimqum: Supernatural giant toad.
mislim: Salmon eggs.
mu-mim: Old male sea-lion.
[125] mu-mimkim: Water monk.
Mugulaic: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Mkamilum, "Long Neck": One of the supernatural names of Great Blue Heron.
mumat: Co-husband in a polyandrous household.
mu'mmil: One of the gambols.
[124] muqual: Berry, black in colour.
Mumsmkinuc: Generic term for the four supernatural Carpenters. musmkilly: Spruce.
Mul'ulis: One of the first men to settle at Nalhas in the beginning of time.
Mulkum: Land of salmon.
[224] Mul'uli: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mulu: Stick carried by hunters when penetrating into the mountains.
[124] mulu*: Red huckleberry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mimimqulq: Leaf of salalberry.
mis-mulqat: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mika: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mots, mostin, moss: Child. [601]
Mosskulu: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mul': Eucrete.
mumum, mumin, mumumin-i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person. [614]
munkwmusin: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211]
Mustin-cum, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being. [764] Mutsin: Man mentioned in a song.
Mulskilis: Supernatural being who gives potency to nusut rites.
nalkstu: Grandiloquent expression used by the Sukaiut with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776]* nalkinum: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775]
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
nal': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
nalwalu: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by Sacrist initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
naplu: Lice. [825]
napsulu: Adolescent youth.
nasmusk': Blue green.
nasmusklakinulu: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] nas: Hand net for catching sturgeon. [227] nasklwhalum: Yellow cedar staves decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
nasmuss: Wrestling.
Nasnaw: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nate'ulwas: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Nil'ma: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Numa.
nim: Grizzly bear. [825]
Nimamlu: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time.
Nimsil: Earlier name of a Nuxalk man.
Nimsilmi: One of the first men to settle at Bella in the beginning of time.
Nimsilmiil: One of the women of Mount Nuxalk as chief.
nin-lmut: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Nisu: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [152]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 nā'pla: Miniature copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Nē-ti: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
nēnem: To dance.
[825] nēnemda: Those who dance at marriages.
nēnnu: Mallard duck.
[824] nēnmunum: Night of potlatch on which nuxat initiates appear for a short dance.
nexhi: Berries of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] nehimkts: Thimble-like wooden dish.
'nemlāntsix: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Nemutsis: Name acquired by a Rivers Inlet man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Nemulsts: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
'Nex-uēw-a: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Scratcher; the designation was derived from Rivers Inlet.
Ne-xle-s: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Ne-xwnhai: Influential Bella Coola chief.
[776] Nēxulkhaix, "The Resident": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
[784] nēxnem: 1—Fourth day of a kusiut dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Nēqēqs: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
nēnek, "Little Dance": Term of grandiose humility.
nēnēnem: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the kusiut nēnem.
Nēnēr-mālōsix: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Tlēxpēlēx-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2— Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nēnēstlēmlaix: Kusiut name of a Nusjalst man.
nlēmlēmtem: One who has preserved a marriage song.
nlēnēlēmsk: The intangible strengthening that comes to a bridegroom as a result of the oration of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] Nēlkēlaix: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tnalsi in the beginning of time.
[431] nēlk'ctl: Wooden ring used in a game.
[524] Nēkēnk: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the deer formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
[825] nēkpap': Otter.
Nēllānk: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Nēnitamlaix: 1—"The Restorer": One of Tlēxpēlēx-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[556] nēnem, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a copper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Nēnmēlmut: Shaman's name derived from Tlēxpēlēx-a.
nēnēmēnu: "I have saved you."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NES

#192

Nanuiqqymm: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ana'Hmulcain and serving as patron (?) to a hactat dancer.

[719] nanulitsi: Omen of death.

Nanutcumchmm, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tsinqulitsa-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nanuumlaia: 1—Man dwelling in Kymsqum's house.
2—Kactat name of a Kimsquit woman.

nanqim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nanuumay: Kactat name assumed by a Sisaa woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nanqyaxum: Kactat with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qulaxum is obscure.

Na'acumhamain, "The Widower": One of Raven's names as chief.

[535] naqlacilal-ca: Synonym for ganaxum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Naqhanlikhan, "Hoodlously Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] naqsa-cata: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

naqsitsa-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Naqtymin, "Place of Much Ganaxum": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Naqyqmis: Nacqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Naqilaqalha-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] naqnaxmy-ii ma xmy"ala: One year.

[828] naqsa: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

naqsiil, "Empty House": House in which a hactat dance is taking place.

naqsilqat: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Naqsly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] naqsliista: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

naqsnaxmi: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for hactatum and other important hactat rites.

[777] nay"xanxilim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Naqsilhamlaia: Sisaak name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Naqsililai: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Naqsilitsi: The upper heaven.

naqsma: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Naqsmalaqlaxa-i: A Sisaa repository.

Naxlqumtamain, "Where Alqantsa Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] naxmqtsa-cay: Cottonwood buds.

Naxqaxla'ala, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Sisaaa in the beginning of time.

naxlkamy: Canoe-maker.

Naxlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Naqalai.

[535] [869] naxlakamp: Children's dance which serves as training for hactat rites and to provide entertainment.

[192]
[534] nuxlaxum: Synonym for gwa'ya, the large cone-shaped wood whistle.
Nuxu-qut: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nuxu-lut: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nuhuyuhtsum-a, "Nuxum River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Nuhumtsum-a.
[102]
[825] na'nagulu: Issue supposedly born from another at one level.
Nuxuxu-a: xuxuxu village.
Nuxulaxh, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nuxulk: Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nuxulkmuq: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
Nuyem: Kwiat name of a Sisaa man.
Nuyem: Name of a female companion.
Nuyehwalum, "The Light Giver": One of the women of the supreme god.
nuyem: Light.
Nuxlem: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nuxlemlilum: Ki'ago name of a Kimsquit man.
Nuyemlumuxu-a, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[825] nuxulxwuk: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nuxulxwut, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kukwiut after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nuxlumuxlum: Cross-piece which holds upon smooth of chicken net.
Nuxwulu: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] nuxwulukkum: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for resultant children. This is combined with an section of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is extremely [425] rare.
[828] Nuyu: Mountain near Sisaa.
nuyulukkum: Person who wanders away from home in desperadoery.
Nuyul-ulum: One of the first women to settle at Tul-is in the beginning of time.
Nu'yuu-lulum: Land of salmon.

O

o'ulgum: Kimsquit term for o'ulk, orchids.
O-ll: Kwatsa had mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] olali: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Olijamiya: Valley pre-empted by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Olijamuq: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
oly: 1—The kwakiut prerogative of everything.
2—Bad, adjective.
Olulu-i: Kwakiut name of a Sisaa man.
Olilyanjya, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Olulukmut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] 'omamlil': Assemblage of the people for feast of any kind.

192*

[856]

[824]

[826]

[585]

[827]

[784]

[825]

[585]

[601]

[illegible]: Goods obtained by a man's own exertions and forming the nucleus of his wealth for a potlatch.
[illegible], [illegible], [illegible]: Kaxlan person.
[illegible]: Kwanqui man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Son of Raven in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the Kwanqui River in the beginning of time.
4—Twisted woman who died about 1905.
[illegible]: enemy village.
[illegible]: Kaxlan name of a Bella Coola Raxiaxa dancer.
[illegible]: 1—Ancestral name of a [illegible] man.
2—Celebrated Kwanqui hunter.
[illegible]: Any non-ancestral rite, especially an o'ult dance held subsequent to the Raxlan season.
[illegible]: Kaxlan name of a Kwanqui Raxiaxa dancer.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: The taking of food to another tribe for consumption honored.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who sleeps perpetually, literally, "The Sleepy One."
[illegible]: 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.
[illegible]: Skunk cabbage.
[illegible]: Supernatural being, herald of [illegible].
[illegible]: The stamping of sound sticks in unison, this being the final rite of initiation.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Temporary fish dam of interlocked branches.
[illegible]: Small mountain on south side of the Bella Coola valley behind [illegible].
[illegible]: Place near [illegible].
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: The leading woman of a bride to a groom during a wedding.
[illegible]: Hereditary tendency.
[illegible]: One made sick by witchcraft, especially a woman who suffers from this cause through disregard of abstinence taboos.
[illegible]: Variety of dog salmon found at Bella Bella.
[illegible]: Conferring of ceremonial names at a potlatch.
[illegible]: The performance of a Raxlan dance with supernatural dog salmon as patron.
[illegible], "Trading Place": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Distribution of strips of mountain goat skin at marriage.
[illegible]: "Where are you going?"
[illegible]: "Lake-Swallower": A mythical monster.
[illegible]: First night of a potlatch.
[illegible]: Third oldest brother or sister.
[illegible]: Name of Mink as chief.
[illegible]: One of the names of the supreme god.
[illegible]: Celebrated [illegible] warrior.

192 [illegible]: Pronounced as leaning ground consisting two vowels.
[illegible]: Kwaquitl fishermen.
[illegible]: Cannot found.
[illegible]: Synonym for Xenocaulidis, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[415] [illegible]: Small wooden disk.
[illegible]: Lughan messenger of the dead.
[illegible]: Place on mainland opposite north end of Pamsquy Island.
[illegible] [93] [illegible]: Synonym for [illegible]. Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "food" received from them on many occasions.
[illegible]: Ancestral name of a Pleqhlit man.
[412] [illegible]: Bone needle.
[illegible]: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, characteristically, to Cannibals.
[illegible]: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Nuskumsmuxwu; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Nuskumsmuxwu and the Bella Coola.
[illegible]: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
[illegible]: Dancing snake.
[illegible]: Dance-spirit.
[illegible] [125] [illegible]: One of the first men to write on [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Mosquito.
[illegible]: Name conferred by [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Victory of energy.
[illegible]: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
[illegible]: Mountain Man, the point between Lekumkulum Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[illegible] [324] [illegible]: Fyles halibut.
[411] [illegible]: Bow, weapon.
[illegible]: "Fyles Directly with a Crash," an where a dead tree thunders to earth. The term is used characteristically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[195] [illegible]: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[372] [illegible]: Blacking of cheeks.
[325] [illegible]: Halibut.
[illegible]: Crabapple.
[324] [illegible]: Bunchberry.

Q

[528] [illegible]: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
[illegible]: King stick in a gambling game.
[illegible]: Women's drawing cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
[illegible]: Uncommon term for the second day of a [illegible] dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
[illegible]: Name conferred on the grandson of [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in a story.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first women to write on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

[illegible] Growth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*
787
824 601
825
198
515
431
825
515
825
824
825
578
714
825
578
431
556

[illegible]: Name of death, generic term.
[illegible]: One of the heavens, probably raspberry.
[illegible]: Mother, term used by child.
[illegible]: Unknown Carrier chief.
[illegible]: 1—Village on west bank of the Nechacoonay, about three-quarters of a mile from the sea.
2—Mountain behind the village.
[illegible]: [illegible] name of a Kwakiutl man.
[illegible]: 1—Term used for spring salmon during the ritual following the first taking of the fish.
2—Term used by enemy to human beings, who are like salmon to them.
3—Salmon, in the language of supernatural beings.
[illegible]: "Bear Footmarks," i.e., something binding. The function of the "Bad Growing" and other protective grass with a wife which bind her to her husband.
[illegible]: Unidentified species of duck.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl term for "The Weaper," a female supernatural being.
[illegible]: Rarer name of a Stuie man.
[illegible]: [illegible] chief living near after the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Chief who came with the first settlers to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Carrier pronunciation of Tsaqlo, one of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Rarer with ability to produce a puppet-person, cf. [illegible].
[illegible]: Dance-[illegible].
[illegible]: Bird mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Deep-fish.
[illegible]: Rabbit.
[illegible]: Salmon-berry.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Unidentified plant.
[illegible]: Black cod.
[illegible], "A Wiping of the Feet upon the Ground of Chiefs": Term applied to a deadly insult offered to persons of importance.
[illegible]: Wooden armour.
[illegible]: 1—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Island off Rivers Inlet.
3—Island.
[illegible]: One of the names of Raven as chief.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Xishkat in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuie in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Unidentified migratory bird, black in colour.
[illegible]: Smooth River, near Bella Bella.
[illegible]: One of the a'alit dances.
[illegible], "Head": Stuie repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
[illegible]: A verbal exposure of what should have remained concealed, such as comments upon the slave ancestry of a person whose blot in this respect has been covered over by lavish giving.
[illegible]: Presents distributed by a wife to strengthen her husband's seat, and thus prevent him from "wobbling."

2:McDowell R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Saiaik: Thunder, anthropomorphized.
Saiyaim: Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit man.
sakiki: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property.
sa-kimsaum: 1—Food distributed by the donee of a feastat dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food.
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sa-tlum: Consolidate bundles.
sa-tlumum: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
sdakhdimus: Profession of feastat entertainer.
sdakhdim: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him.
seal: Sockeye salmon.
Sinalkwanikin Ilanaxw: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sinmaxwakin: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of searching in the land above.
Sinsilkan or Sinsilkadimus: One of the names of Mount Nadgate as chief.
Sinsinimum, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Snaw man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sisu; sisuim, sisiki, sisuim plural, sisuim-ki: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
si-tlu: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sitlin: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sitlpamu: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the south.
Si-tsu: Death, anthropomorphized.
sitsiki: Whatever, archaic.
Si-ut': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river.
Si-utsamp: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
sitsiwa'a: Raft.
Si-tsumtsa: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sutsu: Pillow.
sumdjat, "Pillowcase": Kwakiutl ceremonial at which no call is present.
sxyi, sxuim, sxyiim: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family.
Sxyiim: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
sxakum: Bracken.
sxumtsu: Tide flats.
sxkhjuk: Heart.
Sxlendum: That part of Snaw[illegible] which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Sxnkut: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Sxnsinta-i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxwumkhdimus, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mtsu, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this.
sxwlwlatsu: Leader of musicians.

[192]
[121]
[173]
[931]
[25]
[585]
[431]
[463]
[825]
[761]
[412]
[101]
[575]
[601]
[824]
[829]
[805]
[821]

*192 [illegible]: Supernatural good luck.
[192] [illegible]: Fog.
[192] [illegible]: Pack-rat.
[illegible]: Wind or assembly.
[828] [illegible]: Place of lucky luck, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
[illegible]: Cannibal assembly removed from the land above.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[823] [illegible]: Mountain.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Salmon, generic form.
[illegible]: (Probable) viscera of an animal, eviscerate.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[178] [illegible]: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be relished by anyone.
[illegible]: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] [illegible]: Bella Coola chief.
[illegible]: Darkness, anthropomorphized.
[828] [illegible]: Anger.
[illegible]: Sun.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—[illegible] name of a Kitamaat man.
4—Ancestral name of a Kitamaat man.
[illegible]: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] [illegible]: Marten.
[illegible], "Bonny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] [illegible]: 1—Sorcery intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
[illegible]: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
[illegible]: Shaman's name of a dead woman.
[illegible]: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by [illegible] to the one [illegible].
[601] [illegible]: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] [illegible]: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] [illegible]: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] [illegible]: Western dock (plant).
[824] [illegible]: Salmonberry.
[illegible]: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[illegible], "Food Supply": Synonym for [illegible], ancestral hunting-ground.
[825] [illegible]: Porcupine.
[824] [illegible]: Black huckleberry.
[821] [illegible]: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

1924

dalt: Dentalium.
dehemmelin: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the women for a memorial potlatch. [824] Dhaal, "Salmon": Ancestral name conferred by a Sealskil chief about 1840. [765] gamish: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
ghe: Arrow.
ghwen: Splinters projecting upwards from the hole of a broken tree-trunk. [824] Ghaadgyaanee: One of the first women to settle at Sealskil in the beginning of time.
Ghaats: Chief of the spring salmon.
ghe'ennkee: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at ceremonies. [515]
ghlaw: Shampoo. [135]
ghlawalyu, "The Cleaning": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a female with, following the commencement of lamentation. [584]
ghl: To sew, especially with the aid of a frontal heating of stitches. [431] Ghwanaldi: Dance now mentioned in an ancient story.
ghwaa, "Come Evil": Call of invitation to a feastor dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
ghwem: Cloud.
ghwn: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [825] ghwn: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon. [412] ghwnin, ghwnnl, or ghwnlyn: 1—Frontal heating of stitches for sewing purposes, especially when the garment is a member of a secret society. [755] 2—Final feastor rite at end of the ceremonial season.
ghwnin: To sew by means of the frontal pounding of stitches.
Ghwnl, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": ghwlt name cleansed in the beginning of time.
Ghwnnlal: House used by a group of first settlers near Ilnaa in the beginning of time.
Ghwnnlaw: Daughter of the first settlers at Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.
gha'kwalu: Fungus.
ghkwnnlnin: 1—Bow made of strands of cedar-bark. [824]
2—Ancient name of sound hand-drum. [415] ghq: Ceremonial designs carvedd on the exterior front wall of a house.
ghshl: Rum.
Ghshlmaw: Ancient name of a Kimsquit man.
ghwl: Wasp. [825]
Ghshmmnnin: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727] Ghqwshlal: Name of heads brought down by first settlers at Sealskil in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
ghwl, nnnlin, ghwn: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] ghlqy: Suitable place in the river for setting chicken nets.
ghlnn: Game played with throwing stones.
ghwlnlt: Synonym for yaawaa, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some Sealskil in addition to a dance rite. [824]
ghwnlnin: River sculpin. [825]

[192] chaxum: 1—Shamanic symbols.
2—Shooting song.
3—The walling of mourners at a grave.

[165] Chaxum-ca-i, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

chaxumkhaxum: Traditional hunter prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Indrawin a during hunting dances.

chaxum: Dance.

Chayo: Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.

[214] Cla-ki: Whatcomm River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

clear: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] clight: Standard spring salmon with the bone removed.

[254] cloak: Mass, adjective.

[254] clowanqua, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Cla: Man mentioned in an earlier story.

[401] club: Game, resembling a top-off-way, played with wooden hoops and spears.

[378] clum, cumlin, clumnalin: Grandchild, the respective indirect endearments.

clumnum: The imposition of sugh-dues on the heads of those quarrelling in public dance.

cla-u: Gall bladder.

clupum: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a sound whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mishlelin.

cnl: Chicken grouse.

Closhlowalin: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[378] 2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphical being responsible for power in this locality.

Clyhm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

cluwum: The voice.

[324] cluxul: Dried chinkerinchee.

cluxtula: 1—Shamanic power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
[321] 2—Bella Coola women.

cluqum: Eclipse.

cnaxmalin: 1—One who keeps in touch with a wounded Cannibal.
[324] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist buried or sound dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Cmaxlelin: One of the names of the supreme god.

Cmaxlulin: One of the names of the supreme god.

Cmaxlu-u: 1—Synonym for Shoshlowalin, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] cmqlaxtu: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

cmtmtlulumulin: Debris from stream seen by squirrels.

Cmuxuu, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Cmuxuuxul: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

cnal-way, cnalin, cnal-lway: Friends.

D:Mb:Dorsey:Ms. 3 (1900-1904) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192#

[798]

[825]

[821]

[828]

[824]

[824]

[illegible] A place of purified women, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered tangible of seeing.
[illegible] Suggestion brought from above in the beginning of time.
[illegible] 1—Wheel.
2—Deadwood wound.
[illegible] One of the divisions.
[illegible] the wound, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.
[illegible] Bears are (were mentioned) to an ancient story.
[illegible] 1—Gum.
2—Pieces of wax made by Raven in the beginning of time.
[illegible] Bears.
[illegible] One of the first men to settle on earth in the beginning of time.
[illegible] Voyaters receiving power direct from the supreme god.
[illegible] Worm or larva living under the green.
[illegible] Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible] Supernatural being who holds such a position.
[illegible] Supernatural woman who [illegible] those who suffer misfortune in the [illegible] of hunter class.
[illegible] Ancient name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Tal'a in the beginning of time.
[illegible] 1—Mythical monster.
2—Man living on Kimsquit in early times.
[illegible] Pieces of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices.
[illegible] Variety of [illegible] living above tree line.
[illegible] Leader of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a purpose by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being.
[illegible] Island south-west of Bella Bella.
[illegible] One [illegible] the supreme god.
[illegible] "On the Point". Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible] One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[illegible] Commercial collar of hemlock bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Dzunqulilla. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.
[illegible] Unidentified berry.
[illegible] Tag used by one of the sons of the supreme god.
[illegible] Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to rise up and come to him.
[illegible] Part of house behind fire.
[illegible] Unidentified place.
[illegible] Place of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a landslide.
[illegible] Chief of supernatural dancers who accompany Nestqunm.
[illegible] Twin.
[illegible] 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in [illegible]'s house.
[illegible] Lovelily embroidery repository, of name received from Death.

Schlesworth R-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

Sang"'mat: Kwakiutl name of a Sisaot man.
Sqmu: Kwakiutl name of a Tsimshian man.
sqlakwanum: Scalp.
sqmalsk': Gnarled projection of wood from a knob knot. [824]
Sqmichaqumaw-a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Sqmukulhaiu: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sqmlaim: Temporary camping place.
Sqmulsh, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlelas to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
sqalil: Bear.
sqalum, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
sqayamlum: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [825] sqhlqhlum: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
sqhlim: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Sqhlqhlum-i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Sq'owanim: Island west of Namu.
sqka: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smang with female organs. [824]
sqmalkwa: Unidentified berry. [821] S'qi', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Sqkamim: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Sqmqwy; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
sqla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sqmiy: Ghetto. [825]
sqnu: Eagle down.
sqnuntjat, "Eagle Down-name": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431]
sqnupaw: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825] Sqnupanhaiim: Kwakiutl name of a woman sent down near Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.
Sqnupuyd'mpdimat: Sisaot name of Xenis origin.
Sqnupuma: Sisaot name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqtl-a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqmik: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqtjiu: Spring salmon which have spawned.
squl: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
squlat or squlatmi: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nuqhalt. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
squma: 1—Chest. [103]
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Squmi: Land of Ashes.
sqununtz: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] squla: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Squtcla: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [825] squum: Flood.

[824] qualiq: Cedar roots.
qual: Sing.
qualaxlaxm: To use a sling.
[578] qalc: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slow economy.
[821] qamamac: Fleecy cloud.
[412] qalak: Muscle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
qlaxa: Massive conch.
Q'u'i: Land of Adam, alternative name for Squaxl.
qlo: Undivided herring.
[601] qulqmac: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by men.
qulhulqlac: Long phallus.
Squaxl: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
qaxa: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
qayaqlq: Food distributed for carrying away on spoon.
[415] qaqlc: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
[431] qlaxmac: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
qlaqlq: Maple.
[824] qlaxa: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
qaqpacal: Outer plank of cedar, canoe and back-covered on one side.
qamal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
qamalaxa: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] qamalxaxalaxa: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the foibles of someone present.
[825] 2—Singers who use this type of composition.
qamal xaxa: Large, unidentified bird.
[374] Sqamlaxa: Host: A supernatural being.
[825] Sqaqlc: Kaxlac name of a Bella Coola man.
qaxa'xaxa: Loon.
[262] qaxl al: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
Sxalqalaxam, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Five Sticks": Ts'ali name obtained in the beginning of time.
xaihaq; plural, xaxihaq; vocative plural, xaxihaq:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sqaxlal in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Saxal in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smamac for a grandson.
5—Saxal name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] xaa: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] xaadalaxam: Bat.
xaadimac: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
[601] xaamamac: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] xlaalc: Whetstone.
[412] Xaalc: Man mentioned in a story.
Xaqa': Mountain near Ts'ala.
xaqam, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
xaamac: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] xlalc: Cranberry.

APPENDIX D

chagalitlal: Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his ceremonies or carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
face-crazer: A short-legged person who tries to cross a rocky ocean of a strong figure.
gaqa[1]: That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Gelkmen: 1—Sheep, a supernatural being. [578]
2—Sheep, intangible hunter perspective.
ckkwanam: Presents given to the man who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Gugumelkelwal, "Dark-Heads": A supernatural being. [431] ia-pal: Shadow.
ioqamnay: Shamans, archaic. [412]
iskim: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601] ilamanaiq: Shaman's stick with power of life on one end and death on the other.
ilihm: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
ioqi: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283]
iskin: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
iskum: Chagatlal work under-back matting. [285] iskuin: Caribou.
iskum: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Ikkwanik: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] ikmatq or ikmatqmiskin: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
ikmatqkiskum: Body.
ikmatqmiskum: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Ikmatqmiskinlatq: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Ikmatqmiskumam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] iskin: Mountain goat grease. [824] iskinlaqa: Castor.
Ikkwal, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Ikkin: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time. [825] iomin: Octopus.
Ilimaskulu: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] iqmamam: Red rock paint.
iskin: Ginger's house.
iqualk: Tree.
iskin pass: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823] iscin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
iscum: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
iscinam: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
iskumcilc: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
ilq', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
iskuskit: Black raspberry. [824] iskim: Ocean.

APPENDIX D

[illegible] 182*

[illegible]: Supernatural children guarded by the homophonitis in the land above.
[illegible]: Name taken by a [illegible] man in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Place to return to river where a relative has just passed.
[illegible]: Name revealed upon death.
[illegible]: Dam.
[illegible]: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a memorial guest.
[illegible], "When Dosqin Away the Food": Food taken after the [illegible] relatives.
[illegible], "Feast": Preliminary pressure given to guests at a memorial potlatch.
[illegible], "Short-lived": Historical term used with reference to the death of a young child.
[illegible]: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of menstruation.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Y

[illegible]: Cave.
[illegible]: 1—Sun, in dance addition. As a courtesy title this is often used for hale [illegible] mentioned in the speeches.
2—Mountain [illegible].
[illegible]: 1—One of the five men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Disorder of husband by his wife.
[illegible]: Dental file of a fish.
[illegible]: Heavy kind of copper.
[illegible]: Tournament between rival villages.
[illegible]: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
[illegible]: Personal name embedded in a Haidah origin myth.
[illegible] pole, "The Breather": One of Tlenqidlim's totems and hence a dedicatory [illegible] given to shamans.
[illegible]: Place name mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: The leaving abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
[illegible]: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees.
[illegible]: Black-mottled cedar-bark pad.
[illegible]: 1—Bird totem.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills his prey.
[illegible], [illegible]: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer.
2—Father, term used by child.
[illegible]: Water-lily.
[illegible]: Land inherited by the Kwakiutl.
[illegible]: Leading chief of [illegible] and reputed founder of the village.
[illegible]: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
[illegible]: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical.
[illegible]: 1—White-fronted goose.
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird.
[illegible]: Husband ([illegible]: My husband).
[illegible]: River.
[illegible]: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

[172] Tsqamskuts: Bella Bella chief mentioned in a semi-historical account.
[8-2] Tsqatl: Northern wife, possibly Haida.
tsqi: Dog salmon.
Tsqilkaq, "Where Dogs Are Skinned": Village on shore of Inlet Bentinck Arm west and south of the Nuhemamamq River.
tsqmaqa: Chief.
[601] tsu: 1—Daughter, in direct address. As a courtesy title this often used for girls mentioned in the speeches.
2—Feminine suffix.
Tsulmaskin: 1—One of the names of Mount Sleghalie as chief.
2—Man who descended to Mount Sleghalie in the beginning of time.
Tsulnuk: Supernatural name of bird eagle.
tsulnuskin: 1—Type of supernatural house brought down from above by several of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
2—One of the names of the supreme god's house.
[225] tsulnuskuu: White dog with black and red hair.
[244] tsuli-ulukuu: Pleasure walk.
tsuli^: Cedar-bark.
[411] tsu-u: Boiling spoon.
[825] tsuu: Snake.
Tsuqulsiq^: Mountain near the Dean River.
Tsuqu: One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean River in the beginning of time.
[826] tsuxumqi: Red cedar tree.
Tsuxum: Locality on mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island, probably Knight Inlet.
tsuxumsi-ula: Unidentified grass-like tuber.
Tsuyaqa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
tsuyu: Underground house with entrance and flue combined.
Tsuyu: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
Tsuyuxsil: One of the first men to settle on Sleghalie in the beginning of time.
[825] tsuyuxu: Large clam-shell.
Tsuzulsin: Animal name of a Sun'el man.
Tsuzulkuu: Lad mentioned in an ancient story.
tsqqu: Fisher.
Tsuxumqlaqa, "The Sleep Giver": Name of a female shaman.
[601] tsi yuu di ciuu: Nephew's wife, term of indirect address.
tsi yuu di ciui: Uncle's wife, term of indirect address.
Tsuxsuil: Man mentioned in an ancient story of the upper Bella Coola valley.
Tsuku: Celebrated Kitkatla chief living in the last century.
Tsu'lsqu, "Sit of the Peak": Nickname given to a lad mentioned in an ancient story.
tsuuli: Valley.
Tsuuxil, "Where the River Covers the Stones": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Tsuqqulu: Locality on Finlayson Sound.
Tsuulsi: Mountain in the Carrier country.
tsuluxuuqlu: Unidentified hollow-stemmed plant.
Tsuluxuuqlu-ts, "Where There Is Much tsuluxuuqlu": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[824]

2:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellevue's NEA

Tsaiß: River on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
Tsapenaß: Mountain near Dean Channel.
Tsee-a: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
tsimo: To marry.
tsimoos: 1—Marriage in which the woman's relatives make the first proposal, especially one hurried owing to bereavement or other financial stringency in the man's family. [584]
2—Marriage without lengthy engagement.
tsiile: One having a voice like an eagle's.
tsqwestoman, "A Holding": The arrangement by which a man's son-in-law gives him as "wife" an infant female relative in repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters. [588]
tsuxa: Clover. [824]
tsuxile: Robin. [825]
tsuxuxu: Game played with bows and arrows. [411] tsuxumia: Arrow. [412]
tsyte: Adze.
tsxumu: Stone maul without handle for driving fish-net stakes. [825] tła: Black bear.
tłaiyałam: 1—One of the a'ułt dancers. [586]
2—Ceremonial hold to shame a deserting husband or wife.
3—Name taken by an early tłaiyałam dancer at Kitsequit. [825] tłaxa: Seal.
Tłakwaił: Bella Bella woman married by Smooa of Kitsequit in the beginning of time.
Tłakwałile: 1—One of the first women to settle at Łnłyai in the beginning of time.
2—Name acquired by one of the first men to settle at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
3—Ancestral name of a Kitsequit man.
Tłakwałilqwa: Woman dwelling on the coast south of Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
łałwaa-i: Knife of mountain goat bone. [412] łałwaił: Red rock ond. The difference between this and xaiag is problematical. [825] Tłałiałii: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tłałiał'łał': 1—Supernatural woman known to the people of Smith Inlet.
2—One of the first women to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tłas'łwaa: Servant to the supernatural being Nałłłayał.
Tłaawiła'łła: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tłapmał-ła: Supernatural woman resident in the land above. This word is said to be unrelated to Tłapmł-ła, although a common origin seems probable.
Tłapmł-ła: 1—Supernatural child resident in the land above.
2—Name acquired by a female child in the beginning of time. [824] łłapint: Fir-bark.
łłapuqa: Correct term, in the language of Raven, for skull-cap worn by adolescent girls. See ałwaam.
łła'awała: The pouring, by a shaman, of grease from ten vessels on the fire as a means of curing the sick.
Tławaa: One of the first women to settle in the Dean valley in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEG Bellacoola NEG

#192

Tsawaywatl: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Kwakiutl man from a sea-lion.

[825] Tsechaikhaut: Sandfly.

Tsimaomitlin, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water canal.

Tsitsaqa: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.

[825] Tsiwa: Mountain goat clover.

Tsiyu: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ituna in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nuqhalit, where in human form at the beginning of time.

Tsiuqalitsa: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.

[825] Tsiwin: Sea-lion.

Tsuxunlitsut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.

[821] tuk: 1—Moon.
2—The month.

[825] tukulp: Verdant skin disease.

tupsa: Cormorant.

Tuqwal, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tuqwin, "Malignant" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.

tqa: 1—Gall.
2—To cut wood for masks.

[823] tqamap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kuxiut dances.

tqaqalum: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar streams.

[415] tuku: Water-tight basket.

[824] tuma: Water-washed stump with smoothed, radiating roots.

Twiqa: Region on the upper Kitlope River.

[482] tutuxit: Tump-line.

tuka: Novel.

[825] Tsbaxbi: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.

tsqa: Mink.

tsuxiljut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.

[583] tsqa: Synonym for skamamamum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.

[825] tsqiwa: 1—Fawn.
2—Nuxtakimy name of a Kimsquit woman.

[821] Tsqiwa: Star in the Great Bear.

tsqaq: Lower of the two boxes used in the preparation of cedar-bark.

Tsqumaiu, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Talio.

[291] tsuikut: Hat with flat top and broad brim.

tsuiu: Stonecrop.

Tsulatik: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsu-hmai: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.

Tsulitc: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsul: Kuxiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Tsushmum: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.

tu-ti: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.

[825] tutu: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

J:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

Ta'ala: Kitlope River.
Talhemkla: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky to the beginning of time. [825] Ta'ma: Animal's entrails.
Ta'o: Note of the tsaxtsaxa, foretelling death. [763] Tamamt: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
Tathkamm: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [516]
Tadwi: Rumsrutius Bay.
Tadle, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [431]
2—Bald eagle.
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [825]
Ten: Novice, either hamatsa or shaman.
Tentmum or Tentmin: First night of a hamatsa dance.
tsisaldamut: 1—Heavy copper in Kwaqutl's house.
2—Name obtained from them by a Salish man in the beginning of time.
Tsi'ldamut: Knotted rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]
Tsla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
Tsimpamin: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from eating the purposum. [784]
Tsla: Presents distributed when a naxnox initiate dances. They are provided by the dancer "To Shield Our Eyes" from the naxnox and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]
Tsma: Bale. [465]
Tsma: Nettle. [824]
Tsemlaka: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
tsepdjat: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431]
Tsperit: Small woodpecker, species unidentified. [824] Tsqatka: Winter wren.
tsqmuk: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825]
Tsskitha: Intangible hamtsa prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] Tsuthem: Prompter.
Tsemlaka: One of the first women to settle at Snaskil in the beginning of time.
Tsemklikh: One of the first men to settle at Tsumsd in the beginning of time.
Tsumsdp: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [824] tsutskmap: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic. [825] tsutpin-i: Trout, plural.
tsutsi'ut'skmik: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
tsuyu, "What Is Good": Synonym for dzemsemsem, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Tsumi-ex: Synonym for Nastelkinuxkm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
tsumsum: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to naxnox and s'alt initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Tsutkin: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

#192

Tsaskulmut: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

tsilkulmut, "A Coming up from Below into Plain Sight": Term used with reference to the obtaining of a call through the medium of Dark-Shade.

[424] tsimut, "Whence We Come": A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[103] Tsuksis: Old village near the head of Dean Channel, at the site of the present cannery on the opposite side of the fiord from Manitou Cannery.

Tsunqa-tsqim: Tree, inherited by owls, behind the supreme god's house.

tsuxwilkulut: Space in a house between central fire and row of chiefs seated behind it.

U

U'ulsmx, "What Is Wanted Is Lacking": Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alqaitat in the beginning of time.

W

Wa'ahu: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qwaqwa'i in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Swalal in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwalat in the beginning of time.
4—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
5—Name of the Kimsquit River as chief.
6—Based name of a Kimsquit man.

[825] wai'a: 1—Coho salmon.
2—Name acquired by a man from coho salmon.

Wa'ainum: Man who descended to the Clearwater River in the beginning of time.

Wa'ahimai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuaz in the beginning of time.
2—Fraser River.

Wa'awa: Village at Kwatna Inlet. This word is in the Bella Bella language.

Wa'ahimai: One of the first men to settle at Stuaz in the beginning of time.

[825] wal-tsqis: Lynx.

[586] wakita': Woman who has deserted her husband.

wakmqamm: To express a desire concerning the disposal of one's goods after death.

wakiva: "I go."

[824] wallitsmatsistsis, "The Most Potent of the Pond": Water-lily.

Wanqi: Name of Smaua's grandchild in the beginning of time.

Wanuy: 1—Rivers Inlet.
2—Collective term for the villages on its shores.

Wanuqlaia: Nuxalkmq name of a Kimsquit man.

Wawul-is: Celebrated shaman, central figure in an ancient tale.

Wayal-a: Tribal name of one of the Bella Bella-speaking groups.

Wa-pat: Mountain near Stuaz.

Wa'ula: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

wazkaziatsis: Death in the house where a kwiat dance is taking place.

[593] wez-uiz-iuatsis: Mourning songs regarded as expressions of real, not ceremonial, grief.

[765] wexuy[w] wexuikiqasit: Synonym for xuy[w]: The sky.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

was probably deserted not many years ago. Probably a large town since it was a good fishing place. 361

(16) Ṭsilkt, "Bald Eagle": also on the north shore of the river, a little above the last-named. Probably washed away by a flood long ago, although traces of the salmon-weir were still visible recently. [226]

(17) Nuqāxmāts, "The Place of Much qāxmāts" (the fern Asplenium cyclosorum): on the north side of the river about one mile above the preceding. This large town is believed to have been deserted long ago, though, in apparent contradiction, traces of it are said to be still visible. [137]

*(18) Snulsli, "The Place of Dog Salmon": on the south bank, above the last-named, at a place where a small stream enters the Bella Coola River; this divided the town into two sections. It was long deserted and the river has carried away that part of the village below the creek. The name is derived from an enormous dog salmon which is believed to have been seen at long intervals in a waterfall near this spot, always with a water ouzel perched on its back. [825]

(19) Oqmikmx: on the lower end of the island near Hagenburg post office, eleven miles from the ocean. Although long deserted, traces of this village can still be seen. The meaning of the name is unknown.

*(20) Nukils, "The Place of the Whirlpool": on the south side of the river, eleven and a quarter miles from the sea. It was a village of moderate size, recently abandoned. The first occupant was said to have been Ekamkila, which means, "The First of All." [173]

*(21) Ásán-ás-i, "The Concave Town," so called because it spread around the shore of a bay scooped out by the Bella Coola: south side, slightly above the influx of the Nusálum River, thirteen and a quarter miles from the sea. It was deserted about 1880.

*(22) Nusqalst, "The Place of Sqalstutl": on the north side of the river, opposite the mountain of the same name. It also was deserted about 1880. Sqalstutl is a kind of stone suit- [316]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

805 "The Coming of Ano'likwolsaix."[3]

821 Fifth moon after the summer solstice: ıuxsiıl, "The Time for Kusiut Dances,"[4] or Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings."

Sixth moon after the summer solstice: Siımt, "Sits Down," that is, when the sun reaches the solstice.

First moon after the winter solstice: Sxwolmgnam, "What Sweeps Away Food," or Sxlikl, "Angry Moon."

Second moon after the winter solstice: Ałoansdimut, "Facing in Both Directions," that is, half the month belongs to winter and half to summer, or Łamolis di Nusāxkāmg, "The Potlatch of the Nusāxkāmg" (I, p. 289).

Third moon after the winter solstice: Siaqam, "When Herrings Spawn." These fish are said to have arrived on the [825] same day of this moon as the winter solstice in the December one.

Fourth moon after the winter solstice: Sikulg, "Time for Making Salmon Weirs."

Fifth moon after the winter solstice: Sinomwak, "Time for Making Hand-Nets for Olachen."

Sixth moon after the winter solstice: Siıāml, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon." It is in this month that the summer solstice occurs.

The chief difficulty experienced by the Bella Coola in computing time rests on the fact that each month is judged by the moon, whereas the main periods of the year depend upon the solstices. One old man, from whom much of this information was obtained, stated that trouble always came at the winter solstice when the month was divided into two sections. The above list is obviously incomplete and incoherent, but it was the best available.

Supernatural Beings

108 In any primitive community the social, religious, political, 771 and economic aspects of life are so interwoven that they

[3] See vol. II, p. 8 for a description of this mythical being.
[4] See vol. II, chap. 1, for a description of these dances.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

rate most of them, are carefully used in accordance with the functions of this supreme deity. As a Bella Coola has many names, corresponding to his membership in various societies, his professional prerogatives, his ancestral myths, and mere nicknames, so has Ālquntām, who is a superman, many names, according to his special functions. It would be unthinkable for a Bella Coola to pray to Ālquntām, yet it is common for him to pray to Mīnakais or Tātā, other names for the same being. The multiplicity of functions and designations approaches the point of obscuring the unity of Ālquntām, which in fact, some Bella Coola even deny. They state that Sinxālotla, Mīnakais, Smaialotla, and Nuxekmālsaix are one, but that Ālquntām, Snusilkāls, and Nonodjonostem are three distinct supernatural beings. This seeming confusion presents no difficulties to the Indian, since each family has its own myths in which such facts are recorded. He believes these, without questioning those of his neighbour, and it is even possible for an individual to believe two contradictory statements, if he happens to become the owner of two contradictory myths. Evidence collected in the field does not make clear whether the beliefs of the Bella Coola illustrate an incomplete transformation of a single deity into a number of minor ones, or whether they represent the almost complete fusion of a number of beings into one. Following the practice of the great majority of the Bella Coola, the supreme deity will be referred to as Ālquntām.

776* [551] [782] [424] [184] [771]

The most obvious attribute of Ālquntām is connected with the sun. He can enter it and use it as if it were his canoe. In form he resembles a man, and when he takes charge of the sun it appears as if the latter were a large, self-propelling, radiant boat with windows through which he looks forth. It is said that long ago he allowed mink to take charge of the sun, but the malicious animal ran it so close to earth that the intense heat killed almost all living creatures. When Ālquntām enters the sun he wears a cloak, on the lining of which are salmon; reversing this causes the rivers on earth to teem with salmon.

776* 821 [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

accordingly created four supernatural Carpenters. They in turn made a number of workers, Ālqnathntutl nanuqomaxmuly. These beings, endowed with enormous power by Ālqantām, chiselled from wood a number of human beings, the forefathers of mankind. Some men state that this was done by the four Carpenters, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that they were merely supervisors. No explanation is given of the means used by Ālqantām to give life to the beings thus created. The workers made not only human bodies, but constructed their mentality, including the speech. Nuxmāt-a contains a large number of rooms, in each of which a different set of Indians, with a different language, was manufactured; thus is explained the diversity of tongues among the people of British Columbia. The Carpenters did not confine their attention to men and women. Supernatural beings, animals, birds, trees, flowers, fish, mountains, rivers, perhaps even moon and stars, all were created almost simultaneously by them under the direction of Ālqantām in Nuxmāt-a. The sun alone was not made in this way. Ālqantām chose the proper plumage or fur for each bird and animal, which the Carpenters painted and carved according to his instructions. As they provided men with different languages, so they furnished the birds and beasts with their speech, which men can no longer understand. Each was given the necessary tools for existence on the earth below; sharp incisors to beaver, strong talons to eagle, a penetrating eye to heron, and so on. The Bella Coola do not regard birds and animals as being of a lower order than themselves, for all were created by the same power, at the same time; in many respects they consider that they belong to a higher plane than human beings. It would be too great a digression to include at this point a number of myths describing the creation, but these will be found in vol. I, chap. VI.

Mythology does not record in detail the sending down to this earth of trees and plants or of the forefathers of all other Indian tribes; but the manner in which the first Bella Coola arrived is clearly stated. Around the walls of Nuxmāt-a were

1: McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776*

the rescue of Lwumxwamlix they saw him being carried downstream to a salmon-weir about three hundred yards below. The trap was raised at once, but it was too late; the rash fisherman was dead. No one could give a name to the supernatural being who had caused his death; it was merely one of those dwelling under the river. [539] [761]

Whales, too, are sometimes observed in the rivers, but though they appear to resemble those of the ocean they are really their supernatural prototypes. [825]

These human-like dwellers beneath the water can, as in this case, cause death, but they are usually regarded as uncanny rather than dangerous. But there is one undersea being whom the Bella Coola regard with unmixed awe; he is Q̓omoqwa (see Plate 10), lord of the supernatural ones beneath the ocean, as Alquntam is lord of those dwelling above. He lives in an enormous house under the sea wherein the fish, the sea-mammals, and the sea-plants have their home. The Bella Coola believe that these beings can take human form at will,[15] and assume that their behaviour in Q̓omoqwa's dwelling corresponds to that of human beings in the house of an earthly chief. In the beginning of time, when men were more powerful than in recent years, this house sometimes rose to the surface of the water and adventurous Bella Coola entered it on various occasions, leaving to their descendants tales of the wonders it contained. These accounts have become family myths and are described with others of similar type in Chap. VI, vol. I. Records of this kind vary greatly in detail; in fact, few agree more than in broad outline. Sometimes it is stated that denizens of the sea appear in Q̓omoqwa's house in the flesh; other myths describe paintings of sea creatures around the walls and the manner in which these are brought to life by Q̓omoqwa. Irrespective of the exact details, it is clear that he is chief of the undersea beings who serve him and hunt for him, the blackfish being especially proficient in this respect. Q̓omoqwa resents any slight to his protégés and punishes any mortal who is unkind to them.

[761] 773 776* [424] [184]

*Bella Coola concepts concerning the transformability of men and animals will be described in the next section of this chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 subject. He does not often appear to mankind, though every
